The Judgment of the Seven Bell Court

In Ayokha, a duel is not merely the meeting of steel and skill. To the Celestial Order, combat without meaning is savagery. To Sihai philosophers, technique without restraint is chaos. To Nihori poets, victory without honor is an empty shadow.

Thus, every formal bout is overseen by the Seven Bell Court: a neutral panel of masters, scholars, and priest-judges who weigh each clash by three sacred pillars of excellence:

- Form – discipline, precision, and mastery of technique.
- Spirit – composure, respect, and dignity in conflict.
- Intent – purpose beyond ego: protection, duty, justice, or peace.

A fighter may fall, yet be honored as victorious. A fighter may stand triumphant, yet be judged disgraced.

The Scorecard system turns every match into a story:

- A reckless strike might land—yet shame the audience.
- A humble bow might calm a volatile crowd.
- A moment of mercy might prevent a war.

Use the Judges' Scorecards in tournaments, duels of honor, trial-by-combat, diplomatic exhibitions, or ritual tests of skill. When the world watches, a single point of Spirit may be worth more than blood.

Champion Conflict Embodies philosophical differences; shows manipulation of noble intent; personal grudges as levers.

Spirit World: Local nat may aid (Arcana + Spirit vs. DV 4).

Mandala Politics: Multi-faction negotiation with vassal kings and sea-lords.

Adventure Pacing

Sessions 1–2 Introductions, tensions, first clues.

Focus: Establish tournament, champions, first conspiracy hints.

Sessions 3–4 Escalation, sabotage, revelations.

Focus: Deepen investigation; confront conspirators; champions' relationship deteriorates.

Session 5 Finale: sting, exposure, or duel; fallout.

Focus: Climactic confrontation; resolve threads; apply consequences.

GM Notes

Balance Conspiracy is discoverable but not obvious; champions have legitimate motives; multiple PC victory routes.

Guideline: Each major clue requires a meaningful test, not passive observation.

Sensitivity Individuals are culpable, not cultures; showcase virtues across traditions; Ayokha as bridge culture.

Reminder: Champions embody ideals, not stereotypes.

Agency Multiple investigative vectors; flexible alliances; consequences drive story.

Mechanic: Allow temporary, goal-focused faction alliances.

Fate's Edge Integration Use Position/Effect for major challenges; spend SB for conspiracy complications (1–4 severity); award Boons for clever cultural leverage and moral choices; during downtime, 2 Boons → 1 XP for significant discoveries.

Monsoon Clock [8] Tracks seasonal changes affecting the investigation:

- Seg. 1–2: Pre-monsoon — dry conditions; easier surveillance.
- Seg. 3–4: Early monsoon — activity spikes; shipping disruptions.
- Seg. 5–6: Peak monsoon — investigation hindered; indoor focus.
- Seg. 7–8: Late monsoon — clearing weather; finale windows open.

Partial: Evidence found; conspirators alerted; time pressure.

Tournament Combat Guidelines

Phase 1 & 2 Matches Position: Dominant/Standard (honorable competition). Effect: Limited/Great (style demonstration). Cultural considerations may tilt judging.

Final Duel Position: Dominant/Desperate (stakes and manipulation). Effect: Standard/Great (champions at full capability). Audience reactions create environmental factors.

Conspiracy Intervention Position shifts with timing/approach; Effect modified by evidence presented; cultural honor stakes influence resolution options.

The Bridge of Three Echoes (Pilgrimage of Memory and Mercy)

The Bridge of Three Echoes

Premise. Once every century, a spectral bridge appears across the Valley of Silent Ash. Upon it walk the forgotten dead of three nations, seeking closure. Only those who carry truth may cross.

Purpose. Resolve ancient wrongs between Sihai, Nihori, and Ayokha without blades, armies, or scripts of state. A single night on the bridge can calm wars or spark them anew.

Tone. Quiet, solemn, beautiful. The adventure favors reflection, diplomacy, vows, compassion, and the verdict of ancestors.

Structure of Play

The bridge manifests for a single night. Each Act is one crossing:

- Act I: Lanterns of Regret (Ayokha)
- Act II: Blades of Memory (Nihori)
- Act III: Scrolls of Truth (Sihai)

Each act offers:

- A symbolic ritual
- A moral choice with no easy answer
- A chance to earn or lose Echo Tokens

At dawn, the bridge judges the living.

