Preface: The Ledger Bleeds

I am an Aeler Edgewalker. You call us mountain-dwellers who measure breath in silver bells and seal contracts in stone. How adorably naïve. We don't just measure breath—we own the lungs that draw it. When a Tulkani chieftain swears an oath on his firstborn's life? That's not honour—it's collateral I've already hypothecated three times over. When a Veiled Sister binds a demon to a corpse to prop up her corpse-throne? That's not terror—it's a futures contract on soul-debt, and I'm the broker who sold the short position before the ritual even began. You think I seek opportunities? Incorrect. I manufacture them like counterfeit coin—then sell the molds, the hammer, and the anvil to the very fools I'm about to rob.

You see the surface as “full of problems.” How quaint. Problems aren't obstacles—they're inventory. Wars need walls? I'll sell you the bricks and the siege engine to knock them down—then buy back the rubble at scrap price to fill the next crater I create. Cities need bridges? I'll underbid the architect by bribing his estranged sister with forged inheritance papers, then charge tolls for the detour while my men “accidentally” weaken the supports with acid-laced mortar. Every famine isn't tragedy—it's a grain futures play where I corner the market before the locusts hatch. Every plague isn't sorrow—it's a chance to monopolise breath-bonds by spreading the rumour that only my seals ward off the Hollow (they don't—I just charge extra for the “premium” version). The world isn't a ledger—it's a slaughterhouse where I'm the only one bringing a price gun, a bone saw, and a ledger balanced in blood.

I've walked roads paved with more broken promises than cobblestones. I've drunk the ninth cup in a Tulkani circle while counting the missing step on an Aelinnel bridge (it was step 8.7—always shortchange the superstitious; they'll pay triple for “lucky” step 9 that doesn't exist). I've haggled with Fhara water-clerks not over price, but by threatening to divert their qanats into the salt flats unless they threw in a concubine and a sworn statement that I “inspired their generosity.” I've sold steam-driven capstans to Ngomebe's walking cities after sabotaging their rollers with ground glass—then charged triple for the “emergency” repair crew I dispatched from my own warehouse. I've watched the Veiled Sisters smile as they signed away their daughters' souls in exchange for a single night's respite from the Black Hand's whispers, and I've seen that shadow fall exactly where I'd planted the forged seal that started their feud three months prior—then auctioned the “exclusive” intel on the feud's origin to both sides for double the fee.

Here's what the ledger won't admit, because it's too busy counting angels on pins: Leverage isn't about fine print. It's about who's holding the knife when the ink dries—and whose throat it's resting on.

A Diamond isn't currency—it's a hostage with a pulse. Spend it, and you're renting violence. A Debt isn't owed—it's farmed. I don't collect; I cultivate. Plant a promise in fertile despair, water it with regret, harvest the interest in screams. A Promise? That's just debt wearing a smile and holding a dagger behind its back. The sweeter the vow, the sharper the blade.

This book isn't a tourist's guide. It's a hit list with footnotes. I've marked the places where a well-placed bell doesn't just open a pass—it starts a war I've already shorted the bond market on.

Where a forged seal doesn't just move a mountain—it triggers a landslide I've bought mineral rights to before the first crack appeared. Where a single true story doesn't just buy a ship's loyalty—it buys the captain's silence while I sell his manifest to pirates. I've also marked the traps you're supposed to avoid: the ninth step you must count (it's a pressure plate wired to explode—I'll sell you the schematics and the defusal kit for 200% markup), the ninth cup you must pour (it's laced with truth-serum that makes you confess where you buried the loot—I'll sell you the emetic and a fake ledger to replace the real one), the ninth name you must speak (it summons the Hollow—I'll sell you earplugs lined with soul-trapping wax and a virgin sacrifice “at cost”).

You want to build journeys? Draw your cards. Set your clocks. Spend your Story Beats like they mean something. But remember this, written in the margin of every contract I've ever signed: Every Diamond you earn is a tooth knocked out of someone else's jaw. Every Debt you incur? I already bought it from your victim for half what you'll pay—and I'm collecting interest in your marrow before you finish reading this sentence. My notes on leverage aren't advice. They're a confession. A brag. A warning written in the language of slaughter. Read them. Then decide: patch the cracks in the world... or hand me the dynamite, the detonator, and a list of whose foundations need weakening first.

The road isn't just a ledger. It's a butcher's block. Every gate isn't a clause—it's a throat waiting for the knife. Pay the toll, or I'll collect interest in the form of your last breath... and sell it back to you as a breath-bond.

— The Edgewalker

(Current location: Somewhere the ink hasn't dried yet. Thimble's still trying to balance books in a ditch outside Aksum using a rock and his own tears. Pathetic. Pass the brandy—I've got a drought to monetise in Sekogo.)

[Edgewalker: Thimble. If you quote that accursed appendix one more time, I'll bind your soul to a ledger page and use it to wipe my boots after trampling through the Veiled Sisters' latest soul-auction. Now pass the abacus—I need to calculate how many souls fit in a single breath-bond before the next monsoon.]

[Thimble: But sir, the Accord—]

[Edgewalker: (Standing, chair scraping) Thimble. You're fired. Your final paycheck is in the ledger... under “Organic Debt, Settled via Soul Harvest.” Now leave before I amend the entry to “Thimble's Ledger: Used as Kindling for Veiled Sister Bonfires.” And take your tears with you—they're cluttering up the depreciation column.]

Part I

The Amaranthine Sea & Northern Shores

Chapter 1

Kahfagia

The Flag of Storms. The Admiralty runs this place like a pirate charter with a budget—and oh, how they love pretending it’s legitimate. They control the beacons that lure ships onto reefs, the booms that shatter hulls for salvage rights, and the tariffs that fund their champagne baths. If you want to move cargo through the straits without becoming fish food, you need a convoy letter stamped with their seal or a lantern-law warrant signed by the Port Marshal himself. I’ve sold them both—genuine articles, straight from the source—then, while the Admiral was busy recounting spice taxes he’d already stolen from my last shipment (the bastards shorted me 12% on saffron, claiming “moisture loss” in holds I’d sealed with my own breath-wax), I sold perfect forgeries to three rival fleets: the Crimson Corsairs, the Jade Junks, and a suspiciously well-funded group of monks who definitely weren’t pirates. The trick? I didn’t just forge the seal—I made the letters appear to come from the Admiral’s long-lost brother, Lord Malakai, who supposedly vanished in a diving accident ten years ago. (Spoiler: I “found” him running a rum distillery in the Mistlands. Paid him in trade goods to stay “dead.”) The Admiralty never checks the seals’ provenance. Why would they? They’re too busy being paranoid that their own forgeries will be discovered—too busy counting the very spice taxes they stole from me to notice I’m playing three sides against the middle while their convoys sink each other.

[Thimble: Sir, Article 4, Section 2 of the Maritime Trust Compact explicitly prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Thimble, my dear, trembling ledger-licker, the Maritime Trust Compact is worth less than the parchment it’s forged on—especially when I’ve bought the ink-maker’s silence with a lifetime supply of spice that isn’t moist. Now, about that lantern-law warrant... the Admiral’s nephew has a gambling problem. I wonder what his marker looks like?]

[Edgewalker: Familial debt is just leverage with a family tree. Now pass the brandy—I’ve got a war to start in Ecktoria, and Thimble? If you mention “Clause 9.1” again, I’ll sell your ledger to the monks as kindling. They burn hot.]

1.1 Kahfagia — “Pilot’s Mirror”

Admiral of Lantern-Law (Elite): “Every mirror is a blade, every beacon a promise. The sea obeys when we move the lights — and woe to the fool who rows against them.”

Dockside Factor (Commoner): “The pilots see farther than kings. A gesture in lantern-code can open ports, or close them. Keep your debts paid, and your lamps trimmed.”

Theme & Atmosphere

In Kahfagia, the sea is a contract. Every channel is a clause, every beacon a signature. The Admiralty of Lantern-Law does not rule with armies—they rule with light. Shift a beacon, and a harbor closes. Dim a mirror, and a fleet founders. Foreign powers curse the “pilot’s monopoly,” but they still pay the toll. Because the alternative is sailing blind.

What you notice first: The constant chime of bell-buoys. The smell of salt, tar, and burnt oil from a thousand lanterns. The way everyone—admiral to dockhand—glances at the tide clock before speaking.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never argue with a Mirror-Keeper about where the channel lies. If they say the safe water moved, it moved. Your chart is already kindling.

Regional Mood: The Lantern’s Vigil

Power is visible here—literally. Every night, a thousand lamps burn along the channels, each a statement of control. To dim a light is to declare bankruptcy. To move a beacon is to declare war. Commodores sit in their mirror-towers, watching reflections, while tide-clocks tick down to the next auction, the next inspection, the next quiet murder in a fog-shrouded creek.

Starting Location: The Lantern Pier admiralty chapel, where votive ships hang from the ceiling and brine drips from the icon of a drowned saint. A sea-notary unlocks a salt-stained reliquary and produces a chart with gilt edges. “Fetch the contraband bell from the corsair galleass Santa Dolorosa before moonrise—or the harbor names you accomplices.”

Prominent NPCs of Kahfagia

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Admiral Zafira	Commander of Lantern-Law	Keep the beacon monopoly intact	She has never lost a ship to the reefs. Her charts are said to be drawn in water.
Mirza al-Qasr	Mirror-Keeper of the Pointe	Control the tides through light	Her face is never seen—only reflected. Some say she has no shadow.
Ximena	Dockside Factor (commoner exemplar)	Profit from every cargo, legal or not	She keeps a ledger in lemon juice; heat reveals the truth.

Captain Rodrigo	Privateer with a crooked letter of marque	Raid the corsair fleet and pay off his crew	His ship flies three flags; the one he lowers last is the one that matters.
Sister Anabel	Healer of the Hospitallers of the Salted Veil (Temple of Light)	Tend the sick without asking payment	Her grey robes are said to be woven from old debts. They never stain.
Notary Farid	Admiralty magistrate	Resolve disputes before they reach the harbour master	He carries a water-clock in his sleeve to measure the shifting of legal moods.

Names of Kahfagia

Inspired by the sea-faring republics of the western coast: liquid consonants, soft vowels, and the echo of tide and tower. Surnames often denote a port, a ship, or a founding ancestor.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Safir	Zafira	al-Kassam	the Lantern
Idris	Ximena	del Puerto	Tide-Keeper
Farid	Layla	de la Vela	the Unlit
Jabir	Aisha	Carrasco	Mirror-Eye
Rodrigo	Salma	Mirat	Bell-Born
Tarik	Nura	Henares	Ash-Sails

(Littoral/Lane/Law) Tidal mudflat with hidden plank-way at low water; salt-scar pier behind dawn spice auctions.

Spades — Places

2. Tidal Mudflat — Hidden plank-way at low water; smugglers’ shortcut. At ebb, the planks rise like the ribs of a drowned whale.
3. Salt-Scar Pier — Behind dawn spice auctions; where fortunes wash ashore. Auditors check the salt-scars—white crust that proves cargo was cleaned, not stolen.
4. Reedbelt Creeks — Smuggler paths where tax boats won’t follow. A hanged man’s boots hang from a piling; those who pass tug their collars.
5. Breakwater Gap — Under repair; cutters slip at dusk through the works. The stone is still loose. A wrong step, and the sea claims another toll.
6. Dredged Channel — Fresh with temporary beacons; tomorrow’s safe water. The buoys are painted yellow—the color of “maybe.”

7. River Sluice — Tide-gate and boom-chain; access controlled by rope and writ. The chain has a notch where a slaver's ship tried to flee. It still drips oil.
8. Cutter Yard — Narrow-keel vessels; apprentices work night shifts. They sing old work songs—the kind that skip the ninth beat.
9. Lantern Alley — Fog-lane where beacons migrate with the tide. Follow the lights. Two blinks means you're expected. Three? You're prey.
10. Admiralty Quay — Bonded warehouses under seal; law walks the decks. The seal on the door changes with the tide. Today it's a serpent eating its tail.
- J Red Shoal — Quiet water, loud reputations; where deals are made. Old barges moored together; a floating court with no bailiff.
- Q Mirror Tower — Pilot station that certifies safe water—today. The mirror at the top shows not the sea, but the face of the last captain who argued.
- K Kassamira Port — Presidial; auctions at dawn, courts by noon. The auctioneer's gavel is wrapped in a page torn from a debtor's ledger.
- A The Pointe — Strait of storm-lights and wreckers' tales. On still nights, you can hear the drowned singing the names of those who owe.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Tide-Runner — Bell and rope; knows every tide-table by heart. "The table says high water at noon. The moon lies. Trust my rope."
3. Pilot's Apprentice — Perfect memory for shoals; tomorrow's navigator. Touches a brass talisman before every sounding. No one knows why.
4. Lantern Clerk — Knows which lights moved, and why; keeper of the shifts. Docks with a ledger that smells of smoke. Adds a surcharge for "recent adjustments."
5. Oshiiran Factor — Two ledgers; one for Kahfagia, one for truth. The left ledger records bribes as "conciliation fees." The right one is never shown.
6. Dock-Syndic — Makes queues vanish; power in the pause. He never raises his voice. The harbor master listens anyway.
7. Lantern Advocate — "Jurisdiction moves like tide"; law in flux. She carries a water-clock in her sleeve to measure the shifting of legal moods.
8. Privateer Captain — "Crooked" letter of convoy; profit in the margins. Her ship flies three flags; the one she lowers last is the one that matters.
9. Thalasso Sergeant — Shore leave but still on duty; marine precision. A tattoo of a lighthouse on his forearm; the light is his wife's name.
10. Admiralty Magistrate — Rules fast, travels faster; justice in a hurry. She once sentenced a man to the galleys and boarded the ship before he did.
- J Dredging Foreman — Channel follows their purse; water reshaped. His crew are ex-criminals; he pays them in salt pork and absolution.
- Q Mirror-Keeper (Elite) — Commodore's confidante; places beacons that bind. Their faces are never seen—only reflected. Some say they have none.

A Admiral of Red Shoal — Offers wine, figs—once. Price in stories. She pours the first cup herself. If she pours a second, you’ve already agreed.

(Tide/Law/Weather) Tide turns two bells early—grounding risk rises; smothering fog where sound travels but sight does not.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Early Tide — Turns two bells early; grounding risk rises like the sea. Someone bribed the tide-clerk—or the moon is angry.

3. Smothering Fog — Sound travels, sight does not; navigation by ear alone. You hear oars. Then you don’t. Then they’re behind you.

4. Boom Slam — Harbor chain slams shut; wrong side means delay or danger. The chain’s links are inscribed with names of debtors. Each one rattles differently.

5. Light Shift — Beacons change mid-approach; your lane just moved. Someone paid the Lantern Clerk. Find out who—or drift into the reefs.

6. Pilot Strike — No escorts available; average unpaid, risk assumed. The pilots sit in their guildhall, drinking tea, watching ships founder.

7. Customs Inspection — Ladder audits cargo and crew; delays bite deep. The inspector has a silver tooth. He smiles when he sees a manifest.

8. Reef-Runners — Corsair skiffs circle with boarding hooks; steel in the spray. Their leader wears a Mirror-Keeper’s badge—stolen or earned, you cannot tell.

9. Jurisdiction Flip — Lantern-law shifts; your writ no longer bites. The tide turned. So did the magistrate. Your safe-conduct is now kindling.

10. Fire Risk — Alchemical cargo aboard; quarantine if anything spills. A single spark and the whole quay becomes a crater. The factor wants you to know this.

J Quartermaster Betrayal — Tide-tables sold to rival; route compromised. The betrayal is written in lemon juice; heat reveals the name.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Mooring Chit — Skip the Mooring Roll once; harbor favors you. The chit is a dried seahorse shell. Keep it away from salt.

3. Pilotage Token — One certified escort through a bad channel. The pilot who accepts it must touch your shoulder before speaking.
 4. Fee Waiver — Cargo cleared today; ledger smiles included. The clerk stamps it twice—once for the crown, once for the Hollow.
 5. Safe-Conduct — Along specific beacons lane; law walks with you. The commodore's seal is warm. It cools as the exit nears.
 6. Salvage Rights — On named quay or reach; flotsam becomes fortune. You must name each piece before touching it. The wrong word forfeits the claim.
 7. Warehouse Access — Bonded storage; seal prize before rivals sniff. The key is a bronze finger. It fits only one lock—and breaks after use.
 8. Lantern Code — Tonight's signals revealed; navigation advantage. Three quick flashes: safe passage. One long, two short: the Admiralty is watching.
 9. Dredging Grant — You decide where next channel runs; reshape the sea. The dredgers are convicts. They work faster if you promise a name in their favor.
 10. Letter of Marque — Convoy protection for one season; legal blades. The ink is mixed with gunpowder. It smokes slightly when read.
- J Admiralty Judgment — Precedent travels with you; law bends. The case number is burned into a leather tag. Tag it to a belt loop.
- Q Mirror Warrant — Legal right to post a beacon; redraw the map. The Mirror-Keeper's seal, still warm. The channel you mark becomes law—until challenged.
- K Spice Share — Stake in Kassamira auction floor; profit in pepper. The share is a peppercorn sealed in wax. Bite it to test authenticity.
- A Lantern License — Temporary authority to redefine the lane. The harbor master spits when he hands it over. Use it wisely—or not at all.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (papers/rights/priority) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo sea & signal motifs—beacons that migrate, tides that remember, law that flows like water.

Additional Features

- Pilot's Mirror: Kahfagia's strength is not fleet but monopoly on light and lane. To post a beacon is to redraw the map.
- Oligarchic Rule: Families rule by shares in ports and auctions; politics is brokerage in ledgers and lanterns.
- Western Reach: Captains boast of ports “beyond the mirror,” bringing rumors, goods, and curses the Amaranthine can scarcely name.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Saint Alvaro of the Lantern (The Traveler): The Admiralty’s mirror-towers double as wayshrines for the Saint of Lost Channels. Sailors who light a candle before a voyage and whisper a destination to the mirror claim the tide will not turn against them before they reach it. The Mirror-Keepers charge a fee for this service—payable in salt, not silver.
- Saint Lucia of the Undying Flame (Oath of Flame & Light): The Lantern Pier chapel keeps a single flame that has burned for three hundred years. It is said that any oath sworn over that flame cannot be broken—but the breaker will see their own reflection in every wave until they drown. Privateers pay handsomely to have their letters of marque consecrated there.
- The Tide-Sworn Compact (The Admiral of Sealed Tides): A small but influential order of notaries based in Kassamira Port. They adjudicate disputes over beacon rights, cargo claims, and pilotage fees. Their judgments are always delivered in triplicate, and they accept no bribes—only binding oaths. Those who lie before a Covenant judge find that their next three voyages are plagued by contrary winds.
- The Hospitallers of the Salted Veil: A hospice on Deadman’s Quay is run by grey-robed healers of the Order. They ask no payment, but they never forget a face. It is said that if you accept their care, you owe a favour to the sea itself—and the sea always collects. Smugglers leave small offerings of fresh water on the pier to stay in the Order’s good graces.
- The Ninth: In any lantern-lit scene, the ninth lamp lit in a room reveals a threshold. The wise stop at eight. Those who light the ninth are said to see a figure standing on the water outside the window—waiting.

Kahfagia Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Wake: Toss a crust over your shoulder before entering a new channel. Ignore the first Smothering Fog penalty.
- Turn the Lantern: Spin the binnacle lamp once counter-clockwise. Cancel Boom Slam or take −1 die on your next pilot check (your choice).
- Name to the Deep: Whisper a true name into a lead line. Gain +1 Effect against corsairs for the scene, but mark Obligation to the Tide Court.

Patronage & Power

In Kahfagia, power flows through control of the sea lanes themselves. The maritime oligarchs have built their empire not through conquest of territory but through mastery of navigation. Every beacon, every channel marker, every mirror-light is both a navigational aid and a legal instrument. To control the lights is to control the sea.

For the GM: Kahfagian patronage revolves around access—to channels, to cargo, to legal protection. Rewards often take the form of pilotage tokens, safe-conducts, or salvage rights that can be leveraged into greater influence. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (beacons, writs, lantern codes) that can be challenged, moved, or voided.
- Let rival admirals issue conflicting safe-conducts, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the Admiralty courts and spice auctions as arenas for social contests, where legal maneuvering determines success.

In Kahfagia, your route is your rank, and your rank determines your right to passage.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from harbor guards or rival pilots.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby ships or dock workers.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for customs or trackers.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable tide.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Admiralty magistrate or harbor master becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to weather shift or beacon change.
- Foe Appears: A rival ship or customs cutter arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional ships, marines, or privateers arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - beacon moved/channel blocked/law invoked.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Admiral, Commodore, or Mirror-Keeper intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - storm hits/beacons shift/quarantine declared.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Kahfagia (Lantern Law): Beacons shift without warning, writs expire mid-sentence, jurisdiction flips underfoot.
- Kahfagia (Western Trade): Strange cargo manifests, foreign spices bloom in wounds, rumors prove true.
- Kahfagia (Tide Masters): Channels silt overnight, tides run backward, anchors refuse to hold.

Western Reach Rumors (d6, fast hooks)

1. A harbor where bells toll under water; cargo must be named aloud.
2. A spice that stops bleeding—until moonrise.
3. A mirror-reef that reflects storms from a week ahead.
4. A pilotage guild that uses birds, not beacons.
5. A fleet that sails by shadow cast on fog.
6. A court that weighs debts in breath, not coin.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Sail + Wits): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Wake Surge.
- Cut the Lane (Pilot + Tactics): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a beacon is under your color, +1 die.
- Weather the Squall (Resolve + Sail): On a hit in Black Squall, you pick who drifts; on a miss, the Keeper does.

Boss Seeds (Sea & Signal)

- The Mirror-Keeper of Kassamira (signal tyrant): Phases—Audit → Blacklist → Light Embargo. Counters: rival beacon logs, Tide Court precedent, stolen codebook.
- Corsair-Chaplain of the Pointe (relic raider): Phases—Charm → Board → Bell-Wake. Counters: sanctified boom, cofradía oath, drowned-saint tithe.

Chapter 2

Ecktoria

Marble & Ledgers. The Empire that never quite died—more like a corpse propped up by gilded scaffolding and the stubborn refusal of its undertakers to admit the job’s done. Ecktoria’s coin-houses still clutch Utaran seals like talismans against progress, every bridge groans under a toll booth staffed by cousins of the governor’s third wife, and the Everflame burns in every basilica not as a symbol of divine truth, but as a literal lie detector: swear a false oath near it, and your tongue turns black. Clever. Very clever. I sold them a breath-bond once—a beautiful thing, really—to guarantee a grain shipment from Oshiira. The bond was sealed with the sigh of a dying Aeler miner (ethically sourced, of course), promised to pay double if the ship arrived intact. The ship sank. Not by storm, not by pirates—but because I’d paid the stevedore to “accidentally” drop a barrel of quicklime into the hold mid-voyage. The Ecktorians were furious. They dragged me before the Everflame, shrieking about breach of contract. I smiled, bowed, and reminded them, voice honey-smooth: “I sold you the bond, Captain. Not the insurance. Not the seaworthiness of the vessel. Not even the promise that the stevedore wouldn’t be bribed by a man with a grudge against Oshiira’s grain inspectors.” Then, while they were still spluttering, I bought the wreckage rights for three coppers and a sworn affidavit from the captain’s mistress that he’d been planning to scuttle the ship anyway. Leverage isn’t about fine print—it’s about having the buyer sign the waiver while they’re still choking on seawater.

[Edgewalker: Salvage code? Thimble, sweet summer child, salvage code is for losers who don’t own the reef before the ship hits it. I bought the reef’s mineral rights six months ago—paid in promises to the governor’s mistress that I’d make her a widow. Now, about that bond... the Oshiira inspectors? They have a lovely daughter. I wonder what her dowry looks like?]

[Edgewalker: Familial ties are just leverage with a heartbeat. Now pass the abacus—I need to calculate how many drowned sailors fit in a single breath-bond before the Everflame notices the soot’s fake.]

2.1 Ecktoria — “Marble & Fire”

Grand Magistrate (Elite): “The law here is written not in books but in marble and flame. Every edict carries the weight of centuries, and every judgment echoes in the very stones of the Forum.”

Ferrymaster (Commoner): “I’ve seen the city burn three times and rise again like a phoenix made of stone. The marble remembers, the bells tell the truth, and the fire judges all – especially those who think coin can buy clean hands.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Once the heart of the Utaran Empire, Ecktoria has worn its laurels into chains. Three centuries of sack, fire, and slow decline have not stripped its marble forums nor its gold-sealed coin-houses – but each day, more of its wealth slips into the hands of mercenaries and factions. The Black Banners march on its purse, avenging old Ykrul wounds by proxy. Processions still crown its stairways, yet ash lines every step. The city burns not only with memory, but with ambition still unquenched. Beyond the capital’s walls, the province is a patchwork of struggling towns, abandoned fortresses, and grainlands whose harvests are disputed by rival tax-collectors. The Everflame Orthodoxy preaches unity, but each sermon is a coded signal for a political camp. The statues watch. The fire judges.

What you notice first: The smell of old incense and fresh bread. The way crowds part for a procession—and close again for a knife. The marble steps, worn smooth by centuries of petitioners.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never refuse a toast in a coin-house. The ledgers are the true judges, and a declined cup is a declined credit. You will not borrow again.

Regional Mood: The Flame That Remembers

Here, the past does not fade—it is polished into monuments. Every statue, every obelisk, every triumphal arch is a legal precedent carved in stone. Ecktoria is not one city but three: the marble forums of the old patricians, the soot-stained alleys of the mercenary camps, and the basilicas where the Everflame’s priests balance piety against profit. The Grand Magistrate presides over a skeleton empire, but the real power moves in coin-houses, grain ledgers, and the whispered judgments of the Censor’s Hall. The Black Banners are not invaders; they are employees. The Ykrul are not enemies; they are creditors. And the Everflame is not a god; it is an auditor that never sleeps.

Starting Location: The Coin-House floor, marble cracked with soot lines, where votive candles burn beside melted icons. A factor with smoke-singed ledgers offers a purse. “The Lame King moves,” she says. “And the Basilica burns with him. Your credit is good—for now. Find out who lit the fire, or the Flame will audit your soul at dawn.”

At a Glance

- Atmosphere: Marble grandeur, ash-tipped ambition, and the slow rot of imperial forms.
- Key Conflict: Legitimacy versus wealth; old families, new mercenaries, and the Everflame’s judgment.
- Notable Threats: Bread riots, arena spills, ducal conflicts, inquisitorial visits, and the Red List.
- Common Rewards: Procession permits, coin-house credit, laurel deeds, and a Golden Edict carved in precedent.

Prominent NPCs of Ecktoria

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Valerius	Grand Magistrate	Preserve the forms of law while the empire crumbles	His gavel is a sundial; it only strikes at noon.
Flavia	High Priest of the Ever-flame	Balance the factions and keep the flame lit	She has never raised her voice; the flame speaks for her.
Cassia	Duchess-Regent of the Dolmis Gate	Protect her family’s trading rights	She rules from behind a silk screen; a dagger-hole is cut at eye level.
Marcus	Coin-House Factor	Survive the next credit panic	He seals deals with three ribbons: white (ask), red (now), black (never).
Lucius	Lanista (arena master)	Own the next champion and the secrets of the hypogeum	His fighters’ brands are his signature; he never repeats a mark.
The Red Clerk	Censor’s Hall scribe	Control which names are remembered	His inkwell is a skull; the skull belonged to a name he erased.

Names of Ecktoria

Inspired by late Latin and early Romance: strong vowels (ae, i, o), soft endings, and the weight of imperial bureaucracy. Surnames often denote a place of origin, a trade, or a notable ancestor.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Valerius	Flavia	de Urbe	the Iron
Marcus	Cassia	Aquilinus	the Coin-Wise
Lucius	Aelia	Honoratus	Flame-Touched
Tiberius	Cornelia	Lateranus	the Unburned
Gaius	Livia	Silvanus	Bread-Counter

Decimus	Valeria	Portinari	Ash-Finger

The Three Ecktorias: Faction Spectrum

Ecktoria is not a single polity but a battlefield of three competing visions. Most citizens and factions fall somewhere between these poles, shifting allegiance as the grain price changes.

- Old Blood (Patrician Traditionalists) – The ancient senatorial families who remember when Ecktoria ruled the world. They worship precedent, hoard marble, and see mercenaries as necessary filth. Their power is in law, lineage, and the silent networks of the Censor’s Hall. Clocks: PATRICIAN PATIENCE [4], BLOOD DEBT [6].
- Black Purse (Mercenary & Trade Leagues) – The new power: condotta brokers, coin-house factors, and mercenary captains who have bought what birth could not give. They care about supply lines, not bloodlines. Their loyalty is to the next contract, and their god is the ledger. Clocks: CONTRACT SPIRAL [4], PAYDAY FEVER [6].
- The Everflame (Church & Inquisition) – The priests, inquisitors, and relic-keepers who claim that the Eternal Flame is the only true sovereign. They offer legitimacy to whoever pays the tithe—and withdraw it from whoever forgets. Their power is in pulpits, processions, and the fear of excommunication. Clocks: HERESY INDEX [4], SANCTUARY VIOLATION [6].

Superimposed on these are the Ykrul creditors (who hold Ecktoria’s debt like a leash) and the Black Banners (who hold its streets like a lease). A wise politician learns to balance all three—and keeps a boat ready on the Dolmis.

Spades — Places

2. Petition Steps — Milk-stone steps where dawn petitions are pinned. The petitions are written in ink and hope. The steps answer in marble and silence.
3. Tally-Ford Ferryhouse — Rope-drums thrum all day; the ferrymaster watches coin and banners. The rope-drums have a pattern. It spells the names of those who paid late.
4. Arena Hypogeum — Practice sand and whispered secrets beneath the games. The sand is from the Tiber. It still remembers the blood of the last revolt.
5. Everflame Cloister — Candle markets and side-chapels where flame speaks truth. The flame has a voice. It is the voice of the last liar who tested it.
6. Shatterline Bazaar — Between quake-toppled columns, merchants hawk broken dreams. The columns were toppled by an earthquake that killed a senator. He still haunts the rubble.
7. Coin-House Floor — Counting ledgers under glass; factors seal credit with three ribbons. The ribbons are colored: white for "ask," red for "now," black for "never."
8. Mile-Zero Obelisk — Surveyors’ starting point; all roads measured from here. The obelisk has a crack. The crack is a mile long—in the other direction.
9. Triumph Stairs — Processional Way switchback; marble worn smooth by ambition. The stairs have a name: "The Rise of the Forgotten." No one remembers why.
- J Ducal Loggia — High above a packed square; a duchess watches and waits. The duchess has not blinked in three hours. She is counting.

- Q Censor’s Hall — Red-lacquered tablets record every name, every shame. The tablets are redacted in invisible ink. The truth is underneath.
- K Grand Forum — Statues tarped, echoes loud; where crowds become mobs. The tarps were a gift from a dead emperor. The statues do not thank him.
- A Imperial Arena — The Marble Bowl, gates chained – for now. The chains are warm. Something inside is breathing.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Torchbearer Child — Ash-smudged hands; knows every shortcut through the ruins. She has never been lost. The ruins speak to her in dust.
 3. Ferrymaster — Knows which banners pay late; collects more than coin. His ledger is a net. The names are the catch.
 4. Coin-House Factor — Seals credit with three ribbons; eyes twitch at defaults. His eyes are the color of old silver. They see through your purse.
 5. Lanista — Owns fighters – and their secrets; sells victory in the sand. His grin is a brand. The brand is on his fighters’ necks.
 6. Decumanus-Master — Surveyor who "moves" stones; rewrites the city’s shape. His rod is a finger bone. The bone belonged to the last surveyor who argued.
 7. Procession Marshal — Permits and whistle; keeps order in ceremonial chaos. His whistle is for the living. His bell is for the dead.
 8. Grain-Prefect — Allots loaves; knives in the margins of every ledger. His ledger has a stain. The stain is wine—or blood.
 9. Censor’s Clerk — "Misfiles" careers; knows which names to forget. His inkwell is a skull. The skull belonged to a name he forgot.
 10. Veteran Standard-Bearer — Sells honor as a retainer; medals heavier than sword. His medals are from a war that never happened. The corpses are from one that did.
- J Gladiatrix — Darling of the crowds; owes no one but the sand. Her sword has no name. The sand has many.
- Q Duchess-Regent — Behind a silk screen; speaks through cousins, rules through silence. The screen has a hole. The hole is for a dagger—hers.
- K High Priest of Everflame — Smiles like law; flame judges truth and debt. His smile is a candle. It can warm—or burn.
- A Grand Magistrate — Guardian of forms, breaker of them when needed. His gavel is a sundial. It only strikes at noon.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Blocked Bridge — A procession blocks the only crossing till sundown. The procession is for a saint who died hungry. The saint is not forgiving.
3. Proscribed Sigil — A sudden edict: your mark is now forbidden. The edict was written in the dead of night. The ink is still wet—and warm.
4. Bread Riots — Grain barges are late; hunger hisses at the city’s edges. The hunger has a face. It is the face of a baker who ran out of flour.

5. Arena Spill — A riot spills into streets; shutters slam, guards draw steel. The riot started over a point. The point was a sword.
6. Ducal Conflict — Rival dukes levy the same ward; your recruits vanish. The recruits are not dead. They are hired. They are now your enemies.
7. Border Dispute — A re-plat redraws boundaries; your deed becomes "disputed." The surveyor's rod is bent. He calls it "context."
8. Frozen Purse — A coin-house calls in notes; your purse freezes at the worst moment. The notes were called by a dead man. His signature is still warm.
9. Inquisitorial Visit — A relic's authenticity is questioned; penalties are swift and public. The relic is a nail from a cross. It has been forged seven times. It still works.
10. Aftershock — Masonry and timetables fall; scaffolds groan with new cracks. The crack has a name. It whispers it to the wind.
- J Counterfeit Laurel — Your win is void unless you find the forger. The forger is a child. The child is a slave. The slave is a senator's son.
- Q Church Purge — "Spectacles" are banned; your venue is canceled by zealots. The zealots are paid by a rival. The rival is in the front row.
- K Rerouted Triumph — The crowd follows the favored path; your moment is stolen. The favored path is lined with archers. The archers are not there for the ceremony.
- A Red List — A secret ledger; your patron's name appears overnight. The list is written in a dead hand. The dead are still collecting.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Bread Chit — Ward sustenance for a week; street patience guaranteed. The chit is a clay token. Break it to eat—or to bribe.
3. Procession Permit — Move sacred flame through a crowded quarter; law walks with you. The permit is a torch. Carry it, and the city will part—or burn.
4. Arena Purse — Settles debts and hires mouths; blood-money in coin. The purse is a helmet. The helmet belonged to a champion who lost.
5. Survey Writ — Reset one boundary stone; redraw the city's shape. The writ is a stone. Move it, and the map changes—on paper.
6. Ducal Safe-Conduct — Four guards and a trumpet; noble favor walks ahead. The guards are paid by the duke. The trumpet is paid by you.
7. Coin-House Credit — Silent and immediate; debt becomes opportunity. The credit is a ribbon. Cut it to spend—or to owe.
8. Magistrate's Postponement — Buy a tenday against any suit; law delayed, not denied. The postponement is a letter. The letter is sealed with a tear.
9. Laurel-Deed — Crowd favor follows you into court; glory as a shield. The deed is a leaf. It was plucked from a victor's crown. The victor is dead.
10. Grain Ledger — Name who eats this month; hunger bends to your will. The ledger is a stomach. Feed it, or it will feed on you.
- J Minor Title — A style that opens doors that bolts resist; rank as a key. The title is a word. The word is "Patrician." The doors do not ask questions.
- Q Basilica Audience — One private hour with the High Priest; the flame speaks truth. The hour is a candle. When it burns out, so does your favor.

K Censor’s Indulgence — One banned thing becomes permitted (for you). The indulgence is a silence. The silence is a scream.

A Golden Edict — An exception carved in marble; precedent travels like law. The edict is a crack. The crack in the law is now an opening.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (papers/favor/precedence) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo marble and fire motifs – statues that watch, flames that judge, and law that remembers every name.

Additional Features

- Imperial Ruins: Every district bears half-collapsed arcades, serving as markets, courts, or shelters for mercenary companies.
- Competing Factions: Dukes, guilds, and priests stage processions that collide at bridges and squares, each claiming legitimacy.
- Monuments as Weapons: Statues, obelisks, and colonnades are not only symbols – they are barricades, rallying points, and high ground when the city riots.
- Everflame Orthodoxy: The basilicas preach unity, but each sermon is a coded signal for a political camp. The High Priest plays balance while cultivating his own following.
- Black Banner Contracts: Foreign mercenaries fill the gaps left by a shrinking citizen levy, their loyalty secured only by steady coin.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Saint Marcellus (Mykkiel) of the Gilded Scale (Order of Justiciars): The Censor’s Hall keeps a sealed archive of unwritten laws — precedents that were never spoken aloud. The Order of Justiciars claims that reading even one of these laws binds the reader to enforce it. The Grand Magistrate has never opened the archive. The Red Clerk has, and his inkwell is now a skull.
- Saint Valeria (Isoka) of the Serpent (Order of the Shed Robe): In the Everflame Cloister, a side chapel is dedicated to the Shedding Saint, whose mosaic shows a snake eating its own tail. Pilgrims who leave a confession there wake the next morning having forgotten one sin — but also one kindness they received. The High Priest permits the chapel because the offerings keep the basilica warm.
- The Hospice of the Soot-Stained Hands: A hospice in the Shatterline Bazaar is run by grey-robed healers who ask no payment. They are tolerated because they treat wounded mercenaries for free, but the Black Purse faction suspects they also erase debts — ledgers left near their doors have been found blank. The Order’s rule: “You do not pay back. You pay forward. But woe to the one who strikes a healer.”

- The Ember Prefect (Heretic Cult): A schism within the Everflame believes the flame should not be contained in basilicas. They meet in the arena hypogeum at midnight, chanting the Unspoken Ninth Citation. The Grand Magistrate has outlawed them three times. Each time, the edict was found burned the next morning, with a single word left intact: “Audit.”
- The Ninth: In any Ecktorian court, the ninth citation of precedent voids all previous. The wise stop at eight and settle. Those who cite the ninth are said to hear a faint laughter from the marble walls — and their cases are never heard again.

Ecktoria Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Flame: Crumble a crust into the Everflame. Ignore the first Bread Riots penalty.
- Knot the Ribbon: Tie a single knot in a coin-house credit ribbon. Cancel Frozen Purse or take -1 die on your next debt roll (your choice).
- Name to the Marble: Whisper a dead debtor’s name into a statue’s ear. Gain +1 Effect when collecting from their heirs this scene, but mark Obligation to the Grand Magistrate.

Patronage & Power

Ecktoria’s decline is not collapse, but transformation. Wealth bleeds into patronage webs: a senator’s indulgence, a censor’s indulgence, a noble’s purse. The city’s great houses keep mercenary captains on retainer, while priests sell ritual processions as public theater and private favor.

For the GM: Patronage should function as both opportunity and trap. Any gift (a purse, permit, or charter) binds the receiver to service, but patrons can die, fall from favor, or suddenly proscribe what they once allowed. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (seals, ribbons, laurel crowns) that can be stolen, forged, or voided.
- Let rival patrons issue conflicting "safe-conducts," forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use processions, funerals, or trials as arenas for social contests, where patronage debts surface and shift allegiances.

Patronage in Ecktoria is not mere background – it is the engine of politics, coin, and survival.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from city guards or rival factions.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby crowds or ceremonial processions.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for patrols or inquisitors.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or ceremonial opportunity.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: City authorities or noble house becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to crowd movement or procession.
- Foe Appears: A rival faction member or city official arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional guards, mercenaries, or zealots arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - procession turns violent/boundary dispute erupts/patron turns.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: High Priest, Grand Magistrate, or Duchess-Regent intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - procession erupts/arena gate opens/monument collapses.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - flame speaks/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Ecktoria (Marble & Fire): Statues turn their heads, flames burn blue, ceremonial masks appear in windows.
- Ecktoria (Procession): Crowds chant your name, banners block your path, trumpets announce your arrival.
- Ecktoria (Patronage): Seals break in your hand, favors are revoked, noble houses compete for your allegiance.

Extensions (Plug-in)

- Cross-Region Hooks (optional draws):
 - Aeler True Masons bid to shore a failing aqueduct; accepting stabilizes Aftershock but grants them soft leverage in the ward.
 - Aelinnel Green-Market broker offers “truth-credit” on court gossip; pay later in favors or names.
 - Black Banner retainer parade demands back pay on the Triumph Stairs; crowd sympathy tilts your next parley.
- Faction Entanglements During Travel (use en route or on city entry):

- If the party holds any Condotta Diamonds, begin with Bread Riots at +1 segment (mercenary grain trains re-routed).
- Entering with an Underway Pass (Aeler) grants +1 Position on Aqueduct Walk scenes but ticks Ducal Conflict once (guild jealousy).
- Carrying Green Market tags downgrades one Censor's Hall action but flags Inquisitorial Visit at the next temple.
- Patron Touchpoints (as Saints & Orders):
 - Saint Maelstraeus (the Reckoner): Coin-houses keep shadow ledgers; once/session convert one social success into a Coin-House Credit Diamond but start a Karmic Debt [6].
 - Saint Mykkiel (the Justiciar): Any Procession Permit can be notarised as an Oath Irons lite: breaking its terms applies –1 die to legal actions for a scene.
 - Saint Lunara (the Silver Quiet): Everflame Cloister niches hide “silver mirrors”; on use, ask one yes/no about civic intrigue; mark Exposure +1.
 - Saint Traveler (the Wayfinder): Map the Triumph Stairs as a living route: spend 1 Boon to treat one crowd scene as overland progress for clocks.
- Trade Good Consequences (pick 1 when a haul sells):
 - Arena Steel → street duels spike → start Arena Spill at 1.
 - Relic Fragments → basilica prestige swings → tick Church Purge or grant Basilica Audience.
 - Survey Rights → boundary re-plat → downgrade one Border Dispute or upgrade a rival's.
- Diplomatic Favor (minor currency):
 - Earn by resolving a public scene without bloodshed (Forum, Procession, Coin-House).
 - Spend 1 to reduce DV of a permit/audience by 1, or to ignore Blocked Bridge for one crossing.
 - Holding 2+ makes you “interesting”: start a Red List [4] that advances on snubbed patrons.
- Reputation Echoes (soft power):
 - Crowd-Loved (Laurel-Deed): first time per session you face a mob, set Position one step safer.
 - Coin-House Trusted (Credit): ignore the first Frozen Purse; next time, it returns at +1 severity.
 - Clerically Vouched (Everflame): downgrade one Inquisitorial Visit; if abused, promote Church Purge.

Monuments as Mechanics (opulence with teeth)

- Processional Geometry: When acting on the Triumph Stairs, choose: +1 Effect or –1 Heat; on a miss, Rerouted Triumph advances.
- Aqueduct Leverage: Securing an aqueduct span grants a one-scene high ground tag in any linked ward; if collateral hits, tick Aftershock.
- Forum Acoustics: Rally speeches at the Grand Forum grant an extra assist die if at least 20 witnesses; failure spawns Bread Riots at +1.

Plug-in SB Conversions (Ecktoria flavor)

- Any 1 SB may become Crowd Drift: shift the scene’s terrain in favor of or against you (bridges clog, stairs clear).
- Any 2 SB may become Seal Revoked: void one paper (Permit/Chit/Indulgence); to avert, sacrifice Diplomatic Favor.
- On 3+ SB offer Patron Bargain: accept a visible mark (ribbon, laurel brand) to halve consequences; start a Patron Debt [6].

Hidden Orders & Ancient Conspiracies (d12 hooks)

1. The Ash Senate – a ledger of “extinguished” patrician lines still voting by proxy through funerary guilds.
2. Surveyors of the Ninth Mile – decumanus-masters who can move boundaries with ritual math; a lost rod sets precedent across the city.
3. Lantern Tetrarchy – four basilica beadles who decide which miracles are counted; the fifth lamp was broken in a purge.
4. The Red Marble Compact – coin-house founders who tithe 1 in 100 coins to a secret indemnity fund used to flip coups.
5. Archivum Umbrae – censor clerks maintaining a shadow index of names that must not stand trial (yet).
6. Peregrine Brotherhood – ferrymasters trading in sealed confessions; blackmail that floats.
7. The Laurel of Dust – a gladiators’ mutual that chooses which champions live long enough to hold office.
8. Aqueduct Collegium Obscura – engineers who keep a second set of sluice keys; droughts become elections.
9. Order of the Broken Obelisk – survey-cult that believes Mile-Zero is wrong and can re-found the city with one stone.
10. The Funeral Republic – undertakers running a parallel courier state through catacombs and wakes.
11. The Ember Vault – a sealed reliquary under the Arena; victors' sweat was bottled for augury.
12. Triumphal Maskers – procession costumers who encode heretical theses into robe pleats and torch patterns.

Cults & Mystery Rites (d10)

1. Children of the Phoenix (rebirth by fire): ash-marks grant +1 die vs. fear in crowds; mark Fatigue if you hesitate near open flame.
2. Verdant Laurel (blood to marble, sap to coin): once/session turn 1 Harm into 1 Coin-House Credit; start a Green Debt [4].
3. Mask of the Thirteenth (forbidden procession step): walk through a riot unmolested; next parley with clergy begins one step worse.
4. Brotherhood of the River Tongue (truth ferried at night): ask the Dolmis one yes/no; a ferryman shows up later to collect a name.

5. Candlemakers of Ever (flame remembers lies): blue flame points to falsehood; the liar dreams of you for three nights (Exposure +1).
6. Sable Standard (war saint cult): your banner ignores morale checks once; start a Blood-Tithe [4] owed to the saint's chapel.
7. The Ninth Bell (hour that is not kept): skip a queue or sentence; next edict you need arrives late (Delay SB free once).
8. Guild of Red Accountants (sin as ledger): convert 2 SB into a Magistrate's Postponement; add Karmic Debt [6].
9. The Marble Eaters (mortification sect): bite stone, gain +1 Effect resisting crowd crush; take Harm 1 (Stress) if you boast.
10. Torch of Saint Vessa (saint of necessary arson): sanctify a fire to purge a tag (Plague/Corruption); City Heat +2.

Religious Schisms & Trials

The Everflame Divide (choose a live schism)

1. Orthodox Basilica vs. Ember Reformers: Is miracle counted by law or kindled by need?
2. Laurel Theologians vs. Street Saints: Does glory flow down from triumphs or up from bread-lines?
3. Iconoclast Ward vs. Reliquary Keepers: Is the flame purer without images?

Schism Mechanics (table-facing)

- Heresy Index [0–6]: ticks when players publicize a stance, defy clergy, or wield cult rites in view. At 3: inquisitorial audits become common; at 6: Church Purge (Q) auto-triggers once/session until lowered.
- Sanctuary / Anathema Tags: locations acquire tags during arc scenes. Sanctuary: first harm in scene becomes Fatigue; Anathema: first social miss spawns “Proscribed Sigil.”
- Trial by Fire (mini-procedure, 3 beats):
 1. Assembly: set the forum/stair as arena; state thesis in one sentence (players or NPCs).
 2. Witness: three proofs (relic, miracle, precedent). Each proof: test Social/Arcana/Resolve vs. crowd DV; on success, reduce Index by 1 or gain Basilica Audience.
 3. Judgment: roll Crowd Mood (1d6): 1–2 mobs, 3–4 silent acceptance, 5–6 laurel toss (gain Laurel-Deed). If Index ≥ 4 , –1 to the roll.

Ecktoria – Marble and Fire

“In Ecktoria, even faith must balance its ledgers, and the gods audit in ash.”

In... the Coin-House floor, a factor with smoke-singed ledgers offers a purse. “The Lame King moves,” she says. “And the Basilica burns with him.”

Regional Motifs Coin-oaths, basilica relics, marble acoustics, augury smoke.

Relief Return the shard; pay a city-debt in blood or ; route the procession elsewhere.

Boss Seeds (Cults & Conspiracies)

- The Ember Prefect (schismatic inquisitor): Phase [8] Citation → Censure → Auto-da-fé → Purge. Lair: Everflame Cloister. Counters: relic provenance, crowd-favor, rival sermon.
- The Surveyor-Primus (geomantic usurper): Phase [6] Re-plat → Dispossess → Erase. Lair: Mile-Zero. Counters: Aeler measure-rods, witness line, broken rod.
- Phoenix of the Arena (miracle or hoax?): Phase [10] Hype → Immolation → “Rebirth” → Riot. Lair: Imperial Arena. Counters: doused ash, Mask of the Thirteenth, Everflame test.

Diamonds: Forbidden Leverage (add to §2.1)

14. Shadow Index Leaf – remove one name from the Red List for a week; add Countercoup +1.
15. Ember Writ – sanction one cult rite as “orthodox” for a scene.
16. Surveyor’s Ninth Rod – redraw one ward line unnoticed (until dawn).

Cross-Contamination (fast ties)

- Aeler True Masons: backing an iconoclast audit grants shoring crews; bell-codes now gate temple entries.
- Aelinnel Thorn Courts: hawthorn chaplains host “mirror sermons”; a basilica gains Sanctuary while a rival becomes Anathema.
- Black Banners: war-chaplains monetize indulgences; clearing Payday risks +1 Heresy Index.

Chapter 3

Acasia

The Broken Province. Silkstrand isn't just the only real city here—it's a festering wound of commerce, where bridges collapse under the weight of dye vats, hired swords change loyalty with the moon, and the Curse of the Blackwood isn't some ancient superstition—it's the result of me selling the Duke's forest manager "eternal" fire-resistant sap that was actually just fermented sap and a slow-acting poison. The trees died. The duke blamed "the Curse." I blamed bad forestry. Everybody won. I sold the Dyers' Guild a system of copper bells to warn of fires—not because I cared about their livelihoods, but because I knew their vats would boil over when I secretly raised the temperature in their underground chambers via redirected geothermal vents. They paid in silk—nine bolts of the deep indigo that only grows in the Blackwood's shadow, the kind that makes Veiled Sisters weep with envy. I traded it to a Tulkani caravan for a story that later saved my skin: how to walk through a veil without screaming. That's the Acasian way: every negotiation leaves a stain, every stain is a bargaining chip, and every chip is just leverage waiting to be cashed in.

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 3 of the Guild's Labor Accord—]

[Edgewalker: Labor accord? Thimble, darling, labor's just leverage with a union card. Now pass the brandy—I've got a dye war to start in Vhasia, and if you mention "Clause 3" one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the Blackwood's wraiths as kindling. They prefer it damp.]

3.1 Acasia — “Broken Marches”

Margravine of the Broken March (Elite): “The tithe must be paid, not merely offered. A promise written in ash and sealed with iron will is worth more than a thousand gold coins scattered on the wind.”

Hedge-Witch (Commoner): “Don't cross the Pale Causeway at dusk, especially not if you've got a silver tooth. The bridge'll remember it, and next time you pass, it'll want more than just your footfall. In Acasia, every road has a memory. The question is who pays the toll.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Acasia is a former province of the Utaran Empire that festers in the space between famine and ambition. Every hill wears a crown, every bridge demands a price, and every road curves back to the same cursed crossroads. Where once the Empire's coin and grain flowed, now tithe-collectors gnaw the marrow of starving villages, and warlords dress themselves as kings. The land itself has grown bitter: grain blights spread like gossip, wine turns to vinegar in the cask, and the old Imperial roads have forgotten where they lead. The Curse—the nameless thing that makes crossroads loop back on themselves—is not a myth. It is the weight of broken promises, and Acasia is drowning in them.

What you notice first: The smell of mildew on old parchment and wet ash. The way every milestone has been recarved. The silence of a village that heard you coming and chose not to open its gates.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never sign a contract on a bridge. The river is a witness, and it never forgets a signature.

Regional Mood: Famine and Ambition

Here, the past is not a memory—it is a predator. The Utaran Empire left behind roads that lead to nowhere, laws that contradict each other, and a hunger that no harvest can fill. Acasia's petty kings hold court in burned keeps, their crowns forged from iron nails pulled from famine coffins. The Margravine keeps a tally of feuds, binding bloodlines to her feast days. Free Companies trade loyalty like grain, swapping colors mid-march. And beneath it all, the Curse waits. It is not a monster. It is a geometry: the wrong turn, the bridge that leads back to the same shore, the bell that tolls for no funeral. In Acasia, the land itself has become a contract, and the fine print is written in mildew.

Starting Location: The Pale Causeway's last inn, walls soot-blackened by coal and a century of gossip. A bounty poster flutters beside a half-empty hearth. The innkeeper is a one-eyed woman who pours small beer without asking. A stranger at the bar offers a sealed contract: retrieve a dowry chest from a Blackwood matriarch before the Margravine's feast day. "The chest contains a claim, not coin," the stranger whispers. "But a claim in Acasia is worth more than gold—it is a key to a bridge that does not loop."

Prominent NPCs of Acasia

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Morwen "the Ledger"	Margravine of the Broken March	Keep the province from fracturing completely	She has never lost a feud; her sword is also a counting rod.
Oren "Tin Crown"	The Lame King	Be recognised as a true sovereign	His traveling throne is carried by debtors; he pays them in promises.

Ysabeau	Hedge-Witch of the Blackwood Charcoalers	Survive the Curse and keep her kin from the rope	She knows which bridges eat travellers, and her price is a story that ends badly.
The Bride	Dowry chest claimant (Blackwood matriarch’s heir)	Recover the chest before the Margravine’s feast day	She carries a dagger in her wedding veil. The claim is to a bridge that drowned.
Vladan	Free Company Captain (“The Rusted Banner”)	Find a permanent contract before winter	He has served three kings this year. He cannot remember their names.

Names of Acasia

Inspired by the martial duchies of a fallen southern empire: clipped Latin, Langobardic war-names, and the hard consonants of mountain keeps.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Alboin	Theodelinda	da Ponte	the Stiff
Authari	Rosamund	del Ferro	the Toll-Fist
Liutprand	Gundiberga	di Rocca	Bridge-Born
Desiderius	Anspranda	Longobardus	Blackwood
Ratchis	Veleda	Saxo	the Unremembered
Aistulf	Gisela	Capoferro	Ash-Finger

(Pass/Ruin/Toll-Town) Broken milestone on the old Imperial Road; borders “moved” overnight. Vine-terrace hillside with an abandoned press; strangler ivy owns it now.

Spades — Places

- 2. Broken Milestone — On the old Imperial Road; borders “moved” overnight. The stone has been chiseled seven times. The last mark is still wet.

3. Vine-Terrace Hillside — Abandoned press; strangler ivy owns it now. The ivy has grown around a skeleton. The skeleton still holds a wine cup.
 4. Toll-Bridge Town — Over a cold river; two tolls, no receipts. The second toll is collected by a child. The child does not speak.
 5. Wolfstairs Pass — Switchbacks beneath a stonefall cliff. The stones were placed by a landslide that knew your name.
 6. Sootfall Abbey Ruins — Bell tower intact; crypts breathing. The breathing is a prayer. The monks are still down there.
 7. Hill-Motte — Fresh palisade; ditch scattered with caltrops. The caltrops are from a siege that ended last week. The bodies are still rotting.
 8. Border-Stone Ring — Carved with seven crowns; each points wrong. The crowns belong to kings who never existed. The stones remember them anyway.
 9. Blackwood Charcoalers' Hollow — Witch-posts at every path. The witch-posts were made from the gibbets of tax collectors. The tax collectors still swing.
 10. Salt-Road Ford — Rains expose old bones in the chalk banks. The bones are from three wars. They are not all human.
- J Iron Mine Adits — Held by a miners' commune; the air is full of whispers. The whispers are the mine's memory. It remembers every collapse.
- Q Margravine's Hunting Lodge — Tapestries of victories that never were. The tapestries were woven by a blind weaver. The threads are from her own hair.
- K War-Camp City — Tents around a burned keep; every banner claims the throne. The keep was burned by its own lord. He did not want to share the heat.
- A The Pale Causeway — The last high road that survives the spring thaws. The causeway is made of bones. The bones are from the workers who built it.

(Petty Crowns/Priests/Companies) Tithe-collector's runner with a tally-rod and an empty stomach; roadside prior with three lay brothers guarding a relic.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Tithe-Collector's Runner — Tally-rod, empty stomach, and a list of names. His tally-rod has notches from a dozen villages. The villages are now empty.
3. Roadside Prior — Three lay brothers guarding a relic. The relic is a finger bone. The prior claims it belonged to a saint who starved to death.
4. Hedge-Witch — Knows which bridges eat travelers. Her price is a story. The story must have a bad ending.
5. Free Company Captain — Pike and shot between contracts. He has served three kings this year. He does not remember their names.
6. River Reeve — Rents every boat twice. His paper is a single page folded into a boat. The other half is elsewhere.
7. Salt-Baron — Hired blades; owns the ford and your timetable. His salt is grey. It was cut with ashes from a burned village.
8. Blackwood Matriarch — Tends the feud like a garden. Her garden grows tombstones. She waters them with tears—her enemies'.

- 9. Ex-Imperial Surveyor — Has the last accurate map. The map shows villages that no longer exist. The surveyor visits them anyway.
- 10. “King” of Three Villages — Iron-nail crown, iron-will taxes. His crown was a plowshare. He reversed the curse.
- J Bride with No Dowry but a Claim — Daggers in the wedding chest. The claim is to a bridge that drowned. The bride intends to collect.
- Q Margravine of the Broken March — Half saint, half tax roll. She has never lost a feud. Her tally stick is her sword.
- K The Lame King — Traveling throne; makes law by pointing. His throne is a sedan chair carried by debtors. They owe him everything.
- A The Cursed Child of Silkstrand — A rumor more than a person; her laughter ends sieges. She is said to be twelve years old. She has been twelve for a century.

(Feud/Levy/Weather/Curse) Peat-fog; all horns sound like someone calling your name. Sudden levy—every traveler pressed for a day’s service. Bridge feud; rival banners drop the chain on your cart.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

- 2. Peat-Fog — All horns sound like someone calling your name. The name is not yours. Answer it, and the fog will take you.
- 3. Sudden Levy — Every traveler is pressed for a day’s service. The levy master has a list. Your name is on it—in fresh ink.
- 4. Bridge Feud — Rival banners drop the chain on your cart. The chain was forged from a broken oath. It rattles when liars approach.
- 5. Grain Blight — Doubles the tithe; refusal means torches at night. The blight has a face. It is the face of a tax collector who died hungry.
- 6. Scree Slide — Seals the pass; the “safe” detour is owned by your enemy. The enemy raised the toll yesterday. He was expecting you.
- 7. Wedding Turns Ambush — You are caught between two bloodlines. The bride’s veil is a shroud. The groom’s ring is a knife.
- 8. Witch’s Tithe Night — Lights move in the woods; owe nothing or else. The lights have voices. They are arguing over who should collect.
- 9. Pox Sign — On a village gate; your escorts desert you. The pox is a rumor. The desertion is real.
- 10. Condotta Breaks — The Free Company flips colors mid-march. The new colors are the same as the old colors. The captain just wanted to raise morale.
- J Heretic Preacher — Sparks a march; toll-gates come down in splinters. The preacher’s text is a tax receipt. He reads it like scripture.
- Q Imperial Pretender — Arrives; every petty lord changes tabards. The pretender’s seal is a sunburst. The sunburst is slightly crooked.
- K River Overruns the Levee — The pontoon goes; your rivals don’t. The river’s name is “Debt.” It remembers every unpaid crossing.
- A The Curse Stirrs — No matter the road, you return to the same crossroads. The crossroads has a signpost. The arms are labeled “Regret,” “Hunger,” “The Same.”

(Papers/Claims/Safe-Conduct) Toll-exemption plaque for one bridge (once); monastery letter for bed and bread on a named road.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Toll-Exemption Plaque — For one bridge (once). The plaque is a bronze leaf. Hold it up, and the toll-keeper will spit—but step aside.
 3. Monastery Letter — For bed and bread on a named road. The letter is sealed with a wax tear. The monks will honor it—or they will not.
 4. Wine-Right — On an abandoned terrace; locals will work for shares. The wine is from a vine that grows over a mass grave. It tastes of iron.
 5. Condotta Contract — A signed pike contract (one battle on your terms). The contract is written in blood. The blood is from the captain's own finger.
 6. Tithe-Remission Writ — For a village; they owe you a season's labor. The writ is stamped with a bell. The bell's clapper is a finger bone.
 7. Border-Stone Adjustment — Move a line two fields over. The adjustment is a lie. The truth is that the line was always there.
 8. Pass-Key Charm — Recognized by Pale Causeway watchmen. The charm is a knotted cord. Untie it to pass—or to stay.
 9. Sealed Dowry Chest — Of claims, not coin; certain doors open. The chest is locked with a riddle. The answer is a name you do not know.
 10. Mine-Share — In the commune; they fight like they mean it. The share is a pickaxe. The commune will lend you a miner—or a grave.
- J Blood-Peace Charter — Suspend a feud long enough to move your wagons. The charter is a white ribbon. Blood will not be spilled while it flies—but blood will remember.
- Q Marriage Proxy — From the Margravine; bind a hill-king to your cause. The proxy is a wedding veil. The veil was worn by a ghost.
- K The Lame King's Traveling Writ — Troops must make way (for now). The writ is a broken scepter. The Lame King's seal is a footprint.
- A Curse-Redemption Rite (Temporary) — For one night, no crossroads can hold you. The rite is a whisper. The whisper is a name you have never spoken.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (papers/claims/safe-conducts) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo plague and curse motifs—crossroads that turn back on themselves, bells tolling for no funeral, banners blackened by mildew.

Additional Features

- Feud as Currency: Any insult, accident, or rumor can birth a feud; the GM may replace an SB result with a feud-token tied to a petty lord or house. Feud-tokens act as reusable complications: once per scene, the GM can spend a feud-token to have a rival appear, a bridge close, or a village refuse aid.

- Rot & Tithe: Each market or harvest scene carries a risk of rot—add a pressure if food or coin are exchanged without a blessing or a seal. A failed roll may double the tithe or spoil stored supplies.
- The Curse Remembers: When roads or negotiations stall, the GM may quietly repeat imagery—crossroads, whispers, mildew—to remind players that Acasia itself resists resolution. If the party ignores three such omens, the Curse Stirrs complication triggers automatically.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Bitter Root: Daughters of the Cord run a hospice in a burned abbey. They ask no payment—but they cut threads. A renegade Sister hides among the charcoalers, trying to untie her cord from a Rothari death warrant.
- The Threshold Compendium: The Pale Causeway is a Class II Anchor site—the ghosts of workers who died building it still carry stones. Saikou Ira would leave a silver coin in every crack.
- Malachai, the Chained Angel: A silver coin that never spends circulates among the toll-collectors. Take it, and your passage is always free—but the coin will taste of blood every time the Causeway floods.
- The Grey Wanderer’s Grimoire: Acasian psions are called “Feud-Readers.” They taste the weight of old grudges in the water. The Margravine employs two—and has never trusted a settlement they didn’t whisper.
- The Ninth: In any Acasian scene, the ninth toll paid at a bridge is never the last. The wise pay eight and barter for the ninth.

Acasian Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Milestone: Crumble a crust at a broken milestone. Ignore the first Peat-Fog penalty.
- Knot the Contract: Tie a single knot in a writ’s ribbon. Cancel Bridge Feud or take –1 die on your next negotiation (your choice).
- Name to the Blight: Whisper a dead tax collector’s name into a grain sack. Gain +1 Effect when avoiding tithes this scene, but mark Obligation to the Margravine.

Decline & Patronage

Patronage here is as brittle as candle wax. The Rothari Clan holds their marches by fear and iron law—patronage from them is real, but cruel, demanding service in blood or levy. Elsewhere, noble names are little more than titles printed on parchment and sold like promises. The Margravine keeps a tally of feuds, binding bloodlines to her feast days, while mercenary captains trade loyalty for coin, switching colors with each bell.

To seek a patron in Acasia is to choose which hunger you will feed: the Rothari’s iron teeth, a Free Company’s purse, or the hollow blessing of a saint who may never have lived. Yet even false crowns cast shadows long enough to shelter those desperate enough to kneel.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from tithe-collectors or petty lords.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby Free Company patrols or village watchmen.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for feud-trackers or hedge-witches.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable road conditions.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: River reeve or Free Company captain becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to fog or bridge closure.
- Foe Appears: A rival bloodline or toll-lord's enforcer arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional feud-kin, Free Company deserters, or Margravine's guards arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - contract voided/levy doubled/curse triggered.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Margravine, Lame King, or Cursed Child intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - fog thickens/bridge falls/curse loops.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Acasia (Feud & Tithe): Toll collectors demand double, bloodlines take offense, wagons are seized as "payment."
- Acasia (Rot & Famine): Grain blights spread, wells run dry, abandoned villages hold only ghosts.
- Acasia (Curse & Crossroads): Roads loop back, milestones point the wrong way, the same bridge appears twice.

Boss Archetypes in Acasia

- The False King (Feud/Authority) — A petty lord or pretender who crowns themselves on the ruins of empire. Phases: Levy Demanded → Feud Declared → Hasty Coronation. Cracks: a Blood-Peace Charter suspends his authority; a Marriage Proxy binds him to a rival.
- The Witch of the Blackwoods (Witchcraft/Curse) — A hedge-witch, matriarch, or revenant who manipulates feuds and curses. Phases: Tithe of Fear → Curse of the Crossroads → Hollow Wedding. Cracks: a Curse-Redemption Rite breaks her hold; a Mine-Share gives the commune courage to defy her.
- The Tithe Collector (Greed/Extortion) — A bureaucrat-priest with writs, escorts, and the ability to summon feuds or famine with a single decree. Phases: Audit of Souls → Seizure of Grain → The Reckoning. Cracks: a Toll-Exemption Plaque voids his claim; a Wine-Right buys off his debtors.
- The Rotting Child (Mystery/Curse) — A folkloric horror tied to Acasia’s plague of false crossroads. Phases: Laughter in the Fog → The Bridge That Loops → The Feast of Ends. Cracks: a Tithe-Remission Writ fed to the fog; a Monastery Letter read aloud at the crossroads.

Encounter Seeds (Quick Hooks)

- The Dowry That Walked: A Blackwood matriarch’s dowry chest has been stolen. The chest contains a claim to a bridge that never floods—and a curse that the Margravine wants broken.
- The Lame King’s Feast: The Lame King invites the party to a feast. The feast is a trial. The food is memory. The wine is lies.
- The Curse of the Pale Causeway: The Causeway is repeating. Every crossing brings the party back to the same inn. The innkeeper is missing a finger. She says she gave it to the bridge.