Echo Tokens (Core Mechanic)

Echo Tokens

PCs earn or lose Echo Tokens by honoring the dead:

- Show mercy to a bitter spirit [+1]
- Tell a painful truth [+1]
- Break a vow [-1]
- Spill blood on the bridge [-2]

At dawn:

3+ Tokens: Spirits grant a Blessing of Peace

1–2 Tokens: The bridge leaves the world unchanged

0 or less: The bridge cracks, releasing ancestral wrath

Clocks

- Bridge Stability [6] – grows with violence or lies
- Spirit Unrest [8] – shrinks with compassion or ritual
- Dawn Approaches [10] – the night is short

Act I: Lanterns of Regret (Ayokha)

Floating lanterns hover in ash-filled fog. Each lantern holds a recorded sorrow—love unspoken, apology unmade, duty abandoned.

Ritual: PCs place a lantern into the river of ash. Its flame brightens or dims depending on their sincerity.

- Heal a grieving spirit [+1 Echo Token]
- Sailor begs forgiveness from drowned crew
- Parent apologizes to a forgotten child
- Romantic rival confesses they saved a life instead of taking it

Set-Piece. A thousand lanterns rise, illuminating spectral tatami pavilions and Ayokhan funeral masks.

Test. PCs must speak a sorrow of their own. Silence counts as fear, not respect.

Act II: Blades of Memory (Nihori)

A silent battlefield of polished stone. The dead are not hostile—they demand acknowledgment.

Ritual: Truth Duel. No blades strike flesh. To “win” is to yield the proud truth you never wished to speak.

Examples:

- A warrior admits they killed for glory, not justice
- A magistrate admits they saved face instead of saving lives
- A monk admits they fled duty and called it enlightenment

Outcome.

- Mutual truth: both sides bow, [+1 Token]
- Refusal to speak: spirits grow restless, [-1 Token]

Set-Piece. Rows of ash-blade swords hum in the wind, each engraved with an unspoken name.

Act III: Scrolls of Truth (Sihai)

A grand pavilion of drifting parchment and calligraphy that writes itself. The spirits seek record, not vengeance.

Ritual: PCs must inscribe a truth on the Eternal Scroll:

- Confess a lineage secret
- Acknowledge a war crime
- Reveal a corruption
- Forgive a historic enemy

Set-Piece. Ink-spirits coil through the air. When a lie is spoken, parchment tears like thunder.

Test. If no one writes truth, the scroll writes judgment instead.

Final Choice: Break or Bless the Bridge

At the last step, three ancestral judges manifest: Ayokhan Mercy, Nihori Honor, Sihai Memory.

PCs must choose:

- Bless the Bridge: swears a binding vow of peace
- Break the Bridge: spirits rise to punish the living
- Rewrite History: one truth is erased or rewritten

Echo Token Result Table:

- 3–5 Tokens → Dawn Blessing (renewed treaties, ancestral gifts)
- 1–2 Tokens → Neutral departure, bittersweet memory
- 0 or fewer → Vengeful spirits pursue PCs beyond the bridge

Patron Hooks

- Mab: promises peace, demands a price in memory
- Inkblade: offers a rewritten scroll—dangerous temptation
- Thrysos: grants mercy to warriors who admit their failures
- Black Fox: the bridge hides a secret worth stealing

GM Guidance: Tone

This is not a combat showcase. Use silence as a mechanic. Let players sit in discomfort. Reward vulnerability—characters who speak truth should be mechanically advantaged.

Endings

*Peace Ending. The bridge becomes part of living memory; ancestors rest.
Bitter Ending. Some truths are too sharp; one culture departs with permanent scars.
Forbidden Ending. PCs erase a historical truth. History now remembers something that never happened.*

NPCs of the Bridge of Three Echoes

Sihai NPCs

Magistrate Shen Liang Historian-in-exile, gentle and formal. Carries scrolls spilling endless ink.

- Truth Feared: Falsified census records to save a starving village.

- If Silenced: Spirits mark him with invisible ink; PCs can see “coward” across his back.