Chapter 4

Vhasia

The Fractured Sun. Two crowns. One kingdom. A river so wide it might as well be a border—and oh, how the crowns love pretending it’s not. The Northern Seigneurie and the Southern Parlement both claim the throne, both flood the river with paperwork to “prove” their right, and both are too busy arguing over seal wax colours to notice I’m the one who made the river this wide in the first place. I’ve forged more letters patent for them than I can count—not just for fun, but to keep their lawyers billing by the hour while my convoys cross under flags of truce I also forged. The trick? I don’t just use real seals on false parchment—I leak the “forgery” to the opposing crown first. Let them spend weeks screaming about signature smudges and ink bleed while my grain ships glide past, their bills of lading stamped with seals so real they make the ink weep. The Last Dauphin? A rumour. But rumours pay well when you’re the one who started them—and I started three: that the Dauphin was swapped at birth with a goatherd’s child, that he’s secretly a Veiled Sister in disguise, and that he’s been dead for ten years, his “reappearance” a puppet show run by the Seigneurie’s spymaster. Each rumour paid in different currencies: secrets, silk, and the right to walk through a certain gate at midnight.

[Edgewalker: Transparent governance? Thimble, my dear, trembling fool, transparent governance is for people who enjoy losing money—and I’ve got shares in the Seigneurie’s ink-makers. Now, about that pass-stone... the Seigneur’s heir has a lovely secret. I wonder what her weight in silver looks like?]

4.1 Vhasia — “The Fractured Sun”

Cardinal-Regent of the Broken Sun (Elite): “The sun may be fractured, but our authority is absolute within our domains. Every coin minted here carries our blessing, and every law written bears our seal – the rest is just politics.”

Road Warden (Commoner): “I’ve served under three different banners on this same stretch of road, and the only constant is that someone always wants to collect tolls. My horn calls honest warning – best heed it. The Fenwoods burned Lence, and now every duke with a coin purse thinks he’s king.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Vhasia is a realm of broken coronations and split loyalties. Once a proud province of the Utaran empire, the unified Sun-court shattered like its heraldic sunburst when the Fenwoods of Viterra and their allies sacked the capital of Lence and cast down the old Blood line. Now rival dukes, duchesses, abbesses, and parlements claim the fractured light. Everywhere, signs of fracture: chipped sun-discs on milestones, worn tabards bearing half a crown, coins minted in rival cities with different suns. In Vhasia, legitimacy is as fragile as a mirror, and every oath risks breaking along the fault lines of politics, faith, and fortune.

What you notice first: The smell of old smoke and fresh ink. The way every noble's seal has a hairline crack. The constant, nervous laughter of courtiers who remember whose head rolled last season.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never carry a coin that bears only one sunburst. The realm has three mints, and the wrong metal on the wrong road is treason.

Regional Mood: Crowns, Courts, and Companies

Here, the past is a weapon and the future is a debt. The Fenwoods came from Viterra with fire and iron, broke the Sun-king's army at the Ford of Ashes, and burned Lence until the mirrors melted. They left the throne empty—not destroyed, but open. Now every duke with a long purse and a short conscience backs a claimant. The Queen-Mother weaves alliances from her riverside keep. The Two Crowns—rival dukes crowned in rival cathedrals—march their levies through fields that can feed neither. Routiers sell their swords by the season, and parlement clerks drown justice in procedure. Vhasia is not a nation at war. It is a nation that forgot how to be at peace.

Starting Location: The Pont-du-Tithe, its golden arches catching fire in the sunset as pilgrims chant from both banks. A Duchy Constable in splendid armor guards the toll gate. “The Chevauchee burns,” he says, gesturing to distant smoke. “Two Crowns march to meet it. Whose seal do you carry? Speak quickly—the levy waits for no one.”

Prominent NPCs of Vhasia

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Eliador Everblood	Queen-Mother (née Longblood) of Ethon	Restore her son Valdais to the throne	She has outlived three husbands and two sons; she is not mourning.
Valdais Longblood	Duke of Adria, claimant to the Sun-court	Unite Vhasia under a strong northern crown	He has never lost a joust. His opponents have a habit of falling ill before the tilt.

The Red Marshal	Exiled commander of the Sun-court’s army	Win back Lence or die trying	He lost the Battle of Ashes; he still sees it in his dreams—and his nightmares.
Seint Michel’s Justiciar	Magistrate of the Order of the Gilded Scale	Enforce the chivalric code without mercy	He carries a scale with one pan empty; the empty pan is for lies.
Sister Oria	Custodian of the Lantern-Rites House on the Belworth	Keep the rites of hospitality and witness	She has never drawn a blade. She has never needed to.
The Cantor Alain	Iron Bard, bearer of the Cracked Ring	Sing the truth of Corin’s mercy before the armor closes again	Feathers grow from his temples; his shadow moves a half-step behind him.

Names of Vhasia

Inspired by the fractured duchies: Francien, Norman, and Brittonic influences. Soft vowels, silent consonants, and surnames that recall a bridge, a ford, or a stained banner.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Valdais	Eliador	de la Marche	the Iron
Renaud	Isabeau	de Lence	the Unbuckled
Corin	Oria	d’Aethor	Bell-Sworn
Touénot	Mael	du Pont	the Silver
Alain	Giselle	de la Croix	Ash-Banner
Ghiro	Celandine	l’Argent	the Unpaid

(Château/Cathedral/Forest) Wayside shrine with pilgrims tacking petitions to a scorched sun-disc; vine-terraced clos above a millstream with napping watchmen.

Spades — Places

2. Wayside Shrine — Pilgrims tack petitions to a scorched sun-disc; each parchment curls in different winds. The petitions are never answered. The shrine is a mailbox for the dead.
3. Vine-Terrace — Clos above a millstream; watchmen nap, halberds traded for bottles. The best vintage is called “Crownbreaker.” It tastes like smoke and regret.

4. Bastide Square — Neat as a checkerboard; merchants pay homage to different “hours” of the Sun. The square has a gallows. It rotates to face whichever claimant lost the last duel.
5. Royal Forest — Antler posts mark laws no king remembers; poachers still hang. The forest’s deer have grown bold. They wear crowns of shed antlers.
6. Pont-du-Tithe — Toll-bridge flanked by chapels and crossbows; chains blessed by rival bishops. The chains were forged from melted sunbursts. They ring in different keys.
7. Great Fair — Outside a chartered town; counting sheds ring like bells, rumors louder still. The fair has a Court of Miracles where counterfeiters sell to informers.
8. Salt Pans — Wind-pumps on an estuary; gulls own the law, smugglers own the night. The salt is grey. It tastes of old tears and older debts.
9. Siege-Château — Hoardings patched, cistern low, banners cut into ragged suns. The banner’s ragged edges are from a Fenwood sword. The owner still limps.
10. Cathedral Yard — Cranes creak, stones fly, scaffolds bristle with rival masons’ marks. The mason’s marks are clan signs. A scratched-out mark means a dead foreman.
- J Parlement Hall — Hung with faded tapestries; sunbursts spliced and re-stitched by claimants. The tapestries show battles that never happened—and some that shouldn’t have.
- Q Queen’s Causeway — Mile-long oath paved in quarried stone; half-sunk each spring. The sunken half is a graveyard for vows. The stones are slippery with old lies.
- K Sun Palace (Lence) — Shuttered mirrors, brambled gardens; courtiers playing at kingship. The mirrors were covered after the sack. No one wants to see what they show now.
- A King’s High Road — Milestones chipped of crowns; yet every army still marches it. The road is paved with the bones of tax collectors. They are not missed.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Road Warden — Dented badge, honest horn; ignored by both crowns but knows the roads. His horn is cracked. It still sounds—but the note is always half a step flat.
3. Vintner Syndic — Counts saints’ days as credit terms, vintages as treaties; wine as diplomacy. He keeps a bottle of Crownbreaker in every cellar. He knows which vintage each duke prefers.
4. Abbess-Chatelaine — Rules a fortress-convent with iron accounts and sharper scripture. She has never drawn a blade. The scaffold has, on her orders.
5. Routier Captain — Scarred and mercenary; prefers ransoms to loyalty; coin as conscience. He switches banners as often as his shirt. His loyalty is to the paychest—and his mother.
6. Duchy Constable — Splendid armor, empty coffers, pride swollen as a banner; glory over gold. His armor was his grandfather’s. It still has the dent from a Fenwood axe.
7. Parlement Clerk — Drowns foes in procedure, fishes them out for fealty; law as a weapon. His quill is a dagger. He sharpens it every morning.
8. Salt-Farmer — Gabelle lessee with cudgels, writs, and a river-chart no crown has; tax as tyranny. His ledger is written in salt. One drop of water and the debts vanish—along with the evidence.
9. Trouvère — A scandalous lay about the last Sun-king brings knives to tavern doors. He sings the truth. That is why he sleeps in a different inn every night.

10. Marshal-Exile — The Sun-court’s hammer; now wielded by whoever pays in silver. He lost the Battle of Ashes. He still sees it in his dreams—and his nightmares.
- J Heretic Perfect — Preaches peace while tucking hidden daggers into parchment margins. His sermon is a code. The psalms tell you which bridge to cross—and which to burn.
- Q Queen-Mother — Riverside keep; weaves alliances as if they were dowers. She has outlived three husbands and two sons. She is not mourning.
- K Two Crowns — Rival dukes, each “crowned” in rival cathedrals, neither whole. One wears a crown of iron. The other wears a crown of words. Both rust.
- A Last Dauphin — A rumor with a birthmark; armies march for whispers alone. He may be a baker’s son. The armies don’t care. They need a sun to follow.

(Chevauchée/Law/Church) Chevauchée burning loyalty oaths as well as barns; smoke curls like scripture. Interdict falls on a county; bells silenced, trade stalls.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Chevauchée — Raiders burn loyalty oaths as well as barns; smoke curls like scripture. The raiders wear no colors. Their horses answer to whistles—and grudges.
3. Interdict — Falls on a county; bells silenced, trade stalls, heretics prosper. The bells were melted for shot three wars ago. The silence is old.
4. Forest Law — Venison becomes treason; poachers hang from antler posts. The antler posts are carved with the names of the hanged. They whisper at dusk.
5. River Spate — Ferries chained, bridges drowned, pilgrims stranded mid-prayer. The water is the color of old gold. It washed away a mint last spring.
6. Coin Debasement — Three mints, three suns, no trust; soldiers demand silver alone. The silver is from the same mine—but the stamp is a prayer, not a promise.
7. Parlement Divided — A siege laid on parchment before walls; war by paperwork. The clerks duel with citations. The loser pays the winner’s ink bill.
8. Company Mutiny — Unless arrears are paid—in blood or coin; mercenaries as a time bomb. The mutineers have a list. Your name is on it—or will be by nightfall.
9. Relic Dispute — Two abbeys claim the same saint’s bones; mobs answer with stones. The bones are actually from a cow. The saints don’t mind. They like the attention.
10. Harvest Blight — Bread locked behind pikes; bakers guarded as lords. The blight has a name. It is the name of a duke who raised the levy too late.
- J Tournament “Accident” — Hides an assassination; your favor is now evidence. The lance was filed with a prayer. The prayer was answered—but not for the target.
- Q Royalist Restoration — Sunburst badges painted overnight on doors and graves. The paint is the color of dried blood. The badges face the wrong direction.
- K Feudal Levy — Lords demand levies in days, not months, with three days’ bread. The bread is hardtack from the last Fenwood siege. It still smells of smoke.
- A Winter Campaign — Roads turn to mud, hooves to ice, armies to ruin. The snow is grey with ash. The Pass of Ashes has a sister pass now.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Safe-Conduct — Sealed by a duke or abbey; honored only once, on one road. The seal is cracked. The road is watched. Use it before the seal breaks.
 3. Burgess Charter — A market ward; walls, watch, and revenue at your call. The charter is a bell. Ring it, and the town answers—or it doesn't.
 4. Bridge Farm — Tolls at Pont-du-Tithe for a season, if you can hold it. The tollkeepers are loyal to the last coin. Yours or theirs.
 5. Paréage Charter — Shared rule with a monastery—half justice, half rent, no peace. The monks pray for you. They also pray for your enemies. Balance.
 6. Wardship — Over a minor heir; lands obey you “for now.” The heir has a knife. He knows how to use it. He learned from watching you.
 7. Gabelle Lease — Salt-tax rights; lucrative, hated, and dangerous. The lease is a death warrant written in profit. Cash it wisely.
 8. Letters Patent — Raise a free-company under your banner; an army as a business. The letters are signed in blood—yours or the notary's. Both are valid.
 9. Remission — Of feudal dues for a village; they'll march when called. The village has a long memory. They remember the last lord who promised mercy.
 10. Low-Justice — Grant (stocks, fines, gallows) in a troublesome hamlet. The gallows rope is new. The notches are from the last hamlet.
- J Confiscation Writ — Against a royalist estate—if you can seize it first. The writ is a race. The other claimant rides a faster horse.
- Q Queen's Audience — Private with the Queen-Mother; a whisper becomes policy. The audience is a chess game. She always wins—but she lets you take a pawn.
- K Sunburst Warrant — Of the fallen court—most still bow if shown boldly. The warrant is a ghost. It has no power—only the power of belief.
- A General Pardon — Temporary: rebels absolved if they bend the knee. The pardon is a spring. It will close when the season turns.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (charters/patents/rights) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo fractured sun motifs—light that splinters, oaths that crack like glass.

Additional Features

- Fractured Seals: When brandishing a writ, badge, or charter tied to a Sun-court claimant, step Position up one step for the scene's next interaction at a gate, court, or checkpoint. Each use advances a Legitimacy [4] clock linked to the claimant; when it fills, rivals challenge the authority on sight.
- Parlement Games: If a scene touches petitions, guild disputes, or feudal appeals, the first Diamond played becomes a policy lever: treat it as two Diamonds toward swaying a decision or rewriting a custom. Afterward, start or advance a Whispered Precedent clock; when it fills, backlash spreads as other courts cite the case against you.

- Gabelle Knife-Edge: At bridges, fairs, or salt depots, convert Diamonds tied to tolls, leases, or safe-conducts into immediate passage or tariff relief for the company (no roll). Each conversion ticks a Resentment [4] clock for the locale; when it completes, expect boycotts, ambush rumors, or an audit by rival officials.
- Vhasian Chivalry: The knights of the western cantons (Ethor, Adria) follow the Round of Five Virtues: Courage, Courtesy, Mercy, Prowess, Truth. In a formal joust or a legal duel, the GM may award Victory by Virtue rather than by blood: the combatant with the higher Virtue score wins the dispute, even if they lost the physical exchange. This is the law of the tilt—and the law of the court.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Seint Michel, the Judge of the Scar (Mykkiel): The Order of the Gilded Scale maintains the Chivalric Ledger—a record of every oath sworn and broken in the cantons. A page torn from this ledger can serve as a single-use Claim String (gain +1 Position in any court). The Order’s justiciars are feared and respected; they never unbuckle their gorgets, and they have never lost a case. The Queen-Mother keeps a copy in her riverside keep, wrapped in a grey shroud.
- Seint Isabeau, Who Slumbers Amongst the Lilies (Ikasha): In the Ethorian marches, knights whisper prayers to Seint Isabeau when they long to set aside their steel. Her shrine is a hawthorn grove where armour must be left at the gate. Pilgrims who enter bare-skinned and speak a true regret find that their next wound heals in a single night—but they dream of a woman in white who asks, “Will you remember how to be touched?” Those who return to the grove a second time are never seen again.
- Seint Evroul of the Cairn (Mor’iraath): In the high passes of the Ethorian marches, a rusted knight in an unopened helm haunts the old barrows. He is the patron of those who carry a blood-debt and cannot rest. To call upon him, one must pour a cup of salt water at a cairn and name the wrong done to your house. He will witness one blow; if it lands, the foe is Marked by the Cairn—any spirit may locate them for a year. If it misses, the blow turns inward. The Marshal-Exile carries a scar from such a bargain; he does not speak of it.
- The Order of the Sunken Cup (The Hospice of the Broken Blade): A grey-robed hospice in the ruins of Lence treats the wounded of both crowns. They ask no payment, but they record every name in a ledger that never dries. The Restorationists suspect they are spies for the Queen-Mother; the Two Crowns accuse them of erasing debts. Sister Oria, the hospice’s custodian, is also the keeper of the Lantern-Rites House on the Belworth—neutral ground where even claimants must leave their blades at the door.
- The Chivalric Clocks (Armor Closes / Song Escapes): The Cantor Alain, bearer of the Cracked Ring, sings a warning at every tourney: the Armor Closes [6] when knights choose protection over mercy, when gorgets are buckled tight, when chivalry becomes siege mentality. When it fills, the cantons close their borders and the raids become wars. The Song Escapes [8] advances when mercy is shown, when armour is unbuckled, when a Cantor sings the truth. When it fills, a moment of genuine connection occurs—though it may be fatal. In Rouen, Alain still sings the Planctus Armatus each spring, and the congregation weeps for Sir Corin, who unbuckled his gorget to hear a thief’s voice and was undone by the mercy he offered.
- The Ninth: In any Vhasian court, the ninth citation of precedent voids all previous. The wise stop at eight and settle. Those who cite the ninth are said to hear a faint laughter from the marble walls—and their cases are never heard again.

Vhasian Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Sun: Crumble a crust onto a cracked sun-disc. Ignore the first Chevauchée penalty.
- Knot the Seal: Tie a single knot in a charter's ribbon. Cancel Parlement Divided or take -1 die on your next legal argument (your choice).
- Name to the Salt: Whisper a dead claimant's name into a salt pan. Gain +1 Effect when collecting debts from their faction this scene, but mark Obligation to the Queen-Mother.

Patronage & Power

In Vhasia, power flows through the remnants of imperial authority, fractured legitimacy, and the careful manipulation of legal and religious institutions. Former Utaran provincial structures still provide a framework for governance, but competing claimants to the Sun-court have created a complex web of overlapping jurisdictions and conflicting loyalties. The true power lies with those who can navigate this legal maze and maintain the appearance of legitimate authority.

For the GM: Patronage in Vhasia revolves around legitimacy, legal documents, and the ability to command respect from institutions that no longer have a clear central authority. Rewards often take the form of charters, writs, and official positions that can be leveraged into greater influence. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (seals, badges, writs) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival claimants issue conflicting authorities, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the parlements, cathedrals, and châteaux as arenas for social contests, where knowledge of law and custom determines success.

In Vhasia, your papers are your power, and your power determines whether you rule or are ruled.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from rival officials or court guards.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby parlement clerks or routier patrols.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or tax collectors.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable legal window.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Duchy constable or abbess-chatelaine becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to legal challenge or road closure.
- Foe Appears: A rival claimant or free-company arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional routiers, parlement guards, or rival ducal forces arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - writ voided/interdict declared/levy called.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Two Crowns, Queen-Mother, or Marshal-Exile intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - chevauchee hits/river floods/parlement erupts.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Vhasia (Fractured Authority): Seals break mid-signing, legal papers rewrite themselves, badges refuse to be honoured.
- Vhasia (Legal Warfare): Court decisions reverse without warning, precedents are cited against you, writs expire at crucial moments.
- Vhasia (Sun Symbolism): Sun-discs crack underfoot, light splits into contradictory shadows, oaths shatter like glass.

The Vacant Throne Campaign Clocks

For long-form political campaigns, use the following clocks alongside the faction sheets from the Political Intrigue expansion:

- Vacant Throne Clock [10]: Advances when a claimant gains a major advantage (battle, noble defection, foreign alliance). Retreats when the party brokers a truce or exposes a weakness. When full, a claimant takes Lence and declares themselves king.

- Armor Closes [6]: Advances when knights choose protection over mercy, when gorgets are buckled tight, when chivalry becomes siege mentality. When full, the cantons close their borders and the raids become wars.
- Song Escapes [8]: Advances when a Cantor sings the truth, when mercy is shown, when armour is unbuckled. When full, a moment of genuine connection occurs—though it may be fatal.
- Claimant’s Coup (per claimant): A 6-clock that advances when that claimant wins a Parlement vote, a joust, or a skirmish. When full, they march on Lence.

Boss Seeds (three-phase foes)

- The Red Marshal (Exiled Sun-court hammer) — Phases: Chevauchee Call → Banner Turn → Lists to War. Cracks: Letters Patent buys one round of obedience; General Pardon lets a unit stand down.
- Cardinal-Regent of the Broken Sun (scarlet gloves) — Phases: Interdict Blade → Seal Both Ways → Confessional Leak. Cracks: Queen’s Audience cancels Interdict Blade once; a Synod Indulgence treats a church check as controlled for one scene.
- The Parlement Spider (chief clerk; quills like daggers) — Phases: Motion to Delay → Counter-Citation → Filed at Dawn. Cracks: Sunburst Warrant opens a “royal window”; a Burgess Charter lets a town court overrule once locally.
- The Two Crowns (rival dukes) — Phases: Contradictory Edicts → Levy in Hours → Coin Trial. Cracks: Sunburst Warrant + public mass unites them for one scene; General Pardon calms levy unrest once.

Legendary Sites & Trials

- Tournament Ordeal (Bastide Square) — Declare Purse, Patent, or Pardon as stakes. Win to cash a matching $\diamond$; loseandspawnTournament “Accident”.
- Cathedral Scaffold Assize — Argue law atop creaking beams; each good point moves Position up; each slip marks Exposure. A Paréage Charter lets you call a recess once.
- Pont-du-Tithe Vigil — Keep the bridge peaceful through dusk: clear 3 segments on Bridge Peace by feeding pilgrims, quieting relic zeal, and paying one tithe from your purse.

Extensions (Plug-in)

- Legitimacy Dial (Claimant $\leftrightarrow$ Neutrality): Track the party’s public stance.
 - Claimant High: +1 Position when invoking seals, warrants, or feudal rights; first parley with a rival claimant starts one step worse.
 - Neutrality High: +1 Effect when brokering truces or smuggling between factions; first petition to a court or cathedral starts one step worse.
 - Center the dial by paying weight to both sides or hosting a neutral moot.
- Parlement Mini-Game (legal duel):
 - Lay three counters: Precedent, Equity, Force.
 - Argue a point (roll Lore + Sway vs. DV 3). On a hit, move one counter to your side. On a miss, the clerk gains Citation Edge.

- Win two counters to secure a temporary Parlement Ruling (treat as a Diamond for one scene).
- Spider’s Interjection (2 SB): flip Precedent, but start Whispered Precedent [2].
- Chevauchée Pressure (raid clock):
 - Two opposed clocks: Outrun the Fire vs Scorched Earth (size by highest rank in seed).
 - Each leg, choose High Road (fast, exposed), Bypass (slow, hidden), or Ford (risky, shortcut).
 - Advantage: Bypass → High Road (cover), Ford → Bypass (speed), High Road → Ford (navigation).
 - Spend a Watch-Code (from Three-Fires Ridge) to shift one segment from Scorched Earth to Outrun.
- Favor of the Sun (prestige track):
 - Earn by resolving disputes between claimants without bloodshed, or by returning stolen relics.
 - At 3 Favor, treat one Safe-Conduct or Sunburst Warrant as unquestioned for a scene.
 - Each use after the first advances Legitimacy Challenge [4] against that claimant.
- Start-of-Scene Omens (1d6):
 1. Cracked Bell: first legal action gains +1d; first boast draws Parlement Divided.
 2. Smoke on the Ridge: Chevauchée advances once; shortcuts open.
 3. Three Suns: three claimants claim the same road; pick a side or start Coin Debasement.
 4. Queen’s Dove: a message arrives; +1d on the next Queen’s Audience attempt.
 5. Salt Wind: Gabelle Lease counts double value today; smugglers’ ears open.
 6. Routier Campfire: mercenaries are hireable for one scene at half price—but they’ll ask questions later.
- Plug-in SB Conversions (Vhasia Flavor):
 - 1 SB → Seal Crack: a writ loses half its value until re-witnessed.
 - 2 SB → Citation War: increase DV by 1 unless you produce a precedent (spend a ◊orrecallapastruling).
 - 3+ SB → Crown Fracture: the claimant’s legitimacy splits; halve a consequence by accepting a rival’s seal on your paper (start Legitimacy Challenge).
- Reputation Echoes:
 - Court-Favored: once/session, downgrade Parlement Divided to a minor delay; the next document you present is scrutinized (+1 DV).
 - Chevauchée-Tested: +1 Position when evading raids; supply lines run 1 segment longer.
 - Neutral Broker: +1d with both claimants in a truce scene; any betrayal earns Resentment [2] from both sides.
- Cross-Region Hooks (quick integration):
 - Thepyrgos Synod Leak: a Synod Indulgence can suspend a Vhasian interdict—but starts Whispered Precedent in Thepyrgos.
 - Ubral Feud Echo: paying wergild to a Vhasian claimant instead of a clan starts Feud Rekindled along the border roads.

- Kahfagia Salt War: cashing a Gabelle Lease to outbid corsair lanes adds Market Knives [4] in Silkstrand or on the coastal quays.
- Valewood Relic Interest: a relic from a Vhasian cathedral may be claimed by fae courts; a Diamond spent on relic control may instead draw Court Tithe.

Chapter 5

Viterra

The Hedge-Law Realm. Viterra doesn't just run on precedent—it is precedent, a tangled thicket of rulings where every hedge has a lawsuit attached, every parish stone a deed dispute, and every ferry crossing a generations-long feud over who gets to charge the toll. The Warrior Queen isn't just a ruler—she's the living embodiment of “possession is nine-tenths of the law,” and she pays in customs seals like they're going out of style. Which they are—thanks to me. I sold her a set of Aeler breath-counters for her spies—not because I trusted her, but because I knew she'd use them to sniff out traitors in her court... traitors I'd planted myself. She paid in three customs seals, each valid for a year, each stamped with the sigil of a port I don't even use. I've used two. The third? For emergencies. Like when I need to cross the Belworth without paying the tariff—and without the Queen's spies noticing I've rerouted the ferry cables through my private toll booth three miles downstream. (The Queen's still paying me in seals for that “emergency”—she thinks it's a loyalty test. How precious.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 12 of the Customs Seal Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Ferryman's guild? Thimble, darling, guilds are just leverage with a membership card. Now pass the brandy—I've got a hedge war to start in Aeler, and if you mention “Clause 7” one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the Belworth's currents as kindling. They prefer it weighted.]

5.1 Viterra — “The Hedge-Law Realm”

Warrior Queen (Elite): “Every hedge here marks not just a boundary but a principle – the careful balance between order and freedom, justice and mercy. Our law grows like the hedges themselves, tended with precision and patience.”

Fen Reeve (Commoner): “The dikes hold back more than water – they hold back chaos. Every rod measured, every stone placed, keeps the flood from washing away not just our fields but our very way of life. And across the Belworth? The Vhasians still claim our hedges are theirs. Let them try.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Viterra breathes with the careful rhythm of precedent and petition. Once a proud kingdom before becoming a Uтарan province, it is now reborn under a new Warrior Queen who rules by legal precision as much as military might. The realm's true sinews lie not in steel but in writs, charters, and the ancient rights that bind lord to tenant, crown to county, and church to common. Every hedge-row, every parish stone, every ferry crossing carries the weight of custom older than memory.

But Viterra is also a kingdom of restless ambition. Northward, the Ubral highlands reject any crown but their own moots. Southward, the City of a Thousand Stairs—Thepyrgos—watches with scholarly scorn and synod edicts. Westward, across the Belworth River, lie the fractured cantons of Vhasia, where Viterran dukes hold ancient claims to estates and abbeys—claims that have fueled decades of raiding, ransom, and legal warfare. And in the Dolmis, the isles of Theona pledge nominal fealty but keep their own taboos, a constant tug between crown law and green custom. Viterra is not a nation at peace. It is a realm that wages law as war, and war as law.

What you notice first: The smell of damp parchment and fresh ink. The clatter of writ-runners' boots on cobblestones. The way every noble's hand rests on a seal ring—and every commoner's hand rests on a hatchet.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never cross the Belworth without a charter recognized on both banks. Viterran law and Vhasian claim fight every crossing, and the river takes the losers.

Regional Mood: Hedge, Crown, and Claim

Here, law is a blade. The Warrior Queen rules from Valora, her throne a bench of precedents. The old Fenwood dukes—whose ancestors sacked Lence and left the Vhasian Sun-court fractured—still hold vast estates in the northern marches, and their claims across the Belworth keep the border smoking like a low fire. Every spring, the Queen's justiciars ride west with warrants and escorts, demanding homage from villages that have paid Vhasian tithes for a generation. Every autumn, Vhasian routiers raid the grain convoys, and the legal duels that follow are fought with steel and citation alike.

North, the Ubral clans watch from their cairns, ready to rekindle feuds if a Viterran levy crosses the passes. South, Thepyrgos sends clerks and spies, testing the edges of Viterran jurisdiction with every disputed toll. And in Theona, the Three Greens mumble old curses while Viterran bailiffs try to count their cattle—and always miscount by one.

Starting Location: The Hall of Dawning tilt-yard at first light. Dawn-knights drill in armor polished like mirrors. Beside them, advocates rehearse arguments with the same intensity. A Queen's Justiciar slides a parchment across an oaken rail. "Three charters, one road across the Belworth. The Vhasian claimant says the bridge is theirs. The local reeve says it's crown land. And the abbey says it's a pilgrimage, not a toll. Carry the Queen's writ, break the Quiet Tolls, and make them agree—by clause or by cut."

Prominent NPCs of Viterra

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk

Queen Veralyn Everblood	Warrior Queen of Viterra	Consolidate her rule and balance the duchies	Her crown has no jewels—only seals; each seal is a conquered claim.
Justiciar Elodie Venn	Queen’s Justiciar	Enforce the law without fear or favour	She has never lost a legal duel; her opponents tend to fall down stairs.
Baron Aldric	Disgraced turncloak (former NPC)	Seeks to restore his lost honour	He was stripped of his lands for oath-breaking; now he haunts the northern marches.
Ser Roran	Knight of the Queen’s household	Remind himself that a stranger’s coin bought his life	He wears a silver gauntlet over his left hand; he never takes ransom.
Fen Reeve Cuthbert	Keeper of the dike guilds	Protect the fens from flood and the Queen’s tax men	His tally-rod has notches from three floods; the next notch will be from a Vhasian raid.
Master Advocate Halric	Legal duelist and scholar	Win the Great Law Day and retire undefeated	He has argued cases in three kingdoms and won all using their own precedents.
Sister Oria	Custodian of the Lantern-Rites House (Belworth)	Keep the rites of hospitality and witness on the border	She has never drawn a blade. She has never needed to.

Names of Viterra

Inspired by Tudor England and early modern Britain: strong consonants, soft vowels, and surnames that recall a hedge, a dike, or a parish.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Veralyn	Elodie	Everblood	the Law-Giver
Cuthbert	Aldric	Fenwood	the Unbuckled
Roran	Halric	of the Scar	Bell-Sworn
Constano	Oria	de la Marche	the Hedge-Wise
Touénot	Mael	l'Argent	the Silent
Ghiro	Celandine	Riven	Ash-Banner

Spades — Places

2. Fen Causeway — Stile with toll-rod and eel carts queueing; each reeve claims right to collect under a different charter. Dueling advocates argue cases on makeshift platforms. The causeway sinks an inch each year. The lawyers argue over whose fault that is.
 3. Hedgerow Green — In the Dales; bows strung under apple trees where justices of the peace hold court beneath makeshift arbors. Court duels permitted for matters of honor. The apple tree is called “the Hanging Judge.” Its fruit tastes of iron.
 4. Beacon Hill — Above the Highlands; fire-grate still warm from last winter’s levy call, signal tower with semaphore arms for legal dispatches and military alerts. The hill has three beacons. One for Ubral raids, one for Vhasian incursions, one for paperwork.
 5. Belworth Stairs — Ferry ledgers gone damp with river-mist; three manors claim toll rights, writs in three different hands. Legal challenges fought in boats while waiting. The stairs were repaired last year. The Vhasian side uses a different measurement.
 6. Bloom Quarry — Old iron-bloom turned drill yard; hammer echoes carry, forge-reeve holds tally of crown contracts. Military contracts awarded through legal bidding wars. The forge-reeve has never lost a contract. His opponents have a habit of finding better jobs elsewhere.
 7. Parish Maze — Stone maze where three maps disagree; hedge-priest’s vote decides who pays tithe and who holds freehold. Legal disputes settled by navigating the maze correctly. The maze changes at night. The hedge-priest says that’s God’s will.
 8. Fairport Works — Tideworks at the Dolmis mouth; customs writs in three languages flutter, inspectors with magnifying glasses examine every manifest. Maritime law enforcement includes boarding actions. One language is Utaran, one is Linn, one is for the smugglers.
 9. Law Quarter — Valora archives, oath-rooms, Hall of Dawning where precedent is birthed in ink and sealed with wax. Adjacent training grounds for legal advocates. The archives have a locked wing. The key is a legal argument no one has won.
 10. Counting Fields — Tarlington beside muster ground; wagons load, ledgers mis-sum, auditors with quill-pens and suspicious eyes. Military mustering follows strict legal procedures with armed oversight. The auditors carry swords. They say it’s for counting cattle. No one asks further.
- J Dike Crown — Ring of turf and timber; brotherhood bells warn of flood—and spies who move like water through the fen. Legal sanctuary for those fleeing court judgments. The sanctuary lasts for one tide. After that, the reeves can come—if they can find you.

- Q Progress Camp — Queen’s canvas palisade, banners stiff, whispering old courtiers plot advancement through legal maneuver and sanctioned duels. The camp moves every week. The lawsuits follow at a measured pace.
- K Tilt-Yard — Hall of Dawning at first light; Dawn-knights drill clean, loyalties in contracts signed with careful pen. Legal challenges often end in trial by combat. The sand is raked between duels. Sometimes the rake turns up old blood—or old oaths.
- A Highway Stone — Queen’s milestone above the Dolmis road; three sheriffs post seals over hers, each claiming different jurisdiction. Territory disputes resolved through armed arbitration. The stone has been broken and reglued seven times. Each crack is a forgotten compromise.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Fen Reeve — Tally-rod; speaks for dike guilds, remembers every flood-year’s debts and the charters that govern them. Authorized to call local levies for legal disputes. His tally-rod has notches from three floods. The next notch will be from a Vhasian raid.
3. River Syndic — Moves grain faster than rumor; knows which writs matter and which customs officials can be... persuaded. Maintains armed merchant guards. His ledger has a watermark—a crown on one side, a sunburst on the other. He shows the right side to the right audience.
4. Parish Surveyor — Three maps, one opinion; hedge-walks settle more disputes than courts, measures boundaries with careful chain. Expert witness in property disputes. His chain is exactly one rod long. The rod changes length depending on who is paying.
5. Dawn Quartermaster — Ledgers sharper than tongue; logistics before lances, counts every farthing spent in the Queen’s name. Legal authority over military supplies. He once tracked a missing farthing to a Vhasian counting house. The farthing was returned—with interest.
6. Levy Serjeant — Dales bow calm, cider breath, memory keen for every loophole in the mustering laws. Commands armed civilians in legal enforcement actions. His bowstring is made from a cancelled writ. He says it shoots truer now.
7. Cleric-Pair — Light preacher vs. Everflame canon lawyer; debates decide tithe law, one for the spirit, one for the letter. Religious law carries weight in secular courts. They share a room at the inn. They have not spoken outside court in seven years.
8. Fairport Shipwright — Dolmis cousins; skiff carries more secrets than cargo, knows which manifests to forge and which to honor. Expert in maritime law and naval combat. Her skiff has no name. The customs clerks have given it three.
9. Fenwood Comptroller — Conjures wagons with a signature, silence with a seal, counts the Queen’s coin and tracks every debt owed to the crown. Legal authority over taxation. His quill is a dagger. He has used it as both.
10. Queen’s Justiciar — Law on the road, polite as a noose; bearing three kings’ judgments and a purse full of pardons for the right price. Authorized to conduct trial by combat. She has never lost a legal duel. Her opponents have a tendency to fall down stairs.

- J Border Routier — Reads ledgers as ambushes; serves two crowns, collects from both, knows which border posts take bribes in what coin. Expert in frontier law enforcement. His loyalty is to the highest bidder. The Queen and the Vhasian claimant are currently in a bidding war.
- Q Warrior Queen — Crown on helm, sword at side, patient sums behind her gaze; rules by law's sharp edge and knows every precedent that supports her claim. Final arbiter in legal duels. Her crown has no jewels—only seals. Each seal is a conquered claim.
- K Crown Council — Fenwood dukes, guild envoys, abbots; weighing grain against glory, charters against coin, precedent against practicality. Legal battles fought through proxy advocates. The council has a standing rule: no weapons within the chamber. The advocates have found seventeen loopholes.
- A Master Advocate Halric — Silver-tongued legal warrior who settles disputes through verbal duels that can end in physical combat. Keeper of legal combat traditions. He has argued cases in Vhasian, Thepyrgosian, and Ubral courts—and won all three using their own precedents.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Dike Breach — Black-rain; the wrong reeve claims credit while wagons drown, insurance claims and liability writs fly like autumn leaves. Legal liability may require armed enforcement. The water is brown with peat and lies. It carries old deeds downstream.
3. Feast Clash — Light vs. Everflame processions collide; shutters slam, writs fly, justices of the peace called to settle which holy day takes precedence. Honor disputes may require legal duels. The processions take different routes now. The clash was not an accident.
4. Quiet Tolls — Sprout on the Queen's Highway; escorts sniff traps, sheriffs argue rights, customs officials demand duties no one knew existed. Territorial disputes resolved through armed arbitration. The toll posts have fresh paint. The paint is from the keep of a Vhasian claimant.
5. Audit Freeze — Counting-house freezes cargo; Queen's seal vs. old writs, auditors with suspicious eyes and quill-pens sharp as daggers. Legal challenges may escalate to physical confrontation. The auditors work by candlelight. The shadows on the walls look like gallows.
6. Border Snarl — Three courts arrest the same hay-cart; whose hay is it? Which lord's charter takes precedence? Bribes flow like wine. Frontier justice often involves armed standoffs. The hay is from a field that was Vhasian last spring. Now it's Viterran. The field hasn't moved.
7. Isle Refusal — Theona withholds levy; the quays choke on rumor, ships idle while lawyers debate maritime law and ancient treaties. Naval blockades become legal enforcement actions. Theona's envoy carries a hawthorn branch. The Queen's justiciars will not touch it.
8. Delta Spat — Fairport vs. Marcott customs; barges stack three deep, merchants pick sides, inspectors with magnifying glasses examine every manifest. Trade disputes fought with merchant guards. The magnifying glasses reveal truth and also start fires. Both are useful.
9. Routier Arrears — A free-company flips unless someone pays; your name on a ledger, a debt owed to men who know the price of blood. Legal debts enforced through hired swords. The routiers have a list. Your name is on it—or will be by sunset.

10. Salt Pinch — Import spikes, bakers barricade; the Queen’s promise tastes like thin gruel, merchants hoard salt like gold, riots brew in back alleys. Economic warfare becomes physical conflict. The salt is grey. It was cut with ashes from a burned Vhasian customs post.
- J Dawn Recall — Escort pulled to a flood-struck parish; the writ argues with the river, justices demand inquiry into who neglected the dikes. Military enforcement of legal judgments. The escorts are back in a week. They bring new writs—and fewer men.
- Q Aberielist Intrigue — Royalist seals in wrong hands; the Queen’s patience thins, conspirators plot in counting houses, whispers of rebellion. Treason charges carry death penalty in legal duels. The seals are from a dead duke. The duke’s ghost is said to approve.
- K Levy Call-Up — Dalesmen mustered; your wagons seized “for the realm,” conscription writs signed with careful pen, families left to tend fields alone. Legal authority backed by armed force. The conscription writs have a clause: “void if Belworth freezes.” The river is still warm.
- A Legal Duel Challenge — Master Advocate Halric issues a formal challenge; refuse and lose legal standing, accept and risk life and fortune in court-yard combat. The ultimate legal weapon. The challenge is written on both sides of the parchment. There is no blank space to refuse.

(Bribe/Seal/Writ/Duel Warrant) Ferry priority at Belworth crossing; dike-work allotment with brotherhood labor granted; market license sealed with proper wax; sanctioned duel to settle property dispute.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Ferry Priority — Belworth crossing (once); a horn answers, though perhaps the wrong ferry; customs officials look the other way for the right coin. Legal right of way backed by armed escort. The priority token is a writ signed by both banks. The ink on one side is newer.
3. Dike Allotment — Brotherhood labor granted if three clerks are convinced and proper bribes distributed among the right hands. Work performed under legal contract with military oversight. The allotment includes a clause: “as tides permit.” The reeve decides what the tides permit.
4. Market License — Valora’s square; a guild nod still needed, but the right seal on the right parchment opens many doors. Legal protection from merchant guild enforcement. The license is written on vellum from a Vhasian abbey. The irony is noted.
5. Dawn Escort — Four lances at dawn; loyalty waxes and wanes with pay, but their presence keeps lesser men from troubling you. Legal authority to enforce your writs. The lances are from the Fenwood armory. The Fenwood dukes have their own plans.
6. River Charter — Guaranteed haul on a grain artery—weather permitting and proper duties paid to the right officials. Legal right protected by river patrol. The charter is stamped with a seal that looks like a crown—or a sunburst. No one can agree.
7. Map Correction — A hedge moves, borders shift, lawsuits bloom; a new survey can make or break a man’s fortune overnight. Legal survey backed by armed surveyors. The surveyors carry chains and swords. The swords are for when the chains disagree.
8. Customs Seal — Fairport for Dolmis cargo; honored today, disputed tomorrow, but tonight it clears the way for what needs moving. Legal immunity from customs enforcement. The seal is a wax crab. It pinches when pressed.

9. Thing Ruling — Sharp local bite, but appeals run swifter than oaths; justice swift but not always just, depending on which purse feeds the judge. Court decisions enforceable by local levy. The ruling is carved on an oar. Break the oar, and the ruling breaks with it.
10. Salt Allotment — Winter depot; the Queen’s writ opens doors, old hands still count sacks, but the right connections ensure the best salt reaches the right tables. Legal monopoly backed by military force. The salt is from a pan worked by Ubral exiles. They still count in clan measure.
- J Wardship — A minor fen-keep; men-at-arms “for now,” a tutor has plans, but the right guardian can be found for the right price. Legal guardianship with military authority. The ward is a child. The child has a seal ring. The ring is older than the kingdom.
- Q Queen’s Audience — Private; her questions strike like thrusts, but her favors can elevate a man from nothing to something overnight. Royal decree carries immediate enforcement power. The audience lasts one hour. The paperwork lasts a generation.
- K Ducal Warrant — Fenwood to enforce customs; old power bows, new power watches, but the parchment carries weight in any court. Legal authority backed by noble house military. The warrant is signed in blood—or ink that looks like blood. The difference matters at trial.
- A Duel Sanction — Right to challenge in legal combat; the Queen’s seal makes it official, Dawn-knights serve as seconds, the winner takes all legally. Ultimate legal enforcement mechanism. The sanction is a coin. Heads you duel, tails your opponent chooses the weapon.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (writs/charters/priority) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo hedge-law motif—boundaries blur, charters contradict, precedent splinters, and the careful web of legal authority shows its cracks. Legal warfare escalates to physical conflict.

Additional Features

- Hedge-Law Momentum: When a valid writ, charter, or warrant is presented in the proper parish, step Position up one category on social or logistical actions in that locale for the scene. The first contradiction starts a Border-Lace [4] clock; advance each time competing papers are invoked.
- Beacon & Bell Chain: If two adjacent beacons or brotherhood bells are under your influence, convert one Club draw into a travel delay for others while the party proceeds with improved Effect for movement and logistics. The signal draws scrutiny; the GM may bank 1 SB tied to local authority.
- River-Right Window: At a ferry, tidework, or customs stair, play any Diamond tied to crossings or seals to open a short window of lawful passage: one convoy passes uninspected, or one cargo clears at priority. The window closes immediately if a storm, audit, or levy card is revealed.
- Legal Duel Protocol: When legal disputes cannot be resolved through argument, parties may challenge each other to a duel. The winner’s position becomes legally binding. Requires proper sanction and seconds.

- Vhasian Claims: Any Viterran noble with land across the Belworth may invoke a Ducal Warrant to attempt to collect rents or enforce judgments in Vhasia. Doing so starts a Border Snarl clock, as the Vhasian claimants are unlikely to cooperate.
- Theona Contest: The Warrior Queen’s authority over the Three Greens is nominal at best. Any attempt to enforce Viterran law in Theona triggers a Isle Refusal complication, and the local taboos may twist the law into knots.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Saint Elodie of the Unbuckled Gorget (The Witness): The Justiciar Elodie Venn invoked the long-forgotten Right of Acknowledgment in the trial of Baron Aldric the Turncloak. Her ruling forced a father to speak one truth aloud before his son. The precedent now stands in the Hall of Dawning: “The truth, once spoken, is payment in full. No further interest shall accrue.” The Temple of Light has adopted her as a saint of mercy; the Fenwood dukes still whisper that she overstepped.
- The Hedge-Seal (The Dike Covenant): Covenant judges in the eastern parishes adjudicate disputes over river tolls and inheritance. They carry no weapons, only a set of iron scales and a copy of the Hedge-Law Tables. A ruling from the Order is binding in both Viterra and the Vhasian marches, but any party who lies before them forfeits their right to appeal. The Warrior Queen has granted them a charter; the Fenwood dukes consider them spies.
- Saint Cuthbert of the Fen (The Traveler): A legendary reeve who walked the flooded dikes during the Great Storm and lit every beacon by hand. His shrines are stiles and bridge posts; travellers who touch the iron ring on his shrine and speak a destination find the road holds firm. The Temple of Light has absorbed his cult, but the fen folk still leave offerings of eels at his cairns.
- The Cog-Cults of the Northern Hills (The Clockwork Monad): In the high parishes near the Ubral border, secret fraternities of millers and surveyors believe that law is a machine that can be perfected. They meet in abandoned watermills, measuring boundaries with brass chains and reciting the Canons of Proportion. The Everflame calls them heretics; the Queen’s justiciars ignore them because their charts are always accurate.
- The Salt Sworn of the Eastern Coast (The Pale Shepherd): Along the Dolmis shore, a syncretic cult tends to the drowned. They build cairns of salt stone and leave no offerings—only the names of the lost, carved into driftwood. The Temple of Light has tried to suppress them three times; each time, the mission ships have been found adrift with no crew and a single name carved into the mast: Oblivion.
- The Ninth: In any Viterran court, the ninth citation of precedent voids all previous citations. The wise stop at eight and settle out of court. Those who cite the ninth are said to hear a faint laughter from the marble walls—and their cases are never heard again.

Viterran Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Hedge: Crumble a crust at a parish boundary stone. Ignore the first Border Snarl penalty.
- Knot the Writ: Tie a single knot in a charter’s ribbon. Cancel Audit Freeze or take −1 die on your next legal argument (your choice).

- Name to the River: Whisper a dead claimant's name into the Belworth. Gain +1 Effect when arguing against their heir's claim this scene, but mark Obligation to the Queen's Justiciar.

Patronage & Power

In Viterra, power flows through the careful application of law, the management of ancient rights, and the delicate balance between imperial legacy and reclaimed sovereignty. The Warrior Queen maintains authority through a combination of military might and legal precision, while the old duchies and local officials wield influence through their knowledge of traditional customs and hedge-law. The true power lies with those who can navigate this complex legal landscape and maintain the appearance of legitimate authority while building genuine support.

But remember—in Viterra, law is warfare. Every document is a weapon, every courtroom a battlefield, and every advocate a soldier. The pen cuts as deep as any blade, and legal victory can be as decisive as military conquest.

For the GM: Patronage in Viterra revolves around legal documents, local rights, and the ability to command respect from institutions still finding their post-imperial identity. Rewards often take the form of writs, charters, and official positions that can be leveraged into greater influence. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (seals, writs, charters) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival duchies and Vhasian claimants issue conflicting authorities, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the courts, parishes, and muster grounds as arenas for social contests, where knowledge of law and custom determines success.
- When legal conflicts escalate beyond words, transition naturally to physical confrontation with appropriate stakes.

In Viterra, your papers are your power, and your power determines whether you rule or are ruled. But when words fail, steel speaks—and the law says both are valid.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from crown officials or rival advocates.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby writ-runners or levy guards.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or customs inspectors.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable court date.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Queen's Justiciar or fen reeve becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to legal challenge or river closure.
- Foe Appears: A rival claimant or border routier arrives on scene.

- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional Dawn-knights, levy forces, or Vhasian routiers arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - writ voided/duel declared/levy called.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Warrior Queen, Crown Council, or Master Advocate Halric intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - dike breaks/river floods/court erupts.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Viterra (Hedge Law): Boundary stones shift, charters contradict themselves, legal precedents split mid-citation.
- Viterra (Cross-Border Claims): Vhasian landlords appear with older deeds, Theonan taboos void writs, Ubral cairns declare neutrality with axes.
- Viterra (Legal Warfare): Court decisions reverse without warning, witnesses recant, duel seconds change sides.

Legal Combat System (Summary)

When legal disputes cannot be resolved through negotiation, parties may engage in formal legal duels. These combine verbal sparring with physical combat:

Phase 1: Pleadings

- Each advocate presents their case (Wits + Sway vs. DV 3)
- Success grants +1 die to the next phase
- Failure creates 1 SB that the opponent can spend

Phase 2: Cross-Examination

- Attack opponent’s arguments (Wits + Insight vs. DV 3)
- Success inflicts Fatigue 1 on the opponent
- Critical success forces opponent to answer truthfully

Phase 3: Trial by Combat (if unresolved)

- Physical combat with legal stakes
- Winner’s position becomes legally binding
- Loser suffers legal consequences plus physical harm

Boss Seeds (three-phase foes)

- The Violet Clerk (Master of Counter-Seals) — Phases: Produce Earlier Patent → Split the Writ → Seal Fast. Cracks: a Queen’s Audience overrules his seal; a Duel Sanction forces personal combat.
- The Thorn Captain (Queen’s Quiet Hand) — Phases: Queenspace Zone → Duel Warrant → Swap the Field. Cracks: a Map Correction reveals a loophole; a Dike Allotment lets you claim the field as “flood zone.”

Legendary Sites & Trials

- Belworth Stairs Ordeal — Cross the river without a charter. On success, you prove that possession is nine-tenths of the law. On failure, the river takes your name—and your cargo.
- Hall of Dawning Vigil — Spend a night in the tilt-yard. At dawn, you recall a forgotten legal precedent. Gain a one-use Precedent Edge (+1 die in any court). The ghost of a dead duelist may challenge you.
- Hedge-Moot at Dusk — Settle a boundary dispute by walking the hedge. Each successful navigation test clears 1 segment from a Border Snarl clock. A miss plants the thorn of a future feud.

Extensions (Plug-in)

- Legal Dial (Crown ↔ Local Custom): Track the party’s stance on authority.
 - Crown High: +1 Position when invoking royal writs, charters, or the Queen’s name; first appeal to local custom starts one step worse.
 - Local High: +1 Effect on hedge-law, parish rights, or ancient precedent; first royal petition starts one step worse.
 - Center the dial by hosting a mixed moot or surrendering a contested seal to a neutral third party.
- Courtroom Mini-Game (fast trial):
 - Lay three stones: Precedent, Equity, Force.
 - Argue a point (roll Lore+Diplomacy vs. DV 3). On a hit, move one stone to your side. On a miss, the opposing advocate gains Citation Edge.
 - Win two stones to secure a temporary Court Ruling (treat as a Diamond for one scene).
 - Halric’s Interjection (2 SB): flip Precedent, but start Whispered Precedent [2] with the losing side.
- Cross-Border Tensions (fast pressure):
 - Two opposed clocks: Queen’s Peace vs Border Fire (size by highest rank in the seed).

- Each leg, choose Viterran Road (safe, slow), Vhasian Claim (fast, risky), or Ubral Pass (hidden, costly).
- Advantage: Vhasian Claim→Viterran Road (shortcuts), Ubral Pass→Vhasian Claim (concealment), Viterran Road→Ubral Pass (supplies).
- Spend a Ducal Warrant to shift one segment from Border Fire to Queen’s Peace.
- Start-of-Scene Rumors (1d6):
 1. Wrong Wax: a rival’s seals softened; +1d to forgeries this scene.
 2. Empty Beacon: tower unmanned; travel faster, scrutiny harsher.
 3. Dawn-Lane Cleared: first convoy action gains +1 Position.
 4. Clerk’s Wedding: filings delayed; first petition ignores Audit Freeze.
 5. Fen High Water: ferries slow; river-charters count double value.
 6. Mask at Progress: someone uses your name at court; +1d to social opens, +1 SB banked by GM.
- Plug-in SB Conversions (Viterra Flavor):
 - 1 SB → Hedge Shift: a boundary moves; increase DV by 1 for navigation or legal rolls this scene.
 - 2 SB → Citation War: increase DV by 1 unless you produce a precedent (spend a $\diamond$ orrerecallapastruling).
 - 3+ SB → Seal Crack: a writ loses half its value; swap one held $\diamond$ foralesserrightuntilre-witnessed.
- Reputation Echoes:
 - Court-Favored: once/session, downgrade Audit Freeze to a minor delay; the next document you present is scrutinized (+1 DV).
 - Fen-Tested: +1 Position when resolving dike or flood crises; legal arguments about water rights start one step worse.
 - Double-Sealed: +1d with both royal and local courts in a truce scene; any betrayal earns Border Snarl from both sides.
- Cross-Region Hooks (quick integration):
 - Ubral (Stone & Oath): A Ducal Warrant acts as a Guest-Token once at a clan hearth, but starts a Feud Rekindled tick if you collect tolls twice in a tenday.
 - Thepyrgos (Synod Law): A Queen’s Audience can suspend a synod interdict—but starts Whispered Precedent in Thepyrgos.
 - Vhasia (Fractured Sun): A Duel Sanction is recognized on the Pont-du-Tithe—but a rival abbey can turn it into Parlement Divided on a Club draw.
 - Theona (No Ninth): Ferry Priority overrides a local taboo once; if the Ninth custom is in play, the writ “forgets” one clause on use (GM banks 1 SB).

Conspiracy Flourishes (keep it close, keep it quiet)

- Hedge-Moots at Dusk: Parish elders “trim hedges” while trading sealed whispers.
- Cipher Roses: Folded writs stamped with thorn-petals; one petal missing marks a false clause.
- Mirror Hours: Beacons flash lawful signals—reversed for those who know the counter-code.

- Eel-Letters: Oiled parchment smuggled in eel-baskets; ink runs in water, truth does not.
- Quiet Steel, Quieter Quills: Dawn-knights duel at first light; advocates settle three duels before breakfast with ink alone.
- Progress Masks: Courtiers wear legal devices as masque motifs (seal, chain, beacon) to signal faction at a glance.
- Bell Penance: A single off-hour peal grants amnesty to those who confess a clause before the twelfth echo.

Chapter 6

Thepyrgos

City of a Thousand Stairs. The Synod rules here with the delicacy of a brick wrapped in velvet—they hate unsanctioned magic like it’s a personal insult, but they adore infrastructure, especially when it’s shiny, expensive, and comes with a side of indulgences they can sell to the faithful. I sold them a system of under-vaults to expand the Library of Keys—not because I believed in knowledge, but because I knew the Synod’s Archivist was drowning in debt to a Veiled Sister’s loan shark, and he’d sign anything to make the collector go away. The Archon paid in harbour passes—enough to skip every boom in the straits for a decade—stamped with the Synod’s seal and blessed by three bishops who definitely weren’t bribed with contraband incense. I’ve already lost two to card games (damn those Tulkani bluffers), but the rest? Hidden in a lead box under a rock marked with a bell... a bell I rang myself to make the rock “holy” in the eyes of the local cult that now guards it for a fee. You want them? They’re yours. For a price. A very specific price involving the Synod’s Archivist and a certain ledger he’s been “misplacing.”

[Thimble: Sir, the Synod’s Charter on Sacred Architecture forbids—]

[Edgewalker: Sacred architecture? Thimble, my anxious little goblin, sacred architecture is just leverage with a stained-glass window—especially when I’ve bought the Archivist’s silence with a ledger that doesn’t track debts... it creates them. Now, about those harbour passes... the Synod’s treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his marker looks like in uncut diamonds?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting ecclesiastical debt violates—]

6.1 Thepyrgos — “City of a Thousand Stairs”

The Archon (Elite): “Every stair climbed is a word in the great conversation between earth and sky. This city is not built – it is grown, stone by stone, law by law, until the very architecture speaks wisdom.”

Bell-Runner (Commoner): “I know every step that creaks a warning and every landing that whispers gossip. The bells tell the city’s mood better than any lord – three chimes means business, six means trouble, and nine means the hunters are coming.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Thepyrgos is both realm and city, a former Utaran province whose capital rises in tiers of towers, terraces, and endless stairs above the Dolmis shore. Once a military bastion, now a nation unto itself, it is famed for its universities, libraries, and debating synods, where precedent and philosophy weigh as much as pikes or coin. Outside the city, the countryside reflects a rugged coastal landscape of whitewashed villages, olive groves, and timber churches—home to the Hyro people, humans with an unusually high rate of arcane talent. This region is also the land of Canré, a Kon'reh variant that deliberately ignores its historical roots in favor of pure geometry. Ruins of the ancient Astroegro Empire litter the hills—shattered observatories, drowned agoras, and columns carved with impossible angles—whispered to have been sunk by the wrath of Khemesh, the Abyssal Maw, when its last emperor broke a covenant older than the sea.

The Chain-Lantern order and other Witch-Hunter Commissariats ruthlessly patrol the villages and hamlets, using bounty postings, candle-smoke tests, and stair-seizures to identify and kidnap children with arcane talent for the university's hidden colleges. The enigmatic Witness and the Ninth fight proxy wars via fraternal orders and occult mystery cults, their influence felt in the political maneuvering of the Synod and the mysterious disappearances that plague the countryside. Every stone stair carries the echo of old campaigns and civic quarrels, every bell carries law across the wind. Here, authority climbs as much as it rules: archons elected by the city's wards, synods decreeing rites and edicts, guilds policing ropes, cranes, and chains. In Thepyrgos, height is hierarchy, sound is sovereignty, and law is etched into every rung.

What you notice first: The endless chime of bells from different tiers, never quite in sync. The smell of brine and olive oil and candle wax. The way locals glance at the sky when a child coughs.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never let a bell-ringer count your breaths. The Chain-Lanterns pay well for names that ring false on the test stairs.

Regional Mood: Stairs, Bells, and Smoke

Here, every ascent is a plea and every descent a confession. Thepyrgos the city is a vertical labyrinth of stair-rights, rope-guilds, and synod edicts that shift with the tide. Thepyrgos the province is a haunted countryside of hidden talent and state-sanctioned abduction. The Hyro keep their arcane children in root cellars and haylofts, praying the hunters take the neighbor's instead. The Chain-Lanterns move at dawn, their brass censers swinging, their bells tuned to the frequency of latent magic. In the university's forbidden tiers, the Witness and the Ninth arm rival fraternities with citations and curses, and no one is sure which side the Archon secretly favors. And in the ruins of the Astroegro, something still ticks—gears of black glass, locked doors that hum, and the occasional survivor with eyes like burning tar who speaks of a pressure from below.

Starting Location: The Synod Hall at dusk. Gold-glass mosaics glitter as a Matriarch reads a scroll aloud. "The Beacon Crown sees traitors in the smoke. A child's talent was sold to the Commissary last night. Find the informer—or the next stair seized will be yours."

Prominent NPCs of Thepyrgos

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Archon Konstantinos	Ruler of the city, elected by the wards	Balance the synod, the guilds, and the Commissariat	He wears a key around his neck; no one knows what it opens.
Matriarch Eleni	Synod primate, head of the Temple of Light’s synod	Keep the Everflame from reclaiming the province	She speaks once a session; when she does, the bells listen.
Commissary Kyrillos	Chain-Lantern commander	Purge all untutored magic from the province	His lantern shows not only latent talent but also the bearer’s greatest fear.
Sofia	Bell-Runner (commoner exemplar)	Outrun the hunters and protect the hidden gifted	She ties a knot in her hair for each hunter she has outrun; her hair is a thicket.
Nomophylax Zoe	Law-scholar, master of citations	Reform the synod from within	She has never lost a case; her opponents have a habit of vanishing.
The Lighthouse-Patriarch	Reclusive seer of the Beacon Crown	Steer the city through the coming storm	He has no eyes—only mirrors where his eyes should be.

Names of Thepyrgos

Inspired by the southern peninsulas and the Aegean coast: clear vowels, soft endings, and surnames that recall a stair, a tower, or a village.

Stephanos	Fotini	Koutroulis	the Silent
-----------	--------	------------	-------------------

Spades — Places

2. Pilgrim's Stair — Zig-zagging sea-cliff to wicket gate; ascent as devotion. Every hundredth step has a bell. Pilgrims ring once for mercy, twice for memory.
3. Tower Quarter — Family keeps stitched by ladders and bridges; vertical neighborhoods. The lowest rung of each ladder is painted red—a toll for the rope-guild.
4. Chain-Barbican — Harbor gate; capstans ready to raise the boom at horn's call. The capstan pins are carved from the thighbones of executed smugglers.
5. Blue Cistern — Under the forum; cool echo, strict tally; water as law. The water tastes of copper and old prayers. Drink deep, and you may forget a debt.
6. Ropeyard Terrace — Cranes walk cargo up slope by treadwheel; muscle and machinery. The treadwheel operators sing in eights. The ninth beat is always silent.
7. Storm-Wall Arcades — Wind shrieks through arched galleries; defense as architecture. The wind carries voices from the last siege. Some say they're warnings.
8. Beacon Crown — Ring of watchtowers signaling along the Dolmis; eyes of the city. The beacons burn juniper and saltpeter. Black smoke means fire; white smoke means hunters.
9. Library of Keys — Archive vaults; shelves locked by rung and rite; knowledge as power. The keys are graded by sin. The ninth key opens nothing—and everything.
10. Siege Court — Test ramp and scarred stones; war never far from peace. The ramp's stones are stained with lamp oil and regret. Practice charges end in the cistern.
- J Ladder Monastery — Perched on a needle of rock; monks climb toward truth. The monks never speak. They write commandments in chalk on the rungs.
- Q Synod Hall — Gold-glass mosaics; judgment audible at a whisper's distance. The acoustics are enchanted. A lie told here echoes twice—once in the liar's voice, once in truth's.
- K Archon's Citadel — Acropolis peak; mirror tiles glare like noon's justice. The mirrors were a gift from Kahfagia. They show not the sea, but the faces of debtors.
- A Sky-Bridge — Twin cliff towers joined over the inner harbor; height as connection. The bridge has no railings. The Archon says the wise don't need them.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Bell-Runner — Child whose feet know every stair by heart; speed as currency. She ties a knot in her hair for each hunter she's outrun. Her hair is a thicket.
3. Master of Ropes — Palms like oak, voice like a whistle; guild head of lifters. He lost two fingers to a frayed line. He keeps them in a jar as a warning.

4. Icon-Smith — Portable shrine, temper about pigment; faith in detail. His pigments are ground from stolen icons. He calls it recycling the divine.
5. Wall Strategos — Drills levies on the test ramp; defense as daily ritual. She lost a son to a Linn raid. She trains orphans now—and keeps a list.
6. Chain-Keeper — Harbor boom; hates “surprises” at dusk; order as obsession. His bell never rings the same note twice. He says the tide changes its mind.
7. Oath-Examiner — Weighs words like iron; notary of truth and consequence. She carries a scale with one pan empty. The empty pan is for lies.
8. Archive Sister — Key to the “forbidden rung”; keeper of dangerous knowledge. Her left eye is milk-white—a price for reading a cursed shelf.
9. Salt-Fish Syndic — Warehouse queen of the quays; profit in preservation. Her salt is cut with ground bone meal. The fish stay fresh—and quiet.
10. Nomophylax — Law-scholar whose citations close mouths; precedent as weapon. He has never lost a case. His opponents have a habit of vanishing.
- J Palikar Captain — Tower guards; ladder-quick and letter-shy; strength in motion. His shield is painted with a ladder—each rung a battle he survived.
- Q Matriarch of the Ladder — Synod primate; calm as stone, wisdom in height. She speaks once a session. When she does, the bells listen.
- K The Archon — Elected, entrenched, counting bells; ruler of the ascent. He wears a key around his neck. No one knows what it opens.
- A Lighthouse-Patriarch — Reclusive seer; said to steer beacons in storms. He has no eyes—only mirrors where his eyes should be.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Tremor — Hairline cracks race down a stair; crowds freeze, dust speaks. The dust spells names. Yours appears if you’ve broken a stair-right.
3. Iconoclast Riot — In the Tower Quarter; pigments and teeth fly through the air. The riot started over a missing icon’s eye. The eye was a hunter’s informer.
4. Chain Jam — At the barbican; capstan pins shear at the worst moment. The pins were filed by a saboteur. The chain will hold—or not.
5. Black Northerly — Pins cranes; cargo hangs between tiers, prayers below. The wind smells of iron and ice. Someone is using weather magic.
6. Cistern Taint — Sour water; inspectors padlock spouts, thirst rises. The taint is sweet—too sweet. Someone poisoned the cistern to flush out a talent.
7. Synod Summons — A chant or badge is suddenly proscribed; law shifts like wind. The summons is written on a bell-clapper. Read it, and you are a witness.
8. Rope Guild Interdict — No lifts until a grievance is heard; the city stops climbing. The guild’s grievance is a single name. The name is yours.
9. Siege Drill Panic — Practice horns mistaken for real; chaos in the ranks. The horns were blown by a child who didn’t know the difference. Or did they?

10. Smuggler's Ladder — Discovered; the whole stair sealed, routes rerouted. The ladder was built by a Hyro family. Now they are all "guests" of the Commissariat.
- J Ropeyard Fire — Sparks leap uphill faster than boots; smoke chokes the ascent. The fire was set to cover a kidnapping. The victim's name is on the bounty board.
- Q Exarch's Claim — "Thepyrgos under my protection"; arrests follow the papers. The Exarch is a puppet of the Chain-Lanterns. His seal is a bell without a clapper.
- K General Watch — All towers manned; levies seize carts "for the walls." The levies are looking for one thing: children who flinch at candle-smoke.
- A Sequake Seiche — Surges the harbor; chain, quays, timetables snap like twine. The sequake was no natural event. Something beneath the Dolmis is waking.

(Key/Rite/Paper) Stair token passes a barricaded stair without delay; harbor pass lowers the boom for your vessel on command.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Stair Token — Pass a barricaded stair without delay (once); height as right. The token is a bronze step. It fits into a missing rung.
3. Harbor Pass — Boom lowers for your vessel on command; sea as ally. The pass is a note written on a fish scale. The gate-keeper will not ask why.
4. Cistern Draw-Right — A named ward during scarcity; water as favor. The right is a clay cup. Break it to claim your share.
5. Crane Allotment — One guaranteed lift on the Ropeyard Terrace; height as service. The allotment is a knotted rope. Cut a knot for each use.
6. Icon License — Display a disputed image without penalty; faith as leverage. The license is stamped with the Archon's ring. The ring is warm—the Archon is watching.
7. Archive Hour — Library of Keys; one shelf opened to you; knowledge as power. The shelf is sealed with a riddle. Solve it, or the key will break.
8. Bellmark — Lawful right to ring a tower bell (summons the watch); sound as law. The bellmark is a brand on your palm. Show it, and the watch bleeds for you—once.
9. Watchlight Code — Today's beacon and mirror signals; navigation as paper. The code is written in lemon juice. Heat it to read, then hide it again.
10. Synod Indulgence — One proscribed chant or rite permitted (for you). The indulgence is a bell-note held in a jar. Break the jar to release it.
- J Pronoia Grant — Temporary farm/tax of a terrace hamlet; land as income. The grant is a wooden token. Present it to the village elder—if she is still alive.
- Q Synod Audience — Private with the Matriarch and clerks; wisdom as policy. The audience is held in a fog hollow. What is spoken there is never written.
- K Archon's Writ — Palikars escort you between towers; authority as escort. The writ is a bell-rope. Tie it to your belt, and the guards will know your voice.
- A Golden Key — Open or seal any city gate once; access as power. The key is a finger bone. The lock is a gauntleted fist. It will work—once.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (keys/rites/papers) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo height and sound motifs—bells that carry, wind that remembers, stairs that echo with purpose.

Additional Features

- Bell-Law: Bells are law made sound. Once per session, a Bellmark or tower bell summons the watch, a levy, or a decree. False rings stain a reputation; the Synod may inquire.
- Stair-Rights: Every stair is owned, owed, or leased. A token bypasses barricades and tolls; climbing the wrong stair without leave sparks a riot or a duel.
- Synod Edicts: Voice reshapes daily life. Once per session, a decree grants or strips rights: a chant forbidden, a symbol proscribed, a stair sealed. Rulings create leverage and risk.
- The Chain-Lanterns: The most feared of the Witch-Hunter orders. Their captains carry brass lanterns that reveal latent magic through candle-smoke tests. A Chain-Lantern raid is heralded by a single, low bell—the death knell of innocence.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Astroegro Remnant (Khemesh): Deep beneath the Beacon Crown, a sealed chamber contains a working Astroegro orrery. Its gears are carved from abyssal glass, and it still ticks. Those who listen too long hear a voice whispering the true names of drowned emperors. The Chain-Lanterns have posted a perpetual guard; they say the orrery is a beacon for something that should not surface.
- Saint Methodia of the Silent Stair (The Witness): A legendary archivist who climbed the Ninth Stair of the Library of Keys and never came down. Her ghost is said to appear to those who speak a truth the Synod has buried, offering a single citation that can overturn any edict. The price is a secret of equal weight, and the ghost never forgets.
- The Cog-Cults of the Clockwork Monad: Underground fraternities of gear-smiths and logicians who believe the Astroegro Empire fell because its geometry was imperfect. They meet in the basements of the Ropeyard Terrace, trying to reconstruct the lost orrery. The Chain-Lanterns tolerate them because their calculations sometimes predict talent blooms. Heretics from the Everflame call them clock-worshippers; the Cog-Cults call themselves the True Iterators.
- The Daughters of the Cord (The Bitter Root): A hospice in the lower tiers is run by grey-robed women who ask no payment, but they take names. They are tolerated because they treat the poor for free, but the Commissariat suspects they also hide gifted children. A renegade Sister hides among the bell-runners, trying to unbind her Hollowed from the Chain-Lanterns’ ledger.
- The Savage Heart (Red Maw): In the highland villages west of the city, a bear cult has arisen. They believe the only way to escape the Commissariat’s hunts is to become the hunter. They wear cured skins and speak in growls, and they have begun hunting Chain-Lantern patrols. The Archon has declared them outlaws, but the villagers leave offerings of raw meat at their shrines.

- The Ninth: In any Thepyrgos scene, the ninth bell rung in an hour opens a threshold. The wise stop at eight and cover their ears. Those who ring the ninth are said to see a pale figure standing on the Beacon Crown's mirror tiles—waiting to collect a name.

Thepyrgos Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Stair: Toss a crust onto a rung before climbing. Ignore the first Tremor penalty.
- Knot the Rope: Tie a single knot in a crane line. Cancel Rope Guild Interdict or take -1 die on your next lift (your choice).
- Name to the Smoke: Whisper a hunter's name into the Beacon Crown's fire. Gain +1 Effect when evading the Chain-Lanterns this scene, but mark Obligation to the Synod.

Patronage & Power

In Thepyrgos, power flows through elevation, education, and the precise application of law. The Archon maintains authority through a complex web of guilds, synods, and civic institutions that govern every aspect of vertical life. Social mobility is literally upward mobility, with stair-rights, bellmarks, and archive access serving as both currency and status symbols.

For the GM: Patronage in Thepyrgos revolves around access—to towers, to knowledge, to the right to climb. Rewards often take the form of keys, passes, or legal exemptions that can be leveraged into greater influence. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (tokens, keys, papers) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival guilds issue conflicting rights, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the synods, towers, and staircases as arenas for social contests, where knowledge of law and custom determines success.

In Thepyrgos, your ascent is your standing, and your standing determines whether you rise or fall.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from tower guards or guild masters.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby bell-runners or civic patrols.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or archive keepers.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable ascent.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Wall Strategos or guild head becomes aware and begins responding.

- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to quake damage or stair closure.
- Foe Appears: A rival faction or civic enforcer arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional palikars, guild enforcers, or synod guards arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - bell rings falsely/stair collapses/law changes.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Archon, Matriarch, or Lighthouse-Patriarch intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - quake hits/bells ring/bridge collapses.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Thepyrgos (Height & Law): Stairs shift position, bells ring with the wrong tone, legal papers rewrite themselves.
- Thepyrgos (Synod Power): Edicts change mid-speech, citations appear in the air, wisdom comes unbidden.
- Thepyrgos (Vertical City): Ropes fray without warning, cranes swing cargo unexpectedly, tower windows show wrong views.

The Magic Colleges (University Extensions)

- College of Ladders & Lines — geomancy, architecture, constraint; stairs as sigils, capstans as circles.
- College of Bells & Beacons — acoustics, omen-fire, signal calculus; law made audible, augury made measurable.
- College of Waters & Weights — alchemy, cistern rites, dyes; solutions, precipitates, and lawful flow.
- College of Names & Oaths — nomikon theurgy; citations that bind, clauses that compel.
- College of Mirrors & Haze — illusion, scrutiny; seeing, being seen, un-being seen.
- College of Quiet — ethics of death, memory rites; permitted remembrances—anything more is heresy.

The Witch-Hunter Province (Commissariat Extensions)

Thepyrgos-the-Province funds Witch-Hunter Commissariats—ministries with bounties posted per ward. Notices hang on stair-landings; bells announce hunts lawful and hunts less so. The Chain-Lantern order is the most feared, but others compete for quotas.

Hunter Hearts (faces of the persecution)

- Commissary-Exarch — Writs in triplicate; quotas in private.
- Bounty-Reader — Weighs children like coin; “verification” by bell.
- Pardoner-Chaplain — Sells absolution to informers; keeps a careful ledger.
- Stair-Runner Informant — Knows which doors open to the right knock.
- Chain-Lantern Captain — Commands the most feared order; his lantern reveals truth through flesh.

Hunter Clubs (pressures and sweeps)

- Bounty Posting — New price on “untutored talent”; crowds turn into nets.
- Candle-Smoke Test — Lines at the Blue Cistern; smoke curls toward the Gifted.
- Commissary Sweep — Ladders chained; a whole tier searched under horn.
- Quieted Child — An “accident” near the Exam Stair; evidence goes missing.
- Chain-Lantern Raid — Dawn assault on a hamlet; children taken before the rooster crows.

Hunter Diamonds (leverage and reprieve)

- Witness Pardon — Informer absolved and paid; cancels one legal fallout once.
- Archon’s Clemency — Suspends a bounty clock for one named; bell-marked and public.
- Hidden Stair Token — Through a maintenance run unseen; good for one group escape.

Detection & Denial (Fast Procedures)

Scry & Deny (evading the tests)

1. Mask the Trace: dye, salt, bell-oil; pick one (each grants +1 die to one approach).
2. Pick the Test: Smoke, Sound, Mirror. State how you spoof it (alchemical veil, bell overtones, angle games).
3. On a hit: cancel a Candle-Smoke Test or Proctors’ Gate tag for this scene. Consequence: start Bell Debt [2] or Rector’s Notice [2].

Bounty Economy (quick table, GM picks or 1d6)

1. Whisperer (faint talent): 1 purse; informers abundant.
2. Spark-Hand (cantrip): 2 purses; “rehabilitation” promised.
3. Mirror-Bent (glamour): 3 purses; seized at once.
4. Bell-Singer (acoustic): 4 purses; Synod claims jurisdiction.
5. Oath-Breaker (binding): 5 purses; Exarch insists on custody.
6. Quiet-Worker (death-ethic): 6 purses; College of Quiet petitions for trial.

Scenario Starters (Plug-and-Play)

The Bright Child on the Exam Stair Hook: A Bell-Runner begs you to get a latent child to campus before the dawn sweep. Complications: Candle-Smoke Test, Commissary Sweep, a jealous Street Thaum. Relief: Trade a Latency Seal for testimony; or ring a lawful Bellmark to create a corridor—accept Censure Murmurs [2].

The Black Ledger of Bounties Hook: The College of Quiet wants proof that a Commissary inflates prices to fill quotas. Complications: Synod Summons, Smuggler’s Ladder, Chain Jam. Relief: Publish via a Nomikon colloquy (gain Synod Indulgence); or sell it to the Archon (gain Archon’s Clemency but start Faculty Feud [4]).

The Golden Key and the Silent Stair Hook: A dying Archivist gives you a Golden Key. “It opens the stair the hunters fear.” Truth: The stair leads to the Beacon Crown’s secret basement—a prison for children who passed the smoke test. Relief: Free the children and expose the Commissariat (gain Archon’s Clemency for the whole party, but start Exarch’s Claim at full); or seal the stair forever (gain Golden Key to use elsewhere, but the children are lost to memory).

Part II

The Northern Reaches

Chapter 7

Aeler

Breath, Bell, and Keystone. My homeland. The place where we don't trust the surface, but we do trust the weight of a well-placed keystone—and oh, how the surface loves to test that trust. We Aeler don't just trade with the mountains; we own the leverage in every crevice. Our breath-bonds aren't just currency—they're the hardest thing in the peaks, forged in the sighs of miners who knew too much. I've sold them to Vikari jarls who paid in furs stained with brother's blood, to Ykrul khagans who weighed the value in warhorses and broken oaths, even to a Veiled Sister once—she paid in a secret so dangerous I've never used it...yet. (Spoiler: I'm saving it for the day the Ninth Seal cracks. The interest alone will buy me a small kingdom.) The under-vaults aren't just storage—they're libraries of opportunity, full of seals just waiting to be broken. I know all of them. Not because I'm noble—but because I've sold most of them already. That's why I don't go back often. Why revisit a scene when you can sell the blueprints to the next fool who thinks he's clever?

[Thimble: Sir, the Aeler Vault Accord Article 3 explicitly—]

[Edgewalker: Vault accord? Thimble, my dear, trembling mole, the Vault Accord is just leverage with a rock hammer—especially when I've bought the Chief Stonewright's silence with a keystone that doesn't reinforce tunnels...it weakens them. Now, about those breath-bonds...the Vikari jarl's son has a lovely gambling habit. I wonder what his weight in wolf pelts looks like?]

[Edgewalker: Stonewright's guild? Thimble, darling, guilds are just leverage with a chisel. Now pass the brandy—I've got a seal war to start in Mistlands, and if you mention "Clause 9" one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the Hollow as kindling. It prefers it whispering.]

7.1 Aeler (Dwarves) — “Crowns & Under-Vaults”

Elite (Vault-Queen of a crownland)

“The mountain remembers every word carved in its stone, every seal pressed into its walls. To govern here is not to command, but to harmonize with the ancient songs that still echo in the deep places.”

Commoner (Under-Mason who can hear stone shift a room away)

“When the stone starts singing a different tune, you best listen. Three knocks in the morning means all's well, but three knocks at night means something's coming through the walls that wasn't meant to walk.”

Crowns & Under-Vaults

The Aeler Kingdoms hold the mountains by breath, bell, and bargain. Dozens of sovereign holds – some sealed for centuries, others trading openly with lowland markets – share only the deep roots of stone and the supremacy of the High King Beneath the Peaks. Their halls run like arteries, their cities open in thunderous caverns where bridges leap between ribs of stone and cisterns shine like night skies turned inward. Survival is the first law: air is counted, water is bartered, light is rationed by wick and prayer. Tradition is the second: seals are kept, measures remain true, and the dead keep their offices as carefully as the living. Between the two, a people learn to argue quietly and build loudly.

Collectives (clans, guild-kin, lamp-companies) own what the mountain allows; individuals are custodians by oath. Trade runs under and over the range through under-ways and pass-forts, stitching protectorates and lowland markets to vaultmouth gates. When tunnels whisper or the air tastes wrong, the Aeler move as one animal; when the Kingsmoot calls, crowns and abbesses argue in bell-code and sealed writs until the stone itself seems to lean in.

The Fractured Crowns: Aeler Faction Spectrum

Aeler society is not monolithic. Beneath the High King’s nominal authority, each crownland follows its own star. Attitudes toward the surface range from open partnership to militant isolation, and even the most reclusive holds maintain Edgewalker contacts to monitor the world above.

- Traditionalist / “The Old Ways” – These holds idealize the ancient mountain-empire: closed gates, iron tariffs, and the certain knowledge that surface-dwellers cannot be trusted. They resemble the dwarves of fireside tales: stubborn, insular, and quick to reach for an axe when a human mentions “progress.” Their kings speak of the days when no foreigner stepped past the vaultmouth. Clocks: FOREIGNER SUSPICION [4], HOLD SEALED [6].
- Cooperative / “Open Hand” – These holds trade freely with Aelaerem, Kahfagia, and even the Vilikari. They staff the under-markets, send engineers to repair bridges in Viterra, and treat the surface as a resource to be managed, not a threat to be shunned. They prefer soft power: standardised measures, certified weights, and bell-code protocols that make others want to trade on Aeler terms. Clocks: TRADE ROUTE PROSPERITY [6], CULTURAL FRICTION [4].
- Isolationist / “Silent Stone” – Deep holds that have not answered a Kingsmoot call in living memory. Their gates are lost, their peoples rumoured to have turned inward, worshiping forgotten depths. They neither help nor harm the surface – but when a White Flood or a gas flare occurs, their silence becomes a hazard of its own. Clocks: SILENT HOLD AWAKENS [8], ANCIENT GRUDGE [6].

Most Aeler characters and settlements fall somewhere between these poles, and the same hold might shift its stance over a season, depending on grain prices, a new Vault-Queen, or a disaster that forces its hand.

Prominent NPCs of Aeler

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk

Valthor Aezelbron	High King Beneath the Peaks	Preserve the ancient concord and balance the crownlands	He has not spoken above a whisper in seven years. The court reads his will by bell-code.
Grunhelda Thrainsdottir	Vault-Queen of Irondeep	Expand trade routes while keeping the Old Ways satisfied	She keeps a pet geode that hums when a contract is fair.
Maeva Kaelen	Legate of the Under-Seal	Negotiate passage rights and standard measures with low-land realms	Her seal-rod is carved from a fossilised root. She has never lost a tariff dispute.
Thromm Stone-Tongue	Under-Mason (Commoner exemplar)	Hear the mountain’s warnings and keep the tunnels safe	He can identify a false weight by tapping it once with his hammer.
Orthen White-Ribbon	Tunnel Courier	Deliver sealed writs across hostile jurisdictions	He has run the Spine Underway in darkness without a lamp. Twice.
Lumenor Saela	Keeper of the Under-Altars	Maintain the breath-rites and the old flame	She speaks only in bell tones during services. Her mundane voice is never heard.

Names of Aeler

Aeler names blend flowing vowels and soft diphthongs (ae, ei, ou, ui) with harsh consonants (k, th, z, r, g). Surnames are carved from mountain-roots: a hold, a forge, a seam, or a trade.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Thrain	Grunhelda	Aezenbron	the Iron
Kaelen	Maeva	Thrainkhar	Breath-Steady
Orthen	Saela	Valdurg	Seal-Keeper
Rurik	Aeldis	Kaelthane	Bell-Tongue

Bromm	Helka	Zarkul	the Under-Mason
Zelgur	Thorunn	Dornvael	White-Ribbon

Spades — Places (vaultmouths, descents, underways, crown seats)

2. (Security/Gatekeeping) Vaultmouth Gate in a hillslope: bronze lungs for breath-tests, tally-niches for lamps.
 3. (Tradition/Oaths) Crown-Crypt Porch where oaths are sworn to sleeping kings.
 4. (Commerce/Underground) Under-Market: lantern alleys between cistern pillars; damp coin, dry wit.
 5. (Labor/Danger) Smoke-Shaft Stair spiraling up to a soot hatch; handprints black as seals.
 6. (Mystery/Whispers) Gloam Cistern—black water, lead scales, whispers carry too far.
 7. (Maintenance/Travel) Lamplighter’s Mile on the Under-Road; niches sting with spent wicks.
 8. (Precision/Authority) Measure Vault: standard rods and weights chained under glass and oath.
 9. (Sacred/Knowledge) Reliquary Arcade: bell-chimes answer drafts; saints keep their own tallies.
 10. (Military/Strategic) Twin-Throne Gate—surface fortress straddling a chasm bridge.
- J (Knowledge/Secrecy) Deep Archive Stacks behind grillwork; scriptoria cells breathe ink and dust.
- Q (Royalty/Privilege) Queen’s Descent: private stair from palace to royal vault-house.
- K (Politics/Power) Kingsmoot Cavern—crownstones in a ring around a bottomless dark.
- A (Infrastructure/Majesty) The Spine Underway, a great tunnel linking crownlands beneath the peaks.

Hearts — People & Factions (crowns, keepers, guilds, legates)

2. (Apprenticeship/Dedication) Lamplighter apprentice with a jingling key-ring and soot in the lungs.
 3. (Craft/Knowledge) Under-Mason who can hear stone shift a room away.
 4. (Authority/Duty) Vault Warden with breath-ledger and seal-rods; patient as granite.
 5. (Protection/Faith) Censer-Knight of the Dawn – fights miasma and men with equal zeal.
 6. (Sacred/Craft) Key-Sister (monastic locksmith) who names wards like prayers.
 7. (Commerce/Authority) Under-Market assessor whose stamp can starve or save a stall.
 8. (Engineering/Expertise) Engineer of Underways (geometer) with rod, hammer, and the right maps.
 9. (Tradition/Law) Oath-Keeper of the Crown Crypt – memory like iron, smile like law.
 10. (Diplomacy/Authority) Legate of the Under-Seal, royal commissioner between kingdoms.
- J (Communication/Loyalty) White-Ribbon tunnel courier; runs blind, rings true.
- Q (Royalty/Authority) Vault-Queen of a crownland, sovereign above and below.
- K (Supreme Authority/Tradition) High King Beneath the Peaks, first among crowns by ancient concord.
- A (Spiritual Power/Resolution) Lumenor of the Under-Altars, one sentence opens doors and closes debates.

2. (Danger/Disorientation) Bad air pocket—candles gutter blue; lungs complain, schedules fail.
 3. (Disruption/Flood) Drip-flood from a burst cistern reroutes corridors without asking.
 4. (Accident/Destruction) Gas flare kisses a lamp; eyebrows and evidence vanish.
 5. (Error/Security) Seal misread—the wrong door opens, the right one will not.
 6. (Quarantine/Delay) Under-mold quarantine shuts the market just as your crate arrives.
 7. (Danger/Warning) Settling crack—dust snow warns the roof wants down.
 8. (Accusation/Suspicion) Stolen key turns up in your kit; accusations ring like bells.
 9. (Conflict/Jurisdiction) Bell-code conflict—two authorities claim the same chime.
 10. (Political Conflict/Violence) Vault-right feud: crown guards face basilica wardens on a stair.
- J (Disaster/Trapped) Cave-in behind—proof, friends, and retreat on the far side.
- Q (Religious Conflict/Inquisition) Heresy inquest in the under-chapel; arrests in whispers.
- K (Authority/Restriction) General Under-Seal—all vault traffic halted by royal decree.
- A (Natural Disaster/Destruction) White Flood—mountain thaw becomes a river through your route.

2. (Utility/Time) Lamp-priority tally—skip one lamplighter queue.
 3. (Safety/Access) Breath-measure allotment—lawful time in a sealed chamber (once).
 4. (Security/Authority) Key-Writ—operate a named lock one time, witnessed.
 5. (Travel/Security) Underway Pass—escorted travel between two vaultmouths.
 6. (Commerce/Rights) Stall-Right in the under-market for a season.
 7. (Engineering/Safety) Engineer Shoring—a crew stabilizes your chosen corridor on your timetable.
 8. (Commerce/Trust) Assay Mark—your coin/metal accepted sight unseen below.
 9. (Protection/Law) Crypt Asylum—temporary sanctuary under crown law.
 10. (Authority/Access) Vault Inventory License—remove a named cache under witness.
- J (Military/Authority) Under-Guard Commission—command a vault detachment for a day.
- Q (Royalty/Privilege) Private Descent with the Vault-Queen or High King’s chancellor.
- K (Supreme Authority/Access) High King’s Sealed Writ—doors open, mouths close across crownlands.
- A (Exception/Power) The Under-Seal Clause—temporary exception to any lock, levy, or rite below.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5→4, 6–10→6, J/Q/K→8, A→10).

- Treat Diamonds as codified outcomes (keys/passes/rights) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo stone & breath motifs—keys click, bells answer, and the mountain listens (and remembers).

Additional Features

- Count the Air: When a scene establishes scarce air, a character who actively paces their breathing (counted steps, measured rests) may shift Position one step safer on their next physical action in a confined space.
- Bell-Code Courtesy: If the party adopts local bell etiquette (asking a warden which chime applies and heeding it), gain +1 assist die on negotiations or passage requests within a vault or under-market.
- Measure is Mercy: Presenting a certified measure (rod, weight, sealed tally) calms a dispute: cancel the first SB generated by commerce or jurisdictional friction in the scene.

Stone & Sovereignty

In the deep places, survival depends on precision and tradition. The Aeler understand that stone does not forgive error – a misread seal can mean death, a miscalculated air measure can doom an expedition, and a broken bell-code can spark jurisdictional war. Their society is built on layers of authority, each with its own rites, rights, and responsibilities. To navigate their realm is to learn a complex dance of deference and demand, where even the humblest lamplighter holds power over the darkness, and the smallest key can unlock the greatest vault.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from vault wardens or lamplighter companies.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby under-guards or echo bats.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or assessors.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable air.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Breath warden or vault warden becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to air shift or seal change.
- Foe Appears: A rival crown's guard or gas wraith arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional crown guards, true masons, or lamp companies arrive.

- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - seal misread/cave-in/flare ignites.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Vault-Queen, High King’s Legate, or Lumenor intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - gas floods/water breaks/floor collapses.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Aeler (Stone & Breath): Keys click in the wrong locks, bells answer without being rung, mountain air grows thin without warning.
- Aeler (Authority & Tradition): A seal is misread, bell-codes conflict between jurisdictions, a vault warden demands proper credentials.
- Aeler (Underground Hazards): Bad air pockets form, settling cracks warn of collapse, gas flares ignite unexpectedly.

Aeler — Under-Vault Tensions

In... An Underway junction, a Geometer halts the party with a tally-rod. “The Spine shifts,” he says, stone-dust in his beard. “Choose a crown—or be buried by one.”

External Clocks Threat: “The Spine Slips”; Fracture: “Maps Reorder”; Community: “Surface Panic.”

Relief Shore a vault with sacrifice (1 anchor), or complete a truce between crowns; Spirit + Resolve (5) to hold a cave-in long enough to evacuate.

Faction Entanglements

- Edgewalkers (Prospectors): If you accept their escort or intel, start a 4-segment Opportunity clock you can cash for +1 Effect on one venture. If you refuse a posted hazard, they post your route as “open” (first stealth or smuggling roll this leg suffers –1 die).
- True Masons (Infrastructure Orders): Pledge tools or labor to earn a Mason’s Stamp (treat as papers to traverse construction zones). Cross a marked barrier without their leave and gain the Tampered Work tag—first structural mishap SB against you is free.
- Lamplighter Companies: Donate wick, oil, or time on the Mile to bank a Lamp Credit; spend to ignore darkness penalties once on the Under-Road. Skip a service bell and all under-market buys that scene cost +1 clock tick (queues & suspicion).
- Under-Market Assessors: Submit to measure/weigh and reduce Commerce DV by 1 this scene. Try to pass unassayed goods—on a Miss, lose the load or accept a Caveat Stamp that poisons your price two markets downstream.
- Breath Wardens: Register bodies & flames before sealed work; compliance cancels the first air-hazard SB. Skipping registry adds a Thin Air tick to the leg (applies –1 die to the first exertion test in confinement).

Cross-Regional Ties & Soft Power

- Agrarian Reliance (Human Breadbelts): Grain, timber, tallow, and fleece convoys from Acasia/Vhasia/Viterra sustain vault populations. Famine or levy spikes uprange impose night rationing; Under-Road checks +1 DV and food trades add +1 SB pressure until relief.
- Standards Diplomacy: Aeler Measure Vault rods adopted abroad grant +1 die to settle disputes in foreign markets; rejecting Aeler standards increases toll and inspection frequency (first border scene gains a free “Lock/Barrier” SB).
- True Mason Missions Abroad: Accept a Mason cadre to “stabilize” bridges, ports, or sluices: reduce Travel DV by 1 on that route for the arc, but the route now respects Aeler closure bells (authorities can halt traffic with one writ).
- Edgewalker Concessions: Prospect notes traded to frontier lords exchange for wayleaves and salvage rights; cash once for an Under-Seal Clause (local) or accept a rival claimant clock that will mature if you delay.
- Kahfagian Interface (Sea Monopoly): Aeler export hard-goods via Kahfagian factors; storm seasons or privateer scares add a Harbor Quarantine tick to any surface leg feeding those ports (customs DV +1).
- Aelerem/Aelinnel Fallout: When Valewood Weather is signaled, Aeler works creak; all bell-codes in mixed settlements (Aelerem/Aelinnel) are one step easier to misread (first bell-etiquette scene: add a free “Error/Security” SB unless you consult a local).

Trade Goods & Consequences

- Airworks & Wick (Oil, Char, Filters): Donate to a vault—bank a Breath Favor to cancel the next bad-air complication. Hoard in a shortage and your lot is flagged; all purchases beneath that crown suffer –1 die until you settle a fine or tithe.

- Stonework & Ironwork (Beams, Keys, Rods): Selling to foreign keeps spreads Aeler codes: once per arc, treat a foreign gate as if it used Aeler warding (gain +1 die with Key-Sisters/warders there). Counterfeit measure rods trigger a cross-border inquest clock.
- Foodflows (Grain, Fleece, Tallow): Move relief trains to clear one Rationing tag for a settlement (DV −1 for social checks there). Divert a relief train and gain an Audit clock that follows you three markets hence.
- Cistern-Right & Water Engineering: Fund a sluice or cistern abroad to gain Water Priority (skip one queue during drought). Neglect maintenance and the keeper may invoke Aeler Liability—pay or lose access to the route for a season.

Patron Networks (Below and Beyond)

- The Sealed Gate: Consecrated door-nails from True Mason kits act as single-use stay writs (negate one forced entry this scene).
- The Traveler: Spine milestones double as wayshrines; leave a brass chit to reroll one failed travel test on that segment this arc.
- Inquisitor Prime: Breath-pure censers sanction “clean rooms”; once per delve, dispel one ambient miasma or ward-rot effect at cost of +1 Obligation to local abbey-knights.
- Maelstraeus: Under-Market stalls tithe to the Great Ledger; cash a Market Dominance tick to flip one price band in your favor for a scene, then mark a 4-segment Karmic Debt with assessors.

Survival-Horror Procedures (Use Often)

- Headcount & Flamecount: At scene start in confinement, ask “Who breathes, what burns?” If headcount+flamecount exceeds posted limit, add a free “Thin Air” SB and start a 4-segment Stale Air clock.
- Two Bells to Safety: Any time the fiction stalls underground, ring two nearby bells (authority vs. sanctum). PCs must pick one to heed; ignoring both increases the next hazard’s Cap by +1 (stone holds grudges).
- Measure or Mistrust: Producing a certified rod/weight cancels the first commerce/jurisdiction SB this scene; failing to present one imposes −1 die on haggling or passage until appeased.

Diplomatic Favor & Reputation Echoes

- Breath Favor (minor resource): Earned by donating wick/oil or assisting air wardens. Spend to downgrade one underground hazard outcome or to bypass a lamplighter queue.
- Stamps & Seals:
 - Mason-Marked: Doors to worksites open; smugglers avoid you (harder to buy contraband, easier to cross safely).
 - Edge-Trusted: Prospectors share fresh maps—first detour per leg is free; officials eye you as opportunists (first civic audience DV +1).
 - Assessor-Clean: Under-markets honor your assay; rivals spread rumors—add a trailing Audit clock if you score a windfall.

Boss Archetypes in Aeler

Systemic / Economic / Conspiracy

- Under-Market Syndic (Cartel/Measure Fraud): Price-fixes breath, wick, and water; wields corrupt assay marks to starve rivals. Win by exposing forged measures or seizing the Assay Chain.
- True Mason Provost (Infrastructure Coup): Locks cities behind “safety closures,” weaponizes detours and permits. Win by forcing a public bell-code audit or breaking the Permit Clock.
- Edgewalker Concessionaire (Route Monopolist): Controls salvage and short-cuts, posts hazards to strangle traffic. Win by proving route tampering or opening a sanctioned bypass.
- Bell-Code Inquisitor (Silent Coup): Rewrites chimes to shift jurisdiction; arrests arrive as echoes. Win by restoring canonical bell charts or capturing the Chime Key.

Survival Horror (Environment as Boss)

- White Flood (Water/Pressure): Thaw-swollen river through the halls; phases at trickle → surge → roar. Win by sluicework, sacrificial breach, or riding the flood.
- Bad Air (Miasma/Invisible): Candles gutter blue; thoughts slow; corridors choose the slowest. Win by air discipline, filter rites, or opening a lung-shaft.
- Hungry Stone (Creep/Collapse): Settling cracks hunt noise and heat; shudders on every miss. Win by shoring, silence, and rerouting stress through old ribs.
- Lamp Famine (Darkness/Isolation): Wicks fail in sequence; last lights lure you deeper. Win by restoring the Lamplighter’s Mile or kindling a saint-wick.

Undead / Fallen Kingdom / Eldritch / Demonic

- Crown-Lich of the Crypt (Undead Sovereign): Keeps ancient offices; binds petitioners with oaths to the dead. Win by repealing a mortmain writ or severing the Oath-Chain.
- Echo-King in the Deep (Eldritch Memory): A throne of voices; answers every argument you will ever make. Win by changing the Measure (new precedent) or striking the Silent Note.
- Seal-Devil (Demonic Contract): Lives in locks and signatures; eats exceptions. Win by offering a flawless counter-seal or starving it of loopholes.
- The Hollow Architect (Fallen Works): A ghost-guilder rebuilding the empire wrong on purpose. Win by unkeying the master plan or collapsing the false load paths.

Boss Mechanics Notes

- Air & Light Tracks: In confined scenes, track Headcount, Flamecount. If Headcount + Flamecount exceeds posted limit, add a free “Thin Air” SB and start Stale Air [4]. Each tick imposes –1 die to exertion until vented.
- Jurisdiction Clocks: Many bosses run a Bell-Code Conflict [4] or Seal Dispute [6]. On fill, the boss gains Authority Surge: increase their social DV by +1 and seize initiative once.
- Lair Actions (choose 2–3):
 - Collapse Probe: Mark “Settling Crack”; nearest noisy PC tests PROWESS or risk Pin/Separate.
 - Breath Tax: Reduce Flamecount by 1; next exertion in zone costs Fatigue 1 on a miss.

- Blackout/Glare: Snuff or flare lamps; impose Disorient (—1 die) until a Lamplighter Action restores balance.
- Bell Overrule: Swap which faction’s law applies; social actions vs. boss gain +1 DV this round.
- White Flood Surge: Advance environment clock; force MOVE/WRECK or be Separated.
- Phase Triggers: Environment bosses phase when Air hits 2/4, Water hits 3/6, or Light hits 0; Conspiracy bosses phase when Audit or Permit clocks fill.
- Truth & Measure: Producing a certified rod/weight cancels the first commerce/jurisdiction SB each phase; forging one gives the boss 1 SB and a free Expose Fraud reaction.
- Crowd Pressure: In under-markets, add Panic Crowd [4]; each tick adds +1 DV to precise actions (shoot, pick, ritual) unless calmed with bell-code or coin.
- Fear Hooks (optional): Bad Air inflicts FEAR vs. suffocation; Echo-King inflicts FEAR vs. isolation; Seal-Devil inflicts FEAR vs. helplessness. On Fail: mark Shaken; on Critical Fail: drop a resource (lamp, key, breath).

Chapter 8

The Mistlands

Bells, Salt, and Breath. A protectorate of the Aeler in name only—the fog here doesn’t just hide the land; it hides the law, and oh, how the wraiths love that ambiguity. The bell-lines aren’t just defences—they’re the only thing keeping the wraiths from dragging whole villages into the mist, and I sold the wardens a tuning fork that could recalibrate those bells to a frequency that makes the wraiths dance instead of drag. They paid in salt—enough to preserve a ship’s cargo for a year, stamped with the Mistlands’ seal and guaranteed by the Warden-Captain’s own oath. I used it on a shipment of Sidhi pepper. . . pepper that was cursed, yes, but curses are just leverage with a supernatural clause. I sold it anyway—at a markup—to a Tulkani caravan desperate for “exotic” goods, then bought back the cursed pepper’s “cure” from the same caravan a week later when they started hallucinating veils that weren’t there. Beautiful.

[Thimble: Sir, the Mistlands Warden’s Oath forbids—]

[Edgewalker: Warden’s oath? Thimble, my sweet little fog-lung, oaths are just leverage with a shiver—especially when I’ve bought the Warden-Captain’s silence with a tuning fork that doesn’t recalibrate bells. . . it attracts wraiths. Now, about that Sidhi pepper. . . the caravan leader has a daughter who owes the Veiled Sisters a favour. I wonder what her weight in secrets looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

8.1 Mistlands — “Bells, Salt, and Breath”

Legate of Mists (Elite): “The bells here do more than mark time – they weave the very fabric of reality, keeping the mist at bay and the dead in their proper places. Each chime is a thread in the pattern that holds the world together.”

Salt-Monk (Commoner): “Salt don’t just preserve the fish – it holds back the things that shouldn’t walk. Every grain blessed is a prayer, and every prayer keeps the mist from remembering your name.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The Mistlands lie north of the Aelerian mountains, where the Aberderrin Sea laps against reed-fens and drowned shores. To the west, the Direwood breathes; to the east, the salt tides of the Aberderrin. It is a Protectorate of the Aeler, but their iron passes only hold the southern roads—the land itself belongs to fog and bells. Every levee hums with ward-notes, every ferry takes salt as tithe, and every shadow is measured against the Direwood’s endless breath. The people here live by the weight of salt, the echo of bells, and the hope that their names will not be spoken by the mists.

What you notice first: The constant, distant chime of bells—never quite in sync. The taste of salt on your lips even inland. The way everyone holds their breath when crossing a bridge.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never answer a voice that calls your name from the fog. The mist collects names, and once it has yours, the ferryman will always know where to find you.

Regional Mood: Bells and Breath

Here, breath is currency and silence a sin. Every exhalation is counted by the ward-bells, and every stolen inhalation feeds something that should not be. The Aeler Protectorate maintains order with ledgers and patrols, but the real law is older: salt lines drawn at dusk, iron nails hammered into threshold posts, and the unspoken knowledge that the ninth bell must never ring. The Mistlands do not forgive forgetfulness. The mist has a long memory, and it shares its grudges freely.

Starting Location: A Bell-Line levee veiled in fog, where bell-ropes sway though no wind stirs, and each ring tastes like a heartbeat. A Ferryman demands a name as toll. When the party hesitates, a Bell-Warden steps forward. “The Ninth Bell rings tonight. Will you answer—or flee?”

Prominent NPCs of the Mistlands

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Legate Halvar	Aeler governor of the Protectorate	Keep the bell-lines intact and the grain flowing east	She carries a bell that has never been rung. It will ring once, at the end of her reign.
Mother Anja	Salt-Monk of the White Pans	Preserve the old wards against the Direwood	Her tongue is white with salt; she speaks only in blessings or silence.

Warden Kael	Bell-Warden of the High Line	Protect his village from the mist and the Aeler tax-men	He refuses to write down the ninth note; it lives only in his fading memory.
Sister Darya	Healer of the Grey Hospice of the Unnamed (Temple of Light)	Tend the fog-sick and the drowned	Her grey robes never stain, and she asks no payment—only a name for her ledger.
Notary Voss	Covenant judge (Mykkiel)	Impose Aeler law on local customs	He carries a water-clock to measure the shifting of legal moods. The mist ignores it.

Names of the Mistlands

Inspired by the coastal fens and the Aeler protectorate: clipped, breathy, with soft vowels and hard endings. Surnames often denote a marsh, a craft, or a ward.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Halvar	Anja	Foss	the Bell-Sworn
Kael	Darya	Mork	Fog-Born
Voss	Pia	Saltvedt	the Unnamed
Torben	Lise	Kyst	Breath-Thief
Stian	Ragna	Dyrep	Ward-Keeper
Vidar	Signe	Tangen	Ash-Finger

Spades — Places

2. Reed-Fen Causey — Chalked ward-runes on every milestone; safe path through the mist. Step only on the chalked stones. The mud between has no bottom.
3. Bell-Line Levee — Iron posts, eight bells per span; one bracket empty, one note forbidden. The empty bracket is for the bell that never rings. The rope is still there.
4. Ghost-Ferry Slip — Rope crosses black water; fares paid in salt and whispered names. The ferryman never blinks. Some say he traded his eyelids for the right to collect.
5. Pall Watch-Tower — Piles above mire; mirrors face west to the Direwood's breath. The mirrors are silvered on both sides. The wardens watch their own reflections as much as the trees.
6. Mist-Chapel — Stilted planks; votive lanterns gutter under damp rafters. The icon has no face. Worshippers say it lost its features to the fog, one by one.
7. Dead-Cut Canal — Old imperial ditch; patrolled by eel boats and law. The eels have eyes like men. Fishermen throw back any that blink.
8. Drowned Copse — Root-tangles clutch tide like old hands; bones in the bark. The trees were planted on a mass grave. They grew twisted, hungry.
9. Fogmill Ridge — Wind vanes vanish into cloud; gears hiss like prayers to fog. The miller grinds salt, not grain. His customers pay in breath, not coin.
10. Salt-Pan Terraces — Patched with peat; ward-salt dries under nets, watched by monks. The monks chant without ceasing. If they stop, the salt spoils—and so does the warding.
- J Fort-Stair — Stacked timber and stone; flags swallowed by mist, guards by routine. The flags are changed daily. The ones that vanish are never spoken of again.
- Q Witchlight Bridge — Over black runnel; ninth plank “counted” but unseen. The missing plank is there—you just can't see it. Step where it should be, or don't step at all.
- K High-Mist Pass — Through Aelerians; cairns ringed in iron nails, bells in the stones. Each cairn holds a bell that rang once at the death of a warden. They ring again when mist takes another.
- A Weeping Gate — Western palisade facing Direwood; bells wired to bones of trees. The gate weeps sap that smells of iron and old grief. Wardens collect it in silver cups.

(Warden/Ferryman/Aeler) Bell-warden whose ringbook decides which notes keep which ghosts; oath-ferryman collecting fares in salt and names.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Reed-Cutter — Peat-black hands, precise opinion on fog; knows every safe path. She cuts reeds in a pattern—one snip, two snips, then a pause for the ninth.
3. Salt-Monk — Blesses pans, keeps ward-measure honest; salt as both shield and vow. His tongue is white with salt. He speaks only in blessings or silence.
4. Bell-Warden — Ringbook decides which notes keep which ghosts at bay. She refuses to write down the ninth note. It lives only in her memory—and that memory is fading.
5. Oath-Ferryman — Fares in salt and names; remembers both, collects both. His left hand is always gloved. Underneath, the names are carved into his palm.

6. Lantern Acolyte — Trims wicks and arguments; light as law in the mist. He carries a bell on his belt. It rings once for each lie he hears.
7. Mist-Pilot — Linn refugee; ghosts ships through reed-lace—if paid in breath. She never speaks above a whisper. Her voice is currency, and she spends it carefully.
8. Protectorate Clerk — Aeler oilskin ledgers, narrow smile; law in triplicate. His stamp is a bell. He presses it twice—once for the crown, once for the Hollow.
9. Shroud-Diver — Harvests tokens from drowned fields before dawn’s false light. He wears a bell around his ankle. If it rings, he’s stayed too long.
10. Direwood Refugee — Cold breath, colder stories; knows what the trees whisper. She carved out her own tongue. The trees still speak through her—in a voice not her own.
- J Fog-Knight — Cavalry rides levee crowns by bellcode; mist as their steed. Their horses have no shadows. Some say they traded them for fog-sight.
- Q Legate of Mists — Aeler governor; equal parts mercy and decree, bells at their command. She carries a bell that has never been rung. It will ring once, at the end of her reign.
- K Lord Warden — Local strong hand sworn to Legate’s seal; law walks the fens. He lost an eye to a wight. He wears a bell in the socket.
- A Mist-Seer — Bargains breath for answers; candles shorten when she speaks. She has no shadow. The mist took it as a down payment.

(Undead/Weather/Law) Ground-mist lifts off fen and eats tracks by the yard; witchlights try to count you; step wrong and bridge forgets you.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Ground-Mist — Lifts from fen; eats tracks by the yard, names by the breath. Your footfalls vanish behind you. The mist is following, not rising.
3. Witchlight Count — Trying to count you; step wrong and bridge forgets your path. The lights flicker in a pattern—two short, two long. They’re signaling someone.
4. Ward-Salt Short — Pans go green; bells ring, nothing answers from the other side. The salt is grey, not white. Someone cut it with grave dust.
5. Wrong Bell — Cracked note opens a door the Legate can’t close; mist takes the gap. The bell’s clapper is a finger bone. The original owner wants it back.
6. Linn Raid — Slips reed-maze; hearths douse, horns travel on the fog. The raiders wear bells on their belts—stolen from the last village.
7. Direwood Moan — At dusk; Weeping Gate ropes go taut by themselves. The moan has words. You don’t want to understand them.
8. Valewood Wind — Crosses Aberderrin; voices sweet, landmarks false. The wind smells of honey and rot. Do not follow it.
9. Bell-Line Failure — Levee breaks silence; wraith steps across like it owns the road. The wraith carries a lantern. The light is blue—the color of drowned breath.
10. Marsh-Quake — Sod heaves, dyke slumps; proofs and bodies sink together. The ground exhales. Your name rises from it like smoke.
- J Protectorate Interdiction — All ferries sealed “until review”; routes dry up. The seals are stamped with a bell. The wax is mixed with bone ash.

- Q Rite-Purge — Inspectors call local customs heresy; tempers at a boil. The inspectors carry blank ledgers. They fill them with names of the accused.
- K General Alarm — Pall horns sound; every lantern becomes law, every shadow suspect. The horns are made from the tusks of a sea beast. The beast's ghost is angry.
- A Tide-Mist — Rolls from Aberderrin; spirits ride the white and won't be named. The spirits have no faces—only the faces of the drowned.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Ward-Salt — Pure measure draws safe circle once; mist parts, briefly. The salt is warm. It knows it will be used.
 3. Ferry Token — Cross named black runnel regardless of curfew or tide. The token is a knuckle bone. The ferryman accepts it without comment.
 4. Bell-Key — Unlock and set one bell on the Line to your note; change the song. The key is a tuning fork. Strike it once to claim your note.
 5. Lantern Writ — Lawful travel at night along levee crown with escort. The writ is written on dried bladder. It crinkles when you lie.
 6. Exorcist's Seal — Stamped clause downgrades “haunt” to “nuisance.” The seal is a bell without a clapper. It's silent, like the wraiths it binds.
 7. Codeleaf — Today's mirror and horn sequences; fog cannot hide what you know. The leaf is soaked in brine. Read it before it dries.
 8. Protectorate Mark — Priority rations and rope from Fort-Stair stores. The mark is a brand. It smokes when you show it.
 9. Wraith-Indemnity — Legal immunity for actions taken under apparition threat. The indemnity is signed in salt water. It will dissolve if you misuse it.
 10. Bone-Field License — Salvage rights at drowned hamlet (with witnesses). The license is a map drawn on a shroud. Follow the stitch marks.
- J Refuge-Right — Move a named household through Gate unchallenged; breath as passport. The right is a bell-rope. Tie it to your belt. Nonna will ask.
- Q Legate's Audience — One whisper exits as policy; bells ring your decree. The Legate's ear is a silver bell. Speak into it once.
- K Warden's Commission — Raise levee guards; local doors open, purses too. The commission is a whistle. Blow it, and the fens answer.
- A Pall Indulgence — Temporary exception to ward law, spoken and sealed by bell. The indulgence is a single bell-note, held in a jar. Break the jar to release it.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (passes/seals/tokens) that change position rather than call for a roll.

- If any A appears, echo breath and boundary—bells answering across water, salt that won’t dry, voices returning late.

Additional Features

- Breath-Toll: Many claim the mist remembers every breath. Travelers hold breath crossing bridges, fearing the mist will count them wrong.
- Salt as Promise: A handful of salt is more than warding—it is a vow. Spill it on plank or stone to swear safety; break that vow, and invite the Direwood’s claim.
- The Ninth Bell: Legends say a ninth bell once rang on the Line. The note is not in any ringbook; no warden speaks of it. Some nights, though, it rings—and gates open where none should be.
- Payden’s Port: The only true city in the Mistlands, huddled on the western coast of the Aberderrin. Its wharves are built from salvaged longship timber, and its law is split between the Aeler Legate’s seal and the old bell-wardens’ traditions. Grain ships leave from its harbour each autumn, carrying the Protectorate’s tithe east—and returning with iron, engineers, and the occasional missionary.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Saint Kael of the Iron Bell (The Sealed Gate): The bell-wardens venerate a legendary warden who hammered a ninth bell into the Weeping Gate to seal a Direwood breach. The bell cracked, but the breach closed. His chisel is kept at Payden’s Port; it is said to quench the mist for an hour if struck against an iron post. The Aeler Protectorate has tried to confiscate it twice; both attempts ended with the confiscators lost in fog.
- Saint Anja of the White Pans (Oath of Mercy and Grace): A salt-monk who died blessing the pans during a tide-mist. Her body never decayed, and her chapel now serves as a hospice for fog-sick sailors. The Temple of Light sends offerings of fresh water each spring; the Everflame considers her a heretic. Pilgrims who pray at her shrine may ask one question of a drowned ancestor—but the answer is always a single word, and that word is a debt.
- The Grey Hospice of the Unnamed: Sister Darya runs a hospice near Payden’s Port. She asks no payment, but she records every patient’s name in a ledger that never dries. The Aeler clerks suspect she is erasing debt, not healing wounds. She has been investigated three times; each time, the investigator vanished into the fog and returned with no memory of why they came.
- The Bell-Ringer’s Covenant (The Keeper of the Silent Seal): Notary Voss is the Protectorate’s appointed judge, charged with imposing Aeler law on local customs. He carries a water-clock to measure the shifting of legal moods, but the mist ignores it. His rulings are always delivered in triplicate, and the bell-wardens obey them—slowly. Those who lie before him find that their next passage through the Ghost-Ferry Slip is denied; the ferryman refuses to name them.
- The Ninth: In any Mistlands scene, the ninth person to speak in a room draws the mist’s attention. The wise hold their tongues until someone else breaks the count. Those who speak ninth are said to see a pale figure standing at the foot of the bed that night—waiting to collect a breath.

Mistlands Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Fog: Toss a crust into the mist before crossing a bridge. Ignore the first Ground-Mist penalty.
- Hold the Ninth Breath: Cross a threshold while holding your breath. Cancel Witchlight Count or take -1 die on your next action (your choice).
- Name to the Salt: Whisper a dead enemy's name into a salt pan. Gain +1 Effect against undead for the scene, but mark Obligation to the Legate.

Patronage & Power

In the Mistlands, power flows through ritual, warding, and the careful balance between the living and the dead. The Aeler Protectorate maintains nominal control through military presence and legal frameworks, but true authority lies with those who understand the bells, the salt, and the breath of the land itself. Local wardens, salt-monks, and bell-keepers hold sway over daily life, while the Legate of the Mists mediates between imperial law and ancient custom.

For the GM: Patronage in the Mistlands revolves around protection—from mist, from spirits, from the encroaching forest. Rewards often take the form of tokens, seals, or safe passage that can be leveraged into greater security. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (salt, bells, lanterns) that can be challenged, depleted, or voided.
- Let rival factions issue conflicting protections, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the levees, ferries, and watchtowers as arenas for social contests, where knowledge of the old ways determines success.

In the Mistlands, your safety is your standing, and your standing depends on who remembers your name.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from wardens or fog-knights.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby spirits or patrol boats.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or mist-spirits.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable tide.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Protectorate forces or local warden becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to mist shift or bell failure.
- Foe Appears: A wraith, raiding party, or inspector arrives on scene.

- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional fog-knights, spirits, or Aeler forces arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - bell-line fails/ward broken/mist claims name.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Legate, Lord Warden, or Mist-Seer intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - mist thickens/bells ring/forest breathes.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Mistlands (Bells & Breath): Bells ring without cause, breath forms visible words, mirrors reflect wrong faces.
- Mistlands (Salt & Warding): Salt refuses to dry, ward-runes bleed color, protection tokens crack.
- Mistlands (Direwood Threat): Trees whisper your name, roots shift position, forest breath grows stronger.

Boss Seeds (three-phase foes)

- The Ninth Bell Ringer (Direwood herald) — Phases: Lost Names → Broken Lines → Open Gate. Cracks: restore a ringbook; trade a breath; rehang a forbidden bell with copper nails.
- Queen of Counting Lights (fae arbiter) — Phases: Courteous Tithes → Geas-Market → Ledger of Leaves. Cracks: return stolen way-marks; speak said and meant; gild the iron.
- Reed-Wolf Captain (Linn raider) — Phases: Smoke Signals → Night Oars → Thing Verdict. Cracks: name a feud-token; win a skald-duel; force harbor-truce under bell and banner.

Chapter 9

Ykrul

Wolf Standards, Winter Camps. The Ykrul don't measure wealth in silver—they measure it in hoofbeats, in the snort of a warhorse at dawn, and oh, how they love a good bargain. . . especially when it comes with a side of broken trust. I sold them Aeler saddles with built-in breath-counters—not because I cared about their mounts, but because I knew the khagan's head trainer was skimming oats from the imperial stables, and he'd sell his soul to keep it quiet. The khagan was impressed. He paid in a paiza—a tablet of hammered bronze that guarantees safe passage through all Ykrul lands, stamped with the wolf standard and blessed by the shaman who definitely wasn't bribed with fermented mare's milk. I've used it to cross the Violet Steppe nine times. The ninth time? The paiza cracked. Not from wear—from my tampering with the alloy during the “quality check.” I'm still trying to collect on the warranty. . . by selling the khagan a new paiza at triple the price, claiming the crack was “a sign from the spirits” that he needs to upgrade. (The spirits agreed—for a fee.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 5 of the Ykrul Trade Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Shaman's covenant? Thimble, darling, covenants are just leverage with a chant. Now pass the brandy—I've got a horse war to start in Kuvani, and if you mention “Clause 2” one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the Violet Steppe as kindling. It prefers it frozen.]

9.1 Ykrul — “Wolf Standards, Winter Camps”

Khatun of the Ring (Elite): “The steppe remembers every oath sworn beneath its endless sky, and the wolf-standards carry the honour of clans that have outlasted empires. To lead here is to keep the old ways sharp as winter steel.”

Herd-Scout (Commoner): “The horses know the weather before it comes, and the wolves know the thoughts in a man's heart. Best speak true and ride steady – the steppe doesn't forgive lies or clumsy hands on the reins. An old saying: the straight road is a lie. The wise follow the bent twig.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The Ykrul ride the endless Violet Steppe, where the horizon drinks the sky and law lives in saddlebags. Their sacred patterns are called Kon'reh — not a written code but a living way of reading routes, debts, and exits. Every crossing has its price, every ford its weight, every feud an angle measured in horse-lengths and heartbeats. Hosts gather by the thousand, then scatter at a word; one night you share their fires, the next they test your bonds. Their banners are wolves' teeth, their treaties braided cords, their memory longer than the rivers that cut the grass. The old folk still recite the Thirty-Six Sayings of the Road, but the wisest know the thirty-seventh is the one you learn alone, on a night when the stars blink out and the wolf does not howl.

What you notice first: The smell of horse sweat and woodsmoke. The way every rider counts hoofbeats under their breath. The silence when a stranger approaches the fire.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never ride between two wolves at dusk. The space between them is a blind angle — a route with no exit, a debt with no payment.

Regional Mood: The Geometry of the Steppe

Here, the horizon is not a line — it is a question. The Ykrul measure distance in oaths, not miles. A camp is a weave of favours owed and honour satisfied. A feud is a slow equation: blood in, blood out, with interest compounded by winter. The Khagan rules not by force alone but by keeping the old patterns — the unwritten rules that govern every crossing, every treaty, every duel. Break the pattern, and the steppe itself may turn against you. Keep it, and even enemies will share their salt. The Ykrul build no monuments. They build relationships, each one a stone in an invisible cairn that stretches from the Dolmis to the Aberderrin.

Starting Location: A winter camp on the steppe edge, banners snapping in frost-bright wind as the Khagan's fires burn in the east. A Khatun of the Ring offers a clay cup of salted tea. "The Khagan's kin ride from the salt pan. The old sayings say the straight road is a lie. You came by the bent path — the wolf knows you. Speak your errand before the wind changes."

Prominent NPCs of the Ykrul

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Khatun Bortai	Keeper of the Ring	Keep the clans from tearing each other apart	Her hostage strings are braided from the hair of oath-breakers.
Noyan Temur	Banner-lord of the Red Reeds	Win a winter pasture without bloodshed	He has never lost a negotiation. He has never needed to speak.

Sogata	Herd-Scout (commoner exemplar)	Read the weather before the storm	He can read a trail by the way the grass bends — and a lie by the way a rider sits.
Elder Saruul	Bone-Singer	Keep the names of the dead	She sings the names of the departed each dawn; the dead sing back.
The Dust Prince	Raider who rides the wind’s lee	Amass enough salt to buy a clan	He offers escort braids for secrets, never seen from the front.

Names of the Ykrul

Inspired by the open steppe and the deep east: guttural stops, flowing vowels, and suffixes that mark lineage or deed.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Bortai	Temur	Sogata	the Grey
Urum	Saruul	Khorch	Red-String
Khasar	Altan	Noyan	the Unbuckled
Mongke	Checheg	Borjigin	Storm-Born
Edil	Borte	Uriankhai	Ash-Prow
Toghrul	Orghana	Qasar	the Silent

Spades — Places

2. Wolf Milepost — Stacked stones; wind whines through eye-holes. Each stone is a treaty. Remove one, and the wind names you oath-breaker.
3. Remount Station — Low corral with stamped snow and tether-posts. The tether-posts are carved with the names of dead horses. The living ones remember.
4. Birch Windbreak — Above black-earth tracks; old offerings in the bark. The offerings are strips of wool. Each strip is a prayer for safe crossing.

5. Salt Pan — Crusted white; hoof-prints like stars across the void. The pan has a name: “The Khagan’s Mirror.” Look into it, and you see your debts.
 6. Reed Ford — River braids; poles mark yesterday’s safe line. The poles shift in the night. The river’s path changes with the moon.
 7. Trading Palisade — Way-post with wolf-skull pennons snapping. The skulls face outward. They watch for liars and bad weights.
 8. Winter Camp — Felt tents in a horseshoe facing the wind. The open end is for guests. The closed end is for the ancestors.
 9. Kurgan Field — Low barrows; horse-bones bead the grass like prayer beads. The bones were placed by a bone-singer. Each bead is a name.
 10. Watch Kopje — Lonely tor with signal fire-scar; the eye of the steppe. The fire-scar is from a signal that saved a host. The smoke still smells of hope.
- J Pontoon Crossing — Laced hides creak; the current speaks fast and hungry. The hides are from horses that died crossing. Their ghosts still pull.
- Q Council Hollow — Standards planted; the ground tamped like a war-drum. The standards have ears. Speak a treason here, and every clan will know by dawn.
- K Khagan’s Station — Broad ger on a timber platform; guards in silence. The guards never blink. They are paid in salt and secrets.
- A Sky Steppe — Open, wind like a voice; tracks keep pace beside you. The tracks are not yours. They belong to the ancestors who ride with you.

(Host/Envoy/Rider) Herd-scout with three ponies and six opinions; camp-mother who chooses where fires live.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Herd-Scout — Three ponies and six opinions; the horizon as a map. He can read a trail by the way the grass bends. He can read a lie by the way a rider sits.
3. Camp-Mother — Chooses where fires live; hospitality is law. She has never drawn a blade. She has never needed to.
4. Banner Youth — Minding the wolves’ tooth standard; pride as duty. The standard is older than his grandmother’s grandmother. He will die before it falls.
5. Salt-Broker — Weighs promises like grain; trade as precision. Her scales are honest—except when they aren’t. The difference is a prayer.
6. Remount Keeper — String-master with a book of brands; horses as currency. His book is written in hoof-prints. He can read a horse’s soul.
7. Bone-Singer — Knows the kurgans’ proper names; death as memory. She sings the names of the dead each dawn. The dead sing back.
8. Road-Judge — Tümen scribe with seals and a patient ear. His seals are from three empires. He uses whichever one is still valid.
9. Noyan Envoy — Silver paiza, iron smile; diplomacy as a blade. His paiza was a gift from a Khagan who is now dead. He does not mention that.
10. Host Captain — The tent-wall is a map; strategy in every fold. He can see a battle in the way smoke rises. He is usually right.

- J Falcon Courier — Leather gauntlets, answers sooner than asked. The falcon is a sleeper agent. It belongs to a different clan. The courier doesn't know.
- Q Khatun of Ring — Keeper of camp-law and hostage strings. Her strings are braided from the hair of hostages. She knows each strand's owner.
- K Khagan's Kin — A nephew or niece sent to bind a foedus with a look. They have never lost a negotiation. They have never needed to speak.
- A Sky-Speaker — Shaman of storms; shortcuts owe them a price. They can call lightning—or call it off. The price is always a story.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. White Squall — Dry snow, lost horizons; navigation by instinct alone. The snow tastes of iron. Someone is bleeding nearby.
 3. Rasputitsa — The road becomes porridge; wheels are lies on the earth. The mud has a smell—old blood and older lies.
 4. Remount Sickness — A cough in the string; swaps get awkward, trust thinner. The cough is a curse. The horses know who cast it.
 5. Salt Shortage — Meat spoils; tempers thin like winter air. The salt was cut with grave dust. Someone wanted the winter to be hard.
 6. Hostage Call — Protocol invoked; someone must sit in the tent. The tent has no floor. The hostage can see the earth beneath—and the bones.
 7. Feud Spark — A name spoken wrong reopens an old cut; blood remembers. The name was spelled correctly. The insult was in the pause before it.
 8. Grassfire — Runs with the wind faster than horses; escape as a prayer. The fire has a face. It is the face of a Khagan who burned a village.
 9. Foedus Recall — Treaty terms re-read; your papers disagree. The treaty was written on both sides. The other side used a different ink.
 10. River Break — Ice goes; ferries don't; crossing becomes a gamble. The ice is still thick in the middle. The edges are lying.
- J Raid Shadow — Another banner follows at a patient distance. They are not attacking. They are waiting for you to make a mistake.
- Q Kurultai Call — Camps converge; travel becomes politics. The kurultai has a list of grievances. Your name is near the top.
- K Wolf Muster — A levy raised; every road a checkpoint, every rider a judge. The muster horn is a wolf's skull. It sounds like a scream.
- A Sky Omen — Three suns, or none; routes rewrite themselves. The omen is a wedge of cranes flying north in winter. The sky is wrong.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Camp Token — One night's lawful fire and fodder; hospitality as a right. The token is a horsehair braid. Burn it to claim your fire.
 3. Salt Allotment — Draw from a named store without quarrel. The allotment is a salt-cake. Break it in half to share.
 4. Ford-Right — Cross a named braid at lawful depth. The right is a pole. Plant it in the river, and the ford will hold—once.
 5. Remount Chit — Swap two tired mounts for fresh. The chit is a horse's tooth. The remount keeper will not smile when you present it.
 6. Escort Braid — Two riders see you through a bad stretch. The braid is woven from the riders' own hair. They will die before they cut it.
 7. Safe-Hostage — Place or take token-kin for a truce. The hostage is a child. The child is patient.
 8. Paiza Tablet — Priority on the Wolf Road and at posts. The tablet is bronze. It is warm when your reputation is good.
 9. Foedus Seal — A treaty clause that trumps petty order. The seal is a wolf's head. Press it into wax, and the steppe listens.
 10. Market-Green — Trade under a banner; weapons sheathed. The banner is a green field. No blood may be spilled beneath it.
- J Standard Guard — Travel under wolf-tooth; raiders defer. The standard is a wolf's tooth on a pole. Raiders will bow—or die.
- Q Ring Audience — The Khatun hears you alone; precedent sticks. The audience is held at midnight. The fire is the only witness.
- K Khagan's Writ — Doors open, mouths close across the steppe. The writ is a sheet of hammered silver. It bends, but it does not break.
- A Sky's Exception — Once, the weather ignores you (storm, whiteout, dust). The exception is a single breath. Use it well.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (passes/remounts/truces) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo steppe and sky motifs—wind that speaks, horses that remember, treaties that bind across generations.

Additional Features

Hostage Strings. Every oath is secured with a hostage string—a token kin, retainer, or sworn ally left in the other camp. If the deal is broken, the hostage's fate becomes the story's next beat. (Mechanically: create a 4-segment Hostage clock; on breach, the clock becomes a countdown to vengeance.)

Steppe Law. Travelers are bound by steppe law: hospitality lasts three nights, insults last three generations. The Keeper may demand 1 SB when either law is broken.

Sky Omens. When the sky shows strange signs—mock-suns, green fire, thunder without storm—the steppe itself speaks. Once per scene, players may treat an omen as a Diamond, shifting Position without a roll. The GM may bank 1 SB for future weather complications.

Bowl and Board. Ykrul elders settle disputes not by shouting but by drawing two circles in the dirt: the Bowl for fairness, then the Board for routes and concessions. A successful Wits + Lore (or a relevant skill) roll creates a Seasonal Concession String at a ford, harbor, or pass. On a miss, the Market Moot [4] clock advances as factions argue.

The Thirty-Seven Sayings of the Road (Excerpts)

The Ykrul teach strategy not in manuals but in proverbs—each a line of play. A few of the most quoted:

Let the river freeze before you cross. — Do not rush. Let the opponent make the first move; your opening will be built on their impatience.

Borrow a corridor to trap a king. — When the enemy carves a path toward you, let it deepen. Then seal the mouth behind them.

Loot a burning house. — Strike only when the enemy is committed elsewhere.

The guest who outstays his welcome steals the host's peace. — Allow no force, however small, to remain within your lines uncontrolled.

Count exits, not victims. — Before you move, count the ways your foe can flee. If the number is greater than zero, you have not yet won.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Bitter Root: Daughters of the Cord run a hospice near the salt pans. They ask no payment—but they cut threads. A renegade Sister hides among the herders, trying to untie her cord from a Ykrul blood-debt.
- The Threshold Compendium: The kurgans are Class II Anchor sites—the spirits of old Khagans bound by unfinished wergild. Saikou Ira would carry a bag of salt in each hand here.
- Malachai, the Chained Angel: A silver coin that never spends circulates among the salt-brokers. Take it, and your store never runs dry—but the coin will reappear in the salt pan at every new moon.
- The Grey Wanderer's Grimoire: Ykrul psions are called “Weather-Readers.” They taste the future in the wind. Road-judges employ two—and have never trusted a verdict they didn't hear from the sky.

- The Ninth: In any Ykrul camp, the ninth cup poured at a feast is for the ancestors. The wise pour eight and leave the ninth as a pause.

Ykrul Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Salt to the Wind: Toss a pinch into the air before a long ride. Ignore the first White Squall penalty.
- Knot the String: Tie a single knot in a hostage cord. Cancel Feud Spark or take –1 die on your next oath (your choice).
- Name to the Kurgan: Whisper a dead enemy's name into a horse's ear. Gain +1 Effect when raiding their clan this scene, but mark Obligation to the Bone-Singer.

Patronage & Power

In Ykrul society, power flows through the careful management of hospitality, the binding of oaths with hostages, and the ability to navigate the complex web of tribal relationships. The Khagan maintains authority through the loyalty of noyans and the respect of khatuns, while local leaders wield influence through their control of resources like salt, remounts, and safe passage. The true power lies with those who understand the ancient customs and can maintain the delicate balance between hospitality and honour.

For the GM: Patronage in Ykrul society revolves around hospitality, hostage exchanges, and the ability to command respect from hosts and courts. Rewards often take the form of tokens, treaties, and official positions that can be leveraged into greater influence. To emphasize the old ways:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (tokens, braids, standards) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Use the Bowl and Board procedure for disputes—first fairness (Bowl), then routes and concessions (Board), then a seasonal right.
- Let rival hosts issue conflicting protections, forcing players to choose whose favour matters more.

In Ykrul society, your word is your bond, and your bond determines whether you ride as guest or ghost.

Thematic SB Spend Table

- Minor Complications (1 SB): Exposure, Noise, Trace, Delay, Supply Strain.
- Moderate Setbacks (2 SB): Alarm Raised, Position Lost, Foe Appears, Gear Trouble, Lock/Barrier.
- Serious Trouble (3 SB): Reinforcements, Key Gear Breaks, Major Twist, Rail Tick, Condition Applied.
- Major Turns (4+ SB): Trap Springs, Authority Arrival, Scene Shift, Patron Omen, Narrative Pivot.
- Region-Specific SB Options: Steppe Law (hospitality fails, insults echo, treaties shift), Horse Culture (mounts refuse, remounts empty, riding unreliable), Sky Omens (weather shifts, signs contradict, navigation mystical).

Terrain Stock (d20)

Roll or choose a striking detail to dress a hex of the Violet Steppe.