Jade Archivist Lian Xu Keeper of forbidden histories, brilliant and furious.

- Truth Feared: A massacre blamed on raiders was ordered internally.
- If Helped: PCs gain a True Ledger Fragment to expose corruption later.

Nihori NPCs

Poet-Swordsman Akiro Duelist-philosopher polishing a perfect blade.

**Appendix: Cultural Sensitivity & Best Practices This adventure is inspired by the philosophies, aesthetics, and martial traditions of East and Southeast Asia. While the cultures pre-* sented here are fictional, they draw from real-world analogues. This appendix provides guidance for respectful, conscientious presentation at the table.

Core Design Principles

- Celebration, not exploitation. Cultural elements are sources of wisdom, beauty, and complex philosophy—not exotic spectacle.
- Individuals act, cultures do not. Corruption, conspiracy, or villainy are the choices of specific people, not entire nations.
- Multiple truths can coexist. Sihai, Nihori, and Ayokha each possess internally coherent philosophies worthy of respect; none is presented as inferior or “primitive.”
- Differences produce story, not stereotypes. Philosophical tension drives narrative without reducing cultures to caricature.

Guidance for GMs

When presenting culturally inspired characters, customs, or beliefs, prioritize:

- Respectful tone – No mocking accents, no comedic stereotypes.
- Cultural nuance – Show internal disagreement: traditionalists, pragmatists, reformers, skeptics.
- Agency – Every NPC (even commoners) has opinions, priorities, and personal stakes.
- Avoid monoliths – No culture speaks with one voice; factions interpret tradition differently.

A simple GM mantra:

“Portray dignity, curiosity, and complexity.”

Language, Ritual, and Names

Names, honorifics, and ceremonial acts should be:

- Evocative but not appropriated directly from real-language templates
- Consistent within each culture’s logic (Sihai -¿ bureaucratic/formal; Nihori -¿ ritual precision; Ayokha -¿ syncretic sacred cyclicity)
- Used respectfully without parody or exaggerated stereotypes

Optional Tool: If players are unfamiliar with honorifics or rituals, treat them as invitations—explain their meaning rather than turning them into obstacles or “gotchas.”

Historical Inspiration

While this adventure draws inspiration from:

- Imperial examination systems and ancestor veneration
- Samurai ethics and ritualized martial arts
- Monsoon-driven maritime trade networks
- Temple cosmology and spirit veneration

...all cultural elements are intentionally fictionalized to avoid misrepresenting any real-world tradition. The goal is homage, not imitation.

Cultural Evolution in Play

Cultures change. To reinforce authenticity:

- Allow characters to challenge tradition from within

- Show generational differences in belief
- Let cultural exchange influence customs and technology

For example:

- A Sihai scholar fascinated by Ayokhan dance
  - A Nihori ronin studying Sihai philosophy
  - Ayokhan monks debating merchant influence on ritual purity
- Small details like these highlight cultural dynamism without disrespect.*

Player Engagement & Consent

If the table is unfamiliar with these cultural spaces:

- Offer a Session Zero to align tone and expectations
  - Use a Lines/Veils/X-Card framework for comfort
  - Allow players to ask cultural questions without embarrassment
- A respectful table should always feel safe saying:*

“I’m not sure—can you explain that part?”

Recommended Reading (Optional)

Not required for play, but helpful for tone and cultural appreciation:

- The Book of Five Rings (strategy, discipline)
- Tao Te Ching (balance, paradox, non-coercive ethics)
- The Ramayana and Mahabharata (epic duty, sacred duty)
- The Romance of the Three Kingdoms (statecraft, loyalty, consequence)

These are not canonical to the setting—just inspiration for respectful tone.

Final Note

This module approaches cultural worldbuilding with humility and admiration. If at any point a player feels uncomfortable, confused, or concerned, the correct response is simple:

Pause, listen, adjust, continue with respect.

The goal is storytelling that honors the philosophical beauty, ritual depth, and human drama that inspired these cultures.

Equipment for Contemplative Adventures The following items demonstrate how the TAGS system handles equipment that is both practical and symbolic. These tools are ideal for adventures focused on memory, mercy, negotiation, or moral choice. Each item is presented with clear TAG interactions and narrative intent.