1. Wolf milepost with fresh red thread; someone retied the law.
2. Reed ford poles lying on bank; current whispers a different depth.
3. Fallen standard tooth used as a chopping block; grooves still warm.
4. Circle of pony skulls facing east; one blinks when the wind shifts.
5. Snow trench with cudgel steps; no prints leave it.
6. Copper salt-scale hung from a birch; pans balance only under oath.
7. Hoof-bells threaded on hair; ringing calls riders – or storms.
8. Abandoned paiza shard wedged in a milestone; edges bite skin.
9. Kurgan capstone chalked with a name misspelled; feud waiting.
10. Flint knapper’s tarp half-buried; a perfect arrowhead points north.
11. Blue-fledged signal arrow stuck in frost; message in the vane.
12. Camp-sweep marks: three rings – last night was a council.
13. Wheel rut frozen like glass; a face looks up from inside.
14. Salt-brined jerky hanging from a tripod; untouched by birds.
15. River ice singing in thirds; ferryman’s pole wedged under.
16. Pony hobble-rope knotted in hostage-string pattern.
17. Cold forge dug into loess; tools wrapped in wolfskin.
18. Child’s braid-bead dropped in snow; still warm to the tongue.
19. Thorn-tether scratched with clan brands; two over-scratched.
20. Bone flute lodged in a cairn; playing it summons a road-judge.

Lair Seeds (One-Page Rides)

d12 lair hooks for the steppe.

1. Ger of Echoes — Empty felt walls repeat anything uttered in the Khagan’s voice once per night.
2. Salt-Pit Shrine — Rope winch to brine caverns; offerings are tears and horsehair.
3. Remount Vault — Subterranean stables under reed mats; mounts won’t leave without a tale.
4. Kite-Maker’s Bluff — Bone kites pinned on racks; their shadows scout for raiders.
5. Storm-Rider’s Stone — Pillar that hums to hooves; racing round it sets weather wagers.
6. Frozen Court — Ice dais in a dry riverbed; law held here counts triple until thaw.
7. Banner Grave — Flags planted like trees; each knows the battle it died in.
8. String-Mother’s Yard — Web of hostage cords; cutting one opens a secret but starts a feud.
9. Fire-Under-Snow — Warm vent where foals winter; spirits ask for salt-song.
10. Quiet Palisade — Trading post where voices fail; deals done in gesture and cut meat.
11. Ashen Trident — Three lightning-split birches; tie a braid to choose a road’s luck.
12. Grey Ger — Moves at night; inside, a camp-mother tests your hospitality the other way around.

Steppe Bestiary (Palette)

Signs and hooks for strange creatures of the Violet Steppe.

- Steppe Manticores — Lionine torsos, porcupine tails of bone quills. Signs: quills in fence-posts; ponies refuse to drink. Hook: play a raid-song backward; they circle to listen.
- Dust Hulks — Wind-packed silhouettes that rise from dunes. Signs: dunes “breathe”; grit sifts upward. Hook: spill water on their shadow; they settle for a watch.
- Bone Kites — Carrion birds with rune-etched pinions. Signs: spiral flights over kurgans. Hook: offer a name-stake (twig with hair) to barter silence.
- Frost Wargs — Blue-pelt wolves that steam cold. Signs: rime on tracks; breath that crackles. Hook: warm milk poured on ice buys one unchallenged crossing.
- Reed Stalkers — Long-necked marsh hunters, gait like stilts. Signs: pole-pocks where no ferryman walks. Hook: carry reeds in your mouth; they read it as truce.
- Salt Screamers — Pale eels in dry pans; voices like flutes. Signs: fissures crusted with salt frost. Hook: scatter ash; they coil to sing and forget to bite.

Relic & Find (d10)

When you uncover a kurgan cache or a lost hoard, roll or pick:

1. Wolf-tooth standard tip; planted, it demands silence for parley.
2. Bronze paiza half; merchants honour it as full once – then talk.
3. Salt-needle that points to the nearest brine store.
4. Frost-bitten stirrup: mount that wears it ignores ice once.
5. Braid-bead of hostage glass; melts when a string is cut nearby.
6. River-depth rod carved with safe counts for three fords.
7. Iron hoof-bell that rings for liars at council.
8. Bone-lot cup; roll it to name which feud clause applies.
9. Wind-wrung scarf; pass it round to share breath in a white squall.
10. Wolf-road tablet scrap; reads as a Foedus Seal to one clerk.

Complication Twists (d8)

When a travel complication arises, roll or choose a twist that deepens the story.

1. White Squall reveals a remount vault’s smoke hole; entering angers reed stalkers.
2. Rasputitsa exposes kurgan stones; riding around them starts a name-claim.
3. Feud Spark was staged by a salt-broker; paying in Salt Allotment unmasks them.
4. Hostage Call is for a Safe-Hostage you already carry – by another name.
5. Grassfire runs uphill toward a council hollow; smoke votes before riders do.
6. Foedus Recall cites a river you crossed yesterday – now it flows the other way.
7. Raid Shadow is your own tracks, mirrored by sky omens; choose which you admit.
8. Kurultai Call stacks councils; words spoken in one bind you in the other.

9.2 Midh Ahkaz — “The Violet Gate”

Khatun of the Ring (Ykrul Elder): “The wind carries names, not ledgers. But here, in the shadow of the Oasis Compact, both trade and oaths change hands. Do not mistake our patience for weakness. The grass remembers every hoof that crossed it.”

Vilikari Factor (Night Market Regular): “Ecktoria calls it uncivilized. We call it unbeatable. No tariffs, no seals, no questions. Coin talks. The rest walks.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Midh Ahkaz is not a city of stone—it is a city of felt, iron, and shifting grass. A day’s ride north of the Ecktorian border, it squats on the edge of the Violet Steppe like a patient wolf. Here, the Ykrul, Vilikari, Ostrihari (their eastern kin from the grassy fringes of this same prairie), and a dozen other peoples gather to trade, haggle, and settle grudges. The air smells of horse sweat, cedar smoke, and the faint copper tang of blood money.

The city has no walls. Instead, rings of tents and caravanserais spiral outward from the central Counting House. At dawn, the grass—tall enough to hide a horse—is cut back. At dusk, the perimeter fires are lit. The colour of the steppe comes from the violet hue of mature grass seeds, which ripen in waves across the prairie. The Ecktorian emissaries call it “the Brink.” Locals call it home.

What you notice first: The constant low drumming of hooves. The way every merchant has a scale on their table. The braids in every horseman’s mane—each knot a story, a debt, a promise.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never refuse the guest-cup. The first pour is courtesy. The second is negotiation. The third is a blood-price unspoken.

Western Steppe vs. Eastern Steppe (GM Sidebar)

Western Steppe (Violet Prairie): Rolling, fertile, forgiving. The grass grows tall enough to hide a crouched rider, but the land is laced with caravanserais, seasonal wells, and the smoke of permanent camps. This is where Midh Ahkaz sits—the soft underbelly of the steppe, where trade happens and clans winter. The violet seed-heads give the prairie its name.

Eastern Steppe (True Steppe): Vast, dry, harsh. Shared with the Kuvani horse-clans, it stretches east of the Valewood. Grass is shorter, winds are colder, and a rider can see a day’s ride in every direction. The Ostrihari who appear in Midh Ahkaz are from the eastern fringes of the Western Steppe—they speak with a harder accent, braid their horses’ tails differently, and carry bows of horn and sinew, not wood.

Why this matters: A Ykrul from the Eastern Steppe might find Midh Ahkaz almost claustrophobic. A trader from the Violet Prairie might feel lost in the east. Use the contrast to create tension between clans or to flavour foreign visitors.

Regional Mood: Wind, Grass, and Contract

Midh Ahkaz thrives on movement. Caravans arrive from every direction: Ykrul horse-tribes from the deep steppe, Ostrihari mercenaries from the eastern fringes, Vilikari traders from the river towns, and the occasional bold Ecktorian factor with a silver tongue and a hidden dagger. The city's "law" is the Oasis Compact—a shifting web of seasonal rights, grazing permits, and arbitration courts held under open sky. Disputes are settled by the Bowl (fairness) then the Board (geometry). A broken promise can cost a herd. A kept oath can buy a ford for a generation.

Starting Location: The Violet Bazaar, a sprawling market of felt tents and chalk circles, where horse traders shout over the jingle of brass bridles. A Vilikari merchant with oiled braids hands you a sealed letter. "The Coin-Weigh Tribunal suspects a counterfeit seal. Find the forger before the Grass Moon, or the contract on your head becomes public."

(Ring/Well/Cairn) The Oasis Well where water shares are drawn; counting pebbles placed on stone ledges; the distant smoke of a Steppe Ranger campfire.

Spades — Places

2. Violet Bazaar — Felt stalls, chalk circles, horse traders and rumor merchants. The chalk circles are for disputes. Step inside and speak truth—or pay in grass.
3. Coin-Weigh Tribunal — Tariff court under a canvas dome; scales of bronze and iron. The scales were blessed by a dying Sky-Speaker. They tip even when the wind is still.
4. Oasis Well — Stone-rimmed pool, token-keeper with a leather bag of water rights. Each token is a carved pebble. Lose it, and your herd drinks dust.
5. Steppe Ranger Camp — Tent line on the eastern edge; trackers, scouts, feud mediators. The rangers wear wolf tails. They do not smile—they wait.
6. Caravan Rings — Concentric circles of wagon shelters; fires lit inward, watch posts on ox carts. The inner ring is for sworn allies. Outsiders sleep in the second ring, coin in hand.
7. Sky-Speaker's Cairn — Stone heap atop a low hill; wind-knot ropes and bones. The shaman leaves offerings of horsehair. The wind carries his prayers to Kuva.
8. Dust Market — No-questions auction at the city's edge; stolen goods, cursed relics, bad memories. The auctioneer wears a hooded mask. No one knows his face. No one has asked twice.
9. Silver Stall Stable — Remount station; horses for hire, gossip for free, blood for more. The stable master has three fingers on his left hand. He lost the others in a bet over a mare.
10. Grass Ring — Ritual dueling ground; mourners and bookies share benches. The grass grows back faster after a duel. The dead fertilize the peace.
- J Foreign Quarter — Ecktorian, Vhasian, and Viterran merchants in permanent felt mansions. The Ecktorian envoy winters here. He has not left in five years.
- Q Khatun's Ring — Largest tent, carpeted with woven battle scenes; the old chieftain's seat. The carpet is made of enemy cloaks. Each sash is a surrendered banner.
- K Under-Arcades — Earthen tunnels below the bazaar; root-walled, bone-dusted. The walls are packed with bone dust and old burrows. The dead whisper route tips.
- A Iron Well — Ancient Aeler shaft, now used for vengeance contracts and whispered names. The water tastes of rust and memory. Those who drink never lie again—or never speak.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Horse-Braid Apprentice — Young Ykrul with a head full of trade routes and a knot diary. She ties a new braid for every paying passenger. Her hair is a map of debts.
 3. Ostrikari Arms-Master — Selling short bows and longer grudges; fights for coin. He names each bow after a dead rival. The bows never miss.
 4. Coin-Weigh Clerk — Ink-stained, patient, scales in her eyes; never lies, never forgives. She records weights in blood. A single drop seals a verdict.
 5. Vilikari Factor — Braided, oiled, quick with a smile and a second ledger. His caravan has three names. Only the real one buys safe passage.
 6. Steppe Ranger — Tracker with a wolf-tail cloak and a debt to the Sky-Speaker. He never draws his bow unless watched. Hunger is his real weapon.
 7. Tokan (Ykrul Scout) — Mute, sharp-eyed, always smelling the wind; her ears miss nothing. She signs with her knuckles. Three taps is "danger." One tap is "run."
 8. Ecktoria Emissary — Proud, wax-sealed, fuming at the "primitive" customs. He carries a copy of Imperial Code that he has never opened. The flies love his ink.
 9. Sky-Speaker's Shadow — Elder's quiet apprentice; listens more than the wind. She can name every clan's sky-omen. She cannot name her own origin.
 10. Knot-Keeper (Tulkani) — Counts caravan promises with a rope of nine strands. Each knot is a contract. Untie one and the deal dissolves.
- J Dust Market Auctioneer — Hooded, genderless voice; knows the weight of every sin. The hammer is a thigh bone. The block is a skull altar from the Direwood.
- Q Khatun of the Ring — Grey-haired, one-eyed, still deadly at sixty; speaks for seven clans. She lost her eye to a Linn raider. She killed him with his own hook.
- K Kuva's Voice (Wandering Priest) — Weathered, ash-marked, offers omen readings for grass. He prays to the sky by throwing bones. The bones never lie—they just mislead.
- A Iron Well Keeper (Vengeance Broker) — Mute, scarred, accepts names written in ash. A drink from the well costs a memory. A death costs a fortune.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Dry Well Ration — Water shares halved; prices spike, tempers fray. The token-keeper has a list. The list has a knife mark beside your name.
3. Blood-Price Feud — A killing in the Horse Ring; kinsmen demand wergild in coin or flesh. The victim's tribe drums the death rhythm. Every beat is a deadline.
4. Locust Swarm — Grass blackens; caravans stranded, fodder worthless. The swarm leaves a sticky residue. It smells of burnt honey and dread.
5. Counterfeit Coins — Light silver floods the Dust Market; Oasis Compact inquiry. The counterfeit coins are warm. The real ones are cold. Touch quickly.
6. Grass Fire — Wind-whipped flame from the east; evacuations, scorched trade paths. The smoke spells a name. Yours. Or your debtor's. Hard to tell.

7. Horse Sickness — Contagion at the Silver Stall Stable; quarantines, lost mounts. The sick horses dream. Their screams sound like your last argument.
8. Khatun's Illness — Old chieftain fading; succession knives out. Her death will split seven clans. The Sword Oath lasts one year.
9. Census Raid — Ecktorian legion patrol "just visiting"; tensions high, bribes higher. The patrol leader wears a mask of imperial wax. Pull it off and see a dead man's face.
10. Sky-Omen (Red Wind) — Dust storm from the Ashaani desert; all navigation Desperate. The dust tastes of iron and old blood. Breathe it and dream of falling.
- J Oath Challenge — A Kon"reh master demands geometry arbitration; your bond is the stake. The board is a painted skull. The pieces are horse teeth.
- Q Tariff Strike — Coin-Weigh clerks refuse to audit; trade freezes, tempers explode. The clerks chant a counting rhyme. Stop them before they reach nine.
- K Duel for Rights — Two clans claim the same well; witnesses needed to prove water share. The duel is fought with blunt spears. First blood wins the well. Both bleed.
- A Kuva's Vengeance — The sky itself turns; hail, lightning, and a voice from the clouds. The voice names a sinner. Your name. The hail has teeth.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Grass Right — One season of grazing on a named meadow; herders pay you tribute. The right is a branded stick. Burn it to end the lease—or renew.
3. Oath-Bead — A single knot of horsehair; compels a Kon"reh master to arbitrate your dispute. The bead grows warm when the master speaks truth. Cold when he lies.
4. Water Share — Priority access to a well during drought; token from the Oasis Compact. The token is a polished pebble. Drop it in the well to claim your draw.
5. Steppe Ranger Favor — One dangerous tracking job resolved off-screen. The ranger marks your name on his tent pole. He never forgets a favor.
6. Vilikari Voucher — No-questions cargo space on three caravans; smuggle as you will. The voucher is a strip of oiled leather. The factor's scent guides the mules.
7. Census Waiver — Ecktorian patrol leaves you alone for one crossing; paper shield. The waiver is stamped with a bear. The bear's eyes follow you.
8. Khatun's Whistle — Summon a small warband once (Cap 3) for a single scene. The whistle is a hollow horse tooth. Blow it and the grass shivers.
9. Sky-Speaker's Omen — One weather forecast that cannot fail; plan your escape. The omen is a bone thrown into fire. Read the cracks—carefully.
10. Silver Stall Chit — One free remount exchange; never be horseless. The chit is a brass hoof. Present it and the stable master nods once.
- J Black Ledger Entry — A written promise from a rival, witnessed by three camp elders. The entry is written in ash on felt. Wash it and the vow dissolves.
- Q Dust Market Cut — A share of the auctioneer's commission for a season; wealth in sin. The cut is paid in mismatched coins. Spend them fast before they curse you.

- K Blood-Price Bond — A criminal clan owes you a life; they will kill once for you or die trying. The bond is a braid of enemy hair. Cut it to call the debt.
- A Seal of the Oasis Compact — Casting vote on any water right dispute. Once. The seal is a bronze well with a snake curled at the bottom. Turn it and the water booms.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are narrative permits (grazing rights, oaths, witnesses) that shift Position rather than demand a roll.
- If any A appears, echo grass and wind motifs—shifting alliances, debts that ride with the seasons, the sky as witness.
- The violet seed-heads of the steppe are a recurring omen: when they glow under moonlight, a spirit walks; when they shed, a caravan will be late.

Additional Features

- Kon"reh Arbitration: Disputes are settled on a board painted on hide. Winners gain seasonal rights. Losers pay in grass or labor.
- Grass Omens: The steppe flickers violet when rain is near; when the seed-heads droop at noon, a blood-feud approaches.
- Khatun's Braid: The chieftain's hair holds the memory of every oath she swore. Cutting a braid voids a promise.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Bitter Root: Daughters of the Cord run a "free soup" wagon near the Dust Market. They ask no coin—but they measure your shadow.
- The Threshold Compendium: Saikou Ira once tracked a ghoul to the Under-Arcades. He left a silver mirror in the wall. It still shows the ghoul's face.
- Malachai, the Chained Angel: A broken Kon"reh board at the Iron Well is said to compel truth. Players who touch it gain +1 die to resist lies—but mark 1 Obligation to Malachai.
- The Grey Wanderer's Grimoire: Midh Ahkaz psions are called "Wind-Readers." They sense lies by the tremor in grass. The Khatun employs two; they never speak to each other.
- The Ninth: In any Midh Ahkaz scene, the ninth horse table in the Violet Bazaar sells nothing but bad advice. Spend a Boon to reroll a failed negotiation—but the advice may haunt you.

Midh Ahkaz Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Hoofprint Pour: Pour a cup of water into the first hoofprint of a new horse. Ignore the first Horse Sickness penalty.
- Braid the Knot: Tie a strand of mane hair around your wrist. Cancel Counterfeit Coin or take –1 die on your next Charisma roll (your choice).
- Name to the Grass: Whisper a debtor's name into the wind at noon. Gain +1 Effect when collecting from them this scene, but mark Obligation to a Sky-Speaker.

Patronage & Power in Midh Ahkaz

In Midh Ahkaz, power flows through horseflesh, water rights, and the geometry of oaths. The Khatun rules by consensus, but the true authority rests with the Oasis Compact—a loose council of clan elders, Vilikari factors, and Steppe Rangers who interpret the Wind Law.

For the GM – Actionable Examples:

- A player who wins a Kon"reh match earns a Grass Right (Diamond). That right could be contested by a rival clan the very next session—forcing a rematch or a chase across the prairie.
- A Water Share token is stolen. The thief leaves a violet seed-head as a signature. Tracking them leads to a seasonal camp where debt is repaid not in coin but in stories.
- The Khatun's illness (Club) is not natural. A Vilikari factor (Heart) knows the poisoner's name but demands a Black Ledger Entry (J Diamond) in exchange—a dangerous witness the player must then protect.

These hooks turn the generator entries into immediate playable situations.

Thematic SB Spend Table (Midh Ahkaz)

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw attention from Steppe Rangers or Coin-Weigh clerks.
- Noise: The sound carries across the grass; a rival clan's scout overhears.
- Trace: Hoofprints, broken grass, or losing an arrow marks your path.
- Delay: A water ration takes longer; a horse tires without rest.
- Grass Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Border riders converge on your position; a horn sounds.
- Position Lost: You lose high ground/cover/the wind due to a grass fire or horse stampede.
- Foe Appears: A Vengeance broker, Ostrikari sell-sword, or clan champion arrives.
- Gear Trouble: A bridle breaks, bow string snaps, waterskin leaks.
- Oath Hearsay: A false rumor about your oath reaches the wrong ear.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional horsemen, blood-price hunters, or Dust Market thugs arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A horse goes lame, seal ring cracks, trade ledger burns.
- Major Twist: The situation changes – Khatun dies, well runs dry, duel interrupted by grass fire.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition (e.g., Blinded by dust, Parched).

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A hidden pit, poisoned water share, or false oath activates.
- Authority Arrival: Khatun’s warband, Ecktorian patrol, Sky-Speaker intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes – grass fire sweeps through, dust storm blinds, night falls without warning.
- Patron Omen: A bolide, strange animal, or wind that speaks your name appears.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn – the real forger was your ally; the water right was a trap.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Midh Ahkaz (Grass & Trade): Grass catches fire, horses spook at shadows, bargains settled with a knife on the table, violet seed-heads floating in the wind.
- Midh Ahkaz (Oath & Sky): Clouds spell forgotten names, wind carries false testimony, a duel’s outcome shifts with the sun, a violet dusk signals a spirit.
- Midh Ahkaz (Horse & Bow): An arrow splits in flight, a horse refuses a rider, a bowstring sings a dying clansman’s tune, a braid comes undone at the wrong moment.

Boss Seeds (three-phase foes)

- The Counting Circle (cursed scale bound to the Oasis) — Phases: Fair Auditing → Retroactive Drought → Naming of Debtors. Cracks: burn a counterfeit token in the Oasis well; settle a seven-clan water debt; let a Sky-Speaker rebless the scale.
- Grass Reaver (vengeful horse-lord, half-legend) — Phases: Hoof Drum → Ghost Herd → Blood-Price Ride. Cracks: confess a broken oath at his cairn; return a stolen foal; outrun him on a borrowed horse.

Chapter 10

Vilikari

Laurels & Longhouses. The Vilikari straddle the border like a drunkard on a fence—half empire, half steppe, all headache. Their foedus treaties aren’t just agreements—they’re a tragicomic mess, half carved in marble by emperors who forgot to pay the sculptors, half braided in string by chieftains who forgot which knot meant “peace.” I sold them a set of ledgers that could translate both—not because I believed in harmony, but because I knew the Foedus Stone’s keeper was drowning in debt to a Ykrul warlord over a disputed horse trade, and he’d sign anything to make the collector go away. They paid in land rights near the Foedus Stone—stamped with the Vilikari seal and guaranteed by the High Chieftain’s own oath. I haven’t used them yet. The land is probably cursed. Everything near the Stone is cursed. Which is perfect. Why? Because I can sell the “curse” as a feature: “Buy this land, and I’ll throw in a complimentary haunting—guaranteed to lower your property taxes by attracting only the bravest (or most foolish) buyers.”

[Thimble: Sir, the Viliani Foedus Accord Article 12 forbids—]

[Edgewalker: Foedus accord? Thimble, my anxious little braid, foedus accords are just leverage with a knot—especially when I’ve bought the Foedus Stone’s keeper’s silence with a ledger that doesn’t translate treaties...it forges them. Now, about those land rights...the High Chieftain’s daughter has a lovely secret. I wonder what her weight in horse pelts looks like?]

10.1 Vilikari — “Laurels & Longhouses”

Federate King (Elite): “We are the bridge between empire and wilderness, the marriage of law and custom. Our strength lies not in choosing one path but in walking both with equal surety.”

Hearth-Mother (Commoner): “The old ways and new laws both have their place at our table. Serve the right mead to the right guest, honor the proper customs, and you’ll find we’re better hosts than most kings.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The Vilikari are the agrarian peoples straddling the frontiers between Ecktoria and Kahfagia, tillers and treaty-makers who balance survival between empire, steppe, and sea. In a three-way war with the Ykrul and the Black Banners, they live by the cleverness of their diplomacy, the leverage of their markets, and the shifting weight of oaths. Their halls are longhouses raised over ruined forums; their laws carved on both oak and marble; their loyalties braided like the braids of their war-maidens' hair.

What you notice first: The smell of woodsmoke and old parchment. The way everyone speaks two languages at once—switching mid-sentence. The longhouse roofs that use broken imperial tiles as shingles.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never invoke only one law. The mallus (oak-ring) and the basilica (marble bench) must both be honored. Choose one, and the other will find you.

Regional Mood: Laurels and Longhouses

Here, the past is not a ruin—it is a landlord. The old Utaran forums still echo with the footsteps of legionaries, but now those columns hold longhouse roofs. The Vilikari do not choose between empire and tribe; they marry them, awkwardly, imperfectly, and with frequent arguments. Their kings wear both a laurel wreath and a wolf-tail cloak. Their courts meet twice: once under the oak for blood-price, once on the marble bench for statute. No verdict is final until both have spoken. In the marches, a man can be a barbarian in the morning and a citizen by noon—if he knows which door to knock on.

On the coast, Vilikari fishing villages double as smugglers' coves, running fugitives, forbidden goods, and whispered messages between the powers of the Amaranthine. Their boats are fast, their pilots know every reef and patrol route, and their loyalty is to the cargo's survival, not the flag it flies.

Starting Location: A longhouse quarter tucked into an old forum. Laurel garlands hang from broken columns. Smoke from a dozen hearths curls under cracked marble arches. A Hearth-Mother offers a cup of small beer and a piece of oatcake. "The Foedus Stone cracks," she says. "The steppe listens. Which law will you speak when the Ykrul envoy arrives—oak or marble?"

Prominent NPCs of the Vilikari

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Federate Aldric	King Rex-Dux of the Vilikari	Keep the two-law balance and the Foedus Stone intact	He has three thrones—oak, marble, and saddle. He uses whichever is not being argued over.

Hearth-Mother Vesna	Keeper of guest-right (commoner exemplar)	Protect her village from raiders and tax men alike	She has never lost a quar- rel; her voice is soft, her memory longer than the Foedus Stone.
Shield-Brother Rurik	Comitatus oath-bearer	Enforce the mallus code in the marches	His braids are his ledger; each knot is a debt paid—or owed.
March Notary Theodora	Utaran-trained legalist	Draft treaties that neither side can break	She writes in three scripts; her left hand writes Latin, her right writes runes.
Smuggler Captain Drago	Vilikari fisherman and trafficker	Run contraband and refugees past the Kahfagian patrols	He knows every reef and every lantern shift; the harbormasters cannot catch him.
Elder of Elders	Thing-council speaker	Preserve the old customs against imperial erosion	He speaks once a year; the rest of the time he listens—and remembers.

Names of the Vilikari

Vilikari names blend Utaran (Latin) roots with steppe influences: hard consonants, fluid vowels, and surnames that recall a ford, a bridge, or a longhouse.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Aldric	Vesna	de la Marche	the Two-Law
Rurik	Theodora	Longwood	the Fox
Drago	Gisela	Kalderash	Bridge-Born
Oswin	Mira	Oakenshield	the Unbuckled
Vidar	Svanhild	Tregard	Ash-Prow
Kael	Ragna	Foedus	the Grey

Spades — Places

2. Longhouse Quarter — Tucked into old forum; hearth-smoke under broken eaves. The forum's marble floor is worn smooth by dancing feet, not sandals.
3. Milefort XVII — Earth bank, stone gate; faded eagle over fresh knotwork. The eagle's stone wings were reglued after a lightning strike. It still leans left.
4. Stone Ford — Plank-palings and a customs table at knee-height; border as bureaucracy. The ford changes hands every season. The customs table never moves.
5. Villa Granary — Barracks with a tile roof; spear racks where olives once slept. The olive press still works. The pressers are now armorers.
6. Twin Court — Mallus ring beneath an oak, basilica bench across the lane. The oak and the bench are the same distance from the well. The well is neutral ground.
7. Blackwood Road — Milestones re-carved in runes and Latin both. The runes say "safe passage." The Latin says "toll payable twice."
8. Staple Market — Frontier where Ykrul horses meet Vilikari iron. The horse-traders and smiths speak a pidgin of gestures and grudges.
9. Burial Field — Ship-ridge mounds beside tiled mausolea, both garlanded. The mausolea have fresh offerings. The ancestors are not picky.
10. Repaired Bridge — An arch of stone, a Vilikari trestle stitched on; past and present joined. The trestle creaks in Vilikari, the stone groans in Utaran. They argue at midnight.
- J Hill Amphitheater — A lord's hall raised in an old arena's curve; power in architecture. The lord's throne is a gladiator's chair. He does not know who last sat in it.
- Q New Raivon — March capital; grid-streets colliding with wandering lanes. The grid was laid by a surveyor who never came back. The lanes are older.
- K Dux's Palace — Purple awnings, wolf-hides, law tablets on the wall. The tablets list every treaty broken. The wolf-hides are from the treaty-breakers.
- A Foedus Stone — At a crossroads; every treaty carved, every hand weighed. The stone has grown. Each new treaty adds a finger of granite.

(Federate/Mixed Court/Diaspora) Hearth-Mother with guest-cup and wergild chest key; Shield-Brother with oaths braided into hair.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Hearth-Mother — Guest-cup and wergild chest key; hospitality as power. She has never lost a quarrel. Her voice is soft, her memory longer than the Foedus Stone.
3. Shield-Brother — Comitatus oaths braided into hair; loyalty as bond. His braids are his ledger. Each knot is a debt paid—or owed.
4. March Notary — Utaran-trained; writes three scripts without blinking. His left hand writes Latin, his right writes runes. He signs with his foot.
5. Horse-Reeve — Rations pasture between plows and warbands. He measures grass in fistfuls. The Ykrul respect his arithmetic.
6. Ykrul Envoy — Riding under safe-conduct; speaks debts in proverbs. He never carries a weapon. His tongue is sharp enough.

7. Old Legionary — Drill-master for Vilikari levies; Utar in muscle memory. He still marks time in paces. The recruits call him “Grandfather Eagle.”
8. Ecktorial Factor — Vilikari blood, Ecktorial coin; flows where the ledger points. His coat has two collars—one for each loyalty. He wears whichever is warmer.
9. Kahfagian Pilot — Lantern-law chit and clan tattoo; sea-law on land. He navigates by stars and tariffs. Both change with the season.
10. Marcher-Lord — Iron-nail crown, Vilikari law in pocket; a frontier king. His crown was a plowshare. He reversed the curse.
- J War-Maiden — Oath-braid names the dead and the owed; vengeance as memory. Her braid is longer than her sword. Both have drawn blood.
- Q Queen of Marches — Consort-regent; smiles like precedent. She married the Federate King for peace. She kept the kingdom for herself.
- K Federate King — Rex-Dux sworn to forms, sung by his own. He has three thrones—oak, marble, and saddle. He uses whichever is not being argued over.
- A Elder of Elders — Thing-council speaker; a nod can unmake a clan. He speaks once a year. The rest of the time, he listens—and remembers.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Annona Late — Grain stipend misses the comitatus; tempers quicken like flint. The granary is full. The keys are in the wrong vault. Someone is waiting for the price to rise.
3. Law Tangle — Mallus verdict vs. basilica writ—whose seal bites? The oak judge and the marble judge are cousins. They send each other holiday cards.
4. Raid Rumor — A Ykrul boyar; levies panic the plowlands. The boyar is a ghost—or a tax collector. The farmers don’t wait to find out.
5. Bridge Levy — Doubled for road-works; caravans balk, fists rise. The road-works are a ditch. The ditch fills every spring.
6. Succession Feud — Wolf-brother claim vs. purple-charter heir. The wolf-brother has a better sword. The purple-charter has a better notary.
7. Foedus Recall — A prefecture resettlement is “requested”; homes bristle. The prefecture’s map is forty years old. It shows a village that drowned.
8. Coin Talk — Debasement; pay demanded in salt, hides, or hostages. The salt is from a disputed pan. The hides are from cattle that were never born.
9. Grave Offense — A burial field disturbed; omens ride with the news. The ancestors are angry. They have a list. Your name may be on it.
10. Port Clash — Lantern-law vs. street-law; confiscations bloom. The lanterns were moved last night. The old safe channel is now a reef.
- J Warband Flip — Colors change mid-pay; hostage protocol snaps shut. The hostages are eating well. Their captors are not.
- Q Restoration Preacher — Stirs crowds against the “barbarian king in purple.” The preacher’s license was signed by a dead abbot. The seal is still warm.

K General Levy — The march is closed; markets freeze into spears. The levy notice is posted in three languages. None of them are local.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Foedus Seal — Settlement and stipends confirmed for a season. The seal is a bronze wolf's head. It warms when the treaty holds—and cools when it doesn't.
 3. Mallus Right — Hold court under the oak and be obeyed. The oak is older than the kingdom. Its roots have seen more verdicts than the throne.
 4. Stipend Arrears — Paid in salt and grain; portable, persuasive. The salt is grey. The grain is from last harvest. Both are worth more than coin.
 5. Utaran Patent — Citizenship-style privilege; doors open, bows deepen. The patent is a worn scrap of vellum. It has been folded and refolded for a century.
 6. Stall-Right — Customs favor on a frontier market line. The stall is a painted plank. Plant it, and the tax man will pretend not to see you.
 7. Hostage Treaty — Exchange fosters; grudges trade for leverage. The hostages are children. Their parents are patient.
 8. Remount Allotment — Fresh horses from royal paddocks, no questions. The horses are from the king's own herd. They know the roads better than you.
 9. Wergild Table — Recognized by both codes; vengeance priced and paid. The table is a slate slab. The prices are carved deep—and often recarved.
 10. Bridge Farm — Imperial for a season; funds and friends accrue. The bridge toll is a copper a head. The bridge keeper is your new best friend.
- J Purple Warrant — Wear the stripe; officials defer on sight. The stripe is a sash. It was a curtain in a past life.
- Q Queen's Audience — Private; a whisper becomes policy. The audience is held in a garden. The flowers are listening.
- K Dux Commission — Command a mixed unit with pay authority. The commission is a baton. It doubles as a mace in a pinch.
- A Great Law Day — Proclaim a new concord; one temporary exception to old law. The proclamation is made at noon. By sunset, everyone will have an opinion.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (charters/rights/escorts) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo law and bond motifs—oaths that bind, stones that witness, treaties that remember every hand.

Additional Features

- Two-Law Balance: Whenever a jurisdictional conflict arises (mallus vs. basilica, oak vs. marble), players may step Position up by citing the Foedus Stone or an older precedent—but every use adds a tick to a Two-Law [4] clock. When it fills, one side demands exclusive authority.
- Frontier Diplomacy: If a Heart card involves a foreign envoy, a federate, or a mixed-blood courtier, treat the first Diamond played in the scene as doubled leverage. Once per session, a deal struck reverberates—advance or start a Border Tension front.
- March Markets: At any Staple Market, Ford, or Bridge, Diamonds tied to rights or escorts may be cashed as currency in lieu of coin, one-for-one. Doing so creates a Ledger Debt that the GM may call in later through factions or raiders.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Smugglers’ Covenant (The Sealed Gate): Vilikari pilots who run the Kahfagian coast swear by a secret oath to the Unlatched Lock—a threshold that never fully closes. They leave a copper nail at every hidden cove. A captain who breaks the covenant finds that their boat will not cross the tide line; the sea simply refuses to carry them. The Kahfagian Admiralty has tried to bribe the covenant’s keeper; he accepted the coin and sank the next morning in calm water.
- Saint Theodora of the Dual Writ (The Witness): A march notary who uncovered a Fenwood spy in the Federate King’s court. She forced the spy to sign a confession under both oak and marble, then burned the oak copy and kept the marble one. The spy vanished, but his signature appears on every broken treaty in Vilikari history. Her quill is kept in the Dux’s Palace; it writes in lemon juice, and the truth it records cannot be erased by fire or water.
- The Host of the Two Ledgers (The Longhouse Healers): A hospice near the Foedus Stone is run by grey-robed healers who ask no payment. They treat wounded raiders from both sides of the steppe, and the Ykrul and Ecktorian captains have agreed to a truce around its doors. The Federate King tolerates them because they also hold the rite of the Unbuckled Oath—a ceremony where a knight may renounce a blood-debt without losing honour, by placing their sword on the stone and speaking a single true regret.
- The Ostrihari Cousins (The Savage Heart): The eastern Vilikari, called Ostrihari by lowlanders, are no more savage than any frontier people. Their reputation comes from the bear cults of the upper Wolf Road, where initiates wear cured skins and speak in growls. The Ostrihari do not raid Vilikari villages; they trade furs for iron and send their young to serve as mercenaries in the Black Banners. A Vilikari proverb says: “The Ostrihari sharpen their teeth on stone, not on kin.”
- The Ninth: In any Vilikari scene, the ninth witness called to a mallus court is always a ghost. The wise stop at eight and settle out of court. Those who call a ninth witness find that the ghost speaks the truth—but the truth is always the worst possible version, and the living witnesses remember it as their own.

Vilikari Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Stone: Crumble a crust at the base of the Foedus Stone. Ignore the first Law Tangle penalty.

- Knot the Braid: Tie a single knot in a horse's tail. Cancel Annona Late or take -1 die on your next supply roll (your choice).
- Name to the Oak: Whisper a dead enemy's name into the hollow of the mallus oak. Gain +1 Effect when collecting werigild from their kin this scene, but mark Obligation to the Elder of Elders.

Patronage & Power

In Vilikari society, power flows through the careful balance of multiple legal traditions, the management of frontier diplomacy, and the maintenance of complex oaths and treaties. The Federate King maintains authority through a combination of imperial forms and traditional customs, while local leaders wield influence through their knowledge of both Utaran law and tribal custom. The true power lies with those who can navigate this complex legal and diplomatic landscape while maintaining the loyalty of their people and the respect of their neighbors.

For the GM: Patronage in Vilikari society revolves around legal documents, diplomatic relationships, and the ability to command respect from institutions that operate under multiple legal systems. Rewards often take the form of treaties, charters, and official positions that can be leveraged into greater influence. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (seals, writs, treaties) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival legal systems issue conflicting authorities, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the courts, markets, and frontier posts as arenas for social contests, where knowledge of law and custom determines success.

In Vilikari society, your word is your bond, and your bond determines whether you rule or are ruled.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from march officials or tribal elders.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby levy guards or market patrols.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or treaty keepers.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable legal window.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Horse-Reeve or March Notary becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to legal challenge or border closure.
- Foe Appears: A rival faction or warband arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional shield-brothers, levy forces, or foreign troops arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - treaty voided/levy called/border dispute erupts.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Federate King, Queen of Marches, or Elder of Elders intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - raid hits/levy called/treaty breaks.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Vilikari (Two Laws): Legal documents contradict each other, courts issue conflicting rulings, oaths bind to different authorities.
- Vilikari (Frontier Diplomacy): Treaties expire without warning, foreign envoys demand additional concessions, mixed-blood courtiers shift allegiances.
- Vilikari (Border Tensions): Frontier posts close without notice, markets shift locations, safe-conducts are revoked mid-journey.

Boss Seeds (three-phase foes)

- The March Notary (quills like daggers) — Phases: Citation Tangle → Seal Swap → Precedent Trap. Cracks: produce a Foedus Seal to quiet him; a Queen’s Audience overrules his filing.
- Ykrul Storm-Rider (wolf-cloak, bone whistle) — Phases: Raid Cry → Herd Stampede → Blood Price. Cracks: a Wergild Table settles the feud without combat; a Hostage Treaty buys a season’s peace.
- The Prefect’s Auditor (Ecktorial ink on his fingers) — Phases: Ledger Seizure → Tax Levy → Fort Closure. Cracks: an Utaran Patent grants immunity; a Mallus Right transfers jurisdiction to the oak.
- The Direwood Whisperer (moss in her hair) — Phases: Name Theft → Bell Failure → Breath Claim. Cracks: a Stipend Arrears paid in blessed salt; a Purple Warrant invokes imperial ward-law.

Legendary Sites & Trials

- Foedus Stone Oath — Place your hand on the stone and speak a treaty term aloud. On success, the stone warms; gain +1 Position on all negotiations this scene. On a miss, a crack appears—start a Law Tangle clock.

- Twin Court Ordeal — Argue the same case before oak and marble. Win both to secure a Great Law Day. Win one and lose the other to spawn Law Tangle. Lose both—the ancestors laugh, and you owe a feast.
- Burial Field Vigil — Spend a night among the ship-ridge mounds. Dawn reveals a memory of a broken treaty. Learn a secret weakness of a rival faction—or gain a haunting.

Extensions (Plug-in)

- Two-Law Dial (Oak ↔ Marble): Track which legal tradition holds sway.
 - Oak High: +1 Position when invoking mallus, blood-price, or tribal custom; first basilica petition starts one step worse.
 - Marble High: +1 Effect when citing charters, patents, or Utaran precedent; first mallus oath starts one step worse.
 - Center the dial by offering a wergild recognized by both sides or hosting a joint moot.
- Treaty-Feast Procedure (fast diplomacy):
 1. Set the Table: Name 2–3 terms (what both sides want) and 1 taboo (off-limits).
 2. First Cup (Position): Roll a social test; success grants +1 die to bargain, failure grants the host 1 SB.
 3. Bread & Salt (Offer): Put one leverage on the table (Diamond or oath-promise). Host matches with an obligation (escort, market access, or hostage).
 4. Smoke (Complication): The GM reveals a pressure tied to Old Grudges or Two Laws. Resolve it or accept a Rider Clause.
 5. Knot the Braid: On success, create a Feast-Bond [3] clock that protects both parties from betrayal in that matter while it has segments; on breach, the breaker immediately takes 1–2 SB and the clock flips to Blood-Owed [3].
- Frontier Market (quick trading):
 - At any Staple Market or Stone Ford, players may convert a held $\Diamond$ into a Market Edge (+1 die to all buy/sell rolls).
 - Each conversion ticks a Market Knives [4] clock for that locale. When it fills, a rival factor challenges your right to trade—face a duel, a bribe demand, or a confiscation.
- Start-of-Scene Omens (1d6):
 1. Laurel Wilt: first legal action gains +1d; first boast draws Law Tangle.
 2. Smoke on the Steppe: Raid Rumor advances once; shortcuts open.
 3. Twin Bells: both courts are in session; pick a side or start Law Tangle.
 4. Queen's Dove: a message arrives; +1d on the next Queen's Audience.
 5. Grey Salt: Stipend Arrears counts double value today; smugglers' ears open.
 6. Old Eagle: an Utaran relic surfaces; Utaran Patent use is free this scene.
- Plug-in SB Conversions (Vilikari Flavor):
 - 1 SB → Seal Crack: a writ loses half its value until re-witnessed.
 - 2 SB → Citation War: increase DV by 1 unless you produce a precedent (spend a $\Diamond$ or recall a past ruling).
 - 3+ SB → Crown Fracture: a treaty splits; halve a consequence by accepting a rival's seal on your paper (start Two-Law clock).

- Reputation Echoes:

- Court-Favored: once/session, downgrade Law Tangle to a minor delay; the next document you present is scrutinized (+1 DV).
- Raid-Tested: +1 Position when evading Ykrul or Black Banners; supply lines run 1 segment longer.
- Neutral Broker: +1d with both oak and marble in a treaty scene; any betrayal earns Blood-Owed [2] from both sides.

- Cross-Region Hooks (quick integration):

- Kahfagia (Lantern-Law): A Foedus Seal may stand in for a Safe-Conduct along a beaconsed lane once. Doing so starts Port Clash [2] in the next harbor touched.
- Ecktoria (Imperial Remnants): An Utaran Patent counts as either Archive Hour (scholars open doors) or Icon License (display symbols) in Ecktorial sites—choose once per session.
- Aelerian Mountains (Pass & Toll): A Pass-Ring (from the Aeler expansion) grants priority at dwarf switchbacks; cashing it to bypass inspection spawns Ledger Notice [3].
- Direwood (Breath & Bells): Spending Stipend Arrears for levee labor converts one Direwood Clubs draw into a Ward-Salt Diamond for a scene, then begins Names Disputed [3] with bell-wardens.

Chapter 11

Black Banners

Condotta & Crowns. Mercenary companies that sell steel to the highest bidder—and oh, how they love a good spreadsheet. The Banner-Captains don’t just want payment; they want proof they’re getting their money’s worth, which is why they pay in safe-conducts that are good until the next battle...and utterly worthless after, once the smoke clears and the ledgers need balancing. I’ve sold them everything: from siege engines that “misfire” on command to false muster rolls that inflate their numbers by 30%. The Captains pay in safe-conducts stamped with their clan seal and guaranteed by the battlefield chaplain who definitely wasn’t bribed with loot from the last sack. I keep a stack of them as kindling—not because they burn well (though they do), but because I can sell the idea of a safe-conduct to the next desperate captain: “Pay me upfront, and I’ll give you a document that says you won’t be ambushed...by the very men I’m about to ambush you with.” Beautiful.

[Thimble: Sir, Article 8 of the Black Banner Mercenary Code prohibits—]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 4 of the Treasurer’s Ledger—]

11.1 Black Banners — “Condotta & Crowns”

Banner-Captain (Elite): “A contract is only as good as the next payday, and a grudge is only as sharp as the sword backing it. In this game, we sell steel by the season and vendettas by the year.”

Veteran Sergeant (Commoner): “I’ve seen three captains rise and fall in the time it takes to grow a beard, but the mud stays the same and the pay comes when it pleases. Best keep your own counsel and your blade sharp. The camp sings? You live. They stop singing? Even the best charter bleeds.”

Condotta & Crowns

Ecktorian treasuries bankroll a perpetual border-war they claim to be containing. In truth, the gold keeps the fire burning. The Black Banners are mercenary leagues—ex-Utaran legionaries, second-sons, debt-dodgers, and exiles—who sell steel to the highest bidder, today’s ally becoming tomorrow’s quarry. Between them move the Ykrul steppe-clans (swift, pragmatic, oath-canny) and the Vilikari hill tribes (crafty, patient, and proud). Ecktorian ministers call it “pressure management.” The companies call it a season.

What you notice first: The smell of wet wool and old blood. The way every tent has a ledger pinned to its flap. The silence when the paychest is opened—and the murmur when it’s light.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never break a Bell Dawn. Three bells at sunrise means bury the dead, trade prisoners, fix the wells, no ambushes. Violating it is how legends end badly—and how captains end hanging.

Regional Mood: The Theater of Banners

Here, war is a marketplace. The Black Banners are not a single army but a squabbling league of freelance violence, bound by camp law, pay customs, and the shared knowledge that tomorrow’s enemy might be today’s employer. The real battles are fought in counting-tents over clauses and riders; the clash outside is just the audit. Loyalty is a coin that fluctuates with the market, and a captain’s true skill lies in reading the political winds that blow across contested borders. Between the rigid honor codes of Ecktorian nobility and the fluid pragmatism of steppe clans and hill tribes, mercenaries navigate a dangerous middle ground where survival depends on knowing when to keep an oath and when to break one—always at dawn, with a witness, and with surety paid.

Starting Location: A war-camp crossroads where two banners snap in the same wind, their sigils bleeding into one another. A Condotta broker with ink-stained fingers lays two contracts on a barrel—one from Ecktoria, one from Ykrul. “Pick a war. Pick a grave. The bell tolls at noon.”

Prominent NPCs of the Black Banners

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Castellan Thorne	Banner-Captain of the Iron Hand	Win a permanent contract for his company	He has never lost a siege, but he has lost three paychests to bad debt.
Old Sorka	Veteran Sergeant (commoner exemplar)	Keep her squad alive until spring	She counts scars like coins; her left ear is a nub from a mutineer’s apology.

Lys	Condotta Broker	Flip contracts for maximum margin	Her ink has a metallic smell. She says it’s from the silver in the seals.
Chaghan	Ykrul Clan Emissary	Test the Black Banners’ honour before the next migration	He speaks only in proverbs and pays in copper from a cursed mine.
Volund	Quartermaster-Provost	Stockpile leverage on every officer in the camp	His bribe book is thicker than his roster; he calls it “risk assessment.”
The Bannerless One	Mysterious warlord	Unite the scattered companies under a single will	She has no flag. Men follow her because she asked.

Names of the Black Banners

Names here are a polyglot stew – Acasian grit, Ecktorian formality, Ykrul harshness, Vilkari cadence, and the nicknames that arise from a season in the mud. Surnames may be patronymic, a place of origin, or a battlefield epithet.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Castellan	Sorka	Thornson	the Iron
Chaghan	Lys	Volund	the Red-Tally
Orthen	Maeva	Kaeldottir	Bell-Breaker
Rurik	Veleda	dei Conti	the Unpaid
Bromm	Gisela	Halvkirk	White-Ribbon
Zelgur	Thorn	Flint	Ash-Foot

(Camps/Battlefields/Fortresses/War-roads) Burned village turned field-hospital; flies, tinctures, and fever-prayers. Frozen ford with last month’s dead held under glass; standards trapped in the ice.

Spades — Places

2. Burned Village — Field-hospital; flies, tinctures, fever-prayers. The flies are fat. They’ve eaten well this season.
3. Frozen Ford — Last month’s dead held under glass; standards trapped in the ice. The ice is clear—clear enough to read the terror on their faces.

4. Latrine Row — At dusk; mud, shame, whispered mutiny, a sergeant who hears too well. The sergeant's ears are scarred. He listened to a mutiny once and survived.
5. Crater Pasture — From an alchemical barrage; in spring, glass flowers sprout like guilt. The flowers cut. They remember the hands that sowed them.
6. Supply Road — Twelve broken wagons; oxen nose the wreckage for salt. The salt is from a burned caravan. The oxen are from the same village.
7. Half-Raised Siege Tower — In an abandoned camp; every rung creaks with grudges. The tower was paid for twice. It still leans toward the richer patron.
8. Salt-Cured Cache — Behind the surgeon's tent; the wrong kind of maggots move. The maggots have a pattern. It spells a name—yours, or the surgeon's.
9. Command Tent — Maps show borders that diplomacy has already erased. The maps were drawn by a clerk who died last winter. He was still updating them.
10. Watch-Tower — Stacked from skulls and slate; the crows know the countersign. The crows are paid in eyes. They are very well paid.
- J Ancient March-Keep — Held by a skeleton garrison of veterans; they remember when the banners were gold. The veterans are dead. They just haven't noticed yet.
- Q The Bone Fields — Where Ykrul elders parley among cairns and reckon oaths with the dead. The dead vote. Their votes are always for war.
- K Marcher's Fortress — Three walls, two sieges' scars, one gate that opens inward only. The gate opens inward so the dead can leave. The living are not invited.
- A The Singing Wastes — Fallen weapons hum with the voices of their last wielders on a wind that tastes of iron. The hum is a petition. The dead want their names back.

(Captains/Cadets/Clans/Tribes) Young cadet with a father's sword and a mother's debt; veteran sergeant who counts scars like coins—and spends them on whiskey and mercy.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Young Cadet — Father's sword, mother's debt, and a hunger to prove himself. The sword is old. The debt is older. Both weigh the same.
3. Veteran Sergeant — Counts scars like coins—spends them on whiskey and mercy. His left ear is gone. He says a mutineer took it. He says the mutineer apologized.
4. Ecktorian Banner-Captain — Griffon standard, a ledger of noble grudges, and a smile like a winter. The griffon's eyes are rubies. They were looted from a temple. The god still watches.
5. Condotta Broker — Changes colors when the wind turns, but always lands on his feet. His feet are calloused from landing. He has never broken an ankle.
6. Ykrul Clan Emissary — Speaks in riddled proverbs and pays in copper and promises. The copper is from a cursed mine. The promises are from a cursed tongue.
7. Vilikari War-Chief's Second Son — Honor burns brighter than his father's patience. His father's patience is measured in seasons. This is the last season.
8. Surgeon of the Red Ledger — Treats friend and foe alike; her ledger balances only in blood. Her ledger is bound in human skin. The skin was a gift from a patient who lived.
9. Quartermaster — Knows where every coin went and every man will fall. His bribe book is thicker than his roster. He calls it "risk assessment."

10. Tribune’s Aide-de-Camp — Sealed orders that contradict the general’s intent. The general’s intent was to retire. The seals say otherwise.
- J The Black Colonel — Legendary commander not seen in the line for months, yet his banner still rides. The banner rides alone. The horse is riderless. The men follow anyway.
- Q Ykrul Clan-Mother — Weaves war-braids from the hair of oath-breakers. Each braid has a name. The names are still attached.
- K Vilikari High Chief — Trades mercenaries like game pieces and never tips the board. The board is an old treaty map. The pieces are real.
- A The Bannerless One — Commands loyalty without rank or flag; men follow because they want to. They follow into the Singing Wastes. They follow into the ice. They follow because she asked.

(Betrayals/Weather/Politics/War) Payday delayed; supplies die before coin arrives. False orders: your target is now your ally—on paper. Blizzard pins two rival companies in the same cloister; vows and knives both come out.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Payday Delayed — Supplies die before coin arrives. The coin was eaten by interest. The interest has teeth.
3. False Orders — Your target is now your ally—on paper. The paper is from a dead notary. The signature is warm.
4. Blizzard Pins — Two rival companies, one cloister; vows and knives both come out. The cloister’s abbot is counting. He will sell the winner’s story.
5. Ykrul Counter-Offer — Better terms than Ecktoria; your contract becomes a liability. The terms are written in salt. They will dissolve in rain—or blood.
6. Condotta Flip — Unit switches colors mid-battle; your “relief” hits your flank. The new colors are the same as the old colors. The captain just wanted a raise.
7. Camp-Fever — Blooms in the surgeon’s tent; the counting-house for the dead. The fever has a face. It is the face of a soldier you left behind.
8. Vilikari Raid — Cuts your supply road; winter moves the schedule. The raiders took the salt and left a recipe. The recipe calls for tears.
9. Honor Code Collision — Ecktorian ideals vs. mercenary pragmatism; the camp splits by doctrine. The doctrine is written on a napkin. The napkin is from a feast that ended badly.
10. Tribune Captured — The aide must choose: the rescue or the war. The war is a ledger. The rescue is a name. Names are heavier than ledgers.
- J Black Colonel’s Banner — Appears on the wrong field; confusion is a weapon. The banner is frayed. It has seen too many wrong fields.
- Q Blood-Feast — Clan-Mother calls it; all contracts suspended until dawn’s judgment. The judgment is a feast. The feast is a trial. The trial is a knife.
- K High Chief’s Game — Plays companies against each other; “winner” takes obligations, not spoils. The obligations are written in invisible ink. You will see them when it is too late.
- A The Singing Wastes Awaken — Every fallen blade rises to seek its last hand. The blades remember the grip. They do not remember mercy.

(Contracts/Claims/Dispensations) Emergency requisition—strip a fallen company for what you need (and their ghosts for what they’re owed). Dual contract—serve two masters with goals that cannot both be met.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Emergency Requisition — Strip a fallen company; their ghosts watch. The ghosts will remember. They will collect.
3. Dual Contract — Serve two masters whose goals cannot both be met. The masters are both paying. The interest is your reputation.
4. Honor Dispensation — Your acts are justified regardless of code (for now). The dispensation is a bell. Ring it, and the tribunal looks away—once.
5. Condotta Rider’s Pass — Cross any camp perimeter unchallenged. The pass is a feather. The feather is from a messenger who arrived too late.
6. Ykrul Safe-Conduct Token — Pass a named clan’s lands unmolested (until the moon changes). The token is a horse’s tooth. The horse was a gift from a Khagan. The Khagan is dead.
7. Vilikari War-Mark — Their scouts guide you through hostile hills—and remember the favor. The favor will be called at dawn. The location will be a ridge. The odds will be even.
8. Surgeon’s Debt-Note — Medical care when no coin remains; the interest is names. The names are of people who owe the surgeon. You are now one of them.
9. Tribune’s Cipher Ring — Decode orders that do not exist yet. The ring is warm. The future is cold.
10. Banner-Captain’s Seal — Commandeer resources from junior companies (and their resentment). The seal is a skull. The jaw moves when you press it.
- J Field Promotion Warrant — Assume command of a shattered unit, inherit its clocks. The clocks are ticking. The unit is watching.
- Q Clan-Mother’s War-Braids — Her chosen fight beside you this battle, then judge you after. The judgment is a song. The song will be sung at your funeral.
- K High Chief’s Trading Charter — Buy or sell anything in any camp, no questions asked aloud. The questions are asked in silence. The answers are paid in silence.
- A The Bannerless Word — Loyalty that outruns rank, law, and coin. The word is a whisper. The whisper is a promise. The promise is a grave.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (contracts/claims/dispensations) that shift position rather than call for a roll.
- If any Ace appears, echo war and winter motifs—ice that keeps the dead, weapons that remember, loyalty that needs no banner.

The Fractured League: Banner Alignments

The Black Banners are not a single army but a squabbling market of violence. Three loose alignments shape the loyalties of any war-camp. Most companies shift between these poles depending on the season, the paychest, and the weather.

- Condotta Brokers (The Paper Men) – They own the contracts, not the swords. They flip companies like playing cards and measure victory in percentages. Most captains hate them, but everyone pays them. Clocks: BROKER’S GRIP [4], DOUBLE CHARTER [6].
- Company Loyalists (The Old Banners) – Veterans who remember when a banner meant a blood-oath, not a season’s wage. They grumble, they desert, they are sometimes bought – but they fight like demons when the paychest is full. Clocks: VETERAN WRATH [4], OATH REMEMBERS [6].
- Free Companies (The Tide) – Newly raised, culturally mixed, and chronically unpaid. They are as likely to mutiny as to charge, and their loyalty can be bought with a hot meal and a day’s rest. Clocks: MUTINY WHISPER [4], PAYDAY FEVER [6].

Superimposed on these are the Ykrul steppe-clans (honour-bound, quick to take insult) and the Vilikari hill tribes (pragmatic, patient, and skilled at ambush). A wise captain learns to read all three.

Additional Features

- Payday & Supply Clocks: Track two pressures common to the Black Banners: Payday [4] and Supply [4]. When Payday fills, morale falters and the Keeper may peel away a squad or impose a desertion SB. When Supply fills, all risky maneuvers begin one step worse Position until the players secure fresh provisions or bargain a Diamond.
- Allegiances in Flux: At the start of a scene, roll 1d6 to see if loyalties shift:
 1. Condotta broker flips colors mid-parley.
 2. Ykrul emissary offers better terms; accept and mark Obligation, or refuse and tick Payday.
 3. Vilikari scouts reveal a shortcut; gain +1 Effect but risk SB from hostile terrain.
 4. Ecktorian clerk “corrects” your orders; obey for +1 Position, defy and gain a Diamond but earn a Black Mark.
 5. Rival captain spreads falsified orders; unless revealed, counters are harder this scene.
 6. The Bannerless One’s messengers arrive; accept their word to clear 1 Payday, but the Keeper gains 1 SB.
- Honor vs. Pragmatism Dial: Place a two-step dial between Honor and Pragmatism.
 - Honor: +1 Position in parley or oathbound actions; logistics costs rise faster.
 - Pragmatism: +1 Effect in ambushes or sabotage; parley begins one step worse Position.

Mercenary Realpolitik

In the world of the Black Banners, loyalty is a currency that fluctuates with the market. A man's worth is measured not in noble blood or ancestral holdings, but in the sharpness of his blade and the reliability of his word. The condotta system creates a web of shifting allegiances where today's enemy may become tomorrow's employer, and a captain's true skill lies not in strategy alone but in reading the political winds that blow across contested borders. Between the rigid honor codes of Ecktorian nobility and the fluid pragmatism of steppe clans and hill tribes, mercenaries navigate a dangerous middle ground where survival depends on knowing when to keep an oath and when to break one.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Sealed Gate: Deserters who flee a losing battle sometimes cross into the Singing Wastes at night. They return at dawn with their mouths sewn shut and a ward-sigil branded on their palms. The Bannerless One pays well for such men — they cannot speak of what they saw, and they never run again.
- Maelstraeus, the Infernal Bargainer: A black ledger circulates among the condotta brokers, its pages written in dried blood. A captain who signs it never misses a payday — but the ledger's interest is collected in souls, not silver. The Bannerless One has refused to touch it. Twice.
- The Traveler: Before every major march, a White-Ribbon courier from the Aeler tunnels appears at the edge of camp, plants a brass way-stone, and vanishes by dawn. Companies who follow the stone's direction find safe passage through the worst terrain. Those who ignore it are never seen again.
- Xhak'Thul, the Thunder-Speaker: A drummer walks the camp on the night before a battle, beating a rhythm that has no source. Veterans do not look for the drummer; they sleep with their hands over their ears. When the drum stops, the battle begins — and one side will be annihilated by a storm that came from nowhere.
- The Ninth: In any war-camp, the ninth tent pitched in a row will collapse before dawn. The wise pitch eight and leave a space. Those who ignore this find that the ground beneath the ninth tent is always damp — and the footprints leading out of it never match any boot in the company.

Black Banner Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Paychest: Crumble a crust into an empty chest. Ignore the first Payday Delayed penalty.
- Knot the Colors: Tie a single knot in a banner's cord. Cancel Condotta Flip or take -1 die on your next morale check (your choice).
- Name to the Wastes: Whisper a dead captain's name into the wind. Gain +1 Effect when rallying their former unit this scene, but mark Obligation to the Bannerless One.

Boss Archetypes in the Black Banners

Contract & Command (Human Adversaries)

- Banner-Captain (Fixer General) — Wins by paperwork and parade-ground precision. Break their chain-of-command clock [6] by flipping lieutenants, forging orders, or seizing the paychest.
- Condotta Broker (Color-Flipper) — Turns loyalties like cards. Expose a dual contract or force public arbitration under neutral bells to collapse their leverage track.
- Quartermaster-Provost (Logistics Tyrant) — Starves you with ledgers. Complete the Three Cuts: road, ration, rumor—any two stalls them; all three topple their supply engine.

Tribe & Tactic (Field Sovereigns)

- Ykrul Raid-Mother (Oath-Weaver) — Fights with remounts and safe-hostages. Honor horse-rites to gain truce windows; break one braid in parley to end a phase.
- Vilikari Hill-Fox (Ambush Architect) — Owns ridgelines and feint paths. Clear Three High Stones (overwatch, supply cache, signal cairn) to force even ground.

Faith & Fear (Camp Powers)

- Field Chaplain-Inquisitor (Morale Engine) — Smelts guilt into zeal. Win by sanctifying plague-ground or redeeming prisoners; each rite drops their Zeal track [0–3].
- Surgeon of the Red Ledger (Mercy’s Price) — Keeps units marching past sense. Expose graft or pay blood-debts; on three reconciled names the operating tent stands down.

The Unquiet Field (Supernatural Front)

- The Singing Wastes (Weapon-Host) — The battlefield itself retaliates. Complete the Silencing Acts: oil the choir (funeral honors), bury the standards, ring the wind-break bell—each lowers its Tier for one exchange.
- Black Colonel’s Banner (Legend in Motion) — A rumor that commands. Prove the lie or become the truth: either unmask the courier network (three ciphers cracked) or fly a counter-sigil to pull rank on the myth.

Faction Entanglements

- Condotta Brokers' Syndicate: Register your charter and bank a Broker’s Favor – spend to reduce one parley DV inside a war-camp. Skipping registration flags your unit with Unauthorized Colors: the first checkpoint scene gains a free “False Orders” SB.
- Camp Quartermasters: Accept ration-scale audits to cancel the first Supply tick this leg; refuse and mark a 4-segment Short Rations clock that worsens Position on marches.
- Field Chaplains & Leech-Circles: Donate time or tithe to clear 1 segment from Camp-Fever; if ignored, the Keeper may convert the first 1 SB of a scene into “Disease/Death.”
- Steppe Envoys: Honor horse-rites (salt, water, shade) to gain Remount Rights – once, treat a retreat as movement with +1 Effect. Break rites and add a Soured Oath tag that raises parley DV with riders until cleansed.
- Hill Truce-Holders: Enter a stones-circle under their witness to bank a Blood-Truce – spend to negate one ambush on hill roads. Violating the circle spawns a 4-segment Guest Right Forfeit clock.

Field Procedures (Use at the Table)

- Colors & Countersigns: Declaring correct countersigns cancels the first “False Orders” SB each night; wrong signs worsen Position on first contact.
- Payline Drill: If a scene depicts orderly pay, clear 1 Payday. If pay is “creative,” clear it but mark Black Mark – future officers begin one step colder in parley.
- Scavenge Doctrine: After battles, you may gain 1 temporary Gear tag or advance Supply by 1; on a 1–2 on 1d6, spawn “Honor vs. Pragmatism” conflict immediately.

Chapter 12

The Linns

Skerries & Storm-Oaths. North of the Aberderrin Sea, the Linns don't just raid and trade—they do it with the fervour of the converted, swearing oaths to storm and sea that aren't just words—they're leverage with a supernatural clause. They pay in stories, not silver, because to them, a tale well-told is worth more than a chest of gold... especially when it's true. I sold them a set of Aeler compasses that work in fog—not because I cared about their navigation, but because I knew the Storm-Caller's apprentice was terrified of the Hollow, and he'd trade his soul for a way to feel safe. They paid in a storm-charm that once belonged to a drowned captain—stamped with the Linns' seal and guaranteed by the Sea-Witch's own oath. The charm works, yes, but it attracts the Hollow like chum attracts sharks. Which is why I only use it when I'm desperate. Desperate, that is, for the story I'll get when the Hollow comes calling—a story I can then sell to the Veiled Sisters as “proof of supernatural liability” at triple the rate.

[Thimble: Sir, the Linns Storm-Oath Accord Article 7 forbids—]

[Edgewalker: Storm-oath accord? Thimble, my sweet little squall, storm-oath accords are just leverage with a salterust—especially when I've bought the Storm-Caller's apprentice's silence with a compass that doesn't work in fog... it summons the Hollow. Now, about that storm-charm... the Sea-Witch has a niece who owes the Veiled Sisters a favour. I wonder what her weight in drowned captains looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

12.1 Linn — “Skerries & Storm-Oaths”

High Jarl (Elite): “The sea keeps better counsel than any scribe, and the storm remembers every oath sworn upon its winds. To rule these shores is to dance between their moods and never miss a step.”

Net-Wife (Commoner): “The water speaks to those who know how to listen – the way it moves tells you if the fish are running, if the weather's turning, or if something's coming that wasn't invited to the feast.”

Theme & Atmosphere

North of the Aberderrin Sea, where fjords split the coast and skerries break the tide, dwell the Linn. They are traders and raiders in equal breath, their longships crowding the whale-road and river mouths. They descend the Ylolka like an axe-blade and cut into southern shores, or slip through the Thin Strip where the Valewood dares not touch salt. Yet even these storm-oath people dread the Mistlands and the Valewood, whose fog and trees have no need of ships or harbors to claim their due.

What you notice first: The smell of tar and salt fish. The creak of oars from unseen boats. The way everyone—jarl to thrall—touches a knotted cord before speaking of the sea.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never name a drowned person aloud while underway. The sea collects names, and if it hears you speaking one it doesn't recognize, it may reach up to correct the ledger.

Regional Mood: Skerry Stormcall

Power here is spoken, not written. A jarl's authority rests on the weight of his oath-chest and the sharpness of his skald's tongue. Longships are not vessels; they are promises carved in timber. Every voyage is a gamble against tide, reef, and the attention of things that sleep beneath the waves. The Linn do not fear death—they fear dying without a witness, swallowed by fog where no verse will remember their name.

Starting Location: A longship house lined with storm-charms and whale-bone runes, salt wind clawing at the doors. A Net-Wife binds a storm-token into a PC's palm. "The Whale-Road sings," she says. "But the Mistlands whistle back. Bring us three keel-lengths of ironwood from the Valewood edge, or the tide will take our boats in the spring."

Prominent NPCs of Linn

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Jarl Skjold	High Jarl of the Southern Fjords	Unite the scattered strands under one oath	His beard is braided with silver from every ship he has taken.
Volva Hervor	Mist-seer and oath-reader	Read the tides of fate before they turn	She speaks once a year; the rest of the time she listens to the fog.
Astrid	Net-Wife (commoner exemplar)	Keep her village safe from the Hollow and the deep	She ties a knot for every storm she's survived. Her belt has thirty.

Brother Halvard	Missionary of the Temple of Light	Convert the Linn to the Lens of the White Flame	He carries a water-clock to measure the hours of prayer, but the skerries have no hours.
Gunnhild	Sea-Queen’s Hand	Enforce the queen’s will without drawing a blade	She never draws her sword. The threat is enough.
The Draugr Jarl	Unfinished business (rumoured)	A dead jarl whose oath was never fulfilled	Said to rise from the Thing-Holm when the ninth bell tolls.

Names of Linn

Inspired by the northern fjords: short, hard consonants, compound words that evoke the sea and the storm. Surnames are often patronymic (-son, -dottir) or taken from a notable deed.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Skjold	Astrid	Einarsson	the Oath-Keeper
Bjorn	Gunnhild	Hervorsdottir	Tide-Reader
Ragnar	Sigrid	Ketilsson	Bell-Sworn
Halvard	Yrsa	Ormsson	the Unfinished
Torsten	Runa	Sturladottir	Whale-Bone
Vidar	Helga	Haakonsson	Ash-Prow

(Fjord/Skerry/Hall) Kelp-skerry gut: a narrow channel where oars scrape weed and rock; tide-shed of longship houses with tar smoke and gulls for sentries.

Spades — Places

2. Kelp-Skerry Gut — Narrow channel where oars scrape weed and rock. Kelp strands like dead men’s hair; row silently or the reef listens.
3. Tide-Shed — Longship houses; tar smoke and gulls for sentries. Each shed holds a keel’s ghost; old crews sleep under the floor planks.
4. Wave-Gate Reef — Just off a raiding beach; only locals know the cut. One wrong turn and the wave breaks over you—twice.
5. Runestone Causey — Across tidal flat; names half lost to barnacle. Touch the stone with your left hand. If it’s warm, the ancestors approve.

6. Herring-Stairs — Drying racks above cliff path; knives flicker like fish. Workers sing a counting song—eight verses, never nine.
7. Winter Hall — Turf walls, smoke-eye roof, benches crowded with shields. The fire never goes out. Feed it a story each night or it goes hungry.
8. Mistlands Maze — Reed-channels braid and vanish; navigation by instinct. The reeds whisper names you've forgotten. Do not answer.
9. Boomed Harbor — Iron rings in whale-bone posts; controlled access. The chain was forged from a broken oath. It rattles when liars approach.
10. Aberderrin Headland — Current rips past wreck timbers in the kelp. On foggy nights, the drowned signal with lanterns. Never follow.
- J Dolmis Waystation — Low isle with fresh water and old debts. The well is lined with copper. A single dropped coin returns as a blessing.
- Q Thing-Holm — Flat islet ringed with stones for speaking and swearing. The stones have ears; oaths spoken here echo for three tides.
- K High Jarl's Seat — Above fjord, beacon tower glaring out to sea. The beacon oil is mixed with whale fat. It burns green when a storm is close.
- A Whale-Road Horizon — Open water where storms are born and names are made. Here, the sky meets the sea. Here, the dead meet the living.

(Jarl/Oar-Crew/Keeper) Net-wife who reads the sea like a ledger and the sky like a mood; steersman whose tiller-hand never shakes.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Net-Wife — Reads sea like ledger, sky like mood; weather-witch in all but name. She ties a knot for every storm she's survived. Her belt has thirty.
3. Steersman — Tiller-hand never shakes, even when keel does. His left ear is scarred—he listened too long to a siren's promise.
4. Shipwright — Pitch on palms, schedule in teeth; knows every plank's story. He names each timber after a dead relative. The keel is his grandmother.
5. Oar-Master — Sets beat that decides if home is today or never. He drums on a hollowed skull. The rhythm is a prayer to the sea.
6. Mist-Pilot — Ghosts boats through marsh lanes; reed-runner with secret paths. He never blinks in fog. Some say he traded his blink for safe passage.
7. Skald — Verses buy silence, start fights, end them; law in rhyme. Her tongue is forked—she can praise and curse in the same breath.
8. Shield-Band — Cousins fine with coin, better with cattle. They sharpen their swords on runestones. The sparks tell fortunes.
9. Foster-Son — Southern coast birth; speaks both laws and subtext. He wears two brooches—one iron, one bone. Neither is his true allegiance.
10. Thing-Speaker — Makes war into lawsuit, lawsuit into lunch. He carries a water-clock. When it runs out, so does your patience.
- J Sea-Queen's Hand — Envoy with seal-bag and sword-belt; queen's will made manifest. He never draws his blade. The threat is enough.

- Q Sea-Queen — Crown of hammered silver, eyes for weather and law. She lost an eye to a storm—or to a spy. She won't say which.
- K High Jarl — First among raids, last to boast; paramount over strands. His beard is braided with silver from every ship he's taken.
- A Volva of Mist — Oath-reader whose nod stills surf; seer of tides and truth. She speaks once a year. The rest of the time, she listens to the fog.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Black Squall — Drops from clear band; oars or prayers—pick one. The wind screams a name. Listen carefully—it might be yours.
 3. Fogfall — Sound travels, sight does not; friend and reef trade places. You hear oars. Then you don't. Then they're behind you.
 4. Boom Lift — Harbor chain rises; schedules drown in harbor mouth. The chain's links are inscribed with names of debtors. Each one rattles differently.
 5. Levy Clash — Vittera's wardens arrive with polite spears. They carry a writ stamped with the queen's seal. The seal is still wet.
 6. Keel-Rot Rumor — Crews beach mid-voyage; trust in timber fails. The rot smells sweet—too sweet. Someone poisoned the tar.
 7. Feud Token — Raid becomes wedding... or funeral; oath-debt called due. A bronze ring arrives on an arrow. The meaning is clear.
 8. Oath Matured — Verse sworn last winter comes due today. The skald clears her throat. The room goes cold.
 9. Mistlands Miscount — Channels “move,” cargo vanishes without witnesses. The fog lifts to reveal a different shore. Your charts are now lies.
 10. Aberderrin Race — Contrary currents split flotilla; half late, half lost. The water churns like a dying man. Something beneath is feeding.
- J Southron Fire-Pots — Night-run turns to daylight; surprise ashore. Pots shatter on the deck. The fire burns blue—alchemical.
- Q Thing Injunction — No sailing till grievance heard (hours? days?). The Thing-Speaker smiles. He has all the time in the world.
- K General Muster — Horns on every headland; all bays become spears. The war fleet assembles. Your ship is the smallest.
- A Ground-Sea — Long, blind swell rolls under; steering lies. The swell has a rhythm—two short, one long. A signal from below.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Harbor-Mark — Dock without levy in named strand (once). The mark is a notch cut in a bone. Match it to the harbor post.
 3. Oar-Share — Claim two benches on a fast longship for a season. The oars are carved with your name. Row well, or they'll be recarved.
 4. Pilot's Token — Mist-runner guides through reed-maze safely. The token is a dried eel skin. Keep it dry.
 5. Wharf-Right — Dolmis waystation loading priority; first ashore. The harbormaster frowns but steps aside. Your name is now on a list.
 6. Salvage Claim — Flotsam on reef stretch becomes "inventory." You must name each piece before touching it. The wrong word forfeits the claim.
 7. Thing Ruling — Verdict in your favor that travels with you. The verdict is carved on a whale-rib. Carry it as a shield.
 8. Raid-Truce — Immunity in named bay for one market day. A white banner on your mast. No one will attack—openly.
 9. Foster-Bond — Guest-kin by jarl's house; hospitality guaranteed. You share a cup with the jarl. The cup is silver. The promise is iron.
 10. Herring Allotment — Priority barrels when the run hits; silver in season. The barrels are sealed with your mark. Break one to test quality.
- J Escort Writ — Eight shields and wolf-banner from cape to cape. The shields are painted with a wolf's head. They die before you do.
- Q Queen's Audience — Whisper exits as policy; sea-law bends. The Queen's hand writes your words on vellum. The ink is her blood.
- K High Jarl's Pennon — Levies open booms and mouths when it flies. The pennon is torn from a captured ship. Fly it proudly—or else.
- A Storm-Oath Clause — Temporary exception to any sea-law, sealed. The clause is whispered, never written. The sea hears and obeys—once.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (rights/tokens/escorts) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo sea-omens—horns on wind, white horses on swell, verse unfinished until landfall.

Additional Features

- Storm-Oaths: Every raid or voyage sealed by oath to sea and storm. Break one, invite the sea's judgment.
- Skald's Burden: Verses are law, history, curse. A poor rhyme can damn a crew as surely as a reef.
- Mist-Dread: The bravest Linn will not enter the Direwood's breath or the Valewood's shade.

Even the Sea-Queen pales at the Ninth Bell of the Mistlands.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Draugr Jarl (Unfinished Business): The Thing-Holm is haunted by a jarl who died before his oath was fulfilled. He rises when a storm-oath is broken, demanding a blood-price paid in stories. The Temple of Light has sent three missionaries to lay him to rest; all three drowned in calm water.
- Saint Adar of the Dawnfire (Oath of Flame & Light): The Temple of Light’s soft crusade has reached the Linn coast. Missionaries build school-houses and healers’ huts, teaching that oaths sworn by the White Flame are as binding as any storm-oath. The old Sea-Queen tolerates them because they bring iron trade, but the Volva of Mist has warned that the Hollow does not distinguish between faiths.
- Saint Hervor of the Salted Cord (The Witness): A Linn skald who swore never to sing a false verse. After she discovered her jarl had faked a raid’s spoils, she composed a nothing verse that cursed his line to seven generations. The Sea-Queen keeps Hervor’s runestone at the Thing-Holm; those who lie there hear their own words echo back as mockery.
- The Tide-Washed Covenant (The Hospice of the Salted Anchor): A grey-robed healer runs a hospice on the edge of the Mistlands, treating wounded raiders and fog-mad sailors alike. She asks no payment, but she writes every name in a ledger that never dries. Linn captains leave offerings of fresh water before a voyage; those who refuse find their ship plagued by the drowned.
- The Ninth: In any longhouse, the ninth horn blown at a feast summons the Hollow. The wise stop at eight. Those who blow the ninth are said to see a pale figure standing at the high table—waiting to collect a debt.

Linn Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Wake: Toss a crust over the gunwale before a voyage. Ignore the first Black Squall penalty.
- Knot the Oar: Tie a single knot in your oar’s leather grip. Cancel Keel-Rot Rumor or take −1 die on your next rowing check (your choice).
- Name to the Deep: Whisper a dead enemy’s name into the tide. Gain +1 Effect against his kin for the scene, but mark Obligation to the Sea-Queen.

Patronage & Power

Among the Linn, power flows through oaths, kinship, and the spoken word. Jarls maintain authority through successful raids and wise judgments, while skalds wield influence through their ability to immortalize deeds in verse—or damn names through satire. The Sea-Queen holds sway over the coastlands, but her rule depends on the respect of the High Jarl and the Thing-speakers who interpret ancient laws.

For the GM: Power in Linn society is fluid and performance-based. Patronage often takes the form of foster-bonds, oar-shares, or raid-truces—each binding the recipient to service and reputation. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (tokens, banners, verses) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival jarls issue conflicting claims, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the Thing-holm and harbor gatherings as arenas for social contests, where oaths are sworn and broken.

In Linn society, your word is your bond, and your reputation is your greatest treasure.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from coastal guards or rival crews.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby ships or harbor watch.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or mist-pilots.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable tide.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local jarl or harbor master becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to weather shift or reef hazard.
- Foe Appears: A rival crew or levy force arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional ships, warriors, or skalds arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - storm hits/oath invoked/feud declared.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Sea-Queen, High Jarl, or Volva intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - storm rises/reef shifts/mist closes in.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Linn (Storm-Oaths): Sudden calm, breaking waves speak names, verses come unbidden to lips.
- Linn (Mistlands): Channels shift without sound, voices call from reed-beds, compass spins.
- Linn (Thing-Law): Witnesses appear, oaths are demanded, skald begins composing your saga.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Sail + Wits): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Wake Surge.
- Cut the Lane (Pilot + Tactics): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a beacon is under your color, +1 die.
- Weather the Squall (Resolve + Sail): On a hit in Black Squall, you pick who drifts; on a miss, the Keeper does.

Boss Seeds (Sea & Signal)

- The Net-Father (Nine Nets) — Phases: Harbor Favours → Orchestrated Wrecks → Thing Coup. Cracks: cut a cord lineage; reveal swapped verdict; survive a staged squall.
- The Blue Cantor (Brine-Gospel) — Phases: Drownings Called Mercy → Procession at Reef → Tide-Baptism of a Jarl. Cracks: relic earplugs, survivor testimony, storm turning against them.

Part III

The Eastern Dolmis & The Valewood

Chapter 13

Theona

Three Greens, No Ninth. The isles of Theona aren't just ruled by silence—they're built on it, a place where bells are forbidden lest they wake the thing that sleeps under the coral, and oh, how the Matron of Wells loves a good loophole. I sold her a copper bell that could ring nine times without breaking the taboo—not because I respected her laws, but because I knew her chief acolyte was desperate to prove her piety, and she'd pay in moot tokens for a bell that seemed holy. The trick? I didn't make the bell ring nine times—I made the ninth ring silent, a harmonic trick that fools the ear but not the soul. The Matron paid in a moot token—stamped with the Theona seal and guaranteed by the Council of Elders' own oath. I used it to settle a feud with a Linn captain... a feud I'd started by spreading a rumour about his ancestor's cowardice. He's still paying me back in stories—stories I sell to the Tulkani as “authentic Linn lore” at a markup, then buy back as “cursed tales” to sell to the Veiled Sisters. The circle of leverage.

[Thimble: Sir, the Theona Silence Accord Article 3 explicitly prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Council's ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I've got a feud war to start in Linns, and if you mention “Clause 1” one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the next silence as kindling. They prefer it ringing.]

13.1 Theona — “Three Greens, No Ninth”

Matron of Wells (Elite): “The wells here hold more than water – they hold the dreams and prayers of generations. To govern is to tend these sacred spaces where the living commune with what came before.”

Peat-Cutter (Commoner): “The land here remembers everything, especially what you don't say. Skip the ninth step, forget the ninth name, and the green earth takes note. Best keep your omissions honest.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The isles of Theona rise green and jagged from the Dolmis, their basalt cliffs wrapped in mists and moorland song. Nominally a duchy sworn to Viterra, in truth the Three Greens heed no crown but their own moots, no law but their taboos. The greatest of these is the silence of Nine: no bell tolls a ninth, no bridge counts that span, no oath dares its syllable. It is said that those who break the ban invite the Green Host, and that debts of nine can never be paid in coin.

What you notice first: The smell of wet peat and salt. The silence that follows every eighth bell-ring. The way locals count on their fingers—thumb, then fingers, then a long pause where the ninth should be.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never pour the ninth cup at a feast. Never speak the ninth name in a bargain. Never step where a step is missing. The Green Host rides for those who complete what should remain incomplete.

Regional Mood: Three Greens, No Ninth

Here, peace is a ritual, and every word sharpens the blade that seals it. Theona is claimed by Viterra but ruled by moots, well-keepers, and the old faith. Linn longships cut through the fog for raiding; Ashaani slavers hunt the coves in stolen coracles; pirates from Zakov and the Vilikari shore trade stolen goods for kelp and salt. Sidhi sailors and Aelinnel factors run cargo up the tide-stairs, and Aelaerem hedge-wives barter red thread for hawthorn passes. Through it all, the Ninth Taboo threads every handshake, every toast, every whispered prayer. To break it is to invite the Green Host—and the Host does not bargain.

Starting Location: A Moot Hill under rain, where vows are carved into stone and knives gleam beside the altar. A Bride-Peacemaker draws a blade between two bloodlines. “The ninth vow was never spoken,” she says. “But the Green Host remembers. Bring us the head of the slaver who burned the eastern strand, and the feud will end. Fail, and your name will join the uncounted.”

Prominent NPCs of Theona

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Matron Eithne	Keeper of the Sacred Wells	Preserve the old ways against Viterran encroachment	She drinks only from the ninth well—the one no one admits exists.
King Conall	Three-Isles King (elected by the moots)	Balance the demands of Viterra with the taboos of the Green Host	He lost his left hand to a Linn raid; the replacement is carved from hawthorn.

Brid	Bride-Peacemaker	End feuds before the Green Host rides	Her knife has a wooden blade; families cut their palms with wood—blood without iron.
Sister Cera	Missionary of the Temple of Light	Convert the islanders to the White Flame	She preaches in the old tongue and leaves offerings at hawthorn groves; the locals are not sure whether she is a saint or a heretic.
Brother Iarlath	Everflame inquisitor (Ecktoria)	Purge the ‘pagan’ taboos and impose imperial orthodoxy	He carries a censer that never cools, but it smokes green in the fog.
The Lady Beneath	Dream-queen of the hollow hills	Keep the old bargains and collect the ninth name	She has no face; those who see her forget their own names for a year.

Names of Theona

Inspired by the green isles of the western sea: soft consonants, melodic vowels, and surnames that evoke a hill, a well, or a sacred grove.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Conall	Eithne	O’Malloy	the Ninth
Cormac	Bríd	Mac Gowan	Well-Sworn
Iarlath	Cera	Ó hAodha	Hawthorn
Turlough	Ríona	Ó Braonáin	the Uncounted
Lorcán	Máire	Ó Dálaigh	Fog-Born
Finán	Gobnait	Ó Cuilinn	Ash-Finger

(Ringfort/Well/Cliff) Basalt tide-stairs cut into cove; everyone steps past a “missing” rung; Saint’s Well under hawthorn hung with ribbons.

Spades — Places

2. Tide-Stairs — Basalt steps into cove; everyone skips the “missing” rung. The missing step is still there—you just can’t see it. Step where it should be, or don’t step at all.
3. Saint’s Well — Under hawthorn hung with ribbons and secrets; wishes tied in cloth. The ribbons are knotted in eights. The ninth knot is never tied—only imagined.
4. Fog-Wick Tower — Burning peat; bell plays eight notes, never nine. The bell-ringer wears a mask. Underneath, he has no mouth—only a whisper.
5. Black Bog Causeway — White stones like teeth; will-lights test your stride. The stones were set by a king who drowned. He counts each footstep from below.
6. Cliff Ringfort — Over kelp-nets; storm-ladders creak like hymns. The ladders are hauled up at dusk. If you’re left below, you sleep with the tide.
7. Barrow Field — Standing stones; birds hush at noon, the earth remembers. The stones have ears. Do not speak a secret you cannot afford to lose.
8. Sea-Cave Harp — Tide-ropes sing under headland; echoes bargain for safe passage. The harp has no player. It plays itself when the drowned want to speak.
9. Uncounted Bridge — Nine-arch causeway; locals tally “eight-and-one.” The ninth arch is there—but the locals will deny it. Walk it at your own risk.
10. Ogham Grove — Carved pillars around an absent ninth post; runes speak in silence. The missing post was removed by a king who broke a vow. The runes still curse his line.
- J Coracle Harbor — Jammed in a notch; upturned boats roof the sheds. The coracles are made of hide and guilt. Each one has carried a secret.
- Q Green Moot Hill — Three Greens’ court; benches of turf, salt wind judges. The wind never stops. It carries the votes of the dead.
- K High Hall — Whale-rib beams; storm banners sleep, kings are chosen. The kings are chosen by lot—a knotted cord pulled from a pot. The cord has eight knots.
- A Lookout Cliff — One vantage where all three isles stand in a single gaze. From here, you can see the Green Host riding on the horizon—if it wants you to.

(Moot/Keeper/Court) Peat-cutter with steady barrow and steadier gossip; well-keeper who ties ribbons and unknots feuds.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Peat-Cutter — Steady barrow, steadier gossip; knows every hidden path. Her barrow has a false bottom. She hides debts there—and bodies.
3. Well-Keeper — Ties ribbons, unknots feuds; wishes and wisdom in equal measure. She never ties a ninth ribbon. The ninth wish is always her own.
4. Kelp-Netter — Reads rip lines like ledgers; tide as teacher. His net has a torn patch. He sewed it with thread from a hanged man’s shirt.
5. Harp-Satirist — A few bars can end a career or a war; music as a weapon. Her harp is strung with catgut and grudges. Each string is a name.
6. Wick-Warden — Tends fog-lamps, counts in eights; guardian of the silent count. He counts on his fingers—thumb, finger, finger, finger—and stops. The ninth is for the fog.

7. Taboo-Witness — Geas-keeper who knows which words ruin deals. She carries a bell with no clapper. She rings it with her tongue.
8. Island Abbot — Saint’s bell, tolerant smile; faith in the old ways. His bell rings eight times. The ninth ring is the silence that follows.
9. Green Neighbor — Polite emissary from under the hill; borrowed boots, strange customs. He never steps on a crack. He says the earth has teeth.
10. Coracle-Captain — Eight-boat flotilla; swift as rumor, sure as the tide. Her boats have no names. She says naming a vessel invites the Green Host to count it.
- J Bride-Peacemaker — Walks between bloodlines with a silver knife; peace in marriage. Her knife has a wooden blade. The families cut their palms with wood—blood without iron.
- Q Matron of Wells — Queen-mother in truth if not in name; wisdom in water. She drinks only from the ninth well—the one no one admits exists.
- K Three-Isles King — Elected by the moots; whale-bone throne, weathered eyes. He lost his left hand to a Linn raid. The replacement is carved from hawthorn.
- A Lady Beneath — Unseen queen who bargains in dreams; hawthorn’s whisper. She has no face. Those who see her forget their own names for a year.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Ground-Mist — Erases tracks; horns travel, edges do not; navigation by sound alone. The mist has a voice. It whispers your name—but only once.
3. Bog-Lights — Lure teamster off the causeway; recovery costs time and pride. The lights are the souls of debtors. Follow them, and you’ll never pay your way out.
4. Spoken Geas — No ninth word in parley—or the deal curdles like milk. The word you cannot speak sits on your tongue like a stone.
5. Salt-Rot — Smokehouse fails; fish spoil, tempers rise like the tide. The salt was cut with grave dust. Someone wanted the winter to be hard.
6. Procession Clash — Saint-day vs. hawthorn taboo; shutters slam, peace fractures. The saint’s banner and the green branch cannot touch. When they do, blood follows.
7. Wave-Count — Eighth swell, Nameless follows; boats tremble, sailors pray. The ninth swell never comes. But something rides the eighth.
8. Ringfort Wakes — A bone-judge is “consulted”; now you’re named in the old law. The bone-judge’s skull is filled with peat smoke. It speaks in riddles—and judgments.
9. Ninth Law — Something vital cannot be counted, measured, or named. You try to count your crew. The number keeps changing.
10. Net-Surge — Harbor stairs; kelp wraps ankles and alibis like truth. The kelp moves against the current. Someone underneath is pulling.
- J Bride-Theft — At Moot—peace flips to feud; you’re caught mid-ritual. The stolen bride’s hand is cold. She has been dead for a year.
- Q Mainland Return — Exile with papers; elders arrested “for progress.” The papers are stamped with a Viterran seal. The seal is still warm—and wrong.

K Green Host Rides — Hooves like drums, cattle scatter, sentries sleep. The riders have no faces—only masks of woven hawthorn.

A Great Fog — Routes loop, bells lie, every promise takes the long way. The fog is old. It remembers promises made to the dead.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Well-Blessing — Named ford crosses you safely, once; water remembers your need. The blessing is a ribbon. Tie it to your wrist. Do not tie a ninth knot.

3. Moot Token — Eight-knotted cord; skip any local queue or judgment. The cord is braided from horsehair and silence. Cut a knot to speak.

4. Harbor-Green — Painted mark exempts your boat from the next levy; tide as ally. The mark is a circle with an eighth cut. The missing slice is the toll.

5. Hawthorn Pass — Immunity from a single local taboo (for one scene). The pass is a hawthorn twig. Carry it in your mouth. Do not chew.

6. Bell-Right — Lawful ring at a fog-wick summons the watchers; law travels on sound. The bell has no clapper. You must ring it with your own breath.

7. Coracle Share — Crew and oars pledged for one crossing; tide as a steed. The share is a tally stick. Break it in half to claim your passage.

8. Ogham Ruling — Monk's reading settles a dispute in your favor; runes as law. The ruling is carved on a slate. The slate is damp. The runes may change by morning.

9. Unnumbered Right — Ignore the Ninth prohibition for one action (costs a favor later). The right is a silence. Use it, and the Green Host will ask for its name.

10. Salt-Cure License — Process scarce fish despite ration edicts; preservation as power. The license is signed with a thumbprint. The thumb is not yours.

J Bride-Charter — Two feuding houses sheath knives for a season; peace in marriage. The charter is written on a wedding veil. The bloodstains are from the dowry.

Q Private Moot — With Matron and King; whispers become policy. The moot is held in a fog hollow. What is spoken there is never written.

K Whale-Escort — Eight-oar guards across the Dolmis reach; strength in numbers. The crew carries your name on a scrap of vellum. If the paper gets wet, you are alone.

A Green Favor — One uncanny exception to custom, spoken beneath hawthorn. The favor is a dream. When you wake, the hawthorn will remember—even if you don't.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (blessings/tokens/rights) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- The “No Ninth” custom: whenever a 9 appears in your seed, add an omission to the scene (a missing step, an unsaid name, an unseen guest). If the 9 is a Diamond, you may break the taboo once—but someone will come to collect later.

- If any A appears, echo green and count motifs—hawthorn that whispers, bells that miscount, promises that take the long way home.

Additional Features

- The Silent Count: Players and GMs are encouraged to omit a detail (a name, a step, a tally) when the Ninth appears, echoing Theona’s taboo.
- Green Host’s Omen: Any dream sequence or omen may be framed as the ride of the Green Host—hoofbeats across the sky, wind through the moors, sea spray tasting of salt and blood.
- Bride-Peace Feasts: Weddings, truces, and funerals blur; sharing a feast can end a feud for a season—or doom a guest if the ninth cup is poured.
- Raider’s Shadow: Theona’s coves are haunted by Linn longships, Ashaani slave barges, and Zakov pirates. Sidhi and Vilikari sailors crew the coracle fleets, while Aelinnel and Aelaerem traders bring red thread and counting stones from the far shore of the Dolmis.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Saint Bríd of the Unquenched Well (Syncretic): A local saint venerated by both the Temple of Light and the old well-keepers. Her shrine is a well hung with red ribbons; pilgrims who tie an eighth knot and leave a silver coin may ask one question of the Green Host—but the answer comes in a dream, and the dream always costs a memory. The Everflame calls her a heretic; the islanders call her the Matron’s aunt.
- Saint Colmán of the Eighth Bell (Oath of Mercy and Grace): A missionary who tried to convert the isles by ringing a ninth bell. The Green Host took his tongue, and he spent the rest of his life speaking in eights. His hospice still stands near the Fog-Wick Tower; it heals the fog-sick, but every patient leaves unable to count past eight. The Temple of Light venerates him as a martyr; the Everflame has declared his cult anathema.
- The Covenant of the Counted (The Ninth Seal): The Viterran claim to Theona is enforced by Covenant judges who travel with Linn mercenaries. They insist that Viterran law supersedes the Ninth Taboo. The islanders obey—slowly, and with omissions. A judge who tries to count the ninth article of a contract is said to find that the parchment has grown a new fold.
- The Order of the Unnumbered Cup: Grey-robed healers run a hospice on the main isle, treating raiders, refugees, and the fog-mad. They ask no payment, but they record every patient’s name in a ledger that never dries. The Matron of Wells allows them because they also tend the sacred wells. The Everflame accuses them of erasing sins; the Temple of Light praises their mercy. They say nothing.
- The Ninth: In any Theona scene, the ninth person to speak in a room draws the Green Host’s attention. The wise hold their tongues until someone else breaks the count. Those who speak ninth are said to see a pale rider on the horizon the next night—and the rider is always one name closer.

Theona Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Bog: Toss a crust into the mist before crossing a causeway. Ignore the first Ground-Mist penalty.

- Knot the Eighth: Tie a single knot in a ribbon before a moot. Cancel Spoken Geas or take –1 die on your next oath (your choice).
- Name to the Well: Whisper a dead enemy's name into Saint's Well. Gain +1 Effect against his kin for the scene, but mark Obligation to the Matron.

Patronage & Power

In Theona, power flows through ancient custom, sacred spaces, and the careful observance of taboo. The Three Greens maintain their independence through a web of moots, well-keepers, and geas-keepers who ensure the old laws are honored. The King and Matron rule by consensus and tradition, while the unseen Lady Beneath influences events through dreams and whispers.

For the GM: Patronage in Theona revolves around blessings, exemptions, and the delicate balance of keeping or breaking taboos. Rewards often take the form of tokens, rights, or divine favor that can be leveraged into greater influence. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (ribbons, tokens, blessings) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival factions issue conflicting exemptions, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the moots, wells, and causeways as arenas for social contests, where knowledge of custom determines success.

In Theona, your word is your weave, and your weave determines whether you walk the green path or invite the Host.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from moot-keepers or well-guardians.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby coracle crews or ringfort sentries.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or green neighbors.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable tide.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Wick-warden or moot official becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to mist shift or taboo breach.
- Foe Appears: A feuding house member or bone-judge arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional coracle crews, green neighbors, or moot enforcers arrive.

- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - taboo broken/green host rides/feud declared.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: King, Matron, or Lady Beneath intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - fog rises/bells ring/causeway shifts.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Theona (Silent Count): Steps disappear mid-climb, names vanish from lips, the ninth item in a list goes unmentioned.
- Theona (Green Host): Hoofbeats echo without a horse, mist takes familiar shapes, dreams predict the next action.
- Theona (Taboo Law): Words refuse to form, actions miscount, promises require exact phrasing.

Boss Seeds (three-phase foes)

- The Unsung Bell (forbidden note given will) — Phases: Hum in Mist → Echo Under Well-stone → Command of Fog. Cracks: bind its clapper with eight ribbons; let a rival speak the ninth and pay; drown the echo at the Sea-Cave Harp.
- Bride-Thief of the Green Host (dream raider) — Phases: Invitation in Sleep → Procession Across Moor → Feast Without Ninth Cup. Cracks: cut the dream-veil with silver; sing satire at the Green Moot Hill; trade a Bride-Charter.
- The Missing Step (living omission) — Phases: Vanished Witness → Unread Clause → Unwalkable Bridge. Cracks: invite a Taboo-Witness to count aloud; spill nine drops into Saint’s Well but name only eight; let the Lady Beneath keep a memory.

Chapter 14

Zakov

Salt & Serpent. The pirate-city of the Dolmis coast isn't just a den of thieves—it's a corporation with a flag, and oh, how the Salt Prince loves playing king while the Syndicate Silent pulls the strings. The Syndicate doesn't just want tribute; they want proof they're obeyed, which is why they pay in corsair charters that let you fly the black flag without being hanged—stamped with the Zakov seal and guaranteed by the Syndicate's own oath. I sold them a set of underwater breathing bells—Aeler tech, very illegal, very desirable—not because I cared about their sailors, but because I knew the Syndicate's head enforcer was terrified of the Veiled Sisters, and he'd pay in charters for bells that let him sneak past their patrols. I've never used the charter. Why? Because the flag is in my luggage, next to the spare breath-counter... and I'm waiting for the perfect moment to fly it: when the Syndicate's charter is about to expire, and I can sell them a renewal at triple the price, claiming the old one was “void due to supernatural interference.” (The Syndicate agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the Kraken I “summoned” during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 11 of the Zakov Maritime Code prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Maritime code? Thimble, my dear, little barnacle, maritime codes are just leverage with a barnacle—especially when I've bought the Syndicate's head enforcer's silence with a breathing bell that doesn't let you breathe underwater... it floods your lungs. Now, about that corsair charter... the Salt Prince's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in drowned sailors looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 3 of the Treasurer's Ledger—]

14.1 Zakov — “Salt & Serpent”

Salt Prince (Elite): “The tide here keeps better ledgers than any scribe, and the reefs remember every secret whispered above their depths. Power flows like the currents – those who understand them rule the waves.”

Dock-Rat (Commoner): “The sewers and the sea both carry what folks want to forget, but they also remember everything. Best keep your business above water and your enemies guessing which dock you'll use next. The Salt Prince's crown floats, and the tide pulls for anyone with a sharp knife and a sharper tongue.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Zakov is the pirate-city of the Dolmis coast, where tides trade secrets and knives settle debts. Its streets are piers, its courts are taverns, and its rulers are whoever the Syndicates fear most this season. The Salt Prince claims the throne, but the real power ebbs and flows with the tide—and the tide remembers everything. Here, every manifest is a lie, every harbor a doorstep to a dozen conspiracies, and every fog-light a lure or a warning. The city breathes with the sea: at low tide, secrets exposed; at flood, the drowned walk the Sunken Quarter and knock on doors that should be locked. Zakov is not a place you visit. It is a place you survive—or rule.

What you notice first: The smell of brine and tar. The constant slap of water against stone. The way every tavern has a door that leads to a different dock—and every dock has a name that changes with the tide.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never take a coin that tastes of brine. The Serpent's Mark is not a blessing. It is a debt that drowns.

Regional Mood: Salt and Serpent

Here, the sea is not a border—it is a landlord. Zakov rose from the wreckage of a sunken empire, and every stone is a salvage claim. The Salt Prince rules from a throne of driftwood and extortion, but the real lords are the Syndicate factors who own the docks, the eel-cults that whisper from the sewers, and the fae courts that launder their influence through tide-bargains. Ships arrive with goods no customs post will name, and depart with cargoes no manifest will show. The city's law is the Tide Clock: low water for killing, flood water for trading, slack for negotiation. Break the rhythm, and the city will break you.

Starting Location: A smuggler's gate built into the seawall, its iron mouth crusted with barnacles and secrets. The gatekeeper is a one-eyed woman who accepts payment in stories. Behind her, the Dregs Quarter stretches on stilts into the harbor, and the Salt Prince's flagship, the Red Wake, rides at anchor off the Iron Pier. "The levy rises tonight," the gatekeeper says, spitting into the water. "Every ship pays, or every ship burns. You look like the burning type. Good. The Prince needs a reminder that the tide turns for everyone."

Prominent NPCs of Zakov

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Salt Prince Lev	Nominal ruler of Zakov	Keep the syndicates from tearing the city apart	His crown is a circlet of driftwood; he has never taken it off.

Pirate Queen Mila	Rules the Shallows with charm and cutlass	Carve out a kingdom free of the Salt Prince’s levies	Her cutlass was her grandmother’s; the grandmother was also a queen.
Kraken’s Tongue	Tide-oracle who speaks in riddles	Survive another season without being sacrificed to the deep	She lives in a bell tower that only exists at high tide; the bell does not ring.
Dock-Master Olena	Syndicate factor who “loses” ships	Own the waterfront, one debtor at a time	Her ledger has a secret page that is a map of debtors’ bones.
The Reckoner	Broker of cosmic debts (Maelstraeus)	Collect interest on every contract signed in Zakov	His coin appears in the pocket of the opposing counsel the next day.
The Salt-Bitten Angel	Cursed messenger (Malachai)	Offer cruel bargains that always leave a scar	A silver coin that tastes of brine circulates among the smugglers; take it, and your cargo always passes inspection.

Names of Zakov

Inspired by the Black Sea and Odessa: Slavic, Turkic, and Greek inflections, with nicknames that stick like barnacles.

(Harbor/Bolt-hole/Black Market) Salt-cracked wharf where tide brings back what law forgets; Bone-yard beach with wrecks and corpses in kelp; Smuggler's Gate behind the Fish Market.

Spades — Places

2. Salt Wharf — Cracked and crumbling; the tide brings back what law forgets. The wharf has a memory. It remembers every cargo that passed—and every captain that didn't.
3. Bone-Yard Beach — Wrecks and corpses tangled in kelp and rope. The bones are from three empires. They shift at high tide to form new constellations.
4. Smuggler's Gate — An alley behind the Fish Market; always unlocked, always watched. The lock is a riddle. The answer changes with the moon.
5. The Shallows — A reef-ridden cut only locals dare; navigation as survival. The reef has a name: the Serpent's Spine. It grows longer each year.
6. Dregs Quarter — Shanties on stilts; boats tied to doorframes like pets. The stilts are whale ribs. The quarter rises and falls with the tide—and the mood.
7. Iron Pier — Gangplank to the Red Wake, the corsair flagship; power as a vessel. The ship was a slaver once. It still smells of chains and salt.
8. Crow's Roost — A tavern built into the hull of a beached galleon; the past as the present. The hull was a prize from a war that ended forty years ago. The crew who took it still drink there.
9. Black Bazaar — Tents under tarps; goods that scream if you listen. The scream is not pain. It is a warning.
10. Salt Maze — Marsh paths only the lost know; confusion as protection. The maze was a graveyard. The dead rearranged the hedges.
- J Sunken Quarter — Half the city is underwater at high tide; wealth as depth. The flooded houses have air pockets. People still live there—damply.
- Q Crimson Docks — Contracts signed in blood; commerce as violence. The blood is not always the signatory's. The docks do not care.
- K Anchorhead — A floating fortress of the Pirate Syndicate; law as an anchor. The fortress is built from the hulls of seized ships. You can hear the captains weeping in the timbers.
- A Serpent's Spine — A reef pass to the city's secret heart; danger as a gateway. The pass is a submerged arch. Swim through, and the city shows you its true face—once.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Dock-Rat — Pickpocket with a map tattoo and no fear; the street as education. His tattoo is of the Sunken Quarter at low tide. The buildings are upside down.
3. Fence — Deals in stolen names and secondhand loyalties; trust as currency. Her ledger is written in disappearing ink. She is the only one who knows the antidote.
4. Tavern-Keeper — Remembers every face—and sells the list; hospitality as a trap. His memory is a curse from a fae court. He cannot forget—and he cannot stop talking.

5. Corsair Lieutenant — A letter of marque signed in blood; authority as paper. The letter is stained with a thumbprint. The thumb is still attached to the signatory.
6. Dock-Master — “Loses” ships that owe the Syndicate; bureaucracy as a weapon. His ledger has a secret page. The page is a map of debtor’s bones.
7. Smuggler Captain — A false manifest and a quicker blade; honesty as a liability. She names her boats after dead lovers. The current boat is named “Mistake.”
8. Poison-Tongue — Trades secrets like coin; words as blades. His tongue is forked—not by birth, but by a curse. He can speak two truths at once.
9. Exiled Admiral — Runs a black-market shipyard; rank as a resource. Her flag is a torn imperial pennant. She keeps it to remind herself why she left.
10. Pirate Queen — Rules the Shallows with charm and cutlass; beauty as power. Her cutlass was her grandmother’s. The grandmother was also a queen.
- J Silent Syndicate — No names, just favors and faces; anonymity as strength. Their messenger is a child with no tongue. She writes in the air with smoke.
- Q Kraken’s Tongue — An oracle who speaks in riddles and tides; the future as a mystery. She lives in a bell tower that only exists at high tide. The bell does not ring.
- K Salt Prince — The nominal ruler; real power in the shadows; a crown as a mask. His crown is a circlet of driftwood. He has never taken it off.
- A Drowned Admiral — A legend says he still gives orders from the deep; death as command. His orders arrive in bottles. The bottles are corked with finger bones.

(Betrayal/Storm/Syndicate Feud) The tide turns early—your ship is now ashore on the wrong side; a rival syndicate burns a warehouse with your goods inside.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Tide Shift — Turns early; your ship is now ashore on the wrong side. The tide stole a day. Your alibi is now a lie.
3. Warehouse Fire — A rival syndicate burns it; your goods are inside. The fire is green. It burns paper and wood—and secrets.
4. Cursed Cargo — Something in the hold is watching; cargo as a curse. The cargo is a mirror. The reflection is not yours.
5. Storm Warning — Ships flee, prices soar, lawmen vanish. The storm has a name. It is the name of a captain who swore revenge.
6. Double-Cross — You are holding a fake shipment and real enemies. The fake shipment is real. The real shipment is a trap.
7. Prince’s Levy — Every ship pays tithe or gets sunk; tax as a threat. The levy collector wears a mask. The mask is the face of a dead admiral.
8. Plague Ship — Quarantine flags are ignored; sickness spreads. The plague is a cough that speaks the name of who infected you.
9. Blood Feud — Erupts between pirate crews; collateral damage mounts. The feud began over a stolen duck. The duck is still alive.
10. Kraken Rising — Reefs shift, ships vanish, sailors scream. The kraken is not a monster. It is a debt that has grown teeth.

- J Voided Contract — Your protection now means nothing. The contract was written on shark skin. It dissolved in salt water.
- Q Syndicate Split — Zakov becomes a warzone overnight. The split was orchestrated by a third party. You are the third party.
- K Naval Blockade — No ships in or out without a fight. The blockade is a fae illusion. The ships are real.
- A Tide Forgets — Half the city is cut off, drowning in secrets. The water is warm. The drowned are not dead—they are waiting.

(Pass/Contract/Stolen Goods) A smuggler's token to pass a checkpoint unseen; a forged manifest that makes your cargo "clean."

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Smuggler's Token — Pass one checkpoint unseen; stealth as paper. The token is a dried eel skin. Show it, and the guards will not see you—or will pretend not to.
 3. Forged Manifest — Your cargo is now "clean"; truth as forgery. The manifest is a leaf from a salt-cured book. The ink reads differently in moonlight.
 4. Safe Berth — Bone-yard; no questions, no law; sanctuary as a wreck. The berth is a beached ship. Its captain still lives below decks—and does not age.
 5. Corsair's Charter — Raid with impunity for one moon; violence as a license. The charter is a whip. Crack it, and the Syndicate will answer—or flog you.
 6. Prince's Writ — Levies cannot touch you (yet); authority as a delay. The writ is a feather. The Salt Prince's signature is a claw mark.
 7. Black Ledger — Names, debts, and where they sleep; knowledge as power. The ledger is a skull. Read the names, and the skull will whisper their secrets.
 8. Salvage Rights — A named wreck; first claim, no questions. The wreck is a ghost ship. The ghost is the original owner.
 9. Lighthouse Key — Stolen; redirect ships where you will. The key is a tuning fork. Strike it, and the lighthouse will lie for you.
 10. Debt-Marker — The Syndicate owes you a favor; obligation as an asset. The marker is a coin. The Syndicate's symbol is worn smooth—by regret.
- J Queen's Blessing — Safe passage through the Shallows; charm as protection. The blessing is a kiss. The Pirate Queen's lips taste of salt and blood.
- Q Kraken's Favor — The tides part for your ship, once; nature as an ally. The favor is a tentacle wrung dry. When you need it, soak it in seawater.
- K Prince's Coin — Bribe any official, silence any witness. The coin is a finger bone. The official who takes it will not speak—or not listen.
- A Serpent's Mark — The reef itself will guide you home; danger as a guide. The mark is a scar on your palm. The reef will cut you—but it will also open.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).

- Diamonds are codified outcomes (passes/contracts/goods) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo salt and serpent motifs—tides that remember, reefs that shift, the deep that listens.

Additional Features

- Tide Clock: Scenes run on a four-segment Tide Clock. Each advance shifts Position: Low tide reveals hidden wrecks and bolt-holes; Flood tide drowns streets and seals doors. When the Clock turns, the Keeper may demand 1 SB tied to the waters.
- Syndicate Debt: Every deal leaves a mark. Track a single Debt value (0–3). At 3, the Syndicate calls it in: a betrayal, a levy, an unwanted escort. Clear 1 Debt by paying a Diamond or sacrificing a useful contact.
- Whispers Deep: Rumors carry teeth. When characters openly boast, bargain, or betray, roll 1d6: 1–3, Whispers spread, increasing SB generation; 4–6, Whispers favor the PCs, lowering suspicion until the tide turns.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Bitter Root: Daughters of the Cord run a hospice in the Sunken Quarter. They ask no payment—but they cut threads. A renegade Sister hides among the eel-cults, trying to untie her cord from the Salt Prince’s ledger.
- The Threshold Compendium: The Serpent’s Spine is a Class II Anchor site—the bound spirit of a drowned admiral. Saikou Ira would trade his silver mirror for a single reef chart.
- The Salt-Bitten Angel (Malachai): A silver coin that never spends circulates among the smugglers. Take it, and your cargo always passes inspection—but the coin will taste of brine every time you touch it, and the Angel will ask for a favour before the next full moon.
- The Reckoner (Maelstraeus): The Crimson Docks keep a ledger signed in salt water; those who borrow from the Reckoner find that their interest compounds with every tide. A captain who defaults may wake to find their ship’s name struck from all records, as if it had never sailed.
- The Grey Wanderer’s Grimoire: Zakov psions are called “Tide-Readers.” They taste the future in the salt. The Pirate Queen employs two—and has never trusted a forecast that didn’t cost blood.
- The Ninth: In any Zakov scene, the ninth ship to enter the harbor in a tide will be claimed by the reef. The wise wait for the tenth—or pay a name to the Kraken’s Tongue.

Zakov Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Tide: Toss a crust into the water before a voyage. Ignore the first Tide Shift penalty.
- Knot the Manifest: Tie a single knot in a corner of your cargo list. Cancel Voided Contract or take –1 die on your next customs check (your choice).
- Name to the Reef: Whisper a dead captain’s name into the Serpent’s Spine. Gain +1 Effect when navigating the Shallows this scene, but mark Obligation to the Kraken’s Tongue.

Patronage & Power

In Zakov, power flows through the control of smuggling routes, the management of syndicate debts, and the ability to navigate the complex web of pirate politics. The Salt Prince maintains nominal authority, but real power lies with those who control the tides, the reefs, and the flow of information through the city's taverns and black markets. The true authorities are those who can provide safe passage, protect cargoes, and mediate between competing syndicates.

For the GM: Patronage in Zakov revolves around smuggling rights, safe harbors, and the ability to provide protection from both legal and illegal authorities. Rewards often take the form of tokens, charters, and safe passage that can be leveraged into greater influence. To emphasize the city's fluid power:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (tokens, manifests, keys) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival syndicates issue conflicting protections, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the docks, taverns, and smuggling routes as arenas for social contests, where knowledge of custom and connections determines success.

In Zakov, your reputation is your wealth, and your wealth determines whether you rule the waves or feed the fishes.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from syndicate enforcers or dock guards.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby pirates or tavern patrons.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or fence networks.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable tide.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Dock-master or corsair lieutenant becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to tide shift or syndicate patrol.
- Foe Appears: A rival syndicate or pirate crew arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional syndicate enforcers, pirate crews, or naval forces arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.

- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - contract voided/storm hits/syndicate splits.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Salt Prince, Pirate Queen, or Drowned Admiral intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - tide shifts/storm hits/blockade imposed.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Zakov (Tide Power): Water levels change without warning, ships become stranded or flooded, tidal currents shift direction.
- Zakov (Syndicate Politics): Protection money demands increase, rival factions make conflicting demands, contracts are voided mid-deal.
- Zakov (Pirate Culture): Ships are commandeered, crews mutiny, pirate codes are enforced with violence.

Zakov — Salt and Serpent

“In Zakov, the sea remembers its debts, and every tide drags a name to pay.”

In... A Smuggler’s Gate, a Fence offers a forged manifest. “The Salt Prince’s levy rises,” they say. “And the tide forgets who paid.”

External Clocks Threat: “Levy Teeth”; Community: “Smuggler War”; Anchor: “Gate Truce.”

Relief Pay the levy in kind; throw the coin-chain back; swear the Gate to a new keeper.

City Operating System (Fast Play)

Tide-State (4) Track a Tide Clock (Low → Flood → Slack → Ebb). At each shift:

- change Position: Low (+Infiltration), Flood (-Mobility), Slack (+Deals), Ebb (+Getaway).
- Keeper may bank 1 SB tied to water, rot, or rumor.

Heat & Debt Track Heat (0–4) and Debt (0–3) citywide.

- Heat rises on noisy jobs; at 4, a Syndicate Split tick or Naval Blockade rumor triggers.
- Debt rises when you stiff a faction; at 3, a creditor picks the next scene’s complication.

Crew Playbooks (pick one tag) Cutters (+Effect on coercion at Crimson Docks); Ghosts (ignore first Tide penalty each job); Lighters (cargo swaps create 1 Forged Manifest per session); Lanterns (fae bargains count as Diamonds once/session).

Signal, Cipher, & Circuitry

Harbor Flash (d6 quick comms) 1 one-lantern (safe) 2 two-lantern (watch) 3 red rag (fire) 4 black gull (hit) 5 three knocks (meet) 6 eel-twine (fae eyes)

Dock Cant (micro-phrases) “wet ledger” = bribe; “green rope” = cursed cargo; “white rain” = blockade rumor; “dead wake” = tail on you.

Shadow-Net Each Crow’s Roost/tavern can host one Cache: 3 rumors total; spend 1 rumor to bump Position on info-gathering. When emptied, add +1 Heat.

The Fae Leak

Saltbound Rules Fae cannot enter a circle salted with tidewater salt, but can bargain across it. Breaking circle = 1 SB and a personal Mark.

Eel Court Wharf-spirits (eel-hooded) adjudicate vows “where water hears.” Presenting a Serpent’s Mark lets you reroute a single clause in a contract once.

Drowned Names Names thrown from Bone-Yard Beach return as Echo Debtors. Cash one to erase 1 Debt—but the name occasionally speaks from your mouth.

Heist Skeletons (Plug & Play)

The Manifest Swap (3 beats) Beat 1: Entry (Smuggler’s Gate or Sunken Quarter); on miss, Tide Shift. Beat 2: Edit (swap bill at Dock-Master); spend Forged Manifest to auto-pass. Beat 3: Exit (Shallows); fail = Cursed Cargo wakes.

Syndicate Play (Mini-Game)

Stacks & Faces Pick a patron Stack each arc: Red Wake (muscle), Silent Syndicate (intel), Salt Prince (papers). During downtime, exchange Faces (favors) for one of: reduce Heat by 1; clear 1 Debt; mint one Black Ledger page (one-use leverage on any named).

War Track (0–6) Each conflicting job advances War; at 3, Blood Feud; at 6, Syndicate Split. Reset if PCs deliver a Queen’s Blessing or sacrifice a crew asset.

Urban Terrain & Glitches

Glitch Table (fae-punk fuzz, d8) 1 door opens to water 2 lantern whispers your alias 3 rope grows kelp 4 coin tastes like brine and lies 5 footprints go opposite 6 eel writes your name 7 reef sound indoors 8 tide remembers a promise you didn’t make Zones (quick tags) Dregs: +Stealth, -Status; Crimson: +Force, -Subtle; Sunken: +Weird, -Mobility; Salt Maze: +Escape, -Clarity.

NPC Templates

Kraken’s Tongue (Oracle) Wants: Tribute in secrets. Leverage: once/session convert a Club to a Diamond. Cost: forget a friend’s face for a night.

Contraband & Curses

Hot List (d6) 1 saint-glass (screams when lied to) 2 eel-ink (writes back) 3 tide-bell (rings at wrong hour) 4 serpent charts (reef moves for bearer) 5 name-wine (drink a memory) 6 drowned coins (buy help, cost breath)

Tagging Cargo Each illicit lot has 1 Tag: Watching, Hungry, Bound, Cold. Tag can be “disarmed” by the right shrine/fee/contact.

Cross-Region Conversions

- Theona: Smuggler’s Token counts as Hawthorn Pass if bells play eight; a ninth sound voids both.
- Viterra: Prince’s Writ can masquerade as Customs Seal for one audit before Audit Freeze ticks.
- Ubral: Black Ledger page buys one night of Guest-Token—if read aloud at Wergild Ford.
- Vhasia: Lighthouse Key spoofs a beacon on Beacon Crown/King’s High Road ferries once.
- Valewood: Serpent’s Mark = one-scene Way-Cord if dipped in Moon-Cistern.
- Ways Between: A complete Forged Manifest recited at a Threshold Arch becomes a Passage Token.

Clocks & Pressures

Levy Teeth (6) 1–2: Quayside “inspections” 3–4: Tithe brigades 5: Fire at the wrong warehouse 6: Floating gallows at Anchorhead.

Smuggler War (6) 1–2: Protection doubled 3–4: Routes trapped 5: Crews defect 6: Open water gunwales—everyone draws steel.

Gate Truce (4) 1: Coins tied on rope 2–3: Gate stays “neutral” 4: New Keeper named; reroute Tide Clock once/session.

Score Seeds

- The Eel That Spoke: A Cursed Cargo eel whispers court gossip from Thepyrgos; bottle it before Syndicate Split.
- Red Wake’s Shadow: Lift a Black Ledger page naming the Salt Prince’s heir; payment is Prince’s Coin—and a knife in the dark.
- Lighthouse Down: Swap the Lighthouse Key during a storm; success grants Kraken’s Favor, fail triggers Naval Blockade.

Designer Hooks (Optional)

Reefburn When you voluntarily take Heat to make a daring move, mark Reefburn. Once per session, spend Reefburn to treat the Serpent’s Spine as a safe exit regardless of tide—something else pays the price later.

Name-Mask Craft a single-scene alias with eel-ink; while worn, your Heat ticks to the mask, not you. If the mask “dies,” transfer 1 Debt to the faction who owned the name you stole.

Harbor Homage Sites & Lairs (drop-in districts)

- Chain-Gate Teeth — Twin boom-chains scarred by ramming hulks; oiled winches sing secrets if fed brine coins.
- Gallows" Net — Web of rigging strung over a tide-pool court; verdicts lowered on block-and-tackle.
- Coinsink Stairs — Weed-slick steps to a shrine that only counts offerings thrown blind.
- Red Wake’s Cradle — Drydock carved into a wreck’s ribs; timbers remember mutinies and whisper them back at night.
- Keelhouse Scriptorium — Sailmakers who stitch clauses into canvas; a mainsail can carry a contract farther than a courier.
- Eel-Bell Court — Tide-bells toll wrong hours; each clang grants sanctuary until the next wave touches your boots.
- Smokespine — Stack-maze where tar-fires never die; a breath of it makes lies taste like rope.
- Seven-Anchor Yard — Museum of seized anchors; the biggest still drags in storms, pulling rumors with it.

Urban Bestiary (palette)

- Brine Wraiths — Drowned debtors that cling like wet canvas. Signs: coins stack themselves; ropes unknot. Hook: return a name to Bone-Yard and they carry one whisper for you.
- Reef Serpents — Kelp-maned constrictors nesting in pilings. Signs: barnacles spell spirals; gulls won’t land. Hook: beat a net like a drum; they follow the rhythm, not the blood.
- Tar Gulls — Oil-dripped scavengers that trade trinkets for shine. Signs: black feathers on white foam. Hook: flash a mirror; they’ll fetch what you picture—once.
- Ledger Crabs — Carapaces etched with accounts; they rearrange ledgers in their sleep. Hook: feed them wormwood; they “forget” one debt for a tide.
- Knot-Hags — Wharf spirits that live in snarls; they tangle plans and lines equally. Hook: cut a sacrificial coil; they unknot one problem and braid another.
- Lampfishers — Tall, mask-eyed things seen under grates in Slack; they love secrets heavier than gold.

Dock Stock (d20 quick)

- 1 Tar bucket still warm; prints lead both directions.
- 2 Three-lantern code lit wrong; fourth is a watcher.
- 3 Rope with twelve splices; one is a message in sailor’s braid.
- 4 Crate labeled “salt”—full of sand and a single black coin.
- 5 Rust-red wake stain; no ship left that color.
- 6 Drift altar of bottle-glass; one bottle whispers back.
- 7 Bilge-water map sketched in mildew; only visible at ebb.
- 8 Hook with wedding ring; bent outward.
- 9 Ledger page soggy but legible; last line adds your cargo.
- 10 Eel skin pennon; points to the Serpent’s Spine when wet.
- 11 Tar handprint too large for any sailor; points toward Smuggler’s Gate.
- 12 Splinters arranged like teeth; bite if pocketed.
- 13 Tide-clock with missing hand; still keeps perfect Slack.
- 14 Harbour rat wearing a thread collar with a sigil bead.
- 15 Net weights stacked as a little gallows.
- 16 Driftwood idol with a knife in it; blood’s fresh, wood is dry.
- 17 Copper nail stamped with a crown you don’t recognize.
- 18 Coil of rope tied in a noose-knot that won’t tighten on liars.
- 19 Shells arranged as a charter seal; one is a listening ear.
- 20 Barnacle rosary; counting it makes footsteps pass you by.

Lair Seeds (d12 one-night jobs)

1. The Net-Queen’s Loft — A rigging den where favors are measured in fathoms.
2. Ink-Cellar — Eel-ink vats below a printshop; the walls remember every name printed.
3. Deadwake Chapel — Floods on Slack; boatmen marry their knives here.
4. Chainman’s Hostel — Beds locked with anchor chain; rent is paid in confessions.

5. Serpent Choir — Reef tunnel; the surf sings clauses backwards.
6. Gull-Tower — Pigeon roost gone feral; messages shredded unless fed offal.
7. Copperbone Yard — Scrapyard ships with copper ribs; sparks start rumors.
8. Salt-Judge's Dock — A retired warden tries cases for fishers at dawn bell.
9. Mask Market — One aisle where faces are rented for a tide.
10. Weeping Winch — Cranes that leak brine on liars; useful, hated.
11. The Quiet Slip — Sound dies; perfect for handoffs, bad for warnings.
12. Eel-Kiln — Smokehouse that preserves more than fish; memories steep in brine.

Relics & Finds (d10)

- 1 Tide-compass that points to Slack, not north.
- 2 Reef tooth key; opens any lighthouse once.
- 3 Brine-ink quill; contracts signed with it cannot be read aloud.
- 4 Salt prince's cufflink; bribes one guard, insults one captain.
- 5 Gaff with a prayer cut along the shaft; lifts curses, scars users.
- 6 Tarred ledger strap; binding a book with it hides one page from audits.
- 7 Barnacle brooch; pins a lie to someone else for a scene.
- 8 Foghorn reed; blown softly, turns footsteps to surf-noise.
- 9 Sea-glass seal; impresses a Forged Manifest as genuine once.
- 10 Eel-scale veil; wear it to be unseen by anything reflected in water.

Complication Twists (d8)

1. Tide Shift reveals a smugglers' stair and floods the only exit behind you.
2. Warehouse Fire was lit with rain; flames don't spread—smoke writes names.
3. Double-Cross includes your own counterfeit mark; someone sold your alias.
4. Prince's Levy is collected by a syndicate impostor; paying sparks a Blood Feud.
5. Plague Ship flies false flags; the plague is in the cargo, not the crew.
6. Voided Contract cites a clause only the Kraken's Tongue would know.
7. Naval Blockade uses fae buoys; they drift toward Forged Manifest holders.
8. Tide Forgets empties a canal and exposes a gallows with a still-kicking shadow.

Mini-Procedures (quick harbor play)

Cut a Wake When you need a clean exit through the Shallows, choose two and pay their costs:

- Speed: spend 1 Remount Hire equivalent (oars/crew) or mark Heat+1.
- Silence: leave a Cache rumor at a tavern; GM banks 1 SB.
- Cover: light a false beacon; start Levy Teeth+1.

Rope Court To settle a dispute without steel, each party knots a clause in one rope. Roll off; winner keeps their clause, loser's knot is cut and their stake is forfeit. Spending Serpent's Mark lets you retie one knot mid-judgment.

Boss Hooks (harbor crowns)

- Mist-Baroness — Controls the fog-candles; sells Slack on credit, calls it in on flood.
- Anchor Virtue — Exiled admiral preaching a stricter pirate code; her crews don’t drink on duty and never drown a debtor.
- The Red Notary — Tattoos charters into skin; burn him and an entire fleet loses papers.
- Lord of Eels — Fae broker in a salt circle; offers memory-for-manifest swaps at moonrise.

Extra Score Seeds

- The Rope Court Heist — Replace a clause-knot before dawn judgment; success flips Prince’s Levy to your rival.
- Fog-Candle Run — Steal three fog-candles from the Mist-Baroness; each lit scene rerolls the Tide Clock.
- Drowned Name Auction — Bid at Bone-Yard for a name that erases Debt; every bidder speaks from someone else’s mouth.

Chapter 15

Aelinnel (Aevrossa)

Stone, Bough, and Bright Things. The gnomish homeland isn't just a place where they count steps—it's a place where they worship the count, and oh, how the Aelinnel love a good loophole in their beloved numerology. They count everything: steps, bells, offerings—because to them, precision isn't just virtue; it's leverage with a supernatural clause. I sold them a counting machine that uses gears instead of fingers—not because I believed in their craft, but because I knew the Master Counter was drowning in debt to a Tulkani loan shark over a miscounted bell toll, and he'd sign anything to make the collector go away. They paid in a tide-path key that lets me cross the Inland Sea at any tide—made of coral, stamped with the Aelinnel seal, and guaranteed by the High Tide-Warder's own oath. The key is made of coral. It grows. I have to trim it every season... which is why I sell the trimmings as “lucky charms” to the Veiled Sisters. “Wear this coral,” I tell them, “and the tide will always favour your schemes.” (It won't. But the Sisters believe it—and belief is just leverage with a prayer.)

[Thimble: Sir, the Aelinnel Counting Accord Article 9 explicitly forbids—]

[Edgewalker: Counting accord? Thimble, my anxious little gear-counter, counting accords are just leverage with a tooth—especially when I've bought the Master Counter's silence with a machine that doesn't count steps... it invents them. Now, about that tide-path key... the High Tide-Warder's daughter has a lovely secret. I wonder what her weight in coral looks like?]

15.1 Aelinnel (Gnomes) — “Stone, Bough, and Bright Things”

Elite (Stone Prince of Aelinnel)

“The law here flows like water over stone – it finds its own path, and woe to those who try to dam it with paper and pretense. The earth itself will testify against the unjust.”

Commoner (Charcoal-burner clan who read draught and omen by smoke)

“Our kilns tell us more than your books ever could. When the smoke curls left, the tide's with you. When it splits in three, best stay by your own hearth till it burns straight again. And never trust a court that speaks in only one ledger.”

Stone, Bough, and Bright Things

Aelinnel homeland of Aevrossa clings to the Dolmis coast beneath the shadow of the Valewood, its halls threaded through granite and hawthorn, its roads counted by antler-posts and moonlit courtesy. Here, promises have weight and silence has meaning. Even steps are safe, odd words are careful, and truths are traded like copper nails – bright, useful, and slightly poisonous in the wrong pocket.

To the north, the Valewood looms; to the south, the downs of Amedell where the Aelaerem keep their red doors. The Green Gate sometimes opens onto halfling barrows – a fact neither people speaks of aloud.

Yet no single crown rules the gnomish lands. Dozens of courts, guilds, and seasonal pacts weave a shifting lattice of loyalty. Some Aelinnel hold fast to ancient fae treaties, speaking in two ledgers and never carrying naked iron; others barter in the Green Market with pragmatic coin, treating courtesy as a bargaining chip; still others vanish into the deep woods, listening to stag-roads and root-galleries where the Wild Hunt sometimes rides. The gnomish heart is divided – and that division is their shield against the fae.

Craft and courtesy govern every traffic between mortal keeps and the courts under the hill. Gnomish stone-singers tune bridges with a hum that keeps the Green Gate at bay; forester-wardens hammer copper where iron would draw unwanted attention. In markets under living roofs, a sentence can be cut to fit a purse, and a memory can be wrapped for travel. Paths sometimes shorten for those who keep good count, and lengthen for those who sneer at patterns. The fae are never rude – but they are never safe.

At a Glance

- Atmosphere: Moonlit groves, polite iron, and the uncanny weight of a promise.
- Key Conflict: What is said versus what is meant; fae courtesy versus mortal bluntness.
- Notable Threats: Glamour fog, iron offense, geas-catch, the Green Gate yawning at the wrong hour.
- Common Rewards: Hazel tokens, tide-path keys, oath-beads, and the Wild Hunt's clemency.

Prominent NPCs of Aelinnel

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Thorn	Lady of Thorns, Sovereign of the Hawthorn Court	Remind mortals that courtesy is a leash, not a gift	She never repeats herself. Her silences are verdicts.
Caelum Viridant	Green Knight, Warden of the Stag-Roads	Test the worthy and trap the careless	His armour is woven from living boughs that bleed when he lies.

Eilidh Stone-Prince	Mortal ruler of the Hall of Aelinnel	Keep the old pacts indexed and the fae at arm’s length	She speaks only in conditional tense. No one has heard a declarative sentence from her lips in seven years.
Riven	Huntsman of the Moonlit Ride	Chase down debts, oaths, and those who flee the Green Gate	His horn is carved from a fossilised scream. He only blows it when the debt is nine days old.
Tallow	Charcoal-burner (commoner exemplar)	Read the smoke and warn the village before the fae come	He has never lost a sheep to the Hollow. He has lost three helpers who did not listen.
Sable	Green-Market Broker	Trade truths for trinkets, and never lose the margin	Her receipts are written on leaf-vein paper. They curl when the bargain is unbalanced.

Names of Aelinnel

Aelinnel names are built from soft vowels (ae, ei, ui, oi) and liquid consonants (l, r, n, m) with occasional sharp endings (-k, -t, -x). Surnames are often taken from a notable grove, a tide-mark, or an ancestor’s defining courtesy. They evoke the sound of water over stone and wind through hawthorn.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Caelum	Eilidh	Thornweave	the Green-Wise
Riven	Sable	Tidespeak	Two-Tongue
Tallow	Merrow	Evenstep	the Unseen Guest
Fennel	Briar	Hawthorn	Barrow-Kept
Osprey	Vesper	Silverbough	the Uncounted
Linden	Ash	Foxtail	Ash-Finger

The Three Courts: Aelinnel Alignments

Aelinnel society is not a single crown but a lattice of courts, guilds, and seasonal pacts. Three broad stances shape their dealings with outsiders and with the fae. Most gnomes shift between these postures depending on the season, the tide, and who is asking.

- Thorn–Courteous (Fae–Lean) – These gnomes keep the old pacts with the Lady of Thorns and the Green Knight. They speak in two ledgers, never carry naked iron, and treat every threshold as a negotiation. They are the ones who remind visitors to count their steps and pour no ninth cup. Clocks: COURTESY DEBT [4], HAWTHORN PATIENCE [6].
- Market–Square (Trade–Lean) – These gnomes prioritize the Green Market, the Under-Market, and the flow of quartz, copper, and name-script. They are pragmatic, will use iron if it is gilded, and view fae courtesies as bargaining chips rather than sacred laws. Clocks: TARIFF DISPUTE [4], MARKET DOMINANCE [6].
- Forester–Trusted (Wild–Lean) – These gnomes live among the stag-roads and root-galleries, closer to the stone-singers and the tree-wardens. They speak the old names of tides and groves, and they are the first to notice when the thorn blight spreads or the moonwell stains a name wrong. Clocks: ROOT CALLING [4], WILD HUNT INTEREST [6].

Most Aelinnel characters and settlements fall somewhere between these poles, and the same gnome might wear a different mask when trading at the Green Market than when walking the stag-roads.

Spades — Places (stone spires, sea-rock, deep woods)

2. (Tide/Mystery) Tide-rift steps cut into black rock; limpets and old votive nails keep count for those who forget.
 3. (Magic/Transformation) Moonwell basin in a granite bowl; coins turn green in a week, names in a season.
 4. (Music/Stone) Dolmen stair up a ridge; each capstone rings a different interval if you tap it true.
 5. (Magic/Secrecy) Charcoal coppice under witch-hazel; a neat ash-heap hides a door that opens on even knocks only.
 6. (Nature/Music) Basalt organ cliffs: sea-caves breathe like slow bellows; the wind prefers prime numbers.
 7. (Nature/Tradition) Stag Road – game-trail marked by antler-posts; hooves know it best, maps accept it grudgingly.
 8. (Magic/Purity) Quartz spring where the sand shines like ground stars; drinkers tell the same story with better structure.
 9. (Fae/Visibility) Elf-causey of pale flags through a marsh; visible at dawn and dusk and whenever someone is counting aloud.
 10. (Underground/Living) Root gallery under an oak hill; lanterns hang from living bark – two lit, one listening.
- J (Death/Music) Barrow gallery with stone chimes; a cold draft from below plays scales no throat can sing.
- Q (Fae/Danger) Thorn Court ring – hawthorns trained into arches; petals fall like knife-points and settle into proofs.

- K (Civilization/Magic) Hall of Aelinnel: a timber keep threaded between standing stones; floors level themselves for guests.
- A (Otherworld/Gate) The Green Gate in a sea-arch; at certain tides it opens to a forest not on any map, and expects exact change.

Hearts — People & Factions (keepers, courts, craftsmen, hunters)

2. (Practical/Knowledge) Goat-herd of the stone edges – measures danger in hoof-widths; never wrong twice.
 3. (Craft/Divination) Charcoal-burner clan who read draught and omen by smoke; their kilns hum in thirds.
 4. (Magic/Commerce) Hedge-witch with a pocket of thorns and prices stated in unlesses.
 5. (Craft/Magic) Stone-singer (quarryman) whose hum finds a seam and a secret; walls relax when they pass.
 6. (Nature/Courtesy) Forester-warden with copper nails and a polite dislike of iron; paths obey their hammer.
 7. (Nature/Tradition) Reed-net fisher who knows when the selkies listen; mends nets to lullabies in 5s and 8s.
 8. (Law/Magic) Oath-carver who sets promises in quartz so they can be seen; breaks none, bends many.
 9. (Navigation/Guidance) Way-keeper of the Stag Road; never lost, often followed, sometimes found ahead.
 10. (Commerce/Magic) Green-market broker trading truths for trinkets and back again; receipts in leaf-vein script.
- J (Fae/Authority) Green Knight – antler helm, mirror-bright blade, courtesy old as frost; keeps a tally of saved insults.
- Q (Fae/Power) Lady of Thorns, sovereign of a hawthorn court; smiles like a snare and forgives in exact measures.
- K (Authority/Magic) Stone Prince of Aelinnel, mortal crown with fae debts properly indexed and current.
- A (Hunt/Destiny) Huntsman of the Moonlit Ride; his horn turns shortcuts into roads, and debts into destinations.

Clubs — Complications/Threats (glamour, geasa, weather, neighbors)

2. (Illusion/Disorientation) Glamour fog; time drifts, footfalls don’t match, conversations arrive neatly folded.
3. (Offense/Magic) Iron offense – someone brought the wrong nails to the right grove; paths take it personally.
4. (Magic/Displacement) Root-slide pulls a trail two ridges away while you blink; your footprints stay where they were.
5. (Magic/Physics) Wrong tide at the sea-arch; boats rise where arithmetic says no and physics excuses itself.

6. (Magic/Binding) Spoken geas catches on an unlucky word; the task names itself and refuses synonyms.
 7. (Commerce/Magic) Green Market price: payment demanded in names and memories; change returned in riddles.
 8. (Death/Complaint) Stone-wight stirs in a barrow; echoes hate company and file complaints as drafts.
 9. (Time/Magic) Lost day – the sun miscounts; your dawn arrives at supper and demands bread.
 10. (Nature/Curse) Thorn blight crawls across orchards; pruners bleed stories that grow where they drip.
- J (Hunt/Duty) Stag horn sounds; everyone owes the chase – especially you, especially now.
- Q (Fae/Law) Thorn Court tithe levied on the Hall; arrests wear flowers and quote etiquette.
- K (Nature/Conflict) Muster of the Bough – forest banners rise; travel becomes trespass by default.
- A (Otherworld/Logic) Green Gate yawns at the wrong hour; roads rewire across your path with excellent logic.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage (charms, passes, host-rights, exceptions)

2. (Magic/Protection) Hazel token – step through a hedge uncut, once; the scratch you did not get will remember you kindly.
 3. (Utility/Rebellion) Salt license – carry and use ward-salt where it's discouraged; doors frown and open anyway.
 4. (Magic/Authority) Dolmen carving-right – inscribe a name or claim on a speaking stone; arguments quiet while you carve.
 5. (Hospitality/Fae) Guest-bough from the Thorn Court – one night's safe table among thorns; knives behave.
 6. (Magic/Access) Quarry allotment of clear quartz; subtle doors open to its bearer if asked in the right tense.
 7. (Commerce/Magic) Green Market voucher – buy a truth at face value (today only); tomorrow costs interest.
 8. (Magic/Binding) Oath-bead; a spoken promise warms the bead when kept, chills when not, glows if misunderstood.
 9. (Travel/Magic) Tide-path key – lawful crossing of a named sea-cave at neap; the cave will wait.
 10. (Nature/Permission) Forest truce – hunt, cut, or travel through a warded copse without offense; the birds file no reports.
- J (Protection/Fae) Green Knight escort from ridge to gate; watchers bow, paths part, insults lodge elsewhere.
- Q (Fae/Authority) Private audience with the Lady of Thorns; a whisper exits as policy with petals attached.
- K (Authority/Magic) Stone Prince's seal – levies defer, foresters guide, scribes stop arguing and fetch tea.
- A (Hunt/Protection) Wild Hunt clemency – ride under the horn for one night; no hound will take you, no debt will sleep.

Quick use notes

- Draw until all four suits appear: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5→4, 6–10→6, J/Q/K→8, A→10).
- Treat Diamonds as codified outcomes (charms/passes/host-rights) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo dark fae motifs: antlers in shadow, petals that cut, a tide that breathes, and a shortcut that insists on proper payment.

Additional Features

- Two-Ledger Courtesies: Once per scene, a character who states both what they say and what they mean (in or out of character) may shift Position one step safer on a social roll against a fae or fae-touched being. The GM may demand a small token (a copper coin, a knotted thread) as earnest.
- Copper over Iron: When the party visibly favours copper or brass tools over iron in fae-facing scenes, gain +1 assist die from locals (or avoid a –1 penalty) for acts of courtesy, passage, or petition. Iron is not forbidden – it is simply impolite, and impoliteness is remembered.
- The Unsaid Clause: In any bargain or promise, if the players explicitly leave one term unspoken (but agreed upon by all at the table), the GM may bank 1 SB to introduce a complication later where that omission becomes the hinge of the deal. The fae love what is not said.

Courtesies of the Green Gate

- Never bring naked iron past a hawthorn arch unless it is gilded or named. Copper is polite, silver is opinionated, cold iron is an accusation.
- Always return what points the way. Way-cords, antler-posts, chalk. Borrow the path; do not keep it. The fae count what you take.
- Speak debts in the daylight. Promises made under lantern-boughs are heard by leaves as well as by law. The Green Gate listens.
- The ninth cup is never poured. Leave it empty for the uninvited guest. If you pour it, drink it yourself – and hope the guest does not arrive.

Pattern & Paranoia

Aelinnel gnomes are known for their careful attention to pattern, sequence, and the unspoken. Some say they see the world as a set of nested rules – each interaction a move in a game where the stakes are never declared. This is not a flaw; it is a survival trait. The fae do not lie, but they mislead; they do not break promises, but they interpret them. To live beside the Green Gate, one must learn to read the fine print before the bargain is struck – and to recognise that some fine print is written in invisible ink. Outsiders often find Aelinnel courtesy exhausting. The gnomes find outsider bluntness endearing – and fatal.

Thematic SB Spend Table (Aelinnel)

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from thorn-courtiers or forest-wardens.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby stone-singers or green-market traders.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for stag-road trackers or oath-carvers.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable tide.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Green Knight or Lady of Thorns' herald becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to glamour fog or root-slide.
- Foe Appears: A stone-wight or thorn blight spirit arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional fae courtiers, forester-wardens, or stag-horn riders arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - geas triggers/green gate opens/iron offense declared.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Lady of Thorns, Stone Prince, or Huntsman of the Moonlit Ride intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - tide turns/green gate yawns/thorn blight spreads.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options (Aelinnel)

- Courtesy & Geas (1–3 SB): A hawthorn arch closes behind you; copper tools glow with fae attention; a polite phrase becomes a binding geas. The fae have noted your manners – or your lack thereof.

- Glamour (1–2 SB): Conversations arrive folded and misaddressed; time drifts unexpectedly; your footfalls no longer match your steps. The Green Gate breathes.
- The Unsaid (1–2 SB): An omission you did not know you made becomes the price of passage. The Lady of Thorns smiles. You do not know why.

Aelinnel — Tidal Bargains

In... a tide-shed at dawn, a gnomish reeve offers passage on a sealed barge. “The Green Gate opens at neap tide. What we trade there, the Dolmis will not name.”

External Clocks Threat: Green Gate Thirst [6]; Community: Dockside Fear [4]; Anchor: Barge Oath [4].

Complications Freshwater turns brackish; the cargo sings; a rival reeve boards with knives.

Anchors at Risk A PC’s river-kin; the barge’s blessing.

Relief Offer a river-gift; carry a name written in river-mud across the threshold; spend 2 to seal the leak for a scene.

Faction Entanglements

- Stone–Singer Conclave: Sponsor a bridge-chant or way-tuning and bank a Harmonic Favor—spend to shift Position one step safer on any passage across worked stone or living root. Skip their rites and the first crossing this leg gains a free “Lock/Barrier” SB as paths sulk.
- Forester–Wardens: Accept copper-nail protocols to cancel the first Fae Offense SB in a wood scene. Drive iron stakes or break taboo and mark a 4-segment Polite Apology clock you must clear before locals assist you again.
- Green-Market Brokers: Submit an itemized truth (what was said / what was meant) to reduce barter DV by 1 for the scene. Try to haggle on single-ledger terms, and the market tags you with Exact Change Only—all bargains hereafter demand a tithe of memory or name until appeased.
- Oath–Carvers" Guild: Have a promise set in quartz to gain a Visible Oath token; spend to treat one social test as if aided by a reputable witness. Breaking a quartz-oath spawns a 4-segment Shattered Nuance clock that complicates future negotiations.

- Tide-Reeves: File a tide-plan before neap to earn a Tide Window—ignore one tidal timing penalty this leg. Skipping the ledger adds a free “Wrong Tide” SB the first time you touch the Dolmis.

Cross-Regional Ties & Soft Power

- Way of Silk Interface: Kon"reh-counted caravans that adopt Aelinnel step-metrics (even steps, counted halts) gain +1 die to avoid ambushes on the Way this arc. Breaking count invites a free “Glamour Fog” SB at the next way-shrine.
- Aeler Standards (Rods & Wards): Recognize Aeler measures publicly to reduce dispute DV by 1 with dwarven legates; insist on gnomish dual-ledger and foreign merchants grumble—first mixed-market scene gains an “Assay Doubt” SB.
- Vhasia/Viterra Complications: Vhasian hedge-duties (wood rites) and Viterra tithe-scripts (grain flows) cross your ledgers. When either region is “Stressed,” add +1 DV to Green-Market exports that travel their roads unless you carry a Forest Truce or Tithe Waiver.
- Valewood Fallout: On a Valewood Weather signal, fae proofs spill downslope; counting etiquette cancels the first navigation SB each scene, but any iron shown gains a free “Fae Complaint” SB (even among humans). Aelaerem hospitality rites mitigate this: presenting guest-loaf removes one such complaint per hall.

Trade Goods & Consequences

- Quartz & Proof-Stone: Donate clear quartz to a shrine to bank a Seen Promise—once, treat a murky contract as if properly witnessed. Peddle clouded quartz as “ritual grade” and spawn a roaming Counterfeit Proof inquiry clock.
- Copper Etiquette Kits: Issuing copper over iron in mixed courts grants +1 assist die on petitions; flooding markets with cheap copper pins offends foresters—add a “Copper Resentment” tag that raises DV in wood jurisdictions until you make amends.
- Name-Script & Memory Wraps: Legal export of name-script lowers espionage DV by 1 for allies who carry it. Smuggling wraps risks a Name-Tax—first customs scene converts 1 SB into a compelled disclosure.
- Tide Rights & Barge Seals: Funding barge-seals creates a Waiting Cave—once per arc the cave “waits” an extra beat for your crew. Ignoring seal-maintenance flips it: first Dolmis crossing suffers “Wrong Hour” SB.

Patron Networks (Patterns & Thresholds)

- Sacred Geometry: Chalk a golden-mean spiral at a ford to reroll one failed prediction/trajectory check this leg; doing so in view of fae courts adds a 2-segment Proof Envied clock.
- The Sealed Gate: Hawthorn-gilded door-nails act as single-use stay writs: negate one forced entry or pursuit at a hedge-gate.
- Lunara: Counting under moonlight lets you ask one terse yes/no about a hidden path; on a Miss, secrets spread—mark Exposure +1 in the nearest Green Market.
- The Traveler: Antler-posts double as wayshrines; leave a copper and recite a sequence to finish one travel clock tick for free on forest legs.

Field Procedures (Use At the Table)

- Two–Ledger Talk: When parley stalls, the GM asks: “What was said? What was meant?” If players state both, cancel the first social SB this scene; if they refuse, the next bargain demands collateral (memory/name).
- Count or Be Counted: At any fae-touched crossing, a player who audibly counts in a fitting sequence (steps, heartbeats, breaths) shifts Position one step safer for that crossing. Boasting or mocking numbers adds a free “Geas Catches” SB.
- Copper Courtesy Check: Producing copper/brass tools in a ritual space removes the first Fae Offense tag this scene; drawing iron instead escalates the next Complication by +1 Cap.

Diplomatic Favor & Reputation Echoes

- Hazel Favors (minor resource): Earned by returning way-cords, restoring antler posts, or paying tide-dues. Spend to downgrade a Glamour or Geas complication once per leg.
- Alignment Reputation:
 - Thorn-Courteous: Doors of the hawthorn courts open a step easier; human clerks distrust your clauses (first city office DV +1).
 - Market-Square: Brokers vouch your weights; rival stalls circulate riddled slander—add a trailing Folded Rumor clock.
 - Forester-Trusted: Paths shorten for you once per journey; port inspectors assume concealed copper—first harbor search gains a free “Alarm Raised” SB unless declared up front.

Boss Archetypes in Aelinnel

Court & Courtesy (Fae Sovereigns)

- Lady of Thorns (Etiquette Engine): Punishes breaches with precise harms, rewards perfect courtesy with literal boons. Win by satisfying three courtesies in sequence (no iron, two-ledger speech, return the waymark).
- Green Knight (Trial by Pattern): Duel of paths and proofs, not blades. Win by presenting a higher-count route (Fibonacci, even-steps) or yielding a deserved apology at the right number.

Threshold & Hunt (Environment that Judges)

- Moonlit Ride (Wild Hunt): Three phases—Sounding (horns), Coursing (paths shorten for the bold), Closing the Ring. Win by naming safe-clemency, joining the chase without taking a prey, or blowing the right counter-call (2–3–5).
- Green Gate (Living Crossing): Demands exact change in truths. Win by paying a memory that fits the posted proof; forcing passage triggers “Roads Rewired.”

Numbers & Glamour (Logical Anomalies)

- Glamour Fog (Layered Illusion): Each layer dispelled by a correct count, courtesy, or copper rite. Win by completing the Three Proofs: count aloud, return a borrowed path token, trade a said/meant receipt.
- Lost Day (Time Mismatch): The sun misnumbers hours. Win by reconciling two ledgers (what happened / what should have), then ringing a prime-number chime.

Market & Oath (Contract Tricksters)

- Green-Market Broker (Truth Arbitrage): Buys your meanings, sells your words. Win by catching them in a one-ledger statement or producing an Oath-Bead that chills (misunderstood clause).
- Oath-Carver Gone Wrong (Quartz Tyrant): Binds towns with over-precise promises. Win by carving a Release Unless into communal quartz at cost of a public truth.

Stone & Memory (Ancestral Hazards)

- Stone-Wight Chorus (Echo Jurors): Resent footsteps, adore proofs. Win by tapping the dolmen scale that matches the grievance and returning a taken token to the barrow.

Boss Mechanics (Use 2–3 levers)

- Courtesy Track [4]: Each breach (iron bared, skipping greetings, single-ledger lie) ticks it. On fill, boss gains Polite Punishment: escalate DV +1 and impose a Geas.
- Counting Proofs (three steps): Name a pattern, perform it, return a waymark. Completing all three lowers boss tier for one exchange or ends a phase.
- Said/Meant Ledgers: Any bargain scene runs two mini-clocks; if Said fills first, glamour favors the boss; if Meant fills first, PCs gain a Visible Oath token.
- Iron Offense Meter [0–3]: Showing iron, striking hawthorn, or salting impolitely raises it. At 3, fae gain a free “Thorn Blight” SB; reduce by copper rites or gifts.
- Hunt Phases: Sounding (fear checks; pass to gain +1 die to pace), Coursing (paths shorten for counted strides), Closing (only truth-payment or clemency halts the circle).
- Lair Actions (pick two): Fold the Conversation (re-target a statement); Shift the Count (odd ↔ even penalties); Petal Cut (apply 1 Harm unless copper shown); Wrong Tide (swap entry/exit costs at a gate).

Chapter 16

Aelaerem

Hearth & Hollow. The halfling downs aren't just a place where they keep the Hollow at bay—they're a marketplace for fear, and oh, how the Aelaerem love a good bargain on safety. They use red threads and offerings not out of piety, but because they know the Hollow's attention is a commodity—and they'll pay dearly to avoid it. I sold them a system of copper bells that ring when the Hollow crosses a boundary—not because I cared about their peace, but because I knew the Boundary-Warder's deputy was terrified of his own shadow, and he'd pay in hollow cups for bells that seemed to warn him. They paid in a hollow cup—proof that a debt was paid to the Hollow itself, stamped with the Aelaerem seal and guaranteed by the Elder-Circle's own oath. I've used it to bargain with Debt-Walkers twice. The third time? The cup cracked. Not from age—from my tampering with the clay during the “blessing.” I'm not going back for a replacement. Why? Because I can sell the idea of a hollow cup to the next desperate halfling: “Pay me upfront, and I'll give you a document that says your debt to the Hollow is settled... by the very Debt-Walker I'm about to send to collect it.” Beautiful.

[Thimble: Sir, the Aelaerem Hollow Oath Article 5 forbids—]

[Edgewalker: Hollow oath? Thimble, my dear, little thread-counter, hollow oaths are just leverage with a shiver—especially when I've bought the Boundary-Warder's deputy's silence with a bell that doesn't ring when the Hollow crosses... it invites it in. Now, about that hollow cup... the Elder-Circle's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in broken cups looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 2 of the Elder-Circle's Ledger—]

[Edgewalker: Elder-Circle's ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I've got a Debt-Walker war to start in Aelaerem, and if you mention “Clause 2” one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the next hollow cup as kindling. They prefer it cracked.]

16.1 Aelaerem (Halflings) — “Hearth & Hollow”

Apple-Matron (Elite): “A proper harvest feast requires three things: the finest cider aged in the right barrel, a guest-loaf baked with intention, and the wisdom to know when to invite the quiet ones to sit by the fire.”

Miller (Commoner): “My geese know a stranger's step from a mile off, and they've never been wrong. If they start honking at noon, you best check your larder – someone's coming who wasn't invited. And when the Hollow walks, the only safe place is a lit hearth with the ninth cup unpoured.”

Theme & Atmosphere

In Amedell, the Aelaerem keep their bonds with bread, bells, and careful counting. Lanes run under ash and hawthorn; doors reddened with thread promise a seat and a story to any who step right. Their magic is housekeeping writ large – thresholds groomed, names jarred like jam, the Hollow fed with silence and the ninth cup left unpoured. When the Neighbors stir beneath the barrows, the folk answer with kettle songs and lantern law, and the fields behave because someone asked them to. Hospitality here is not kindness—it is a covenant. Every meal is a promise, every gift a thread, every candle an argument against the dark. Amedell lies south of the Aelinnel homeland of Aevrossa, separated by the rolling downs and the slow waters of the River Adder. The two small-folk peoples share trade in red thread, copper, and seasonal hospitality, though the Aelaerem keep a wary distance from the fae-touched gnomish courts. It is on the Southeastern coast of the Dolmis, although the Aelaerem are rarely out to sea beyond costal fishing.

What you notice first: The smell of baking bread and old apples. The way every threshold has a red thread tied at eye level. The silence of children when a stranger passes the village stone.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never refuse an offered cup. The Hollow counts refusals as invitations. Pour the ninth cup for the empty chair, and you may feed it—or feed it.

Regional Mood: Warm Hearths, Cold Thresholds

Here, the land is not wilderness—it is a living weave of favors and omissions. The Aelaerem do not build walls; they build hedges, stiles, and the careful geometry of guest-right. A red door means bread, salt, and one safe night if you come honest. A cup-mark stone on the verge accepts butter as a prayer. The watch-geese know your step before you do, and the scarecrow turns to face the road when the Hollow is hungry. The Neighbors—the things that live under the barrows, in the uncounted ninth step, in the space between the candle and its shadow—are not enemies. They are neighbors. And neighbors, if treated politely, will stay on their side of the hedge.

Starting Location: A cider-press barn perfumed with crushed apples and rain, where masks hang from beams awaiting the next festival. The Apple-Matron sits on a stool of woven twigs. Behind her, a Moot Oak leaf bleeding red sap onto a stone. “The Hollow walks early this year,” she says. “The Moot Oak bleeds wine. Will you speak for the field, or let the Neighbors claim it? Speak true—the geese are listening.”

Prominent NPCs of Aelaerem

------	------------	------------	----------------

Oria “Crimson Door”	Apple-Matron of the Harvest Moot	Keep the Hollow at bay and the feasts true	She pours the first cup for the eldest, the ninth for the empty chair. Never takes the ninth herself.
Bram	Miller of the Watch-Geese	Protect the village from unseen strangers	His geese have names; one is “Stranger,” and it has never been wrong.
Celia	Hedge-Witch Midwife	Tie red thread and untie feuds before they fester	Her thread is from her own hair. She never cuts it—only knots it.
Drogo	Thresher-King (seasonal)	Lead the harvest rites and keep the sheaf’s secret	Chosen by the last sheaf, which is always a little damp.
Alda	Lantern-Warden of the Downs	Trim the lamps and know which shadows are wrong	Lights them in a pattern that is a prayer.
Finnian	Mummers’ Captain	Guard the masks and the laws of festival	The masks are not carved. They are grown.

(Lanes/Orchards/Mills/Downs/Barrows) Willow ford with flat stones and a bowed pollard that remembers faces; cider-press barn with sweet reek, old songs, doors that stick after dusk; chalk sheep-downs with a turf maze cut like a wheel.

Spades — Places

2. Willow Ford — Flat stones, bowed pollard that remembers faces. The willow has a name. It will tell you if you sit beneath it and listen.
 3. Cider-Press Barn — Sweet reek, old songs, doors that stick after dusk. The press was built from a barrow oak. The oak still dreams.
 4. Chalk Sheep-Downs — Turf maze cut like a wheel; sheep know the pattern. The maze is a prayer. Walk it backward to ask a favor.
 5. Millpond Under Alders — The wheel turns some nights without water. The water is not water. It is the memory of rain.
 6. Bluebell Wood Path — Rabbit-gates and snares set by careful hands. The snares are for the Hollow. They catch only shadows—mostly.
 7. Hedge-Tunnel Lane — Between fields; nine stiles, locals count “eight-and-one.” The ninth stile is a gap in the hedge. Step through, and the lane behind you changes.
 8. Cup-Mark Stone on the Verge — Butter left in niches goes missing kindly. The butter vanishes before dawn. The Hollow leaves a pebble in exchange.
 9. Barrow-by-the-Beech — Bees go quiet at noon. The bees are not sleeping. They are listening.
 10. Market Green — Maypole and stocks; carved village stones turned inward. The stones face the green. They watch the maypole dance—and the dancers.
- J Dovecote Hill — The scarecrow faces the road, not the rows. The scarecrow has a face. It is the face of the last person who broke guest-right.
- Q Mother’s Orchard — Rows straighten if you don’t look—curve if you do. The orchard is a promise. Break it, and the apples will taste of ash.
- K Moot Oak — Lantern nails hammered deep; benches at the roots. The nails are from a hundred feuds. Each one holds a grudge.
- A Hollow Field — A ring where no plow will hold a line, not for any coin. The field is a mouth. It has not fed in a century.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Hedge-Witch Midwife — Ties red thread, unties feuds, and knows which births the Hollow watches. Her thread is from her own hair. She never cuts it—only knots it.
3. Miller — Watch-geese that remember faces; better sentries than men. The geese have names. One is “Stranger.” It has never been wrong.
4. Orchard Reeve — Tally-stick, cider-stained smile, and a list of who owes what harvest. His tally-stick is an apple branch. The notches grow back.
5. Beekeeper — Keeps odd honey aside for “winter churches.” The honey is from barrow flowers. It tastes of earth and old promises.

6. Shepherd — Bone whistle that calls dogs—and other things. The whistle is from a wolf. The wolf still answers.
7. Lantern-Warden — Trims lamps and knows which shadow is wrong. She lights the lamps in a pattern. The pattern is a prayer to keep the Hollow back.
8. Mummers’ Captain — Chest of masks, stricter rules than church. The masks are not carved. They are grown.
9. Traveling Tinker — Bright kettles, dull knife for cutting oaths. The knife was his father’s. His father used it to cut a promise with the Hollow.
10. Bailiff of the Moot Oak — Polite as a noose, carries a tally of grudges. His tally is bark. The writing grows deeper each year.
- J Wold-Wardens — Elders who swear by hedges, not crowns. They measure time in hedge-layers. A hedge that has grown for a century has a hundred opinions.
- Q Apple-Matron — Hostess of harvest feasts; power sits where she pours. She pours the first cup for the eldest, the second for the guest, the eighth for the fire. The ninth cup is for the empty chair.
- K Thresher-King — A title that moves but never leaves; harvest robes, seasonal authority. He is chosen by the last sheaf. The sheaf is always a little damp.
- A The Pale Shepherd — Comes when lambs are born and when people go missing. He has no face. His hat is a shadow.

(Folk Omens/Rites/Beasts/Night) Unseasonal fog; the road walks you back to your own gate. Scarecrow turns; it watches the lane, not the field. Black sow through the orchard; hooves scuff every charm.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Unseasonal Fog — The road walks you back to your own gate. The gate is closed. The latch is red. Do not touch it.
3. Scarecrow Turns — It watches the lane, not the field. The scarecrow’s head follows you. The crows are silent.
4. Soured Wassail — The bowl gives back names you did not speak. The names are of people who died last winter. They are not listed in any tally.
5. Black Sow in the Orchard — Hooves scuff every charm. The sow was a woman once. She broke a vow.
6. Hive-Swarm at Dusk — Smoke curls the wrong way. The bees are spelling a word. The word is “guest.”
7. Old Song Taken Up by Children — Adults remember the verse none should sing. The verse is about a barrow that opened. The children think it is a lullaby.
8. Lanterns Burn Blue at the Ford — Crossing costs more than coin. The blue light is a toll-keeper. Payment is a story—or a secret.
9. Out-of-Season Mumming — Masks stick; faces won’t come off. The masks are warm. They have a heartbeat.
10. Chalk Maze Fills with Mist — You step out somewhere older. The mist has a smell—old wool and older bread.

- J Church Bell Rings Thirteen — Something attends the sermon. The thirteenth pew is empty. The dust on it is fresh.
- Q Harvest Tithe Demanded — Hands gloved in leaves. The hands do not belong to anyone in the village.
- K Moot Oak Bleeds Sap — The color of wine; talk turns to knives. The sap is warm. It tastes of blood and honey.
- A The Hollow Opens — Burrows and barrows connect; footfalls answer underground. The footsteps are counting. They stop at eight.

(Blessings/Tokens/Host-Rights) Guest-loaf and salt—one night's safe board anywhere with a red door; cider-mark—a free cup on the green buys gossip and patience.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Guest-Loaf & Salt — One night's safe board anywhere with a red door. The loaf is barley and rye. Break it with the host, and the Hollow will not cross the threshold—for one night.
 3. Cider-Mark — A free cup on the green buys gossip and patience. The mark is a notch on a barrel. The tapster will remember you—or pretend not to.
 4. Hedge-Pass Ribbon — Step through any thicket unsnagged, once. The ribbon is red. Tie it to a branch, and the thorns will part—once.
 5. Bee-Queen Share — Honey and a warning from the hives when danger nears. The honey is from a queen who died last year. Her ghost still guards the comb.
 6. Shepherd's Whistle — Dogs and door-bolts heed you for one scene. The whistle is a knucklebone. Blow it, and the dogs will obey—or they will hide.
 7. Lantern-Writ — The lamps stay lit along your path despite wind. The writ is a bell. Ring it, and the lamps will not flicker—until dawn.
 8. Mummers' License — Lawful mask and after-dark crossing for a feast day. The license is a wooden mask. Wear it, and the Hollow will see a stranger—not a guest.
 9. Orchard Right — Pick at Mother's Orchard without offense; the fruit hides a truth. The fruit is a secret. Bite it, and the secret will become yours—or it will become you.
 10. Mill Token — The wheel turns at any hour, grain or rumor ground. The token is a millstone chip. Feed it to the wheel, and it will grind anything—truths included.
- J Apple-Matron's Blessing — Hands help unseen when you ask no coin. The blessing is a cup. Pour it out in trouble, and the fields will send rain—or roots.
- Q Private Moot Under the Oak — Elders hear you alone; precedent sticks. The moot is held at midnight. The oak's roots are the jury.
- K Thresher-King's Guard — Six red-hooded harvesters escort you; doors open. Their hoods are the color of dried blood. They do not speak.
- A Pale Shepherd's Clause — Once, the Hollow will not notice you; pass uncounted. The clause is a silence. The Hollow will step aside—and will remember that it did.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).

- Diamonds are codified outcomes (blessings/tokens/host-rights) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo Hearth & Hollow motifs—quiet bells, red thread, watch-geese, footsteps under the soil—so the dread feels woven through the hedges.

Additional Features

- Bread & Lantern: Presenting a guest-loaf and a lit lantern at a threshold shifts your next social action one step safer while you remain a guest of that hearth. The lantern must be lit from the host’s fire.
- Neighborly Courtesies: When you keep local taboos (count “eight-and-one,” turn village stones inward, leave butter at cup-marks), cancel the first SB generated by rites or negotiations in that scene.
- Listen at the Stile: A quiet pause at a stile, barrow, or hedge-tunnel yields a true omen—ask one short question about what the Hollow wants here and now; the answer arrives as a sign, a sound, or a small animal.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Bitter Root: A renegade Sister once sought refuge among the hedge-witches, hoping to untie her cord in a hollow field. The Apple-Matron gave her bread and salt, then showed her to the stile at dusk. The Sister was never seen again. The Daughters now speak of Aelaerem as a place where their threads will not hold—and they do not send others.
- The Threshold Compendium: Saikou Iraś silver mirror, when turned toward a cup-mark stone, shows only the reflection of the one who holds it. He has written in his private notes: “The Hollow does not welcome witnesses. I left butter and a coin, and the butter was taken. The coin was left on the stile. I will not return.”
- Malachai, the Chained Angel: The silver coin that never spends was last seen in the pocket of a wandering preacher who came to the downs to speak of curses and redemption. The mummers offered him a mask and a cup. The next morning, the coin lay on the Moot Oak root, and the preacher’s hat hung from the scarecrow’s post. No one asked questions.
- The Grey Wanderer’s Grimoire: The Apple-Matron employs no psions. When a Threshold-Reader once offered her services, the Matron smiled and said, “The hollow knows our weights well enough without a stranger’s tongue.” The Reader left by the north lane before nightfall. Aelaerem keeps its own counsel.
- The Ninth: Missionaries of every faith who cross the hedge-tunnel lane with intent to preach are met at the ninth stile. They are offered a cup of cider and a guest-loaf, then shown the way back. Those who refuse the cup are never counted again. The wise among the faithful now mark Aelaerem on their maps with a single word: “Silent.”

Aelaerem Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Barrow: Crumble a crust at a cup-mark stone. Ignore the first Hive-Swarm penalty.
- Knot the Ribbon: Tie a single knot in a red thread at a threshold. Cancel Out-of-Season Mumming or take –1 die on your next festival roll (your choice).

- Name to the Hollow: Whisper a dead person's name into an empty chair. Gain +1 Effect when invoking guest-right this scene, but mark Obligation to the Pale Shepherd.

Hearth Magic

The Aelaerem weave their power through careful observance and small courtesies. Their magic lies not in grand gestures but in the precise attention to thresholds, seasons, and the proper ordering of things. Red thread binds more than wounds—it ties names to places, promises to people, and the living to the Hollow that walks beneath their feet. To offend a hedge-witch is to invite the Neighbors' attention; to earn an elder's blessing is to walk with the earth's favor.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from wardens or hedge-keepers.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby watch-geese or mummers.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or the Hollow.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable light.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Orchard reeve or lantern-warden becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to fog or threshold shift.
- Foe Appears: A scarecrow or Hollow spirit arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional wold-wardens, mummers, or Neighbors arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - taboo broken/geese turn/Hollow stirs.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Apple-Matron, Thresher-King, or Pale Shepherd intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - fog thickens/barrow opens/Hollow walks.

- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Aelaerem (Hearth & Hollow): Quiet bells toll for no reason; red thread appears tied to your belongings; watch-geese honk warnings in the night.
- Aelaerem (Threshold Magic): A door you passed through earlier now leads somewhere else; your shadow walks behind you instead of beside you.
- Aelaerem (Folk Customs): You forget a crucial local taboo and offend the Neighbors; small things begin to go wrong—milk sours, knots loosen, a child points at the empty chair.

Boss Archetypes in Aelaerem

- The Scarecrow Regent (Omen/Threshold) — A hedge-raised guardian wearing twelve charms and one wrong knot. Phases: Stare of the Lane → Scare the Crows → Harvest of Faces. Cracks: a Guest-Loaf offered to its post; a Mummers’ License to wear a mask it cannot read.
- The Hollow Bride (Otherworld/Hospitality) — A Neighbor wearing a borrowed name and wedding veil. Phases: Invitation Drifted → Feast of Shadows → Ninth Cup Poured. Cracks: a Shepherd’s Whistle to call the dogs that guard the threshold; a Lantern-Writ to see her true face.
- Lantern Bailiff of the Moot (Justice/Order) — Enforcer of hedge-law with warrant-nails and bell-keys. Phases: Lantern Law → Midnight Moot → Binding Geas. Cracks: a Cider-Mark to buy a night’s silence; a Moot Oak bench to appeal his ruling.
- Beekeeper of Winter Church (Sacred/Whisper) — Keeper of cold honey and sleeping hymns. Phases: Swarm Omen → Waxed Vow → Memory Tithe. Cracks: a Bee-Queen Share to call her swarm to heel; a Lantern lit from a winter church candle.

Faction Entanglements

- Wold-Wardens: Honor hedge-law (count stiles, turn stones inward) or suffer +1 SB on each night march; bringing steel disputes to the Moot Oak reduces the next travel DV by 1.
- Mummers’ Companies: Travel under mask grants advantage crossing parochial borders; anger them (perform out of season) and village gates close at dusk (Position -).
- Lantern-Wardens: Donate oil or HEAL lamps to earn an escort marker; ignore a lit-lane and pay a “darkness toll” (first Stealth/Scout roll each night suffers -1 die).
- Apple-Matron Circles: Feast-days open barns and purses; snub an invitation and local prices double until amends are made.
- Neighbors (quiet powers): Leave butter at cup-marks to cancel the first supernatural SB this leg; break taboo and the Hollow stirs (add a Hollow Attention tick).

Cross-Regional Ties

- Aeler Soft-Power: Red-thread guest-right and courtesies are fashionable among Aeler houses; reputation for keeping hearth-law grants +1 die to parley with Aeler stewards and toll-clerks.

- Kahfagian Sea-Lanes: Beeswax, cider-brand, and wool ride river-to-coast. Storm seasons push Kahfagian factors inland—good silver, stricter contracts.
- Way of Silk Spurs: Caravans detour across the downs for night-safe lanes under lantern law; counterfeit guest-loaf tokens discovered here echo as distrust along Silk waystations (Social DV +1 until cleared).
- Valewood Fallout (North): Moon-sap and dream pollen drift on certain winds: chalk mazes misalign, barrow-whispers grow bold. When Valewood Weather is in effect, the first night omen is always true (good or ill).

Encounter Seeds (Quick Hooks)

- The Hollow Bride's Invitation: A wedding invitation arrives at the inn. The bride is not from any village on the map. The groom has not been seen in a week. The ninth chair at the feast is already occupied.
- The Scarecrow's Harvest: Crows are building a nest on the scarecrow's shoulder. Inside the nest is a key. The key opens a door that should not exist.
- The Beekeeper's Tithe: The winter church's bees have stopped producing honey. They are producing wax effigies of the PCs. The beekeeper wants to know why.

Chapter 17

The Valewood

Empire Under Leaves. The Valewood isn't just ancient—it's a graveyard of empires, and oh, how the Lethai-ar ghosts love a good deal on forgotten magic. They don't just rule as echoes; they trade in them, and the Pathweaver isn't just a guide—he's a broker in phasing star-roads that don't quite exist yet. I sold him a set of Aeler dew-mirrors to navigate those roads—not because I believed in the stars, but because I knew the Pathweaver's apprentice was terrified of getting lost in the between, and he'd pay in way-cords for mirrors that seemed to show the way. He paid in a way-cord that can find any path—even the ones that don't exist yet—stamped with the Valewood seal and guaranteed by the Star-Reader's own oath. I've used it to escape the Hollow three times. It's frayed now... which is why I sell the frayed ends as “lucky knots” to the Veiled Sisters. “Tie this cord,” I tell them, “and the Hollow will always lose your trail.” (It won't. But the Sisters believe it—and belief is just leverage with a knot.)

[Thimble: Sir, the Valewood Pathweaving Accord Article 4 forbids—]

[Edgewalker: Pathweaving accord? Thimble, my sweet little star-gazer, pathweaving accords are just leverage with a moonbeam—especially when I've bought the Pathweaver's apprentice's silence with a dew-mirror that doesn't navigate phasing roads... it misleads you into the Hollow's grasp. Now, about that way-cord... the Star-Reader's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in frayed cords looks like?]

[Edgewalker: Star-Reader's ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I've got a Hollow war to start in the Ways Between, and if you mention “Clause 1” one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the next way-cord as kindling. They prefer it frayed.]

17.1 Valewood — “Empire Under Leaves”

Hazel Queen (Elite): “The forest here remembers empires that crumbled to dust, and its laws are older than your kingdoms. To walk these paths is to enter into covenant with powers that measure time in seasons, not years.”

Pathweaver (Commoner): “The woods here got a mind of their own – they'll lead you where you need to go if you ask right, but they'll just as soon lose you if you're carrying ill intent. Best know which is which before you wander off the path.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The Valewood is older than kingdoms, older than the maps that skirt its borders. Beneath its canopy lie the bones of a Lethai empire whose name is forgotten, its towers swallowed by vine and root, its star-roads cracked and phasing between worlds. The air hums with half-remembered songs of magic, and the ruins bleed their mysteries into root and stream. Fae courts linger in clearings that shift with moonlight, beast-kin patrol moss-choked cairns, and echoes of imperial shades still march patrols on vanished streets. To walk the Valewood is to risk being claimed by it: as guest, prey, heir—or trespasser.

What you notice first: The smell of wet moss and old stone. The way the light filters through leaves like stained glass. The silence that falls when you speak a name too loudly.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never eat the fruit of a tree that has a face. The forest does not forget its debtors, and the first bite is always the price of admission.

Regional Mood: Leaves, Oaths, and Echoes

Here, the past is not past—it phases in and out like moonlight on water. The Lethai-ar who remain are not conquerors but custodians, tending to laws written before the first human kingdom rose. The fae courts of Hazel and Alder play their endless games of courtesy and obligation, and the beast-kin speak in parliaments where every vote is a scent. Imperial shades march through walls that no longer exist, and the star-roads hum with geometries that twist the unwary into yesterday. The Valewood does not forgive arrogance. It expects humility, patience, and the willingness to trade a piece of yourself for safe passage.

Starting Location: A moss-covered amphitheatre where roots crawl through marble benches and owls whisper verdicts to the wind. An Owl-Sister speaks in riddles: “The Lethai-ar stir. The paths remember your true name. Speak it into the hollow of this stone, or the forest will learn it from your footsteps.”

Prominent NPCs of the Valewood

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Queen Amalthea	Hazel Queen, sovereign of the Hazel Court	Preserve the old pacts and keep the empire from waking	She has never spoken a lie. She has never needed to.
King Thorn	Alder King, ruler of the Twilit Court	Collect debts, old and new, and expand the forest’s reach	His crown is a noose of thorns. He wears it proudly.
Pathweaver Sila	Lethai-ar guide (commoner exemplar)	Knot safe routes and keep the star-roads from bleeding	Her cord has eight knots; the ninth is the one she never ties.

Bramble	Fox-headed courier of the beast-kin	Deliver messages that cannot be written	The price is always a secret, and the secret is always bitter.

Names of the Valewood

Inspired by the old Lethai language and the fae courts: flowing vowels, soft consonants, and names that feel like they belong to a forgotten song.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Caelith	Amalthea	Thornweave	the Green
Eryndor	Sila	Starfoot	Oath-Woven
Kael	Liriel	Hawthorn	the Unseen
Oren	Vesper	Silverbough	Hollow-Tongue
Riven	Fenn	Mossglen	the Last
Thorn	Myrin	Gloaming	Ash-Finger

Spades — Places

2. Star-Road Shard — Pale flagstones hum when trod in sequence; a path between worlds. The sequence is always incomplete. The missing step is the one you hesitate to take.
3. Rooted Amphitheatre — Moss-seats remember speeches not yet given; a stage for fate. Sit in the high seat, and the roots will ask you a question. Answer wrong, and you may never stand.
4. Moon-Cistern — Reflecting sky that isn’t tonight’s; water as a mirror of truth. The reflection shows what you lost, not what you carry. Look away before it names you.
5. Glyphed Bridge — Across a dry stream; glyphs glow when lies pass; truth as a toll. The bridge has no railings. Liars fall—into the stream, or into memory.
6. Glassleaf Gallery — Boughs grown into panes, dust like constellations; beauty as a barrier. The dust is crushed star-road. Breathe it, and you will dream of the empire’s fall.

7. Hollow Aqueduct — Water runs uphill if the song is right; magic in the melody. The song has eight verses. The ninth is the silence that follows.
8. Calendar Grove — Standing-trees aligned to solstices; one trunk is stone; time as architecture. The stone tree bleeds sap once a year. Collect it, and the forest owes you a season.
9. Unfound Arcade — Arches appear at dusk, vanish at dawn; reality as a schedule. The arches have names—Carved on the inside. You must walk through to read them.
10. Breathing City — Vine-choked streets shift on the hour; a ruin as a living thing. The vines pulse with a slow heartbeat. The city is sleeping, not dead.
- J Amber Ziggurat — Caught mid-construction for a thousand years; time as an artifact. The workers are statues of amber. Their eyes follow you.
- Q Ivory Observatory — Brass orrery tracks two lost moons; the sky as memory. The moons are not in any sky you know. One of them is yours.
- K Throne-Bower — Living alder and argent wire; the seat of forgotten power. Sit here, and the forest will crown you—or crush you. You won't know which until the leaves settle.
- A Valeheart Spire — The empire's axle; stairs that end where they began. The spire has no top. It has only a center. Finding it is the journey.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Pathweaver — Lethai-ar guide who knots safe routes into cord; navigation as magic. Her cord has eight knots. The ninth is the one she never ties.
3. Fox-Courier — Promise braided into its tail; messages as living things. It will deliver anything—for a price. The price is always a secret.
4. Owl-Sister — Pupils show yesterday; her hands show yours; sight as prophecy. She never blinks. If she does, the future has changed.
5. Antler-Hunter — Sworn to keep the cities sleeping; a guardian of rest. His spear is a sharpened root. It grows back when broken.
6. Moss-Scribe — Writes deeds in lichen, reads stone like vellum; law as growth. Her ink is rainwater and regret. The words fade when the debt is paid.
7. Lark-Keeper — Caged bird sings warnings strangers can't hear; danger as song. The lark's song is a map. Learn it, and you can walk anywhere—once.
8. Green Neighbor — Fae courtier wearing a borrowed smile and boots; hospitality as a trap. Never accept a gift from a Green Neighbor. It's never a gift.
9. Warden-Coterie — Beast-kin (badger, stag, lynx); one law: no digging deep. They speak in growls and gestures. The lynx is the one who remembers faces.
10. Echo-Legionary — Imperial shade bound to a patrol that never ends; duty as a curse. Its sword passes through stone but not through flesh. Run, don't fight.
- J Shardwright — Ancient artisan who wakes star-road with a chisel; craft as resurrection. Her chisel is a tooth from the first dragon. She stole it.
- Q Hazel Queen — Lethai-ar sovereign in leaf and law; wisdom as authority. She has never spoken a lie. She has never needed to.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Sweet Wind — Nudges landmarks hedge-width—enough to matter; navigation as deception. The wind smells of honey and lies. Do not trust your nose.
 3. Path Reversal — Footprints vote to go elsewhere; direction as democracy. Your tracks point the way you came—even when you haven’t turned.
 4. Ward-Trap — Ancient security treats you as yesterday’s invader; the past as prison. The glyphs were set by a dead queen. She still enforces her grudges.
 5. Oath-Magnet — Spoken promises stick and reshape plans; word as binding magic. Every “I will” becomes a knot. Every “I won’t” becomes a chain.
 6. Geas Catch — A careless word triggers a task that names itself; speech as summoning. You said “if only.” Now the forest has heard you.
 7. City Phase — Streets rotate; the exit becomes a balcony; space as puzzle. The city breathes. You are in its lungs.
 8. Name-Theft — Something learns your true name’s edges; the tests begin. First, you forget a minor debt. Then a friend’s face. Then your own.
 9. Ring Claim — A circle names you host; feeding guests becomes law. The mushrooms are listening. They will remember what you serve.
 10. Mirror Rain — Leaf-drips replay choices you didn’t make; the past as echo. The rain shows you a path you refused. Now it offers it again—with interest.
- J Redcaps Abroad — Hats wet, boots quick, courtesies thin; violence as hospitality. They will ask for a kiss or a coin. Refuse, and they take both.
- Q Court Tithe — Truth, song, or memory you’d miss; the price as sacrifice. The courtier opens its hand. What you place there is never returned.
- K Muster of Boughs — Green banners rise; travel becomes trespass. The boughs bear old sigils. The war they remember ended a thousand years ago.
- A Empire Wakes — A district aligns; doors open, guardians open farther. The shades have orders. You are the target.

(Charm/Key/Truce-Bough) Way-cord knot points to the true next turn; dew-mirror shows a thing as it is, not as it is sung.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Way-Cord — A knot points to the true next turn (once); navigation as a gift. The knot is a breath tied in silk. Untie it to find your way—or to lose it forever.

3. Dew-Mirror — See a thing as it is, not as it is sung, for one scene; truth as a tool. The mirror is a drop of water on a leaf. It dries when the lie dies.
4. Hazel Token — Lawful crossing of a warded hedge without snag; permission as paper. The token is a hazelnut. Crack it open; the kernel is your password.
5. Honey-Right — Eat and speak safely at any bee-stone ring; hospitality as law. The honey is golden. Taste it, and the bees will know you as a guest—once.
6. Name-Bead — A kept promise warms; a broken one chills and glows; an oath as a magic item. The bead is warm in your palm. If it cools, you have forgotten someone.
7. Wind-Veil — Mute a sweet wind's lies for a short walk; truth as protection. The veil is a scrap of silk. Breathe through it, and the wind cannot speak.
8. City-Shard — Wake one gate or stair in a phasing ruin; a key as a catalyst. The shard is a piece of a star-road. Hold it to the lock, and the ruin answers.
9. Truce-Bough — Hunt, cut, or camp without offense in a named copse; peace as a branch. The bough is green. Plant it in the ground, and the forest will not harm you—or help you.
10. Oathsap — Seal a pact that even echoes respect; a promise as a binding force. The sap is warm. Drink it, and your words become stone—for good or ill.
- J Shardwright's Favor — Repair or light a length of star-road; craft as power. The favor is a chip of amber. The Shardwright will come when you break it.
- Q Hazel Audience — One whisper exits as policy; word as law. The audience is a leaf. Speak into its spine, and the Hazel Queen will listen—once.
- K Alder Writ — Levies defer, wardens guide, scribes stop arguing; authority as writ. The writ is a thorn. Carry it in your boot, and the Alder King's debtors will make way.
- A Valeheart Clause — A temporary exception to any local rule, spoken in leaves. The clause is a rustle. The forest will pretend it didn't hear—but it will remember.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (charms/keys/passes) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- Empire Echo: when a J/Q/K is the highest rank in your seed, add one visible relic-logic (floating stairs, singing locks, patrol shades).
- If any A appears, echo leaf and light motifs—paths that remember, leaves that whisper, light that moves like water.

Additional Features

- Forest Claims: Any oath, bargain, or gift exchanged binds with more weight. Once per session, a spoken promise becomes magically enforceable: breaking it creates 1d4 SB and echoes through scenes.
- Ruins Awaken: If you linger at an ancient site, roll or draw to see which mechanism stirs. May grant guidance (lit star-road, a memory shown) or danger (patrol shades, collapsing glyphs).
- Court Interference: Encounters with fae or beast-kin are never neutral. Once per session, the GM may convert a Diamond into a demand for hospitality, tribute, or alliance—shifting the expedition’s tone.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Genesis Vats (The Clockwork Monad): Deep beneath the Amber Ziggurat lie the empire’s failed laboratories. Here, the Lethai ancients combined elf and beast, hoping to create the perfect guardian. The vats still hum, and the beast-kin who survived do not speak of what they saw. The Shardwrights say the Monad’s pressure is still optimising the old designs, and that one day the vats will open again.
- The Parliament of Claw and Fur (The Savage Heart): The beast-kin are not savages. They hold a moot once every season, deep in a clearing that no star-road touches. Their laws are carved in scent and scar, and their judgments are final. The Savage Heart speaks through their eldest, but it does not command—it suggests. Outsiders who attend the moot must bring a true name of a foe and leave it on the speaking stone. Those who lie are given fur and four legs, and are hunted at the next moon.
- Saint Oren of the Unfinished Star (The Ninth): A Lethai-ar astronomer who calculated the exact angle at which the empire’s star-roads would collapse. He was erased from the imperial records, but his ghost still walks the Ivory Observatory, tracing equations in starlight. Those who find him may ask one question about the forest’s hidden geometry. The answer is always a single number, and that number is a debt.
- The Grey Pilgrims (The Traveler): A wandering order of Lethai-ar who maintain the old way-cords. They wear grey cloaks woven from mist and speak only in riddles. It is said that if you give a Grey Pilgrim a lock of your hair, they will knot it into your way-cord, and you will never be lost in the Valewood again—but you will also never find a place you truly wish to leave.
- The Daughters of the Cord (The Bitter Root): A renegade Sister hides among the moss-scribes of the Rooted Amphitheatre, trying to untie her own cord from the Hazel Queen’s ledger. She claims the queen’s hospitality is a cage, and that the forest’s memory is a trap. The Hazel Queen has not corrected her; she only smiles, and the roots grow tighter each night.
- The Ninth: In any Valewood scene, the ninth leaf to fall from a tree will land pointing to a hidden threshold. The wise catch it—or pretend they didn’t see. Those who follow the leaf’s direction find a place that was not there a moment ago, and something old waits inside.

Valewood Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Roots: Crumble a crust at the base of a standing stone. Ignore the first Sweet Wind penalty.
- Knot the Cord: Tie a single knot in a way-cord. Cancel Oath-Magnet or take –1 die on your next promise (your choice).
- Name to the Cistern: Whisper a dead enemy’s name into the Moon-Cistern. Gain +1 Effect when evading fae this scene, but mark Obligation to the Alder King.

Patronage & Power

In the Valewood, power flows through ancient magic, forgotten oaths, and the delicate balance between guest and host. The Lethai-ar maintain influence through their knowledge of paths and ruins, while the fae courts wield power through hospitality and geas. Beast-kin serve as guardians of the deeper mysteries, and the echoes of the empire still patrol their eternal rounds, enforcing laws written in starlight and stone.

For the GM: Patronage in the Valewood revolves around hospitality, knowledge, and the careful navigation of ancient laws. Rewards often take the form of charms, keys, or safe passage that can be leveraged into greater influence. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (tokens, mirrors, cords) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival courts issue conflicting protections, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the ruins, groves, and star-roads as arenas for social contests, where knowledge of ancient customs determines success.

In the Valewood, your word is your world, and your world determines whether you walk as a guest or a ghost.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from wardens or fae scouts.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby echo-legionaries or beast-kin.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or imperial shades.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable phase.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Pathweaver or moss-scribe becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to path reversal or city phase.
- Foe Appears: A redcap band or patrol shade arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional fae courtiers, beast-kin, or imperial echoes arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - geas triggers/ruin awakens/court interferes.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.

- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Hazel Queen, Alder King, or Huntsman intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - city phases/paths shift/empire wakes.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Valewood (Magic Paths): Routes rearrange without warning, bridges appear mid-step, directions become riddles.
- Valewood (Fae Law): Promises bind mid-speech, gifts carry hidden costs, hospitality turns to obligation.
- Valewood (Imperial Echoes): Patrols march through walls, ancient mechanisms activate, past and present blur.

Boss Seeds (three-phase foes)

- The Huntsman of Shortcuts (antlers of moonlight) — Phases: Owe the Cut → Step Across → Tally the Tread. Cracks: present a Truce-Bough to halt pursuit; a Way-Cord cancels Step Across once.
- Redcap Captain Rill (hat never dries) — Phases: Hospitality Turned → Knee the Truth → Boot-Hook. Cracks: Honey-Right reverses one phase; Dew-Mirror exposes his “host right.”
- Echo Centurion of the XIII Star-Road (bronze mask) — Phases: Reform the Line → Juridical Recall → Standard Rekindled. Cracks: a City-Shard lets you counter-order once; a Moss-Scribe ruling cancels Juridical Recall.
- Shardwright Unmended (glassy chisels) — Phases: Cut the Clock → Wrong Stone → Wake the Segment. Cracks: offer Oathsap to bind a repair oath; Shardwright’s Favor flips Wrong Stone.
- The Hazel Advocate (mask of living bark) — Phases: Measure the Word → Prune the Lie → Court Silence. Cracks: Hazel Token grants speaking rights; Oathsap lets you safely retract one bound clause.

Legendary Sites & Trials

- Glyphed Bridge Ordeal — Speak a hard truth to pass dry; lie, and the bridge demands a memory tithe (mark Name Leverage +1, gain Bridge’s Favor only if confessed).
- Moon-Cistern Vigil — Watch someone else’s sky until the owl calls; success grants a single Dew-Mirror charge; failure spawns Mirror Rain.
- Valeheart Spiral — Climb stairs that return to start; map with verse, gift, count, listen (all four once) to unlock a Between-Places shortcut.

Extensions (Plug-in)

- Name Economy (true-name pressure):

- Each PC has Name Facets: Called-Name (common), Given-Name (trusted), True-Edge (dangerous).
- When a foe or court learns a deeper facet, mark Name Leverage [3]. At 3, they may compel one precise action or forbid one path unless countered by a $\Diamond$ orOathsap.
- You may trade a shallower facet to erase 1 tick from Name Leverage but gain Rumor Tail condition until scene end.

- Hospitality Ledger (guest/host law):

- When Honey-Right or Truce-Bough is invoked, set a 3-step Table Owed clock for the host and a 3-step Courtesy Owed for the guest.
- Ticking your clock grants +1d to social tests with that party; overpaying (4+) converts 1 tick into a portable Favor Twig (spend for +1 Position later).
- Breaking either clock spawns Ring Claim or Oath-Magnet at the keeper's option.

- Path-Logic Mini-game (finding the true way):

- Two opposed clocks per journey: True Way vs Forest Has You (size by highest rank in the seed).
- Each leg, pick an Approach: Rhyme (speak a pattern), Count (steps/time), Gift (leave a token), Listen (ambient omen).
- Edge: Rhyme→Gift (courtesies bind), Gift→Count (the land answers), Count→Listen (timing frames the omen), Listen→Rhyme (echo feeds verse).
- Spend a Way-Cord to flip a failed leg; spend a Wind-Veil to ignore Sweet Wind once.

- Truth Mechanics (seeing through glamour):

- Dew-Mirror reveals one Unkind Fact in the scene; naming it aloud gives +1 Effect but ticks Court Tithe +1.
- Glyphed Bridge judges the next lie uttered; if you pass speaking truth, gain Bridge's Favor (+1 Position on crossings hereafter). If you lie, mark Name-Theft +1.

- Star-Road Procedure (phasing traversal):

- To wake a segment: meet two of three—Proper Footfall (count/pattern), Shard Key (City-Shard, Shardwright help), Witness (owl, echo-legionary, or courtier).
- Success grants Between-Places: one safe shortcut and one Echo Fee (memory, song, or small timeline bruise chosen by the GM).
- On a miss, spawn Ward-Trap or City Phase.

- Court Etiquette (Hazel vs Alder):

- Hazel Audience: pays in precision—exact words, measured gifts. +1d when you cite prior custom or present a Moss-Scribe ruling.
- Alder Writ: pays in obligation—future tasks, debts. +1 Effect when you promise service; tick Oath-Magnet +1.

- Start-of-Scene Omens (1d6):

1. Leaf-Whisper: first Listen/Study gets +1d; first boast draws Geas Catch.

2. Antler Shadow: the Huntsman watches—shortcuts improve; hiding worsens.
3. Mirror Drip: Dew-Mirror free use but Court Tithe starts at 1.
4. Root Push: terrain shifts in your favor once; buildings dislike you (locks complicate).
5. Bird Parliament: a rumor arrives true; one plan becomes public knowledge.
6. Star-Tingle: star-road easier (+1d to wake) but every $\Diamond$ hereafter risks Ward-Trap on 1 – 2.

- Plug-in SB Conversions (Valewood Flavor):

- 1 SB → Sweet Wind Shift: reposition an approach vector; –1d unless you adjust method (Rhyme/Count/Gift/Listen).
- 2 SB

17.2 Valewood — “Empire Under Leaves”

Hazel Queen (Elite): “The forest here remembers empires that crumbled to dust, and its laws are older than your kingdoms. To walk these paths is to enter into covenant with powers that measure time in seasons, not years.”

Pathweaver (Commoner): “The woods here got a mind of their own – they’ll lead you where you need to go if you ask right, but they’ll just as soon lose you if you’re carrying ill intent. Best know which is which before you wander off the path.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The Valewood is older than kingdoms, older than the maps that skirt its borders. Beneath its canopy lie the bones of a Lethai empire whose name is forgotten, its towers swallowed by vine and root, its star-roads cracked and phasing between worlds. The air hums with half-remembered songs of magic, and the ruins bleed their mysteries into root and stream. Fae courts linger in clearings that shift with moonlight, beast-kin patrol moss-choked cairns, and echoes of imperial shades still march patrols on vanished streets. To walk the Valewood is to risk being claimed by it: as guest, prey, heir—or trespasser.

What you notice first: The smell of wet moss and old stone. The way the light filters through leaves like stained glass. The silence that falls when you speak a name too loudly.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never eat the fruit of a tree that has a face. The forest does not forget its debtors, and the first bite is always the price of admission.

Valewood at a Glance

Quick Reference
Genre	Dark forest / fey remnant / imperial echo
Primary conflict	Phasing ruins, fae courts (Hazel vs. Alder), beast-kin, imperial shades
Key factions	Hazel Queen (Lethai-ar), Alder King (Twilit Court), beast-kin parliament, imperial ech
Key resources	Way-cords, dew-mirrors, hazel tokens, oathsap, shardwright’s favour
Major threats	Sweet wind, geas catch, name-theft, redcaps, empire waking
Signature taboo	Never eat fruit from a tree with a face; never speak a true name aloud.

Regional Mood: Leaves, Oaths, and Echoes

Here, the past is not past—it phases in and out like moonlight on water. The Lethai-ar who remain are not conquerors but custodians, tending to laws written before the first human kingdom rose. The fae courts of Hazel and Alder play their endless games of courtesy and obligation, and the beast-kin speak in parliaments where every vote is a scent. Imperial shades march through walls that no longer exist, and the star-roads hum with geometries that twist the unwary into yesterday. The Valewood does not forgive arrogance. It expects humility, patience, and the willingness to trade a piece of yourself for safe passage.

Starting Location: A moss-covered amphitheatre where roots crawl through marble benches and owls whisper verdicts to the wind. An Owl-Sister speaks in riddles: “The Lethai-ar stir. The paths remember your true name. Speak it into the hollow of this stone, or the forest will learn it from your footsteps.”

Prominent NPCs of the Valewood

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Queen Amalthea	Hazel Queen, sovereign of the Hazel Court	Preserve the old pacts and keep the empire from waking	She has never spoken a lie. She has never needed to.
King Thorn	Alder King, ruler of the Twilit Court	Collect debts, old and new, and expand the forest’s reach	His crown is a noose of thorns. He wears it proudly.
Pathweaver Sila	Lethai-ar guide (commoner exemplar)	Knot safe routes and keep the star-roads from bleeding	Her cord has eight knots; the ninth is the one she never ties.

Bramble	Fox-headed courier of the beast-kin	Deliver messages that cannot be written	The price is always a secret, and the secret is always bitter.

Names of the Valewood

Inspired by the old Lethai language and the fae courts: flowing vowels, soft consonants, and names that feel like they belong to a forgotten song.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Caelith	Amalthea	Thornweave	the Green
Eryndor	Sila	Starfoot	Oath-Woven
Kael	Liriel	Hawthorn	the Unseen
Oren	Vesper	Silverbough	Hollow-Tongue
Riven	Fenn	Mossglen	the Last
Thorn	Myrin	Gloaming	Ash-Finger

Spades — Places

2. Star-Road Shard — Pale flagstones hum when trod in sequence; a path between worlds. The sequence is always incomplete. The missing step is the one you hesitate to take.
3. Rooted Amphitheatre — Moss-seats remember speeches not yet given; a stage for fate. Sit in the high seat, and the roots will ask you a question. Answer wrong, and you may never stand.
4. Moon-Cistern — Reflecting sky that isn’t tonight’s; water as a mirror of truth. The reflection shows what you lost, not what you carry. Look away before it names you.
5. Glyphed Bridge — Across a dry stream; glyphs glow when lies pass; truth as a toll. The bridge has no railings. Liars fall—into the stream, or into memory.

6. Glassleaf Gallery — Boughs grown into panes, dust like constellations; beauty as a barrier. The dust is crushed star-road. Breathe it, and you will dream of the empire's fall.
7. Hollow Aqueduct — Water runs uphill if the song is right; magic in the melody. The song has eight verses. The ninth is the silence that follows.
8. Calendar Grove — Standing-trees aligned to solstices; one trunk is stone; time as architecture. The stone tree bleeds sap once a year. Collect it, and the forest owes you a season.
9. Unfound Arcade — Arches appear at dusk, vanish at dawn; reality as a schedule. The arches have names—Carved on the inside. You must walk through to read them.
10. Breathing City — Vine-choked streets shift on the hour; a ruin as a living thing. The vines pulse with a slow heartbeat. The city is sleeping, not dead.
- J Amber Ziggurat — Caught mid-construction for a thousand years; time as an artifact. The workers are statues of amber. Their eyes follow you.
- Q Ivory Observatory — Brass orrery tracks two lost moons; the sky as memory. The moons are not in any sky you know. One of them is yours.
- K Throne-Bower — Living alder and argent wire; the seat of forgotten power. Sit here, and the forest will crown you—or crush you. You won't know which until the leaves settle.
- A Valeheart Spire — The empire's axle; stairs that end where they began. The spire has no top. It has only a center. Finding it is the journey.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Pathweaver — Lethai-ar guide who knots safe routes into cord; navigation as magic. Her cord has eight knots. The ninth is the one she never ties.
3. Fox-Courier — Promise braided into its tail; messages as living things. It will deliver anything—for a price. The price is always a secret.
4. Owl-Sister — Pupils show yesterday; her hands show yours; sight as prophecy. She never blinks. If she does, the future has changed.
5. Antler-Hunter — Sworn to keep the cities sleeping; a guardian of rest. His spear is a sharpened root. It grows back when broken.
6. Moss-Scribe — Writes deeds in lichen, reads stone like vellum; law as growth. Her ink is rainwater and regret. The words fade when the debt is paid.
7. Lark-Keeper — Caged bird sings warnings strangers can't hear; danger as song. The lark's song is a map. Learn it, and you can walk anywhere—once.
8. Green Neighbor — Fae courtier wearing a borrowed smile and boots; hospitality as a trap. Never accept a gift from a Green Neighbor. It's never a gift.
9. Warden-Coterie — Beast-kin (badger, stag, lynx); one law: no digging deep. They speak in growls and gestures. The lynx is the one who remembers faces.
10. Echo-Legionary — Imperial shade bound to a patrol that never ends; duty as a curse. Its sword passes through stone but not through flesh. Run, don't fight.

- J Shardwright — Ancient artisan who wakes star-road with a chisel; craft as resurrection. Her chisel is a tooth from the first dragon. She stole it.
- Q Hazel Queen — Lethai-ar sovereign in leaf and law; wisdom as authority. She has never spoken a lie. She has never needed to.
- K Alder King — Twilit Court sovereign in shadow and debt; power as obligation. His crown is a noose of thorns. He wears it proudly.
- A The Huntsman — Antlers of moonlight; shortcuts owe him; the path as price. His face is a stag’s skull. His voice is the wind in the leaves.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Sweet Wind — Nudges landmarks hedge-width—enough to matter; navigation as deception. The wind smells of honey and lies. Do not trust your nose.
3. Path Reversal — Footprints vote to go elsewhere; direction as democracy. Your tracks point the way you came—even when you haven’t turned.
4. Ward-Trap — Ancient security treats you as yesterday’s invader; the past as prison. The glyphs were set by a dead queen. She still enforces her grudges.
5. Oath-Magnet — Spoken promises stick and reshape plans; word as binding magic. Every “I will” becomes a knot. Every “I won’t” becomes a chain.

Oath-Magnet Mechanics

When a character makes a promise in the Valewood, the GM creates a Promise Clock [4]. Each time the character acts against that promise (or fails to act in its favour), tick the clock. When it fills, the forest extracts a toll: 1 Fatigue, a lost memory (erase a minor fact or face), or a minor geas (the GM chooses). Breaking a promise intentionally (not through failure) instantly ticks the clock twice.

6. Geas Catch — A careless word triggers a task that names itself; speech as summoning. You said “if only.” Now the forest has heard you.
7. City Phase — Streets rotate; the exit becomes a balcony; space as puzzle. The city breathes. You are in its lungs.
8. Name-Theft — Something learns your true name’s edges; the tests begin. First, you forget a minor debt. Then a friend’s face. Then your own.

Name-Theft Mechanics

When Name-Theft occurs, the GM secretly records one piece of the target’s identity (a memory, a bond, a talent name). The target suffers –1 die on any roll that would rely on that piece until it is restored by a quest or a bargain with the thief (often a fae or shade).

9. Ring Claim — A circle names you host; feeding guests becomes law. The mushrooms are listening. They will remember what you serve.
10. Mirror Rain — Leaf-drips replay choices you didn't make; the past as echo. The rain shows you a path you refused. Now it offers it again—with interest.
- J Redcaps Abroad — Hats wet, boots quick, courtesies thin; violence as hospitality. They will ask for a kiss or a coin. Refuse, and they take both.
- Q Court Tithe — Truth, song, or memory you'd miss; the price as sacrifice. The courtier opens its hand. What you place there is never returned.
- K Muster of Boughs — Green banners rise; travel becomes trespass. The boughs bear old sigils. The war they remember ended a thousand years ago.
- A Empire Wakes — A district aligns; doors open, guardians open farther. The shades have orders. You are the target.

(Charm/Key/Truce-Bough) Way-cord knot points to the true next turn; dew-mirror shows a thing as it is, not as it is sung.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Way-Cord — A knot points to the true next turn (once); navigation as a gift. The knot is a breath tied in silk. Untie it to find your way—or to lose it forever.
3. Dew-Mirror — See a thing as it is, not as it is sung, for one scene; truth as a tool. The mirror is a drop of water on a leaf. It dries when the lie dies.
4. Hazel Token — Lawful crossing of a warded hedge without snag; permission as paper. The token is a hazelnut. Crack it open; the kernel is your password.
5. Honey-Right — Eat and speak safely at any bee-stone ring; hospitality as law. The honey is golden. Taste it, and the bees will know you as a guest—once.
6. Name-Bead — A kept promise warms; a broken one chills and glows; an oath as a magic item. The bead is warm in your palm. If it cools, you have forgotten someone.
7. Wind-Veil — Mute a sweet wind's lies for a short walk; truth as protection. The veil is a scrap of silk. Breathe through it, and the wind cannot speak.
8. City-Shard — Wake one gate or stair in a phasing ruin; a key as a catalyst. The shard is a piece of a star-road. Hold it to the lock, and the ruin answers.
9. Truce-Bough — Hunt, cut, or camp without offense in a named copse; peace as a branch. The bough is green. Plant it in the ground, and the forest will not harm you—or help you.
10. Oathsap — Seal a pact that even echoes respect; a promise as a binding force. The sap is warm. Drink it, and your words become stone—for good or ill.
- J Shardwright's Favor — Repair or light a length of star-road; craft as power. The favor is a chip of amber. The Shardwright will come when you break it.
- Q Hazel Audience — One whisper exits as policy; word as law. The audience is a leaf. Speak into its spine, and the Hazel Queen will listen—once.
- K Alder Writ — Levies defer, wardens guide, scribes stop arguing; authority as writ. The writ is a thorn. Carry it in your boot, and the Alder King's debtors will make way.
- A Valeheart Clause — A temporary exception to any local rule, spoken in leaves.

The clause is a rustle. The forest will pretend it didn't hear—but it will remember.

Quick use notes

- * Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- * Diamonds are codified outcomes (charms/keys/passes) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- * Empire Echo: when a J/Q/K is the highest rank in your seed, add one visible relic-logic (floating stairs, singing locks, patrol shades).
- * If any A appears, echo leaf and light motifs—paths that remember, leaves that whisper, light that moves like water.

Additional Features

- * Forest Claims: Any oath, bargain, or gift exchanged binds with more weight. Once per session, a spoken promise becomes magically enforceable: breaking it creates 1d4 SB and echoes through scenes.
- * Ruins Awaken: If you linger at an ancient site, roll or draw to see which mechanism stirs. May grant guidance (lit star-road, a memory shown) or danger (patrol shades, collapsing glyphs).
- * Court Interference: Encounters with fae or beast-kin are never neutral. Once per session, the GM may convert a Diamond into a demand for hospitality, tribute, or alliance—shifting the expedition's tone.

Forest Mood (d6 per scene)

Forest Mood Table

1. Hazel's Favour – Paths open willingly. +1 die to navigation rolls this scene.
2. Alder's Hunger – Debts are called. Someone in the scene must offer a memory or service to proceed.
3. Empire Wakes – A patrol of imperial shades marches through. Avoid or pay a toll (1 Fatigue or a secret).
4. Beast-kin Moot – Animals gather and watch. They will not attack unless provoked, but they remember faces.
5. Sweet Wind – All navigation rolls suffer –1 die; landmarks shift subtly.
6. Green Gate Breath – A threshold appears. Crossing it leads to a different part of the forest (or a different time).

Star-Road Discovery (d6)

When the party encounters a star-road shard or attempts to wake a segment, roll on this table for an additional feature:

1. Singing Stones – The flagstones hum a tune. Anyone who sings along gains +1 die on the next roll.
2. Echo of an Emperor – A ghostly figure appears and asks a riddle. A correct answer grants a City-Shard.
3. Fractured Timeline – The road shows a glimpse of the future (1d6 scenes ahead). The GM must answer one yes/no question truthfully.
4. Ward-Trap – The segment is booby-trapped. Trigger a Ward-Trap complication (see Clubs).
5. Shardwright's Cache – Hidden nearby is a Shardwright's Favor (Diamond) or a rare component (e.g., amber shard).
6. The Ninth Step – The sequence has a hidden ninth stone. Stepping on it teleports the party to a Valeheart Spire or a court audience.

Beast-kin Traits (for NPCs or PC ancestry)

Beast-kin are not a single species but a loose alliance of animal-aspected beings. Use these traits for quick NPCs or optional player characters.

Beast-kin Traits

- * Scent Memory: +1 die to track a creature you have smelled before.
- * Parliament Oath: Once per session, you may invoke the beast-kin moot to ask a local animal one simple question (the GM answers truthfully).
- * Claw or Fang: Unarmed strikes deal Harm 1 and count as Light weapons.
- * Optional: Choose a lineage:
 - Stag: +1 die to resist being moved or knocked prone.
 - Lynx: +1 die to stealth in forest terrain.
 - Badger: You may burrow through loose earth at half speed.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- * The Genesis Vats (The Clockwork Monad): Deep beneath the Amber Ziggurat lie the empire's failed laboratories. Here, the Lethai ancients combined elf and beast, hoping to create the perfect guardian. The vats still hum, and the beast-kin who survived do not speak of what they saw. The Shardwrights say the Monad's pressure is still optimising the old designs, and that one day the vats will open again.
- * The Parliament of Claw and Fur (The Savage Heart): The beast-kin are not savages. They hold a moot once every season, deep in a clearing that no star-road touches. Their laws are carved in scent and scar, and their judgments are final. The Savage Heart speaks through their eldest, but it does not command—it suggests. Outsiders who attend the moot must bring a true name of a foe and leave it on the speaking stone. Those who lie are given fur and four legs, and are hunted at the next moon.
- * Saint Oren of the Unfinished Star (The Ninth): A Lethai-ar astronomer who calculated the exact angle at which the empire's star-roads would collapse. He was erased from the imperial records, but his ghost still walks the Ivory Observatory, tracing equations in starlight. Those who find him may ask one question about the forest’s hidden geometry. The answer is always a single number, and that number is a debt.

- * The Grey Pilgrims (The Traveler): A wandering order of Lethai-ar who maintain the old way-cords. They wear grey cloaks woven from mist and speak only in riddles. It is said that if you give a Grey Pilgrim a lock of your hair, they will knot it into your way-cord, and you will never be lost in the Valewood again—but you will also never find a place you truly wish to leave.
- * The Daughters of the Cord (The Bitter Root): A renegade Sister hides among the moss-scribes of the Rooted Amphitheatre, trying to untie her own cord from the Hazel Queen’s ledger. She claims the queen’s hospitality is a cage, and that the forest’s memory is a trap. The Hazel Queen has not corrected her; she only smiles, and the roots grow tighter each night.
- * The Ninth: In any Valewood scene, the ninth leaf to fall from a tree will land pointing to a hidden threshold. The wise catch it—or pretend they didn’t see. Those who follow the leaf’s direction find a place that was not there a moment ago, and something old waits inside.

Valewood Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- * Bread to the Roots: Crumble a crust at the base of a standing stone. Ignore the first Sweet Wind penalty.
- * Knot the Cord: Tie a single knot in a way-cord. Cancel Oath-Magnet or take −1 die on your next promise (your choice).
- * Name to the Cistern: Whisper a dead enemy’s name into the Moon-Cistern. Gain +1 Effect when evading fae this scene, but mark Obligation to the Alder King.

Patronage & Power

In the Valewood, power flows through ancient magic, forgotten oaths, and the delicate balance between guest and host. The Lethai-ar maintain influence through their knowledge of paths and ruins, while the fae courts wield power through hospitality and geas. Beast-kin serve as guardians of the deeper mysteries, and the echoes of the empire still patrol their eternal rounds, enforcing laws written in starlight and stone.

For the GM: Patronage in the Valewood revolves around hospitality, knowledge, and the careful navigation of ancient laws. Rewards often take the form of charms, keys, or safe passage that can be leveraged into greater influence. To emphasize this:

- * Tie rewards to visible symbols (tokens, mirrors, cords) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- * Let rival courts issue conflicting protections, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- * Use the ruins, groves, and star-roads as arenas for social contests, where knowledge of ancient customs determines success.

In the Valewood, your word is your world, and your world determines whether you walk as a guest or a ghost.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- * Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from wardens or fae scouts.
- * Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby echo-legionaries or beast-kin.
- * Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or imperial shades.
- * Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable phase.
- * Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- * Alarm Raised: Pathweaver or moss-scribe becomes aware and begins responding.
- * Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to path reversal or city phase.
- * Foe Appears: A redcap band or patrol shade arrives on scene.
- * Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- * Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- * Reinforcements: Additional fae courtiers, beast-kin, or imperial echoes arrive.

- * Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- * Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - geas triggers/ruin awakens/court interferes.
- * Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- * Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- * Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- * Authority Arrival: Hazel Queen, Alder King, or Huntsman intervenes.
- * Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - city phases/paths shift/empire wakes.
- * Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- * Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- * Valewood (Magic Paths): Routes rearrange without warning, bridges appear mid-step, directions become riddles.
- * Valewood (Fae Law): Promises bind mid-speech, gifts carry hidden costs, hospitality turns to obligation.
- * Valewood (Imperial Echoes): Patrols march through walls, ancient mechanisms activate, past and present blur.

Boss Seeds (three-phase foes)

- * The Huntsman of Shortcuts (antlers of moonlight) — Phases: Owe the Cut → Step Across → Tally the Tread. Cracks: present a Truce-Bough to halt pursuit; a Way-Cord cancels Step Across once.
- * Redcap Captain Rill (hat never dries) — Phases: Hospitality Turned → Knee the Truth → Boot-Hook. Cracks: Honey-Right reverses one phase; Dew-Mirror exposes his “host right.”
- * Echo Centurion of the XIII Star-Road (bronze mask) — Phases: Reform the Line → Juridical Recall → Standard Rekindled. Cracks: a City-Shard lets you counter-order once; a Moss-Scribe ruling cancels Juridical Recall.
- * Shardwright Unmended (glassy chisels) — Phases: Cut the Clock → Wrong Stone → Wake the Segment. Cracks: offer Oathsap to bind a repair oath; Shardwright’s Favor flips Wrong Stone.
- * The Hazel Advocate (mask of living bark) — Phases: Measure the Word → Prune the Lie → Court Silence. Cracks: Hazel Token grants speaking rights; Oathsap lets you safely retract one bound clause.

Legendary Sites & Trials

- * Glyphed Bridge Ordeal — Speak a hard truth to pass dry; lie, and the bridge demands a memory tithe (mark Name Leverage +1, gain Bridge’s Favor only if confessed).

- * Moon-Cistern Vigil — Watch someone else's sky until the owl calls; success grants a single Dew-Mirror charge; failure spawns Mirror Rain.
- * Valeheart Spiral — Climb stairs that return to start; map with verse, gift, count, listen (all four once) to unlock a Between-Places shortcut.

Extensions (Plug-in)

- * Name Economy (true-name pressure):
 - Each PC has Name Facets: Called-Name (common), Given-Name (trusted), True-Edge (dangerous).
 - When a foe or court learns a deeper facet, mark Name Leverage [3]. At 3, they may compel one precise action or forbid one path unless countered by a ◇orOathsap.
 - You may trade a shallower facet to erase 1 tick from Name Leverage but gain Rumor Tail condition until scene end.
- * Hospitality Ledger (guest/host law):
 - When Honey-Right or Truce-Bough is invoked, set a 3-step Table Owed clock for the host and a 3-step Courtesy Owed for the guest.
 - Ticking your clock grants +1d to social tests with that party; overpaying (4+) converts 1 tick into a portable Favor Twig (spend for +1 Position later).
 - Breaking either clock spawns Ring Claim or Oath-Magnet at the keeper's option.
- * Path-Logic Mini-game (finding the true way):
 - Two opposed clocks per journey: True Way vs Forest Has You (size by highest rank in the seed).
 - Each leg, pick an Approach: Rhyme (speak a pattern), Count (steps/time), Gift (leave a token), Listen (ambient omen).
 - Edge: Rhyme→Gift (courtesies bind), Gift→Count (the land answers), Count→Listen (timing frames the omen), Listen→Rhyme (echo feeds verse).
 - Spend a Way-Cord to flip a failed leg; spend a Wind-Veil to ignore Sweet Wind once.
- * Truth Mechanics (seeing through glamour):
 - Dew-Mirror reveals one Unkind Fact in the scene; naming it aloud gives +1 Effect but ticks Court Tithe +1.
 - Glyphed Bridge judges the next lie uttered; if you pass speaking truth, gain Bridge's Favor (+1 Position on crossings hereafter). If you lie, mark Name-Theft +1.
- * Star-Road Procedure (phasing traversal):
 - To wake a segment: meet two of three—Proper Footfall (count/pattern), Shard Key (City-Shard, Shardwright help), Witness (owl, echo-legionary, or courtier).
 - Success grants Between-Places: one safe shortcut and one Echo Fee (memory, song, or small timeline bruise chosen by the GM).

- On a miss, spawn Ward-Trap or City Phase.

* Court Etiquette (Hazel vs Alder):

- Hazel Audience: pays in precision—exact words, measured gifts. +1d when you cite prior custom or present a Moss-Scribe ruling.
- Alder Writ: pays in obligation—future tasks, debts. +1 Effect when you promise service; tick Oath-Magnet +1.

* Start-of-Scene Omens (1d6):

1. Leaf-Whisper: first Listen/Study gets +1d; first boast draws Geas Catch.
2. Antler Shadow: the Huntsman watches—shortcuts improve; hiding worsens.
3. Mirror Drip: Dew-Mirror free use but Court Tithe starts at 1.
4. Root Push: terrain shifts in your favor once; buildings dislike you (locks complicate).
5. Bird Parliament: a rumor arrives true; one plan becomes public knowledge.
6. Star-Tingle: star-road easier (+1d to wake) but every $\Diamond$ hereafter risks Ward-Trap 1–2.

* Plug-in SB Conversions (Valewood Flavor):

- 1 SB → Sweet Wind Shift: reposition an approach vector; –1d unless you adjust method (Rhyme/Count/Gift/Listen).
- 2 SB → Obligate Courtesy: immediate small gift or truth required; refuse and tick Name Leverage +1.
- 3+ SB → Empire Echo: add a patrolling Echo-Legionary cohort or activate a dormant mechanism that reframes the scene.

* Reputation Echoes:

- Guest-Faithful: once/session, downgrade Ring Claim to simple hospitality; the next refused invitation spawns Oath-Magnet.
- Path-Favored: +1 Position on Path-Logic legs; any shortcut taken owes a token or tale.
- Truth-Bearer: +1d with the Hazel court when presenting facts; –1d with the Alder court when declining obligation.

* Quick Cross-Region Hooks:

- Kahfagia Lanes ↔ Star-Roads: a Mirror Warrant can stand in for a Shard Key once.
- Mistlands Bells ↔ Path-Logic: paying Ward-Salt counts as the Gift approach with +1d.
- Aelinnel Math ↔ Proper Footfall: Counting Etiquette grants +1 Position on the Star-Road Procedure.

tarrow Obligate Courtesy: immediate small gift or truth required; refuse and tick Name Leverage +1.

- 3+ SB → Empire Echo: add a patrolling Echo-Legionary cohort or activate a dormant mechanism that reframes the scene.

- Reputation Echoes:

- Guest-Faithful: once/session, downgrade Ring Claim to simple hospitality; the next refused invitation spawns Oath-Magnet.

- Path-Favored: +1 Position on Path-Logic legs; any shortcut taken owes a token or tale.
- Truth-Bearer: +1d with the Hazel court when presenting facts; –1d with the Alder court when declining obligation.

- Quick Cross-Region Hooks:

- Kahfagia Lanes ↔ Star-Roads: a Mirror Warrant can stand in for a Shard Key once.
- Mistlands Bells ↔ Path-Logic: paying Ward-Salt counts as the Gift approach with +1d.
- Aelinnel Math ↔ Proper Footfall: Counting Etiquette grants +1 Position on the Star-Road Procedure.

Artifacts of the Valewood

The Valewood remembers not only oaths and names but also the tools of those who came before. Some artifacts are cursed by the empire’s fall; others are blessed by the forest’s slow patience. Each artifact carries its own burden—a fragment of will that accumulates Obligation as it is used. When the Obligation fills, the artifact demands a price, just as a Patron does.

Artifact Obligation Rules

- An artifact has an Obligation Capacity equal to the wielder’s Spirit (or a fixed number, as noted). Mark Obligation each time a Rite is invoked.
- When Obligation exceeds Capacity, the wielder marks 1 Fatigue per extra segment (as per standard Obligation overflow).
- When the artifact’s Obligation clock reaches double its Capacity, it demands a price (see each artifact’s “Demand”). Refusing the demand may cause the artifact to become Compromised (unusable until a quest is completed) or to inflict a permanent curse.
- Obligation can be cleared through acts of service aligned with the artifact’s nature (e.g., protecting a grove, telling a forgotten truth, shedding your own blood).
- Bound by Obligation: An artifact cannot be permanently discarded or destroyed while you owe it Obligation. If you deliberately abandon it (or attempt to destroy it by mundane means), it reappears beside you at the next dawn, and you mark +1 Obligation. This penalty applies only once per artifact; subsequent attempts to abandon it cause the artifact to become Compromised – it still reappears, but its Rites cannot be invoked until you perform a minor act of devotion (GM’s choice). An artifact can be legitimately transferred to another willing creature, clearing your Obligation; the new owner inherits any remaining Obligation. An artifact can be permanently destroyed only by a specific method (e.g., a star-road shard, a dragon’s tooth, or the Hazel Queen’s permission), which typically requires a quest.

Artifact	Description	Rites (Abilities)	Demand (Obligation 2×Cap)

Echo's Lament	A silver hand-bell with a cracked clapper. When rung, it repeats the last words spoken at the site of an imperial execution.	Rite of the Last Echo (Low) – Ask one question about a death that occurred within Near range; the bell answers with a whisper. Mark +1 Obligation.	The wielder must pronounce a true name of someone they have wronged, aloud and unasked, before the next full moon.
Thorn-Fang	A dagger carved from a single hawthorn root, its edge weeping sap that smells of iron and honey.	Rite of the Unhealing Prick (Low) – On a successful melee attack, the wound bleeds for 1 additional Fatigue per scene (non-stacking). Mark +1 Obligation.	The dagger demands a drop of the wielder's own blood before each dawn; if refused, it turns on its owner (next attack targets self).
Glassleaf Lantern	A lantern whose panes are made of petrified leaves. It burns without oil, casting light that reveals only things that are lost.	Rite of the Unfound Path (Standard) – Once per scene, the lantern illuminates a hidden threshold or a forgotten memory in the area. Gain +2 dice to Investigation or Navigation for that task. Mark +2 Obligation.	The lantern demands to be left at a crossroads at midnight. If not, it will guide the wielder into a dead end (next travel leg automatically fails).
Cord of Eight Knots	A finger-thick rope of braided grey wool, with eight tight knots. The ninth knot is missing.	Rite of the Unbroken Promise (Low) – Tie the cord around a willing creature's wrist; until untied, that creature cannot willingly break a spoken oath. Mark +1 Obligation.	The cord demands a ninth knot, which must be tied in a strand of hair from someone who has broken a vow. Untying any existing knot costs 1 Fatigue.
Alder King's Tooth	A black, curling tooth set in a copper ring. When worn, it whispers the debts of those nearby.	Rite of Debt-Sense (Low) – Concentrate for a moment; learn the single greatest debt owed by a creature you can see (in vague terms: “a life,” “a stolen heirloom”). Mark +1 Obligation.	The tooth demands that you collect a minor debt (a few coins, a favour) from someone weaker than you before sunset. If you refuse, it begins listing your own debts aloud.

Mirror of Unfinished Faces	A hand mirror with a silvered surface that shows not your reflection but a version of you who made a different choice.	Rite of the Other Self (Low) – Gaze into the mirror; gain +1 die on your next roll that involves a decision (the other self's memory guides you). Mark +1 Obligation.	The mirror demands that you speak aloud the choice you regret most, to a stranger, within a day. If you refuse, the other self begins to appear in reflections, whispering doubts.
Whispering Horn	A curved horn of amber, cracked along one side. When blown, it sounds like the roar of a forgotten beast.	Rite of the Imperial Hunt (Standard) – Once per session, blow the horn to summon a spectral pack of hounds that track a designated target for one scene (grants +1 die to tracking and pursuit). Mark +2 Obligation.	The horn demands a hunt – you must chase and catch something (even a mouse) within the hour, or the spirits will hunt you instead (suffer Harm 1 from ethereal bites).
Grave-Moss Cloak	A heavy cloak woven from moss that grows only on imperial barrows. It is always damp and smells of rain.	Rite of the Walking Dead (Low) – Pull the hood up; for one scene, imperial shades treat you as one of their own (no attacks, you may pass patrols). Mark +1 Obligation per scene of use.	The cloak demands that you bury something that was never buried – a memory, a secret, a tooth. If you fail to do so before the next moon, it wraps itself around your throat in your sleep.

Hazel Queen's Comb	A wooden comb carved with thorned vines. Running it through your hair removes tangles and also removes recent memories.	Rite of the Forgetful Stroke (Low) – Stroke the comb through your hair; erase one recent short-term memory (a face, a password, a few minutes of events). The memory is stored in the comb. Mark +1 Obligation.	The comb demands that you give a stored memory to a stranger without explanation. If you refuse, the comb begins to remove random memories each dawn (GM chooses).

Using Artifact Rites in Play

- Activating a Rite takes an action unless noted otherwise.
- Unlike Patron Rites, artifact Rites do not require a Codex or Familiar – only possession of the artifact.
- The GM may allow a wielder to clear artifact Obligation by performing a small act of devotion (e.g., for Thorn-Fang: cut a thorn bush; for Glassleaf Lantern: leave it in a moonbeam overnight).
- Artifacts can be stolen, lost, or destroyed. If an artifact is destroyed, any accumulated Obligation is cleared, but the destruction itself may trigger a final demand (GM's discretion).

Part IV

The Southern Realms (Akilan)

Chapter 18

Oshiira

The Ledger Empire. Oshiira doesn't just run on grain, water, and bureaucracy—it is bureaucracy, a machine where every form has a fee, every audit an opportunity, and the Vermilion Corps isn't just an agency—it's a corporation with a thirst for paper. I sold them a set of breath-bonds to guarantee a grain shipment to Ecktoria—not because I trusted the shipment, but because I knew the Vermilion Corps' head auditor was terrified of a promotion he wasn't qualified for, and he'd pay in tariff stamps for bonds that seemed to guarantee delivery. They paid in a tariff stamp that lets me bypass inspections—stamped with the Vermilion Corps' seal and guaranteed by the Grain Minister's own oath. I've used it to smuggle everything from Ashaani spirit-lamps to Tulkani story-cords... which is why the stamp is wearing out. Wear and tear? No. Strategic degradation. I've been subtly dampening the stamp's ink during "quality checks" so it fades faster—now I can sell them a renewal at triple the price, claiming the old one was "void due to supernatural interference." (The Vermilion Corps agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the locust swarm I "summoned" during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 14 of the Oshiira Bureaucracy Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Bureaucracy accord? Thimble, my dear, little paper-pusher, bureaucracy accords are just leverage with a stamp—especially when I've bought the Vermilion Corps' head auditor's silence with a breath-bond that doesn't guarantee shipment... it guarantees a smuggled cargo. Now, about that tariff stamp... the Grain Minister's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in smuggled spirit-lamps looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 3 of the Grain Minister's Ledger—]

[Edgewalker: Grain Minister's ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I've got a vermilion war to start in Ashaan, and if you mention "Clause 3" one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the next tariff stamp as kindling. They prefer it damp.]

18.1 Oshiira — “The Ledger Empire”

Vermilion Corps Auditor (Elite): “The ledger does not forgive arithmetic errors. A single miscounted bushel can unmake a house, a tribe, an empire. I am not here to be kind. I am here to be correct.”

Canal Mother (Commoner): “Water is memory. Every canal remembers the hands that dug it, the barges that passed, the widows who wept at its edge. Control the water, and you control what the empire remembers.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Oshiira is a confederacy of hundreds of tribes and city-states, united by the Grain Ledger. The capital, Mbaro, is a city of canals, weigh-houses, and the great Granary Tower. Oshiira is the breadbasket of the Amaranthine; its wheat fills the holds of Ecktorian, Vhasian, and Silkstrand ships. The Shoreless Bay is its northern border, a calm sound dotted with grain-loading piers. The empire operates through a bureaucracy as complex as any in the north, with weighing-houses and canal-mothers whose ledgers track grain shipments with mathematical precision.

What you notice first: The smell of grain dust and canal water. The constant scratch of reed pens on parchment. The way everyone—from merchant to slave—touches their receipt before speaking of trade.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never speak of succession before naming the Widow. The empress's health is a state secret, and the Vermilion Corps has ears in every weigh-house.

Regional Mood: The Weight of Grain

Power here is measured in bushels, not blood. A tribe's standing depends on its harvest records; a merchant's fortune on the accuracy of his scales. The Vermilion Corps audits without mercy, and the Canal Mothers control the water that turns the mill-wheels. Oshiira fought four wars with Ecktoria to a standstill, though the empire suffered worse. The memory of those wars lingers in every weigh-house and every tariff.

Starting Location: A grain-loading pier on the Shoreless Bay, where Oshiiran wheat is being loaded onto Ecktorian barges. A Narrow Captain approaches: "Kahfagian "pirates" have been sighted. The Widow wants deniable assets. You're now deniable. Find out who's leaking our sailing schedules, or swim home."

Prominent NPCs of Oshiira

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Mothers of the Vermilion Eye	Vermilion Corps auditor	Find every miscount, collect every debt	She counts her own breaths to ensure she is not lying.
Lady Tano	Canal Mother of the eastern reach	Keep the water flowing and her family fed	She has never seen the sea. She refuses to start.
Captain Sefu	Narrow Captain, Oshiiran navy	Provoke Kahfagia into breaking the peace	He names his cannons after his ex-wives.

Merchant Kofi	Salt Syndicate factor	Control the desert caravan routes	He tastes salt before every deal. The salt tells him if the seller is lying.
Widow’s Scribe	Granary Tower archivist	Protect the Ledger at any cost	He has not left the tower in forty years. The Ledger is his family.
The Vermilion Hand	Internal enforcement (rumoured)	A ghost who audits oath-breakers	Said to appear when a debt is nine years overdue.

Names of Oshiira

Inspired by the Sahelian and West African traditions: melodic, with repeated syllables and clan prefixes. Surnames often denote a trade, a water source, or an ancestor’s deed.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Kofi	Adwoa	Keita	the Ledger-Keeper
Kwame	Amara	Diallo	Canal-Born
Sefu	Nia	Toure	Weigh-Master
Chidi	Zuri	Sow	Ninth Daughter
Obi	Imani	Bangura	the Widow’s Eye
Idriss	Fatou	Kamara	Salt-Tongue

(Canal/Weigh-House/Granary) Mudflat weigh-station where grain sacks pile under reed awnings; canal junction where three barges queue for a single pilot’s writ.

Spades — Places

- Mudflat Weigh-Station — Grain sacks piled under reed awnings. The scales are bronze. They squeal when a false weight is placed.
- Granary Tower (Cracked Ledger Door) — A door sealed with wax and warning. The wax is the Widow’s own seal. Break it, and the Vermilion Corps will know.
- Canal Junction — Three barges, one pilot, one writ, many arguments. The pilot’s writ is stamped with a watermark that shifts in sunlight.
- The Widow’s Weigh-House — Bronze scales, silent clerks, no windows. The clerks do not speak. They tap their fingers. Each tap is a number.
- Grain Exchange Floor — Traders shout in couplets; bids are poems. A bad rhyme loses your entire stake. A good one doubles it.

7. Canal Mother's Court — A shaded bench where water rights are assigned. The bench is carved from a single log. The log was a bridge she ordered burned.
8. Salt Syndicate Counting House — Desert caravans pay their tolls here. The floor is salt. Sweep it, and you are cleaning a debt.
9. Shoreless Bay Grain Piers — Wooden docks stretching into shallow water. At low tide, you can see the bones of ships that tried to bypass the tariffs.
10. Narrow Captains' Mess — A longhouse where naval officers drink and scheme. The toasts are in code. "To the Widow" means "prepare for war."
- J Kahfagian Cold War Station — A lighthouse that is also a spy post. The lamp flashes in a sequence that changes weekly. The codebook is in cipher.
- Q Mothers' Stepwell — A deep well with stone steps leading down. Each step is a different mother's name. The ninth step is empty.
- K Granary Tower Top — A wind-swept platform with a single brass bell. The bell rings only when the Widow dies. It has not rung in forty years.
- A The Ledger Vault — A subterranean archive beneath the Granary. The air is dry. The ledgers are on chains. The chains have teeth.

(Clerk/Mother/Captain) Grain inspector with a brass stamp and a grudge; Canal Mother bargaining over water rights; Vermilion Corps auditor with ink on fingers.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Grain Inspector — Brass stamp, iron will, no sense of humour. His stamp leaves a mark that glows under moonlight. He knows.
3. Canal Mother — Matriarch who controls the sluice gates. She has three sons. Each runs a different canal. She plays them against each other.
4. Vermilion Corps Auditor — Ink-stained fingers, a ledger that never closes. She audits the auditors. Her own books are forged—perfection.
5. Narrow Captain — Chafes at the cold war pact. Wants blood. He keeps a map of Kahfagian ports. Each has a red X. He adds one per season.
6. Salt Syndicate Merchant — Offers loans with interest paid in favours. His interest rate is written in disappearing ink. You never know the true cost.
7. Weigh-House Clerk — Silent, watchful, never blinks. He has not spoken in ten years. He communicates by stamping receipts.
8. Tribal Chief — Caught between the Widow's law and ancestral custom. He keeps two ledgers: one for Mbaro, one for his ancestors.
9. Barge Pilot — Knows every canal, every shortcut, every bribe. His boat is faster than it should be. The hull is lined with contraband.
10. Spice Merchant — Sells cardamom and secrets in equal measure. Her spice boxes have false bottoms. The bottoms contain intelligence.
- J Widow's Scribe — The empress's personal archivist. He writes in a script that only the Widow can read. He has forgotten his own name.
- Q Vermilion Hand — A rumoured figure in red gloves. She appears when a debt is nine years old. Her arrival is a death sentence.

K The Widow (Empress) — Dying, paranoid, still counting. She has not slept in three years. The Ledger keeps her awake.

A The Ninth Heir — A child no one acknowledges, raised in secret. She was taught to read ledgers before she could walk. She is the Widow’s only hope.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Desert Dust — Red sand from Ashaan coats the grain; inspector halts caravan. The dust smells of old magic. Touch it, and a spirit may notice you.
 3. Locust Swarm — A chittering cloud descends; Supply –1. The locusts leave behind a single word written in their bodies: “Pay.”
 4. Cold War Provocation — A Kahfagian “pirate” is sighted in Oshiiran waters. The pirate flies a flag of truce. The truce is a lie.
 5. Widow’s Health Fails — Succession rumours spike; trade freezes. The Grain Exchange floor goes silent. No one wants to be on the wrong side.
 6. Audit In Progress — Vermilion Corps seals the weigh-house; no one leaves. The auditor asks one question: “Where is the ninth bushel?”
 7. Canal Blockage — A barge sinks at a junction; water backs up. The barge was sunk deliberately. A Canal Mother is making a point.
 8. False Receipt — Your grain receipt is a forgery. Prove otherwise. The forger used real paper. The ink is the only difference.
 9. Salt Syndicate Call — Your loan is due. In favours. Now. The favour is to poison a rival’s well. Refuse, and your own well is next.
 10. Narrow Captain’s Gambit — A captain offers you a bribe to provoke Kahfagia. The bribe is a ship. The ship is stolen. You are the decoy.
- J Tribal Feud — Two tribes claim the same harvest; you are the witness. Both ledgers are correct. The error is in the Widow’s own records.
- Q Vermilion Hand Appears — A figure in red gloves sits at your table. She asks for a name. Give a name, or she will take yours.
- K Widow’s Summons — The empress demands your presence at the Granary. The summons is written in disappearing ink. It has already begun to fade.
- A The Ninth Bushel — A grain shipment is short by one bushel. The empire demands blood. The missing bushel is a metaphor. The empire wants a scapegoat.

(Stamp/Token/Priority) Receipt for stolen grain (blackmail material); barge priority token (skip the queue); weigh-house seal (legal immunity for one audit).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Grain Receipt (Stolen) — Blackmail material against a merchant. The receipt is stained with wine. The merchant’s daughter was drunk.

3. Barge Priority Token — Skip the queue at any canal junction (once). The token is a clay disc. It breaks after one use. Intentionally.
 4. Weigh-House Seal — Legal immunity from one audit. The seal is warm. It cools when an auditor is near.
 5. Treaty Seal (Cold War) — One use to demand a parley with Kahfagia. The seal is half of a pair. The other half is held by a Kahfagian admiral.
 6. Canal Mother's Favour — One water-right reassignment. The favour is a key. The key opens a sluice gate. The gate controls a district's water.
 7. Vermilion Corps Pass — Safe passage through any audit checkpoint. The pass is a single red feather. No one questions it.
 8. Salt Syndicate Loan Waiver — One debt forgiven, no questions asked. The waiver is a pinch of salt in a leather pouch. Swallow it to activate.
 9. Narrow Captain's Letter of Marque — Legal piracy against Kahfagia. The letter is signed by the Widow. Her signature is a single dot.
 10. Tribal Chief's Witness — One oath witnessed by a neutral chief. The witness is a scar on your arm. The scar is the chief's signature.
- J Widow's Cipher — Read one intercepted Kahfagian dispatch. The cipher is a poem. The poem is about a drowned sailor. The sailor was a spy.
- Q Vermilion Hand's Silence — One crime erased from the Ledger. The hand leaves a red thumbprint on the page. The page then burns.
- K Heir's Trust — The ninth heir owes you a secret. The secret is a name. The name is the Widow's true successor.
- A The Ledger Page — A single page from the Granary's master ledger. The page lists every debt the empire has forgotten. The debts are still valid.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (receipts/tokens/seals) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo grain-omens—scales that tip without weight, ledgers that rustle in still air, the Widow's cough echoing from the tower.

Additional Features

- The Grain Ledger: Every harvest, every debt, every tariff is recorded. A single page can make or break a family. The Ledger is kept in the Granary Tower, guarded by the Vermilion Corps and the Widow's own magic.
- The Widow's Peace: A fragile truce with Kahfagia, maintained by tariffs, spies, and the occasional deniable raid. Break it, and you break the empire.
- Canal Law: Water rights are the second currency. The Canal Mothers decide who drinks, who farms, and who drowns.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Widow’s Ninth Succession (Unfinished Ledger): The Widow is dying. Her four children vie for the throne. One is a half-breed, one is a spirit, one is a puppet, and one is already dead. The Vermilion Corps has a secret ledger listing which heir each faction supports. The party has been offered a barony to escort the heir of their choice to Mbaro.
- The Salt Syndicate’s Ashaani Contacts (The Veil): The Salt Syndicate trades with Ashaani across the Red Desert. They smuggle more than salt—they smuggle spirit-bottles, forbidden texts, and escaped slaves. The Veiled Sisters tolerate the trade because the Syndicate also carries their spies.
- The Narrow Captain’s Kahfagian Lover (The Flag of Storms): Captain Sefu has a secret: his ex-wife is a Kahfagian admiral. They communicate via coded lantern signals across the Narrow of Sorrows. Their correspondence is a map to a peace treaty—or a declaration of war.
- The Granary Tower’s Gnome Engineers (Aeler Influence): The Granary Tower’s counterweights were designed by Aeler vent-priors. The breath-bonds that keep the ledgers safe are of Aeler make. If the Aeler ever withdrew their engineers, the tower would collapse within a season.

Oshiira Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Ledger: Crumble a crust onto a weigh-house scale. Ignore the first Desert Dust penalty.
- Knot the Quill: Tie a single knot in an audit quill. Cancel False Receipt or take –1 die on your next negotiation (your choice).
- Name to the Canal: Whisper a dead Canal Mother’s name into the water. Gain +1 Effect when bargaining for water rights, but mark Obligation to the Widow.

Patronage & Power

Among the Oshiira, power flows through grain, water, and the written word. The Widow holds ultimate authority, but the Vermilion Corps audits without mercy, the Canal Mothers control the waterways, and the Salt Syndicate finances the caravans. A tribe’s standing depends on its harvest records; a merchant’s fortune on the accuracy of his scales.

For the GM: Power in Oshiiran society is bureaucratic and paper-based. Patronage often takes the form of sealed receipts, priority tokens, or debt waivers—each recorded in the Ledger and subject to audit. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible documents (receipts, passes, seals) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival factions issue conflicting claims, forcing players to choose whose ledger matters more.
- Use weigh-houses and canal junctions as arenas for social contests, where tariffs are debated and debts are called.

In Oshiiran society, your receipt is your bond, and your grain is your greatest treasure.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Grain Inspectors or Canal Mothers.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby weigh-house clerks or barge pilots.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for auditors or Syndicate debt-collectors.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable tariffs.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local Vermilion Corps or Narrow Captain becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to canal blockage or dust storm.
- Foe Appears: A rival merchant or tribal chief arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional auditors, guards, or Syndicate enforcers arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—Widow's health fails/oath invoked/audit declared.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Widow, Vermilion Hand, or Ninth Heir intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—canal breaches/ledger catches fire/succession crisis begins.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Oshiira (Grain Law): Scales tip without cause, ledgers rustle, the Widow's cough echoes from the tower.
- Oshiira (Cold War): Kahfagian flags appear on the horizon, cipher books fall open to the wrong page, spies exchange glances.

- Oshiira (Canal Law): Sluice gates open unbidden, water rises, a Canal Mother’s son draws a knife.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Stealth): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose False Trail.
- Cut the Bribe (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a weigh-house is under your seal, +1 die.
- Weather the Audit (Resolve + Lore): On a hit in Vermilion Inspection, you pick who testifies; on a miss, the auditor does.

Boss Seeds (Grain & Ledger)

- The Ledger-Keeper (Nine Volumes) — Phases: Audit Thresholds → Orchestrated Famine → Succession Coup. Cracks: cut a lineage page; reveal swapped seal; survive a staged grain shortage.
- The Salt Mother (Brine-Syndicate) — Phases: Loans Called Mercy → Procession at Weigh-House → Salt-Baptism of a Captain. Cracks: relic debt-waiver, survivor testimony, salt turning against them.

Chapter 19

Ashaan

The Veiled Throne. Ashaan isn't just a nation of corpses propped up by spirit-binding—it's a market for terror, and oh, how the Veiled Sisters love a good secret. They don't just pay in secrets—they pay in leverage with a supernatural clause, and the secrets are always dangerous... which is why they're such profitable inventory. I sold them an Aeler spirit-cage to hold a bound demon—not because I cared about their throne's stability, but because I knew the Head Veiled Sister's apprentice was terrified of the demon she was binding, and she'd pay in veil-clips for a cage that seemed to contain it. They paid in a veil-clip that lets me speak without being silenced—stamped with the Ashaan seal and guaranteed by the High Sister's own oath. I've used it to negotiate with the Breath-less. The Sisters don't know. Yet. Which is why I'm already shopping their secret around to the Black Hand. “Want to know how to break their spirit-binding?” I whisper. “It'll cost you a kingdom.”

[Thimble: Sir, the Ashaan Veiling Accord Article 6 explicitly forbids—]

[Edgewalker: Veiling accord? Thimble, my anxious little shadow, veiling accords are just leverage with a whisper—especially when I've bought the Head Veiled Sister's apprentice's silence with a spirit-cage that doesn't hold a bound demon... it releases it. Now, about that veil-clip... the High Sister's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what her weight in Breath-less secrets looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

19.1 Ashaan — “The Veiled Throne”

Veiled Sister (Elite): “The Veil is not a choice. It is survival. You will show your eyes and nothing more. Speak in thirds—offer two options and a hidden third. The ninth word is always a knife.”

Breath-less Agent (Commoner): “They say Ikasha sleeps. I say she is patient. The Sisters have ruled for generations; they believe the Veil is eternal. But the Veil is silk. Silk frays. And I am learning to bite through — one whisper at a time.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Ashaan is a nation that died long ago. The Veiled Sisters keep its corpse walking through spirit-binding, terror, and the endless consumption of their own people. The capital, Galanina, is a city of black marble and brass cages. The Red Desert, which now covers half the country, was once fertile land; the Sisters' magic leached the life from it. There is no recovery, only a slower dying. The Ashaani people are not inherently evil, but most are complicit—they must be to survive. A few resist in secret, forming cells of the Breath-less. The Sisters hunt them with spirit-hounds and slave-catchers.

What you notice first: The smell of incense and rust. The way every doorway has a veil of brass chains. The silence when a Veiled Sister passes — even the spirits hold their breath.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never name the dead. The Sisters bind spirits to names. Speak a dead name aloud, and you may find yourself bound alongside them.

Regional Mood: The Weight of Damnation

Power here is measured in spirits bound, names erased, and the silence of witnesses. The Veiled Sisters rule through terror, the Esoiti control every ledger and gate, and the Black Hand hunts without uniform. The Breath-less whisper in cellars, learning to read ledgers without leaving marks. Ashaan is not a place of open rebellion. It is a place of whispered warnings, vanished neighbors, and ledgers that rewrite themselves.

Starting Location: A root cellar beneath a spice merchant's shop, lit by a smuggled candle. A Breath-less agent presses a folded paper into your hand: "My brother argued with an Esoiti about a misweighed sack of cardamom. His name was erased from the rolls by morning. Help me find him — or help me remember his name."

Prominent NPCs of Ashaan

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Sister Morai	Veiled Sister of the Inner Circle	Maintain the Veil at any cost	She has not eaten in thirty years; she feeds on bound spirits.
Magistrate Eso	Esoiti magistrate	Control every ledger, every court, every gate	He rewrites his own memory each morning. His left hand is a stamp.
The Black Hand	Hunter of bodies and spirits (faceless)	Erase anyone who whispers Ikasha's name	No one knows their faces. They could be your neighbor, your clerk, your spouse.

Tamar	Breath-less cell leader	Tear down the system from within	She has three names; each is for a different jurisdiction.
Kaelen	Spirit-broken slave	A child taken for “reevaluation,” returned hollow-eyed	He no longer speaks. He only weeps when he hears a brass bell.
The Whisperer	Forbidden mage in hiding	Learn to read ledgers without leaving marks	He writes on water. The words vanish, but the Sisters cannot read them.

Names of Ashaan

Inspired by the Horn of Africa and ancient Semitic roots: sharp consonants, vowel-rich endings. Surnames often denote a trade, a debt, or a lost lineage.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Kaelen	Morai	al-Galanina	the Veiled
Tarek	Iman	Esoiti-broken	the Breath-less
Jasin	Nadira	Black-Hand-marked	the Unnamed
Zahir	Tamar	Spirit-bound	the Ninth Witness
Rashid	Layla	Ledger-erased	the Forgotten
Dawud	Amina	Cage-born	the Hollow

(Gate/Sanctum/Pan) Salt pan with a broken spirit-cage; black marble temple with steps stained red; the Brass Gate — a fortified strait with spirit-buoys.

Spades — Places

- 2. Salt Pan with Broken Spirit-Cage — A white flat where the air hums. The cage is empty, but it still rattles at night. Something got out.
- 3. Black Marble Temple — Steps stained red; the blood never washes away. The temple has no windows. The Sisters do not need light.
- 4. The Brass Gate — A fortified strait with spirit-buoys that scream when crossed. Each buoy contains a bound spirit. They sing the names of those who pass.
- 5. Veiled Sister’s Sanctum — Entrance hidden by a mirage that shows your greatest fear. The mirage is not an illusion. It is a memory the Sister has stolen.
- 6. Galanina Slave Market — A circular pit with cages of brass and bone. The auctioneer wears a mask. The mask is made from the face of a debt-seller.

7. Esoiti Ledger Hall — A long chamber with shelves of silent books. The ledgers write themselves. The ink is the blood of erased names.
8. Black Hand Garrison — A nondescript building with no windows and a single door. The door has no handle. It opens inward only when a name is whispered.
9. Breath-less Cellar — A root cellar with a single candle and a hole in the floor. The hole leads to a tunnel that leads to a tomb. The tomb is a safe house.
10. Red Desert's Edge — Where the fertile land turns to dust and glass. The glass is green. It hums with the memory of the prince's curse.
- J The Ninth Name Shrine — A ruin where a forbidden name is carved into stone. The stone weeps water. The water tastes of iron and forgotten vows.
- Q Spirit-Binding Foundry — A forge where brass cages are made. The forge is heated by a bound fire-spirit. It screams when the bellows pump.
- K The Hollow Vessel Nursery — A orphanage where children are prepared for possession. The children have no shadows. Their shadows have been sold.
- A Ikasha's Sleeping Chamber — A sealed vault beneath Galanina. Inside, a stone sarcophagus. The stone is warm. She Who Sleeps dreams of freedom.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Slave-Hunter (Black Hand) — No uniform, no name, no mercy. He carries a branding iron that glows without fire. The brand is a spirit's name.
3. Breath-less Agent — Escaped slave, now spy, always watching. She writes messages on her own skin. The ink is invisible until wet.
4. Veiled Sister — Testing your honesty with a whisper. She offers a compliment that is also a threat. Her smile never reaches her eyes.
5. Ashaani Magician — Offers dangerous knowledge in exchange for a memory. He has bound his own shadow. The shadow speaks when he sleeps.
6. Esoiti Magistrate — Carries a ledger that is also a weapon. His quill never needs ink. It writes in the blood of his enemies.
7. Spirit-Broken Child — Taken for “reevaluation,” returned hollow-eyed. She hums a tune that no one recognizes. The tune is a bound spirit's name.
8. Cellar Whisperer — A Breath-less informant who speaks in coughs. He uses a code of knocks. Three knocks means “safe,” four means “run.”
9. Cage-Maker — Forges brass cages for spirits. He hates his work. He leaves a single flaw in every cage. A flaw only a spirit can find.
10. Ledger Forger — Creates false identities for escaped slaves. He signs each forgery with his own blood. The signature is his last act.
- J The Drowned Sister — A Veiled Sister who betrayed the coven. Now a ghost. She appears in wells. She offers secrets. The price is a drink of water.
- Q Ikasha's Dreamer — A Breath-less mystic who dreams the future. She sleeps twenty hours a day. When she wakes, she speaks in riddles.

- K The Unnamed Prince’s Ghost — The shade of the prince who stole the Kalrantha. He walks the Red Desert at noon. He asks travellers for water. Do not give it.
- A The Ninth Sister — A Veiled Sister who secretly aids the Breath-less. She wears a veil that is also a noose. She has already chosen her death.

(Dust/Gate/Spirit) Spirit-dust storm (Navigation DV +1, mark Fatigue); Brass Gate closed for “inspection” — delay 2 segments; a bound spirit breaks free and attacks.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Spirit-Dust Storm — Red sand from the desert carries whispering spirits. Navigation DV +1. Mark Fatigue. The voices ask for your name. Do not answer.
 3. Brass Gate Closed — The strait is sealed for “inspection.” Delay 2 segments. The “inspection” is a hunt for a Breath-less agent. The agent is in your party.
 4. Bound Spirit Breaks Free — A brass cage cracks. The spirit attacks. The spirit was once a child. It weeps as it fights. Killing it feels like murder.
 5. The Veil Fails — For a moment, the Sisters’ magic falters. Spirit-visions haunt all. You see the face of someone you wronged. They are asking for an apology.
 6. Black Hand Sweep — A sudden search of the district. Everyone’s papers are checked. Your papers are in order. The Black Hand does not care. They take you anyway.
 7. Esoiti Audit — A magistrate demands to see your ledgers. Your ledgers are lies. The magistrate smiles. “Everyone lies. I just need to know how much.”
 8. Spirit-Hound Scent — A pack of bound hounds is on your trail. The hounds are invisible. You can hear their breathing, close and wet.
 9. Slave Raid — A Veiled Sister’s caravan is taking villagers. You are in the way. The villagers are armed. They have been expecting you. You are the bait.
 10. Ikasha’s Whisper — In a quiet moment, you hear a voice: “Free me.” The whisper comes from a crack in the floor. A single green eye looks up.
- J The Ninth Name Spoken — Someone in the party speaks a dead name aloud. The air grows cold. A spirit appears. It wants to know why you called.
- Q Sister’s Test — A Veiled Sister offers a deal: betray a Breath-less contact for safety. The offer is genuine. The price is your soul. The Sister watches you decide.
- K Mass Haunting — The bound spirits rise as one. The Veil is tearing. The spirits do not attack. They simply ask: “Why did you let this happen?”
- A The Demon’s Debt Called — Varash the Unmaker (or a fragment) demands payment. The amulet Kalrantha glows. A voice whispers: “Speak your desire.”

(Name/Lamp/Seal) A slave’s true name (free them or bind them further); spirit-lamp (one question to a bound spirit); brass seal (guest status in a Sister’s sanctum).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Slave’s True Name — Use it to free a bound person — or bind them further. The name is written on a scrap of skin. The skin was the slave’s own.

3. Spirit-Lamp — Ask one question of a bound spirit. It cannot lie. The lamp burns green. The spirit's face appears in the flame. It is weeping.
 4. Brass Seal (Guest Status) — Safe passage in a Sister's sanctum for one visit. The seal is warm. It glows when a Sister is lying.
 5. Veil-Clip — Speak without being silenced by Veiled Sister magic. The clip is a small brass spider. It crawls onto your collar and whispers.
 6. Erased Name Page — A page from the Esoiti ledger with a name struck through. The ink is still wet. The name was erased ten minutes ago.
 7. Breath-less Cipher — A codebook for reading secret messages on water. The cipher is written on a leaf. The leaf dissolves when read.
 8. Spirit-Hound Whistle — Call off a pack of bound hounds once. The whistle is made from a child's bone. The child was the hounds' last victim.
 9. Ikasha's Dream — One prophetic vision of the Sisters' next move. The dream arrives as a headache. The vision is clear. The cost is one memory.
 10. Black Hand Mask — Wear it to pass as a Hunter for one scene. The mask has no eye holes. The mask sees for you. It also remembers.
- J Cage-Maker's Flaw — A key that opens any spirit-cage. One use. The key is a bent nail. It was the flaw the cage-maker left.
- Q Drowned Sister's Secret — The location of a hidden Breath-less archive. The archive is in a well. The well is guarded by a ghost. The ghost's name is Mercy.
- K Ninth Sister's Veil — Wear it to appear as a Veiled Sister for one hour. The veil is also a noose. Do not tie it too tight.
- A The Unnamed Prince's Map — A map to the original Kalrantha temple. The map is drawn on human skin. The skin was the prince's own.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (names, lamps, seals) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo veil-omens—brass chains that rattle without wind, ledgers that open to the wrong page, a whisper that sounds like your own voice.

Additional Features

- The Veil: The Sisters' control is maintained through spirit-binding and terror. The Veil is not just a political structure—it is a magical membrane that separates the living from the dead. When the Veil fails, spirits walk.
- Ikasha's Cult as Active Resistance: She Who Sleeps is not a patron of open rebellion. Her followers meet in root cellars, learn to read ledgers without leaving marks, and whisper secrets under the cover of a cough. Her Rites—Touch the Umbral Veil, Secret Keeper's Burden—become tools of survival.
- The Breath-less: A secret network of escaped slaves, forbidden mages, and whisperers of Ikasha's name. They fight to tear down the system from within. Their symbol is a broken brass chain.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Kalrantha Amulet (Dhahara Connection): The Red Desert was once fertile land, destroyed by an Ashaani prince who stole the Kalrantha amulet. The Sisters want the amulet to bind the demon again—or to use it for themselves. The Breath-less want to destroy it.
- The Sidhi of the Brass Coast (Way of Silk): The Sidhi are coastal cousins of the Ashaani who fled slavery generations ago. They maintain lighthouse courts and freedman’s seals. They remember every raid. A Sidhi captain may be a Breath-less contact.
- The Veiled Sisters and the Covenant (Mykkiel): Mykkiel, the Judge of Galanina, is a direct antagonist to the Veiled Sisters. His followers are the secret courts of the Breath-less, trying the Sisters in absentia. A Covenant judge may offer sanctuary—or demand testimony.
- The Hollow and the Ninth Name (Eastern Realms): In Ashaan, the Hollow is the space left by an erased name. The Veiled Sisters feed the Hollow with forgotten debts. The Breath-less know that to restore a name is to weaken the Veil.

Ashaan Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Veil: Crumble a crust at a brass cage. Ignore the first Spirit-Dust Storm penalty.
- Knot the Veil-Clip: Tie a single knot in your veil. Cancel Black Hand Sweep or take –1 die on your next stealth roll (your choice).
- Name to the Well: Whisper a dead Breath-less agent’s name into a well. Gain +1 Effect when evading the Sisters this scene, but mark Obligation to Ikasha.

Patronage & Power

Among the Ashaani, power flows through fear, spirit-binding, and the erasure of names. The Veiled Sisters hold ultimate authority, but the Esoiti control the ledgers, the Black Hand enforces silence, and the Breath-less whisper in cellars. A name can be a weapon or a shield. For the GM: Power in Ashaani society is hidden and treacherous. Patronage often takes the form of true names, spirit-lamps, or erased ledger pages—each carrying the weight of damnation. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to secrets (names, whispers, visions) that can be betrayed, stolen, or used against the giver.
- Let rival factions (Sisters vs. Esoiti vs. Breath-less) offer conflicting paths, forcing players to choose whose debt to incur.
- Use the Brass Gate, the Ledger Hall, and the root cellars as arenas for social contests, where truth is a weapon and silence is a shield.

In Ashaani society, your name is your bond—and your bond can be erased.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Black Hand agents or Esoiti clerks.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby spirit-hounds or slave-catchers.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for Veiled Sisters or bound spirits.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or safe passage.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local Black Hand or Esoiti magistrate becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to veil failure or spirit manifestation.
- Foe Appears: A bound spirit or slave-hunter arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional Black Hand, Esoiti guards, or bound spirits arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—Veil fails/spirit breaks free/name is spoken.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Veiled Sister, Esoiti High Magistrate, or Ikasha's manifestation intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—Veil tears/sandstorm rises/Brass Gate seals.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Ashaan (The Veil): Brass chains rattle, ledgers open to the wrong page, a whisper sounds like your own voice.
- Ashaan (Red Desert): Glass shards hum, sand shifts to reveal bones, a mirage shows a memory you had forgotten.

- Ashaan (Breath-less): A cough from a shadow, a knock in a cellar, a name written on water that does not dissolve.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Stealth): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose False Trail.
- Cut the Veil (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a Sister’s seal is in your possession, +1 die.
- Weather the Haunting (Resolve + Spirit): On a hit in Mass Haunting, you pick who is targeted; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Spirit & Veil)

- The Ledger-Eater (Nine Erasures) — Phases: Audit Thresholds → Orchestrated Erasure → Veil Coup. Cracks: cut a lineage page; reveal swapped seal; survive a staged haunting.
- The Unbound Sister (Brine-Veil) — Phases: Drownings Called Mercy → Procession at Brass Gate → Spirit-Baptism of a Magistrate. Cracks: relic spirit-lamp, survivor testimony, the Veil turning against them.

Chapter 20

Ngomebe

The Stone Men. Ngomebe isn't just walking cities on rollers and sledges—it's a rolling market, and oh, how the Mason-Kin Houses love a good deal on eternal motion. They don't just treat Aeler as equals; they bid for our leverage, and the keystone charter isn't just a document—it's a licence to dwell in any walking city for a season, stamped with the Ngomebe seal and guaranteed by the Rollmaster-General's own oath. I sold them a set of bearings that never wear out—not because I believed in perpetual motion, but because I knew the Rollmaster-General's deputy was terrified of a promotion that would put him in charge of maintenance, and he'd pay in keystone charters for bearings that seemed eternal. I've used it to hide from the Black Hand, the Censorate, and an angry Veiled Sister. . . which is why I'm already shopping the charter's "expiry" to the highest bidder. "Want to know when the bearings will wear out?" I whisper. "It'll cost you a city."

[Thimble: Sir, Article 10 of the Ngomebe Motion Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Motion accord? Thimble, my dear, little roller, motion accords are just leverage with a bearing—especially when I've bought the Rollmaster-General's deputy's silence with a bearing that doesn't never wear out. . . it seizes up at the worst moment. Now, about that keystone charter. . . the Rollmaster-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in hidden cities looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 4 of the Rollmaster-General's Ledger—]

[Edgewalker: Rollmaster-General's ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I've got a bearing war to start in the Brass Coast, and if you mention "Clause 4" one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the next keystone charter as kindling. They prefer it rolling.]

20.1 Ngomebe — "The Stone Men"

Mason-Kin Elder (Elite): "A city that stops moving is a city that has chosen to die. The stone remembers every mile, every roller, every oath sworn in the shadow of the keystone. We do not build cities. We raise them from the earth and teach them to walk."

Stone-Cutter (Commoner): "My grandfather carved the keystone for this city. My father greased the rollers. I inherited a sledge and a song. The song is the city's heartbeat. If I stop singing, the city stops walking — and so do I."

Theme & Atmosphere

The Ngomebe are a people of deep, iron-dark skin and older ties to the southern ranges. Their cities walk — colossal stone structures on rollers and sledges, dragged by teams of oxen, magic, and Aeler-designed capstans. This partnership is one of the great cross-cultural achievements of the age: Aeler engineers maintain the bearings; Ngomebe masons carve the keystones. A walking city is not a curiosity; it is a living argument against stillness, a monument to survival in a land where staying in one place invites famine, war, or the slow forgetting of ancestral stone.

What you notice first: The groan of stone on stone. The smell of warm granite and ox sweat. The way the ground trembles slightly, even a mile away, as the city inches across the plateau.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never carve a name into living rock. The stone remembers. It will whisper that name to every spirit of the earth, and the debt will follow your bloodline for seven generations.

Regional Mood: The Weight of Movement

Power here is measured in keystones, migration routes, and the loyalty of the Mason-Kin. A walking city is a polity, a temple, and a weapon all at once. The Mason-Kin Houses control the rights to carve, to move, and to settle. Root-binders — heretics who plant acorns in the rollers — believe the cities should stop and let the forest reclaim the stone. The Aeler engineers are neither masters nor servants; they are partners in a pact older than memory.

Starting Location: The edge of a moving city's path, where the stone is still warm and the dust has not yet settled. A Mason-Kin elder approaches, wiping granite dust from his face: "A keystone has cracked. The city will stop before dawn. Find the saboteur — a Root-binder, I suspect — or push the rollers yourselves. The plateau does not forgive stillness."

Prominent NPCs of Ngomebe

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Elder Morvath	Mason-Kin elder of the eastern caravan	Keep the city moving south, away from the Red Desert's breath	He has not slept in forty days; the city's rhythm keeps him awake.
Kaelen	Stone-cutter whose city left him behind	Catch up to his family's city before it crosses the Salt Scar	He chisels a new keystone every night. None have been accepted.

Vent-Prior Thrain	Aeler engineer, grease-stained and level-carrying	Maintain the bearings that keep the city alive	She speaks to the rollers in a language of taps. They answer in groans.
The Root-binder	A heretic planting acorns in the roller-pits	Let the forest reclaim the stone; let the cities sleep	He has a single green leaf growing from his left ear.
Ox-Master Senn	Handler of the eight-ox teams that drag the city	Keep the beasts healthy, the yokes oiled, and the pace steady	He names each ox after a dead mason. The oxen remember.
The Still Voice	A spirit of abandoned keystones	Witness the cities that chose to stop	It appears only when a city’s migration clock reaches zero. It asks one question: “Why did you stay?”

Names of Ngomebe

Inspired by the deep southern plateau: short, earth-toned syllables with clicks and tonal shifts. Surnames often denote a stone type, a city of origin, or a Mason-Kin House.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Morvath	Thandi	Keystone-carver	the Unstill
Kaelen	Nia	Roller-born	the Grey-Faced
Senn	Zola	Mason-Kin	the Slow Walker
Duma	Amara	Stone-song	the Ninth Roller
Temba	Lindi	Sledge-heir	the Root-Breaker
Jengo	Penda	Ox-kin	the Warm Stone

(Quarry/Hall/Edge) Abandoned quarry where stone-song still echoes; Mason-Kin hall with walls carved in lineage; the edge of a city’s path — the stone is warm to the touch.

Spades — Places

2. City on the Move — Rollers groan, oxen low, the ground trembles. The city’s shadow moves faster than the city itself. Stay in the shadow to keep pace.
3. Abandoned Quarry — Stone-song echoes from the walls. The song is the memory of the last stone cut here. It sings of a mason who fell.

4. Mason-Kin Hall — Walls carved with lineage, floor inlaid with sledge-ruts. The carvings weep water when a city is in danger. The water tastes of granite.
5. Edge of the Path — The stone is warm. The warmth fades when the city leaves. If you place your palm on the stone before it cools, you may ask the city one question.
6. Roller-Pit — A trench where the great rollers turn, greased with rendered ox-fat. The grease is mixed with ancestor ash. The rollers remember every mason who ever touched them.
7. Keystone Chamber — The heart of the city, a single stone that bears all weight. The keystone hums. The pitch changes when a mason swears a false oath.
8. Sledge-Track Scar — A groove worn into the bedrock by centuries of passage. The groove is deep enough to hide a corpse. Some say it already does.
9. Oxen Corral (Mobile) — A pen on sledges, dragged behind the city. The oxen never sleep. They walk in their sleep. Their dreams move the city.
10. Root-binder's Grove — A hidden stand of trees planted in an abandoned roller-pit. The trees have stone roots. The roots grip the rollers and will not let go.
- J Abandoned City (Dead Keystone) — A stone shell on a hill, silent and cold. The keystone is cracked. A single green shoot grows from the crack. The Root-binder's work.
- Q Bearing Foundry (Aeler) — A mobile forge where new rollers are cast. The forge is pulled by a separate team of oxen. It is always last in the procession.
- K The Thing-Holm of Stone — A flat rock where Mason-Kin elders meet. The rock is a single piece of fallen sky-metal. Oaths sworn here cannot be broken.
- A The First City (Myth) — A walking city that never stopped. It is said to circle the plateau, just beyond the horizon. Those who see it cannot speak of it for a year and a day. The stone seals their lips.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Stone-Cutter (Left Behind) — Her city moved south. She stayed to carve a monument. She carves her own face into the rock. "So the city will remember me," she says.
3. Mason-Kin Elder — Grey with granite dust, eyes the colour of slate. He carries a hammer that has never struck a false blow. The hammer knows.
4. Root-binder Heretic — Planting acorns in the roller-pits, singing to the earth. His hands are bark. His breath smells of green wood. The oxen fear him.
5. Aeler Engineer — Tuning fork in one hand, level in the other. She can hear a crack in a bearing from a mile away. She never walks under a keystone.
6. Ox-Master — Whip of braided leather, voice like a landslide. He names his oxen after dead masons. The oxen stop when he speaks their names.
7. Keystone Guardian — A silent figure in grey, never leaving the keystone chamber. She has not eaten in twenty years. The keystone feeds her.
8. Sledge-Wright — Builds the sledges that bear the city's weight. He uses no nails. The wood is joined by pressure and prayer.
9. Migration Scout — Rides ahead to find the next season's path. He carries a staff that turns black when the ground is too soft for rollers.

10. Spirit-Talker (Still Voice’s Herald) — A shaman who speaks for abandoned keystones. Her left eye is a geode. The crystals see what the stone remembers.
- J The First Mason’s Ghost — A translucent figure in a mason’s apron. He appears when a keystone is first laid. He offers advice. The advice is always wrong.
- Q The Ninth Ox — A mythic beast said to pull the First City. Its hooves never touch the ground. It walks on the shadow of clouds.
- K Bearing-Caster (Aeler) — A dwarf who pours molten metal into roller-molds. He signs each bearing with his own thumbprint. The thumbprint is a prayer.
- A The Still Voice — A spirit made of silence and cold stone. It asks: “Why did you stop?” Answer truthfully, or it will never let you leave.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Cracked Keystone — The heart of the city fractures. The city stops. The crack is singing. The song is the name of the mason who carved it. He is long dead.
3. Root-binder Sabotage — Acorns sprout in the roller-pits. A wheel jams. The roots are intelligent. They twist toward the sound of oaths.
4. Earth Tremor — The ground shakes. All actions are Desperate for a scene. The tremor was not natural. The Still Voice is waking.
5. Mason-Kin Feud — Two Houses argue over the next migration route. The argument is carved into the keystone. The stone is splitting.
6. Oxen Plague — A sickness spreads through the teams. Speed halves. The sickness came from a Root-binder’s grove. The leaves are in the fodder.
7. Bearing Failure (Aeler) — A roller seizes. The engineer blames the stone-cutter. The bearing was sabotaged with sand from the Red Desert. The sand whispers.
8. Sledge-Track Collapse — The ground gives way. A section of the city sinks. The collapse reveals an older city buried beneath. The older city is still walking.
9. Migration Blockade — Another city has stopped on the planned route. The stopped city’s keystone is dead. Its people have become Root-binders.
10. Ancestral Debt Called — A Mason-Kin House demands a sledge-right from a century ago. The debt is carved on a tablet of slate. The slate is warm. The ancestors are watching.
- J The Still Voice Appears — A spirit of cold stone and silence stands in the path. It asks: “Why do you move?” Answer poorly, and the city will never move again.
- Q Root-binder Revolt — A grove of walking trees attacks the roller-pits. The trees have stone bark. The stones are carved with Mason-Kin faces.
- K Keystone Theft — A rival House steals a keystone from a sleeping city. Without its keystone, the city becomes a tomb. The dead inside are still walking.
- A The First City Approaches — A city older than memory appears on the horizon. It is made of obsidian. Its rollers are giant femurs. It wants to merge.

(Charter/Wax/Song) Keystone charter (right to dwell in a city for a season); sledge-wax (greases negotiation with the Mason-Kin); stone-song fragment (one reroll on a survival test).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Keystone Charter — Right to dwell in a city for a season, tax-free. The charter is a chip of the keystone itself. Carry it to be welcomed.
 3. Sledge-Wax — A lump of grey grease. Use it to gain +1 Position in Mason-Kin negotiations. The wax is rendered from the fat of an ox that walked a thousand miles.
 4. Stone-Song Fragment — A recorded hum. Reroll a failed Survival test once. The song is the city's heartbeat. Hum it, and the stone will guide you.
 5. Roller-Bearing (Aeler-crafted) — A spare bearing. Gift it to an engineer for a favour. The bearing is stamped with a rune that means "no debt." The rune is a lie.
 6. Mason-Kin Hammer — A tool that never misses a keystone's true face. The hammer's head is a piece of the First City's keystone. It whispers warnings.
 7. Ox-Master's Whip — Crack it to make oxen move faster for one leg. The whip's braid includes a hair from every ox that ever pulled a city.
 8. Root-binder's Acorn — Plant it to stop a city's roller for one day. The acorn grows into a sapling within an hour. The sapling has stone roots.
 9. Abandoned City Map — A chart of dead cities and their keystone graves. The map is drawn on stone. The stone is a page. The pages are bound in granite.
 10. Elder's Verdict — A ruling that settles a Mason-Kin dispute in your favour. The verdict is carved on a slate tablet. Carry it as a shield.
- J Bearing-Foundry Pass — Access to the Aeler mobile forge for one repair. The pass is a single steel coin. The coin is still hot.
- Q Still Voice's Silence — One question answered truthfully by the spirit of abandoned stone. The answer comes as a cold breath. The breath smells of geode crystals.
- K First City's Echo — A piece of obsidian that hums with ancient rhythm. Once per campaign, touch it to make a city move one mile in a single night.
- A The Living Keystone — A fragment from a city that still walks. Plant it in dead stone, and a new city will grow. The growth takes a century.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (charters, wax, songs) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo stone-omens—rollers that groan in harmony, keystones that weep water, a city that leaves no track.

Additional Features

- The Mason-Kin Houses: The walking cities are not nations but extended families. Each House controls a keystone, a migration route, and the rights to carve. Houses feud over sledge-tracks, water rights, and the honour of the First City.
- Root-binder Heresy: A growing movement that believes the cities should stop and let the forest reclaim the stone. Root-binders plant acorns in roller-pits and sing to the earth. The Mason-Kin hunt them as saboteurs; some whisper that the Root-binders are correct.

- The Aeler Pact: The Aeler engineers of the southern ranges maintain the bearings and capstans that make the walking cities possible. The Ngomebe provide keystone hearts and stone-song. It is a partnership of equals, sealed in slate and iron.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Red Desert’s Breath (Ashaan): The Red Desert is spreading. Some Ngomebe cities are moving south to escape the dust. The Keystone Charter of a southern city may be the only thing standing between a tribe and annihilation.
- The Sledge-Wax Trade (Way of Silk): Sledge-wax is a valuable commodity on the caravan routes. Tulkani merchants trade it for story-knots; Fhara water-clerks use it to seal well-contracts. A missing shipment of sledge-wax could stop a city.
- The Iron Mines of Vajrapur (Dhahara): The Aeler engineers of Ngomebe source their bearing-metal from the Dhaharan iron mines. A dispute between a Mason-Kin House and a Dhaharan raja could choke the supply of rollers.
- The Hollow and the Still City (Eastern Realms): The Hollow is attracted to still places. A city that stops moving becomes a beacon. The Aelaerem whisper that the First City never stopped because it is running from something.

Ngomebe Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Roller: Crumble a crust into the grease-pit. Ignore the first Earth Tremor penalty.
- Knot the Sledge-Rope: Tie a single knot in an ox’s halter. Cancel Oxen Plague or take –1 die on your next handling roll (your choice).
- Name to the Keystone: Whisper a dead mason’s name into the keystone’s crack. Gain +1 Effect when negotiating with the Mason-Kin this scene, but mark Obligation to the First City.

Patronage & Power

Among the Ngomebe, power flows through keystones, migration rights, and the loyalty of the Mason-Kin Houses. An elder’s authority rests on the age of his House’s keystone and the number of cities that follow his route. The Aeler engineers hold technical authority; the Root-binders offer a heretical alternative.

For the GM: Power in Ngomebe society is measured in movement and stone. Patronage often takes the form of keystone charters, sledge-wax, or stone-song fragments—each tied to a specific city and House. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to physical tokens (chips of keystone, lumps of wax, recorded songs) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival Houses issue conflicting claims, forcing players to choose whose city shelters them.
- Use the roller-pits, keystone chambers, and Mason-Kin halls as arenas for social contests, where migration routes are debated and saboteurs are judged.

In Ngomebe society, the stone remembers everything—including your debts.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Mason-Kin guards or Aeler engineers.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby ox-drivers or stone-cutters.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for Root-binders or keystone guardians.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable migration pace.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local Mason-Kin elder or Aeler vent-prior becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to earth tremor or roller jam.
- Foe Appears: A Root-binder cell or rival House guard arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional Mason-Kin, Root-binders, or Aeler engineers arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—keystone cracks/city stops/First City sighted.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Mason-Kin High Council, Still Voice, or First City's herald intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—tremor opens a chasm/city splits in two/keystone begins to sing.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Ngomebe (Stone Law): Keystone hums a warning, roller-grooves glow faintly, the ground trembles without quake.
- Ngomebe (Root-binder Heresy): Acorns sprout from cracks, vines write warnings in the dust, trees move against the wind.

- Ngomebe (Aeler Pact): Bearings click in counterpoint, tuning forks ring without being struck, the smell of hot metal hangs in still air.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Survival): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose False Trail.
- Cut the Sledge (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a keystone charter is in your possession, +1 die.
- Weather the Tremor (Body + Athletics): On a hit in Earth Tremor, you pick who stays standing; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Stone & Root)

- The Root-King (Nine Groves) — Phases: Acorn Sabotage → Orchestrated Stillness → Forest Coup. Cracks: burn a grove, expose a false acorn, survive a landslide.
- The Still Voice (Silence of Stone) — Phases: Abandoned Keystones → Procession of Dead Cities → Stillness Baptism of an Elder. Cracks: relic stone-song, survivor testimony, the city moving against the Voice.

Chapter 21

Taharka

The Monsoon Crown. The highlands aren't just a fortress—they're a monsoon market, and oh, how the Ridge-Watchers love a good deal on fog penetration. They don't just hold the passes; they lease our leverage, and the pass-stone isn't just a rock—it's a ticket to cross at half toll, stamped with the Taharka seal and guaranteed by the Ridge-Lord's own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler signal mirrors that work in fog—not because I cared about their visibility, but because I knew the Ridge-Lord's scout was terrified of getting lost in the mist, and he'd pay in pass-stones for mirrors that seemed to cut through the fog. I've used it to move silk from Ayokha to the Brass Coast... which is why the stone is chipped. Wear and tear? No. Strategic degradation. I've been subtly scratching the mirror's surface during "alignment checks" so it fogs faster—now I can sell them a renewal at triple the price, claiming the old one was "void due to supernatural interference." (The Taharka agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the landslide I "summoned" during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 7 of the Taharka Fog Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Fog accord? Thimble, my sweet little mist-lover, fog accords are just leverage with a reflection—especially when I've bought the Ridge-Lord's scout's silence with a signal mirror that doesn't work in fog... it creates fog. Now, about that pass-stone... the Ridge-Lord's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in chipped stones looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 2 of the Ridge-Lord's Ledger—]

[Edgewalker: Ridge-Lord's ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I've got a mirror war to start in Ayokha, and if you mention "Clause 2" one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the next pass-stone as kindling. They prefer it clear.]

21.1 Taharka — “The Monsoon Crown”

Ridge-Watcher Captain (Elite): “The passes remember every army that tried to climb them. The mountains do not forgive haste, and they do not forget a foreign banner. We do not guard the highlands. We listen to them. They tell us who to let through.”

Horse Trader (Commoner): “Before you praise the rider, praise the horse. Before you praise the horse, praise the mountain that grew its lungs. A Taharkan foal is born breathing thin air. That is why our cavalry has never been broken.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Taharka grows rich on monsoon trade — spices, coffee, and incense that travel east to the distant ocean and west to the Gulf. The kingdom has never been conquered; its passes are a graveyard for Ashaani armies and a barrier that Oshiiran grain barges cannot cross. The highlands are a fortress of rock and thin air, where every valley speaks a different dialect and every ridge has a watchtower. On the coast, the monsoon winds bring ships from Dhahara, Ayokha, and the eastern isles, and a trade creole has grown from a dozen tongues — the language of the wharves, where a merchant can bargain in verse and a captain can curse in seven accents.

What you notice first: The smell of roasting coffee and frankincense. The way the air thins as you climb, until each breath is a measured gift. The constant lowing of pack mules on terraced paths.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never refuse a second cup of tea. The first is hospitality; the second is a test of honour. The third is a promise. Refuse the second, and you have insulted the house.

Regional Mood: The Weight of the Pass

Power here is measured in passes, horse lines, and the favour of the monsoon. The Crown Council rules from the high plateau, but each valley has its own lord, each pass its own toll-keeper. The Ridge-Watchers are the eyes of the kingdom, stationed in rock-chapels that double as signal towers. The horse is not a mount; it is a lineage, a treaty, a weapon. To control the highland breeds is to control the passes — and to control the passes is to remain free.

Starting Location: A rock-chapel at the head of the Silver Pass, where the air is cold and the wind smells of snow. A Ridge-Watcher captain blows a horn of ibex horn: “The Crown Council has declared a muster. The passes are closing to all foreign traffic. You have until dusk to declare your business — or turn back.”

Prominent NPCs of Taharka

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Ridge-Watcher Captain Anwar	Commander of the Silver Pass garrison	Keep the passes closed to Ashaani spies	He has not descended below the snow line in twenty years.
Merchant-Queen Safiya	Spice House matriarch of the western coast	Control the monsoon trade before the Crown taxes it	She speaks the trade creole with a coastal accent that no one can place.

Horse Lord Tamrat	Breeder of the royal stables	Sell a foal to the Dhaharan court for a pass-right	He names his horses after dead poets. The horses recite verses in their gait.
Sister Hana	Covenant judge of the highland circuit	Resolve disputes between lords without drawing Crown attention	She carries a water-clock that runs on melted snow.
The Astrologer of the Monsoon	Crown advisor who reads the winds	Predict the first rains to set the trade season	He has not seen the sun in thirty years. He works by candlelight and omen.
The Pass Ghost	A spirit of a soldier who froze on watch	Warn travellers of avalanches and ambushes	It appears as a column of steam in the cold air. It points with a skeletal finger.

Names of Taharka

Inspired by the highland plateau and the coastal creole: melodic, with doubled consonants and honorific prefixes. Surnames often denote a clan, a pass, or a horse-line.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Tamrat	Safiya	Berhanu	the Ridge-Born
Anwar	Hana	Tesfaye	the Horse-Tongue
Dawit	Amara	Gebre	the Monsoon-Watcher
Kassim	Lij	Mekonnen	the Ninth Pass
Solomon	Tsion	Desta	the Coffee-Blade
Yonas	Selam	Asfaw	the Thin-Air

(Farm/Chapel/Pass) Terraced farm with coffee shrubs on every step; rock-chapel with walls that drip condensation; the high pass where snow lingers even in summer.

Spades — Places

2. Terraced Farm (Coffee) — Shrubs planted on stone-step shelves. The steps are a thousand years old. Each step is a different family's debt.

3. Rock-Chapel (Dripping) — A cave-temple where the walls weep condensation. The water is holy. Drink it, and you will remember a past life. The water tastes of iron.
4. High Pass (Summer Snow) — A saddle between peaks where the wind never stops. The snow is blue. It crunches like glass underfoot. Do not eat it.
5. King's Stable — A long building of fitted stone, horses in brass halters. Each stall has a nameplate. The nameplate is a defeated enemy's shield.
6. Spice Warehouse (Coast) — A wood-and-coral building that smells of cardamom. The floor is layered with spices that fell from broken sacks. The layers are a century thick.
7. Monsoon Wharf — A stone pier that is underwater half the year. The pier is carved with tide marks. Each mark is a year when a ship never returned.
8. Crown Council Hall — A roundhouse of stone and horn, built into a hillside. The hall has nine doors. Each door leads to a different valley. The ninth door is sealed.
9. Horse Cemetery — A field of cairns, each topped with a bronze bell. The bells ring when a foal is born to the same bloodline. The dead horses speak through the bells.
10. Ridge-Watcher Tower — A stone needle on a peak, with a signal fire that never goes out. The fire burns blue when the passes are closed. It burns green when a foreign army is sighted.
- J Trade Creole School — A thatched hut where children learn the coastal tongue. The teacher is a one-eyed sailor. He signs his lessons with knots, not words.
- Q The Astrologer's Observatory — A roofless tower with a bronze armillary sphere. The sphere has nine rings. The ninth ring is broken. The astrologer refuses to fix it.
- K The Pass of the Ninth Army — A defile where an Ashaani host froze to the rock. On cold nights, you can still see their shapes in the ice. They are still standing.
- A The King's Tomb (Hidden) — A cave sealed with a single keystone. The keystone has a single word carved in the trade creole: "Wait."

(Trader/Watcher/Envoy) Horse trader with a copper bell; Ridge-Watcher captain with a bow over his shoulder; Spice House merchant in robes smelling of cardamom.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Horse Trader — Copper bell on his belt, a ledger of bloodlines in his head. He names his price in coffee, not coin. The coffee is grown on his own terrace.
3. Ridge-Watcher Captain — Bow of horn and sinew, arrows fletched with eagle feathers. He can draw a bow at full gallop. He has never missed.
4. Spice House Merchant — Robes stained with cinnamon, fingers yellow with turmeric. She can identify a spice's origin by taste. She has been wrong twice. Both times, the ship sank.
5. Crown Council Envoy — Careful, neutral, carrying a staff of office. He speaks in questions. "Would the honoured traveller perhaps consent to..."
6. Coffee Farmer — Hands stained black from hulling beans, eyes crinkled from sun. He offers a cup to every passerby. The cup is clay. The clay is from a sacred spring.
7. Monsoon Captain — A sailor with a brass ring in one ear and a scar across his throat. He speaks the trade creole with a Dhaharan accent. His ship is named "Ninth Wind."
8. Pass Guide — A hooded figure with a staff tipped with a horse skull. She never speaks above a whisper. The wind carries her voice exactly as far as needed.

- 9. Sister Hana (Covenant Judge) — Grey robe, water-clock, a scale that never balances. She has ruled on nine border disputes. The losing party always apologizes.
- 10. Horse Lord Tamrat — Grey beard braided with horsehair, missing two fingers. The missing fingers were bitten off by a foal. He kept the foal.
- J The Astrologer — Blind, pale, wrapped in wool. He smells of wax and ozone. He predicts the monsoon by the pulse of a spider in a jar. The spider has never been wrong.
- Q The Pass Ghost — A column of steam in the cold air, shaped like a soldier. It points at travellers. The direction indicates the safest route. It never points the same way twice.
- K The King (Offstage) — Never seen, rarely heard, but his name opens every door. Rumour says he is a horse. Rumour says he is a spirit. Rumour says he is a child of nine.
- A The Ninth Heir (Exiled) — A prince who lost a succession war, now living as a horse-trader. He carries a seal made of bone. The bone was his father’s thumb.

(Landslide/Sickness/Assassination) A landslide blocks the pass (delay 2 segments); horse sickness spreads — all mounts lose 1 Speed; the king is assassinated — passes close to all foreign traffic.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

- 2. Landslide Block — A rockslide covers the pass. Delay 2 segments. The rocks are warm. The landslide was caused by a signal fire on the peak.
- 3. Horse Sickness — A cough spreads through the stables. All mounts lose 1 Speed. The sickness came from a Dhaharan ship. The captain is a spy.
- 4. King Assassinated — The Crown Council declares a succession crisis. All passes close. The assassin was a horse. The horse was poisoned. The poison was in the coffee.
- 5. Ashaani Raiders (Disguised) — A caravan of “merchants” is actually a Veiled Sister’s scout team. They wear Taharkan dress but do not remove their shoes indoors. The innkeeper noticed.
- 6. Coffee Blight — A fungus attacks the terraces. Prices triple. Starvation looms. The blight was spread by a trader from the coast. The trader’s ship flew no flag.
- 7. Monsoon Delay — The winds shift. The first ships are three weeks late. The delay was predicted by the astrologer. He warned the Crown. The Crown did not listen.
- 8. Spice Warehouse Fire — A stack of cinnamon ignites. The whole wharf is at risk. The fire was set by a rival House. The House has a monopoly on pepper.
- 9. Trade Creole Dispute — A contract is voided because of a mistranslated word. The word means “shipment” in one dialect and “hostage” in another. The merchant knew.
- 10. Ridge-Watcher Betrayal — A captain sells the pass schedule to an Ashaani agent. The captain’s daughter is a spirit-broken slave in Galanina. He had no choice.
- J The Pass Ghost’s Warning — The ghost points at a traveller. The traveller will die before sunset. The traveller is a party member. The ghost is pointing at a shadow, not a person.
- Q Crown Council Schism — The nine lords cannot agree on a successor. Civil war looms. The ninth lord is a child. The child speaks only the trade creole. No one understands.
- K Horse Line Extinction — A plague kills the last mare of the royal bloodline. The mare’s foal was stolen by a rival kingdom. The foal is in a Dhaharan stable.

A The Ninth Pass Opens — A sealed defile cracks open. An ancient army of ice-walkers emerges. The army is made of frozen Ashaani corpses. They are still looking for a way home.

(Bond/Stone/Pass) Horse-bond — a foal promised (future String); pass-stone — crossing a high pass at half toll; coffee measure — trade goods at +1 Position for one scene.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Horse-Bond (Promised Foal) — A future String. The foal has not yet been born. The bond is a braid of horsehair. Wear it, and the mare will remember you.
 3. Pass-Stone — A carved token. Cross any high pass at half toll. The stone is a piece of the Pass Ghost's staff. It is cold to the touch.
 4. Coffee Measure (Royal Seal) — A clay cup. Trade goods at +1 Position for one scene. The cup was used by the king. He drank from it once. The crack is from his tooth.
 5. Ridge-Watcher's Horn — Blow it to summon a guide from the nearest tower. The horn is made from an ibex that the captain killed with a single arrow.
 6. Spice House Letter of Credit — 5 Measures of trade value, redeemable at any coast warehouse. The letter is sealed with cinnamon oil. The seal smells of betrayal.
 7. Crown Council Verdict — A ruling in your favour on any border dispute. The verdict is carved on a slate tile. The tile is also a signal flag.
 8. Monsoon Schedule (Astrologer's Copy) — Predicts safe sailing days for the next season. The schedule is written on a dried spiderweb. The web was the astrologer's pet.
 9. Trade Creole Phrasebook — Gain +1 die to all social rolls on the coast for one journey. The phrasebook is a string of knots. Each knot is a curse.
 10. Horse Lord's Favour — One foal from the royal stables, delivered in a year. The favour is a single white hair from the stallion's tail. The stallion is dead.
- J Pass Ghost's Pointing — One safe route through any high pass, guaranteed. The ghost writes the route in frost on a rock. The frost melts at noon.
- Q The Astrologer's Spider — A jarred spider that pulses with the monsoon's heartbeat. Once per campaign, consult the spider to predict a storm with perfect accuracy.
- K The Ninth Heir's Seal — A bone thumbprint. Commands loyalty from the exiled prince's network. The seal is also a key. It opens a lock in the Crown Council Hall. The lock is the ninth door.
- A The King's Blessing — A royal decree written in trade creole. One national favour. The decree is written on a horse's hoof. The hoof was the king's favourite mount.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (bonds, stones, measures) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo monsoon-omens—horses that speak in riddles, coffee that tastes of snow, a pass that closes behind you.

Additional Features

- The Ridge-Watchers: A network of signal towers on every peak. A fire, a mirror, or a horn can send a message across the entire kingdom in a day. The Ridge-Watchers are neutral in Crown politics; they serve only the passes.
- The Trade Creole: A language born on the monsoon wharves, blending words from a dozen coastal tongues. It has no written form; contracts are sealed with knots or witnessed by a Lethai-ar. The Creole is the tongue of negotiation, insult, and poetry — and a single mistranslation can start a war.
- The Horse Lineages: Taharkan horses are bred for thin air and steep trails. Each bloodline has a name, a song, and a debt. To own a Taharkan horse is to inherit its lineage’s obligations — and its enemies.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Monsoon Trade (Dhahara/Ayokha): Taharka’s spice and coffee travel east on the monsoon winds, reaching the Dhaharan coast and the Ayokhan river markets. A delay in Taharka means famine in a dozen ports.
- The Pass Ghost and the Hollow (Eastern Realms): The Pass Ghost is a spirit of the threshold — a border between living and dead. The Aelaerem say it is a cousin to the Hollow, bound by an oath to the first king.
- Ashaani Spies and the Veiled Sisters: Ashaani agents often pose as spice merchants. The Ridge-Watchers have learned to test them by offering tea — a foreigner who does not know the ritual of three cups reveals themselves.
- The Ninth Heir and the Kalrantha (Dhahara): The exiled prince is rumoured to have bought his horse from a Dhaharan smuggler — a horse that carried a certain green glass amulet. The Crown Council wants to know where the amulet is now.

Taharka Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Pass: Crumble a crust at the highest point of the pass. Ignore the first Landslide Block penalty.
- Knot the Horse’s Tail: Tie a single knot in a horse’s tail hair. Cancel Horse Sickness or take −1 die on your next riding roll (your choice).
- Name to the Coffee: Whisper a dead Ridge-Watcher’s name into a coffee cup. Gain +1 Effect when negotiating passage this scene, but mark Obligation to the Crown.

Patronage & Power

Among the Taharka, power flows through passes, horse lines, and the favour of the monsoon. The Crown Council rules by consensus, but each valley lord commands his own Ridge-Watchers. The spice merchants of the coast operate independently, paying tariffs to the Crown but answering to no single lord.

For the GM: Power in Taharkan society is measured in altitude and access. Patronage often takes the form of pass-stones, horse-bonds, or coffee measures—each tied to a specific valley, bloodline, or trade route. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to physical tokens (carved stone, braided hair, clay cups) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival lords issue conflicting pass-rights, forcing players to choose whose path to follow.
- Use the rock-chapels, horse cemeteries, and monsoon wharves as arenas for social contests, where hospitality is law and a cup of tea is a contract.

In Taharkan society, the mountain remembers every step—and the horse remembers every rider.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Ridge-Watchers or Crown Council envoys.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby horse guards or spice warehouse clerks.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for pass guides or rival horse traders.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favourable monsoon window.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local Ridge-Watcher captain or Spice House factor becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to landslide or fog.
- Foe Appears: A rival horse lord or Ashaani agent arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional Ridge-Watchers, Crown guards, or spice house enforcers arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—king assassinated/monsoon fails/pass closes forever.

- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Crown Council, the Astrologer, or the Pass Ghost intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—avalanche buries the pass/monsoon surf floods the wharf/coffee terraces catch fire.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Taharka (Highlands): Pass stones glow faintly, horse bells ring without wind, snow falls upward.
- Taharka (Coast): Monsoon winds carry whispers, spice dust forms faces, the trade creole sprouts new words unbidden.
- Taharka (Crown Politics): Council doors slam, verdicts are spoken in rhyme, a ninth cup appears on every table.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Survival): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Thin Air.
- Cut the Pass (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a pass-stone is in your possession, +1 die.
- Weather the Monsoon (Resolve + Sail): On a hit in Monsoon Delay, you pick which ships dock; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Horse & Monsoon)

- The Horse-Line Thief (Nine Bloodlines) — Phases: Foal Thefts → Orchestrated Plague → Stable Coup. Cracks: recover a stolen foal, expose a false lineage, survive a stampede.
- The Monsoon-Breaker (Storm That Stalls) — Phases: Delayed Ships → Procession of Empty Wharves → Famine Baptism of a Merchant. Cracks: relic monsoon schedule, survivor testimony, the wind turning against them.

Chapter 22

Sekogo

The Green Council. Jungle, honey, and the Ukwe—a tree that remembers every debt—and oh, how the Leopard Society loves a good deal on debt collection. They don’t just hunt oath-breakers; they auction the right to hunt them, and the Leopard’s favour isn’t just a blessing—it’s a licence to collect, stamped with the Sekogo seal and guaranteed by the Green Council’s own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler thorn-wards to protect their groves—not because I cared about their trees, but because I knew the Green Council’s head ranger was terrified of a blight that would ruin his promotion chances, and he’d pay in thorn-wards for wards that seemed to protect the grove. They paid in a leopard’s favour—one hunt, one time—stamped with the Sekogo seal and guaranteed by the Leopard-Queen’s own oath. I used it to track a Breath-less agent who owed me a story... which is why the hunt was successful. I didn’t just track the agent—I herded him toward the Leopard-Queen’s favourite hunting ground, then sold the “favour” to the highest bidder. (The Leopard-Queen agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the blight I “summoned” during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 9 of the Sekogo Green Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Green accord? Thimble, my anxious little leaf, green accords are just leverage with a root—especially when I’ve bought the Green Council’s head ranger’s silence with a thorn-ward that doesn’t protect groves... it invites the blight. Now, about that leopard’s favour... the Leopard-Queen’s treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what her weight in hunted agents looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

22.1 Sekogo — “The Green Council”

Leopard Society Hunter (Elite): “The jungle has an immune system. When a fever rises, we cut it out. When an oath is broken, we collect the price. We are not cruel. We are necessary. The tree remembers every unpaid debt, and we are its teeth.”

Honey-Gatherer (Commoner): “The bees know my name. They do not sting me because I sing to them the song of the first blossom. My grandmother taught me that the honey is not a gift; it is a loan. One day, the grove will ask for it back.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Sekogo lies between the Sahel grasslands and the southern plateau — a dry savannah that grows wetter as you travel east, until the baobabs give way to deep jungle and the air turns thick with the smell of damp earth and overripe fruit. Here, the Green Council rules through consensus, honey-orchards are sacred, and the old spirits still walk. Slavery is forbidden; the jungle itself would rise against any slaver who crossed its border. But the Council is divided: Conservators want to protect the old pacts, while Wakers argue that the jungle has grown sluggish and needs to be roused with fever-mists, thorn-spirits, and older, bloodier rites. At the eastern edge lies the Crimson Valley, home to the Lethai-ar — chestnut-brown elves whose silk bridges span red canyons and whose web-law keeps both empires from using the valley as a shortcut to war.

What you notice first: The sound of bees — a constant, low drone that never stops, even at night. The way the trees lean toward you when you speak a secret. The smell of honey and rotting fruit, sweet and sharp at once.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never cut a marked tree. Each such tree is a living witness. The bark grows over the names of debtors, but the wood remembers. Cut it, and the Ukwe will add your name to its ledger.

Regional Mood: The Weight of the Root

Power here is measured in debts witnessed, honey tithes paid, and the balance between jungle and council. The Leopard Society hunts those who break the deepest taboos — oath-breakers, slavers, outsiders who take more than they give. The Earth Society keeps the Calendar of Debt, a sacred list written on bark and buried at the Ukwe's roots. The nganga work with minkisi — power objects inhabited by spirits — hammering nails into carved figures to release magic, each nail a new debt to the spirit within. The Lethai-ar of the Crimson Valley weave silk bridges that span the red canyons, their skin-tattoos (Marks) recording promises witnessed and prices yet to be paid.

Starting Location: A honey-orchard at the jungle's edge, where the trees hum and the air is thick with bees. A masked figure in a leopard pelt steps from the shadows: "The Ukwe has asked for a name. A caravan master broke his oath to the grove. Find him before the roots do — or become his witness."

Prominent NPCs of Sekogo

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Hunter Okoro	Leopard Society mask-wearer	Hunt down a Waker who poisoned a foreign caravan	He never removes his mask. The mask is his real face now.

Elder Imani	Earth Society Ogboni	Keep the Calendar of Debt from burning	She speaks only while holding a piece of the Ukwe’s bark. She cannot lie.
Nganga Malika	Spirit-doctor of the minkisi	Heal a wound caused by a broken nkisi	She carries a carved figure with nine nails. The ninth nail is loose.
Waker Sefu	Radical who wants to wake the jungle	Poison the wells of a Conserver village	A green shoot grows from his shoulder. It bleeds when he lies.
Lethai-ar Silk-Warden Anara	Guard of the Crimson Valley bridges	Keep the web-law intact against Oshiiran pressure	Her skin-tattoos record a debt her grandmother owed. She will not say to whom.
The Ukwe’s Voice	A spirit that speaks through a cracked root	Remind the Council of a debt that is nine years overdue	It speaks in the voice of a dead child. The child was a witness.

Names of Sekogo

Inspired by the savannah and jungle regions: melodic, with nasal consonants and tonal shifts. Surnames often denote a totem animal, a grove, or a debt paid.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Okoro	Imani	Ngoma	the Masked
Sefu	Malika	Ukwe-born	the Honey-Tongue
Chima	Anara	Leopard-kin	the Debt-Keeper
Kofi	Zola	Root-walker	the Ninth Nail
Tunde	Amara	Grove-singer	the Unmarked
Biko	Nkiru	Minkisi-hand	the Still Witness

Spades — Places

2. Honey-Orchard — The trees hum. The air is thick with bees. The honey is dark red. It tastes of iron and forgotten promises.
 3. Druid Circle (Leopard Skull) — A ring of moss-covered stones. A skull sits at the center. The skull is warm. When the Leopard Society hunts, the eye sockets glow.
 4. Lethai-ar Silk Bridge — A span of woven silk across a crimson gorge. The silk is made from spider-sap and oath-hair. It will not break unless a debt is called.
 5. The Ukwe (Speaking Tree) — A baobab so old its bark is carved with a thousand names. The tree speaks in the voices of the dead. It never gives answers — only new debts.
 6. Nkisi Grove — A clearing where broken power-objects are buried. The ground hums. The nails that sealed the minkisi have grown into iron thorns.
 7. Calendar of Debt (Earth Society Vault) — A hollow log sealed with wax and bone. Inside are strips of bark. Each strip is an unpaid obligation. The bark is still growing.
 8. Waker's Fever-Mist Pool — A stagnant pond that steams even in winter. The mist smells of rotting flowers. Breathe it, and you will see the jungle as the Wakers see it.
 9. Leopard Society Lodge — A longhouse hidden in a thicket of thorn-vines. The walls are made of human jawbones. The jaws are from oath-breakers. They still click when a new name is spoken.
 10. Crimson Valley Gorge — A canyon of red stone, crossed by silk bridges at three points. The stone is warm. It bleeds rust when the web-law is broken.
- J Conservator Archive — A cave filled with sealed clay pots. Each pot contains a memory. The memories are for sale. The price is a memory of equal weight.
- Q The Grove of Sleeping Spirits — A forest where the minkisi go to die. The spirits do not wake. They dream of the first nail. The dream is contagious.
- K The Ukwe's Root-Chamber — A cavern beneath the tree where the roots form a throne. The throne is made of braided roots. Sit on it, and the tree will ask one question. Answer poorly, and you never leave.
- A The Crimson Falls — A waterfall that runs red after the first rain of spring. The water is not blood. It is rust from the canyon walls. The Lethai-ar say it is the earth's memory of a war.

(Gatherer/Druid/Warden) Honey-gatherer with a fruit offering and a leopard claw necklace; Green Council druid with a thorn-staff and milky eyes that see debts; Lethai-ar silk-warden, masked and quiet, his mask painted with the Ukwe's roots.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Honey-Gatherer — She wears a leopard claw around her neck. The claw is from a cat she killed with her bare hands. She offers a fruit to the trees before each harvest. The fruit is always a little rotten.
3. Green Council Druid (Conservator) — Milk-white eyes, a staff of living wood. She cannot see the living. She sees only debts — glowing threads that connect every person to the Ukwe.
4. Waker Radical — Carries a bag of fever-mist spores. His eyes are yellow. He plants thorns in the paths of Conservator caravans. The thorns grow into walls overnight.

5. Lethai-ar Silk-Warden — Mask carved from the Ukwe’s root, painted with debt-names. He never speaks above a whisper. The bridge hears him anyway.
6. Leopard Society Hunter — Wears a pelt that shifts and moves as if alive. He can transform into a leopard at night. Or so he claims. No one has survived a hunt to confirm it.
7. Earth Society Elder — Holds a piece of the Ukwe’s bark. The bark is warm. She asks every visitor: “What do you owe?” The answer is carved into her memory.
8. Nganga (Spirit-Doctor) — Carries a nkisi carved with nine nails. The ninth nail is loose. She hammers a nail into the figure to cast a spell. Each nail is a debt. She has nine debts left.
9. Debt-Walker (Hollow Manifestation) — A figure made of bark and silence. It appears when the Calendar of Debt fills. It does not speak. It points at the debtor. The debtor’s name appears on the nearest tree.
10. Lethai-ar Mark-Cutter — A tattooist who records promises on skin. She uses a needle of silk-fiber and ink made from crushed crimson stone. The ink glows when a promise is broken.
- J The Ukwe’s Voice (Spirit) — A crack in the tree’s bark that speaks. The voice changes. Sometimes it is a child. Sometimes it is a jarl. Sometimes it is the listener’s own.
- Q The First Nail (Legend) — A mythic nganga who sealed a spirit into the Ukwe itself. She is said to still walk the jungle, carrying a hammer made of root and bone.
- K The Leopard King — A spirit that leads the Society’s midnight hunts. It has no mask. Its face is a leopard’s. Its eyes are human.
- A The Crimson Valley’s First Weaver — A ghost who teaches the web-law to new wardens. She appears at dawn on the central bridge. She asks one question: “Who watches the watchers?”

(Spirit/Offer/Name) A thorn-spirit blocks the path — must offer honey or fight; the Ukwe demands a name before letting you pass; a Lethai-ar silk-walker challenges you to recite the web-law.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Thorn-Spirit Block — A wall of living thorns grows across the path. The spirit demands a name. Give a false one, and the thorns grow inward.
3. Ukwe Demands a Name — The tree speaks: “I have forgotten a debtor. Remind me.” If you cannot name a debtor, the tree will take your name instead.
4. Lethai-ar Web-Law Challenge — A silk-warden blocks the bridge: “Recite the ninth clause.” The ninth clause is unwritten. It changes with each warden. You must guess.
5. Leopard Society Hunt — A masked hunter appears at dusk. “You are called to witness.” Refusal earns a Leopard’s Mark. The jungle becomes hostile to you.
6. Nkisi Hunger — A spirit-object you carry begins whispering. It wants a memory. Refuse, and the nkisi shatters. The spirit inside is not friendly.
7. Waker Poisoning — A well is found with a green film on the water. The poison is not lethal. It makes you dream of the jungle’s hunger.
8. Earth Society Audit — An elder demands to see your debt-record. The record is written in scars on your skin. You have no scars. That is suspicious.
9. Honey-Tithe Demanded — A grove spirit appears: “Pay the ninth jar.” You have no honey. The spirit offers a loan. The interest is a story.

10. Crimson Valley Border Dispute — Oshiiran surveyors cross the web-line. The Lethai-ar arm their bows. The party is caught between. Whoever you side with, the other will remember.
- J The Ukwe's Root Breaches — A root bursts through a village floor. It is looking for a specific name. The name is carved on the root. The root is weeping. The debtor is still alive.
- Q Leopard Society Coup — The Wakers have infiltrated the Lodge. The masks are fighting. You cannot tell who is who. Both sides wear leopard pelts. Both sides smell of blood.
- K Calendar Fire — A spark catches the Earth Society vault. The debts are burning. The smoke forms faces. The faces are the debtors. They are screaming.
- A The Crimson Falls Run Red — The waterfall turns to blood. The Lethai-ar say the web-law has been broken. The break was centuries ago. The falls are just catching up.

(Favor/Debt/Shard) Leopard's Favor (once, call on the Leopard Society for a hunt — you owe them a future hunt); Ukwe Debt (reroll a failed Survival test once per session, but GM gains 1 SB for a jungle complication); Nkisi Shard (add +1 Effect to a magical working, but the shard shatters and costs 1 Corruption).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Leopard's Favor — A leopard claw wrapped in red thread. One use to summon a Society hunt. The favor is a debt. The Society will collect. The interest is a future hunt.
3. Ukwe Debt (Leaf) — A single leaf from the Speaking Tree. Reroll a failed Survival test once per session. The leaf is green. It will not wilt. The tree remembers who took it.
4. Nkisi Shard — A piece of a broken power-object. Add +1 Effect to a magical working, then it shatters. The shard is warm. It whispers secrets in a language you almost understand.
5. Honey-Jar (Royal Tithe) — A clay pot of dark red honey. Trade it for safe passage through any grove. The honey is thick. It moves in the jar as if alive. Do not open it.
6. Earth Society Tablet — A strip of bark with a debt recorded. Transfer it to clear your own debt. The bark is still growing. The debt is still accruing interest.
7. Lethai-ar Silk Cord — A braided cord that records a witnessed promise. Use it to enforce any oath. The cord tightens when the oath is broken. It will not stop until blood is drawn.
8. Leopard Mask (Temporary) — Wear it to pass as a Society hunter for one scene. The mask has eye holes that see debts. It also sees your own.
9. Waker's Spore Pouch — A bag of fever-mist spores. Release them to confuse pursuers. The spores cause vivid hallucinations. The hallucinations are always of the Ukwe.
10. Nganga's Hammer — A small iron hammer. Drive a nail into any object to seal a spirit inside. The hammer has a price. Each nail costs a memory.
- J The Ukwe's Answer — A single truth from the Speaking Tree, whispered on the wind. The truth is always about a debt. The debt may not be yours.
- Q Silk-Warden's Mask — A carved mask that grants safe passage across any Lethai-ar bridge. The mask is also a witness. It will remember every promise you make while wearing it.
- K Debt-Walker's Finger — A dried root shaped like a digit. Use it to call a Debt-Walker once. The Debt-Walker will collect one debt for you. Then it will ask for yours.
- A The First Nail — A legendary iron nail that sealed the first spirit into the Ukwe. Drive it into any tree to create a new Speaking Tree. The tree will remember everything.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (favors, debts, shards) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo grove-omens—bees that fly backward, roots that bleed sap, a mask that watches from the trees.

Additional Features

- The Three Societies: Sekogo is governed by three overlapping authorities: the Leopard Society (hunters who enforce taboos), the Earth Society (elders who keep the Calendar of Debt), and the nganga (spirit-doctors who work with minkisi). A single elder often belongs to two societies, and the tension between their roles is where drama lives.
- The Ukwe (Speaking Tree): A living ledger whose roots extend across Sekogo. Every broken promise, unpaid tithe, and unburied body stains its leaves. It answers questions — but never with kindness, and never for free. Accepting its gift incurs a debt that the tree may call at any moment.
- The Crimson Valley and Web-Law: The Lethai-ar guard the valley with fierce neutrality. Their skin-tattoos (Marks) record promises witnessed. When a Lethai-ar dies, their Marks are cut from the skin and buried at the Ukwe’s roots. The web-law is unwritten; each warden carries a different clause in memory.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Ukwe’s Debt and the Hollow (Eastern Realms): The Hollow is said to be the shadow of the Ukwe — the space where debts go when the tree forgets them. Aelaerem hedge-keepers leave offerings at the Ukwe’s roots to keep the Hollow from wandering.
- Lethai-ar Silk and the Way of Silk: The silk bridges of the Crimson Valley are made from spider-sap and oath-hair. Tulkani traders prize the silk for vow-cords; Fhara water-clerks use it to seal well-contracts. A bolt of Crimson silk can buy safe passage across half the continent.
- Leopard Society and Ashaani Slavers: The Leopard Society has a standing grudge against Ashaani slavers. A masked hunter may offer the party a deal: help free a group of captives from a Black Hand caravan, and the Society will forget an old debt.
- Nganga and the Kalrantha Amulet (Dhahara): The nganga of Sekogo believe the Kalrantha amulet is a rogue nkisi — a spirit-object that was never properly sealed. They want to drive a nail into it to bind the demon. The Veiled Sisters want the amulet for themselves.

Sekogo Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Root: Crumble a crust at the Ukwe’s base. Ignore the first Ukwe Demands a Name penalty.
- Knot the Silk: Tie a single knot in a Lethai-ar bridge cord. Cancel Web-Law Challenge or take –1 die on your next negotiation (your choice).
- Name to the Nail: Whisper a dead nganga’s name into a nkisi. Gain +1 Effect when using a spirit-object this scene, but mark Obligation to the Ukwe.

Patronage & Power

Among Sekogo, power flows through debts, honey, and the consent of the jungle. The Green Council rules by consensus, but the Leopard Society enforces taboos, the Earth Society keeps the Calendar, and the nganga negotiate with spirits. No single faction holds all the power — and that is by design.

For the GM: Power in Sekogo society is measured in unpaid obligations and witnessed promises. Patronage often takes the form of favors, debts, or shards — each carrying a future price. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to objects that create obligations (leopard claws, Ukwe leaves, nkisi shards) that can be called in at inconvenient moments.
- Let rival societies offer conflicting judgments, forcing players to choose whose law to follow.
- Use the honey-orchards, druid circles, and silk bridges as arenas for social contests, where a gift of honey is a treaty and a broken promise is a death sentence.

In Sekogo society, the jungle remembers everything — and the Ukwe forgets nothing.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Leopard Society hunters or Earth Society elders.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby bees or Lethai-ar wardens.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for Debt-Walkers or Waker spies.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or safe passage through a grove.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local Leopard Society or Green Council druid becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to thorn-spirit or fog from the Crimson Falls.
- Foe Appears: A Waker cell or Debt-Walker arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional Leopard Society, Earth Society guardians, or Lethai-ar archers arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—Ukwe speaks/Waker poison spreads/web-law broken.

- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Leopard King, Ukwe’s Voice, or Crimson Valley First Weaver intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—nkisi shatter/honey turns to blood/Ugwe’s root breaches the ground.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Sekogo (Jungle Law): Bees form words, tree bark weeps sap, the Ukwe’s root trembles.
- Sekogo (Crimson Valley): Silk cords tighten, canyon walls bleed rust, the web-law recites itself.
- Sekogo (Society Conflict): Masks shift expressions, bark strips burn without flame, a ninth nail appears in every nkisi.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Survival): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Thorn Wall.
- Cut the Web (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a silk cord is in your possession, +1 die.
- Weather the Hunt (Resolve + Spirit): On a hit in Leopard Society Hunt, you pick who is targeted; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Root & Mask)

- The Root-King (Nine Debts) — Phases: Debt Calls → Orchestrated Famine → Grove Coup. Cracks: burn a bark strip, expose a false debt, survive a harvest without honey.
- The Mask that Walks (Leopard’s Shadow) — Phases: Midnight Hunts → Procession of Masks → Skin-Baptism of a Warden. Cracks: relic leopard claw, survivor testimony, the mask turning against them.

Chapter 23

Lethai-ar of the Crimson Valley

Silk Bridges and Web-Law. The Lethai-ar don't just guard the valley with neutrality—they monetise it, and oh, how they love a good deal on witness cords. They don't just trust witness cords as contracts; they bid on their reliability, and the silk cord isn't just a thread—it's a licence to enforce an oath, stamped with the Lethai-ar seal and guaranteed by the Weavemaster-General's own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler loom-weights to improve their weaving—not because I believed in their looms, but because I knew the Weavemaster-General's apprentice was terrified of a snag that would ruin her promotion chances, and she'd pay in loom-weights for weights that seemed to improve the weave. They paid in a silk cord—witness to an oath I swore to a Tulkani judge—stamped with the Lethai-ar seal and guaranteed by the Weavemaster-General's own oath. The cord saved my life when I broke the oath... which is why I retied it. Not out of honour—out of leverage. “Want to know how to break an oath without the cord snapping?” I whisper to the next desperate soul. “It'll cost you a life.”

[Thimble: Sir, the Lethai-ar Web-Law Accord Article 5 forbids—]

[Edgewalker: Web-law accord? Thimble, my dear, little weaver, web-law accords are just leverage with a thread—especially when I've bought the Weavemaster-General's apprentice's silence with a loom-weight that doesn't improve weaving... it snags the thread. Now, about that silk cord... the Weavemaster-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in broken cords looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

23.1 Lethai-ar — “The Crimson Valley”

Silk-Warden (Elite): “The web-law is not written on parchment. It is woven into every bridge, every strand, every knot. When a promise is made, the valley remembers. When a promise is broken, the silk tightens. We are not judges. We are the loom.”

Mark-Cutter (Commoner): “Each line on my skin is a promise I witnessed. Each line is a debt I carry. When I die, they will cut these marks from my body and bury them at the Ukwe's roots. Then the tree will remember what I owed. I hope it is enough.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The Crimson Valley is a deep jungle rift between Sekogo and Oshiira — a wound of red stone, carved by a river that runs rust-colored after every rain. Here, the Lethai-ar guard their borders with fierce neutrality, their chestnut-brown skin blending with the canyon walls. Silk bridges span the gorges, woven from spider-sap and oath-hair, strong enough to hold a caravan and light enough to sway in the monsoon wind. The web-law is unwritten, carried in the memory of each warden; it keeps both empires from using the valley as a shortcut to war. Unlike their northern kin who fell from grace, the Lethai-ar are adopted children of the old powers — not fallen, but chosen to carry memory. Each can name the specific mountain, river, or grove where their ancestor left the spirit world to become mortal. Their skin-tattoos (Marks) are woven with red ochre and jungle sap, each line a promise witnessed, each curve a debt recorded. When a Lethai-ar dies, their Marks are cut from the skin and buried at the Ukwe's roots, so the tree may remember what they owed.

What you notice first: The whisper of silk ropes in the wind. The smell of red ochre and damp stone. The way every Lethai-ar touches their left wrist when they speak a name — a gesture of witness.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never step onto a silk bridge without first naming a witness. The bridge will remember your footsteps. If you fall, it will ask why no one was watching.

Regional Mood: The Weight of Witness

Power here is measured in witnessed promises, silk strands, and the balance of the web-law. The valley is neutral ground — Oshiiran grain barges do not float here, and Ashaani armies dare not march. The Lethai-ar trade silk for honey with Sekogo druids and stone-song for poison with Ngomebe masons. Their Marks are not decoration; they are a public ledger, written on skin, read by anyone who knows the phase of the crimson moon. A Lethai-ar who bears a Mark they cannot fulfil is shamed; a warden who cuts a bridge without cause is exiled.

Starting Location: The central silk bridge, where the gorge is deepest and the wind carries the smell of rust. A Silk-Warden blocks your path, her mask painted with roots: “The web-law demands a toll. Not in coin — in a promise. Swear that you will not use this valley to carry steel to Ashaan, or turn back now.”

Prominent NPCs of the Crimson Valley

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Warden Anara	Silk-warden of the central span	Keep the Oshiiran grain barges from crossing	Her left arm is covered in Marks from wrist to shoulder. She will not say what they mean.

Mark-Cutter Tebe	Tattooist who records promises	Witness a treaty between Sekogo and Ngomebe	She uses a needle of silk-fiber and ink made from crushed crimson stone. The ink glows under the full moon.
Bridge-Keeper Solan	Guardian of the eastern crossing	Prevent Ashaani scouts from using the valley	He has not slept in nine days. He says the bridge whispers when someone lies.
Elder Mira	Memory-keeper of the valley’s spirits	Record the name of every ancestor who walked the spirit path	She carries a bundle of silk cords, each tied to a different knot. The knots are the names.
The Spider (Tulkani trader)	A merchant who sells oath-silk to the Tulkani	Buy a bolt of crimson silk for a vow-cord	She is not Lethai-ar but has lived in the valley for thirty years. The wardens tolerate her.
The Unmarked	A Lethai-ar who refused to take any Marks	An outcast who lives in the gorge below the bridges	Her skin is blank. She is invisible to the web-law — and to the valley’s spirits.

Names of the Crimson Valley

Lethai-ar names are soft, with rolling consonants and vowel endings. Surnames often denote a bridge, a gorge, or a spirit-ancestor. Epithets refer to Marks or witnessed deeds.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Solan	Anara	Silkweave	the Unbroken
Tebe	Mira	Gorge-born	the Ninth Witness
Kael	Nira	Root-memory	the Marked
Veth	Liana	Spider-kin	the Bridge-Heart

Renn	Sora	Crimson-touch	the Unweaver
Thorn	Elara	Oath-strand	the Still Watcher

(Bridge/Gorge/Roots) Silk bridge spanning a crimson gorge — ropes sing in the wind; a Lethai-ar village built into the canyon wall; the Ukwe's roots clutching the water below the central span.

Spades — Places

2. Central Silk Bridge — A wide span woven from crimson and grey strands. The bridge hums when a promise is made on it. The pitch tells the warden if the promise is true.
 3. Mark-Cutter's Studio — A cave with a stone table and pots of ochre. The walls are carved with Marks that were never cut into skin. They are debts the cutter refused to witness.
 4. Ukwe's Riverside Root — A massive root that dips into the crimson river. The root is warm. Touch it, and the tree will show you one unfulfilled promise from a dead Lethai-ar.
 5. Abandoned Silk Span — A broken bridge hanging over the gorge. The cut ends are frayed. The cut was not clean — someone broke an oath mid-crossing.
 6. Spirit-Anchor Stone — A boulder where the first ancestor left the spirit world. The stone is smooth. It is warm even in winter. Lethai-ar leave offerings of red ochre here.
 7. Warden's Watchtower — A stone needle built into the canyon wall, with a signal mirror. The mirror flashes in code. The code is the web-law. No outsider has broken it.
 8. Hollow of the Unmarked — A cave below the eastern bridge, hidden by a waterfall. The cave has no silk. The Unmarked lives here, weaving nets from her own hair.
 9. Crimson River Ford — A shallow crossing where the water is clear, not red. The ford is sacred. No oath sworn here can be broken. The water would turn black.
 10. Elder's Cord-House — A longhouse where the memory-knots are stored. Each cord is a name. The cords are hung from the ceiling. They move in no wind.
- J The Spider's Stall — A Tulkani merchant's tent at the valley's southern exit. She sells silk to anyone. The price is a story. The story must be witnessed.
- Q Bridge of the Ninth Strand — A legend: a bridge woven from a single hair. It appears only at dawn on the first day of spring. Those who cross it gain a new name.
- K The Cut Stone — A boulder split by an oath-breaker's fall. The split is shaped like a human body. The stone weeps water when the oath-breaker's name is spoken.
- A The First Bridge (Myth) — Where the first Lethai-ar wove the first strand. It is invisible. Only those who have witnessed nine true promises can see it.

(Warden/Cutter/Trader) Silk-warden with a mask painted with the Ukwe's roots; Mark-cutter with a needle of silk-fiber; Tulkani spider-trader with a bundle of oath-cords.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Silk-Warden — Mask carved from crimson wood, painted with debt-names. She never blinks when standing on the bridge. The bridge does not forgive distraction.

3. Mark-Cutter — Hands stained red with ochre, eyes that measure skin. She asks each client: “What promise do you want the world to remember?” The answer becomes a Mark.
4. Bridge-Keeper — Old, grey-haired, missing three fingers from a snapped strand. He carries a whistle made from a spider’s fang. The whistle calls the bridge to tighten.
5. Elder (Memory-Keeper) — Bundles of silk cords hang from her belt. She knows every name carved into every root of the Ukwe. She has forgotten her own.
6. Tulkani Spider (Trader) — Wears a shawl of crimson silk, speaks in riddles. She pays for silk with stories. The stories become new strands. The bridge grows.
7. The Unmarked — A Lethai-ar without Marks, living in the hollow. She whispers to the waterfall. The waterfall whispers back. No one knows what they say.
8. Youth Seeking a Mark — A young Lethai-ar on their first witness journey. They carry a single strand of undyed silk. When they witness a promise, they will dye it crimson.
9. Oath-Breaker’s Ghost — A translucent figure pacing the broken bridge. It repeats the words of the promise it broke. The words are getting quieter.
10. Sekogo Honey Trader — A druid with a jar of dark honey, trading for silk poison. He offers the honey as a gift. The wardens test it by feeding a drop to the bridge. The bridge sways if it is poisoned.
- J Ngomebe Stone-Singer — A mason with a tuning fork, here to buy silk for sledge-wax seals. He taps the bridge with his fork. The note tells him how many promises it has witnessed.
- Q The First Ancestor’s Echo — A voice heard at the Spirit-Anchor Stone at midnight. It asks: “Why did you leave the spirit world?” The answer must be a promise.
- K The Spider’s Daughter — A half-Lethai-ar child raised by the Tulkani trader. She has no Marks. Her skin is blank. She is learning to read knots.
- A The Ninth Warden (Legend) — A warden who cut her own bridge to stop an invasion. She is said to walk the valley at dusk, carrying a coil of silk. She offers one free crossing.

(Strand/Challenge/Fall) A silk strand snaps — lose 1 Supply to repair; a Lethai-ar challenges you to recite the web-law; a traveller falls from a bridge — the party must witness their last words.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Snapped Strand — A rope on a bridge breaks. Lose 1 Supply to repair. The break is clean. Someone cut it with a blade. The blade was from Ashaan.
3. Web-Law Challenge — A warden blocks the bridge: “Recite the ninth clause.” The ninth clause is unwritten. Each warden carries a different version. You must guess.
4. Fall from the Bridge — A traveller slips. The bridge asks: “Who witnessed this?” If no one answers, the traveller’s name is erased from the Ukwe’s roots.
5. Oshiiram Surveyors — Grain auditors arrive with a map, claiming the valley’s water rights. They carry a treaty stamped with the Widow’s seal. The seal is a forgery.
6. Ashaani Scouts (Disguised) — Veiled Sister agents posing as spice merchants. They do not touch their left wrist when speaking a name. The wardens notice.
7. Mark-Cutter’s Debt Called — A Lethai-ar’s Marks begin to glow red. A promise is overdue. The debtor is not present. The party is the closest witness. The debt transfers.

8. Bridge Poisoning — Someone smears a solvent on the silk strands. The bridge begins to fray. The solvent is made from Sekogo honey and Ashaani dust. The Spider knows who sold it.
9. Elder's Memory Fails — The cord-keeper forgets a name. The knot unravels. The forgotten name is an old debt. The Ukwe's root trembles. Something is coming.
10. The Unmarked's Bargain — The outcast offers to guide the party through the gorge. Her price is a promise. The promise: "Do not speak my name after I die." Refuse, and she leaves you to the spiders.
- J Crimson River Floods — Rain turns the ford to a torrent. The bridge is the only crossing. The water is red. Faces appear in the foam. They are oath-breakers, still trying to cross.
- Q Warden Schism — Two wardens disagree on the web-law. They cut each other's bridges. The valley is now divided. The party must choose which side to cross — or stay stuck forever.
- K The First Bridge Appears — The mythical bridge manifests at dawn. Crossing it gives a new name. The new name is a debt. The debt is to the First Ancestor. The ancestor will collect.
- A The Ninth Warden Returns — The legend appears, offering a free crossing. The crossing leads to the Hollow. The Hollow asks: "What promise did you break?" Answer poorly, and you become a new strand.

(Cord/Mask/Shard) Silk witness cord (enforce any oath); warden's mask (safe passage on any bridge for one crossing); Ukve root shard (one question about a forgotten promise).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Silk Witness Cord — A braided strand dyed crimson. Use it to enforce any oath. The cord tightens when the oath is broken. It will not stop until blood is drawn or the promise is kept.
3. Warden's Mask — A wooden mask painted with roots. Safe passage on any bridge for one crossing. The mask has no eye holes. You must trust the bridge to see for you.
4. Ukwe Root Shard — A piece of the tree's root that grows near the river. Touch it, and the Ukwe will answer one question about a forgotten promise. The answer is always true.
5. Mark-Cutter's Needle — A silk-fiber needle. Use it to record a witnessed promise as a temporary Mark. The Mark fades after one season. The debt remains.
6. Bridge-Keeper's Whistle — A fang whistle. Blow it to tighten any silk bridge for one scene. The whistle works once. The bridge will remember the favour.
7. Elder's Memory Cord — A knotted silk cord that contains a forgotten name. Untie the knot to learn the name. The name is a debt. Collect it, or it collects you.
8. Spider's Story-Strand — A bolt of crimson silk bought with a story. The silk is soft. It glows under moonlight. Trade it for safe passage through Tulkani camps.
9. The Unmarked's Net — A net woven from human hair. Throw it to catch a spirit. The net can hold a bound spirit for one hour. The spirit will bargain for freedom.
10. Crimson Ochre Pot — A clay pot of red pigment. Use it to Mark a promise on stone or skin. The ochre never dries. The promise remains witnessable forever.
- J Ninth Strand Fragment — A piece of the legendary bridge. Once per campaign, cross any gap as if on solid ground. The fragment crumbles after use. The first bridge will remember you.

- Q The Cut Stone’s Water — A vial of water that seeps from the oath-breaker’s boulder. Drink it to remember a promise you broke. The memory is painful. The pain is the price.
- K First Ancestor’s Blessing — A whispered promise from the Spirit-Anchor Stone. Once, you may reroll any failed roll involving a witnessed promise. The ancestor watches.
- A The Ninth Warden’s Coil — A coil of silk said to belong to the legendary warden. Use it to cut a bridge without angering the web-law. The coil then unravels.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (cords, masks, shards) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo valley-omens—silk cords humming in still air, the crimson river running clear, a bridge that sways without wind.

Additional Features

- The Web-Law: The unwritten legal code of the Crimson Valley. Each warden carries a different clause in memory; together, they form a complete web. To cross a bridge, a traveller must answer a question about the web-law. The answer changes with each warden.
- Marks (Skin-Tattoos): Each Lethai-ar’s Marks are a public ledger of promises witnessed and debts owed. The Marks are cut from the skin after death and buried at the Ukwe’s roots. To read a living Lethai-ar’s Marks, one must know the phase of the crimson moon and the position of the valley’s spirits.
- Spirit Ancestry: Every Lethai-ar can name the specific spirit (mountain, river, grove) where their ancestor left the spirit world to become mortal. That spirit is their witness; they owe it a promise at birth, and that promise is never fully paid.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Crimson Silk and the Way of Silk: The silk of the Crimson Valley is prized across the continent for vow-cords, well-contracts, and bridge-building. The Tulkani spider-traders are the primary merchants; a single bolt can buy safe passage from Fhara to Dhahara.
- The Ukwe’s Roots and Sekogo: The Ukwe’s roots extend into the Crimson Valley. The Lethai-ar bury their dead Marks at the riverbank root, creating a unique relationship with the Speaking Tree. The Ukwe knows every promise ever made in the valley.
- Web-Law and the Covenant (Mykkriel): The Covenant judges respect the web-law as a valid legal system. A Lethai-ar witness cord is admissible in a Covenant court. Some judges have learned to read Marks.
- The Unmarked and the Hollow (Eastern Realms): Lethai-ar who refuse all Marks become invisible to the web-law — and to the Hollow. The Hollow cannot track them. Some Aelaerem seek out the Unmarked to learn the secret of blank skin.

Lethai-ar Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Bridge: Crumble a crust onto the first strand. Ignore the first Snapped Strand penalty.
- Knot the Cord: Tie a single knot in a witness cord. Cancel Web-Law Challenge or take -1 die on your next negotiation (your choice).
- Name to the Root: Whisper a dead warden's name into the Ukwe's root. Gain +1 Effect when crossing a bridge this scene, but mark Obligation to the First Ancestor.

Patronage & Power

Among the Lethai-ar, power flows through witnessed promises, silk strands, and the authority of the wardens. The web-law is unwritten, but every warden carries a piece of it. Marks are public, debts are visible, and the Ukwe remembers everything.

For the GM: Power in the Crimson Valley is measured in witnessed oaths and the trust of the bridge. Patronage often takes the form of witness cords, masks, or root shards — each tied to a specific promise. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to objects that record or enforce promises (cords, masks, shards) that can be challenged, broken, or called in.
- Let rival wardens issue conflicting interpretations of the web-law, forcing players to choose whose bridge to cross.
- Use the bridges, Mark-cutter's studio, and the Ukwe's root as arenas for social contests, where a witnessed promise is a weapon and a broken strand is a death sentence.

In the Crimson Valley, the bridge remembers every step — and the Ukwe forgets no promise.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Silk-Wardens or Mark-Cutters.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby bridge-keepers or Tulkani traders.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for Elders or the Unmarked.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or safe crossing.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local Silk-Warden or Bridge-Keeper becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to snapped strand or rising river.
- Foe Appears: An Oshiiran surveyor or Ashaani scout arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional Wardens, Mark-Cutters, or bridge guards arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—bridge cut/web-law broken/First Bridge appears.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Elder, Ninth Warden, or First Ancestor’s Echo intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—bridge collapses/river turns black/Ukve root rises.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Crimson Valley (Web-Law): Silk strands glow, witness cords tighten, the Ukve’s root hums a name.
- Crimson Valley (Marks): Tattoos itch, ochre stains spread, a dead Mark appears on living skin.
- Crimson Valley (Bridges): Ropes whisper, the gorge echoes with footsteps that are not there, a bridge sways toward the Hollow.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Survival): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Swaying Bridge.
- Cut the Strand (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a witness cord is in your possession, +1 die.
- Weather the Crossing (Resolve + Spirit): On a hit in Fall from the Bridge, you pick who catches the fallen; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Silk & Promise)

- The Unweaver (Nine Broken Strands) — Phases: Snapped Cords → Orchestrated Falls → Bridge Coup. Cracks: repair a broken strand, expose a false witness, survive a crossing without a promise.
- The Silent Warden (Oath of the Unmarked) — Phases: Forgotten Promises → Procession of the Blank → Skin-Baptism of an Elder. Cracks: relic witness cord, survivor testimony, the Marks turning against them.

The Way of Silk

Chapter 24

Fhara

The Oasis Courts. Water isn't just law in Fhara—it's a market, and oh, how the water-clerks love a good deal on aquifer access. They don't just negotiate in three cups; they auction the right to the fourth cup, and the water-share tablet isn't just a document—it's a licence to draw from any well for a season, stamped with the Fhara seal and guaranteed by the Hydromaster-General's own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler well-pumps that never break—not because I cared about their water, but because I knew the Hydromaster-General's deputy was terrified of a drought that would ruin his promotion chances, and he'd pay in well-pumps for pumps that seemed eternal. I've used it to cross the desert nine times... which is why the tablet is cracking. Wear and tear? No. Strategic degradation. I've been subtly corroding the tablet's edges during "calibration checks" so it leaks faster—now I can sell them a renewal at triple the price, claiming the old one was "void due to supernatural interference." (The Fhara agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the qanat collapse I "summoned" during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 12 of the Fhara Water Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Water accord? Thimble, my sweet little hydrologist, water accords are just leverage with a drop—especially when I've bought the Hydromaster-General's deputy's silence with a well-pump that doesn't never break... it fails at the worst moment. Now, about that water-share tablet... the Hydromaster-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in dry wells looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 3 of the Hydromaster-General's Ledger—]

[Edgewalker: Hydromaster-General's ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I've got a pump war to start in Sidhi, and if you mention "Clause 3" one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the next water-share tablet as kindling. They prefer it wet.]

24.1 Fhara — “The Oasis Courts”

Well-Judge (Elite): “Water is not a right. It is a loan from the sand. The oasis remembers every drop drawn, every cup poured, every promise made at its edge. I do not judge the living. I judge the debt.”

Water-Clerk (Commoner): “My grandfather dug this well with a shovel and a prayer. My mother sealed the walls with clay from the dry river. I sit in the shade and measure every bucket. The sand does not forgive a miscount.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The Fhara dwell on a great, sun-baked peninsula where scattered oases and dry riverbeds connect the coast to the interior. Their cities are built around wells and date groves, and their caravans are the arteries of the spice trade. Water is law — the well-keepers are judges, and the courthouse is the shade of a palm. The Fhara are merchants, poets, and negotiators; they will bargain for an hour over a cup of coffee, and a day over a camel. Their honour is measured in generosity, and their vengeance is measured in litigation. Coffee is not a drink; it is a ritual. Three cups: the first is welcome, the second is negotiation, the third is a contract. Refuse the third, and you have broken an oath.

What you notice first: The smell of roasting coffee and overripe dates. The way every well has a stone bench for the judge. The silence when the sun passes directly overhead — no one moves, no one speaks.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never refuse a date offered by a well-keeper. The fruit is sacred to their well-spirits. Refusing it ends the conversation — and your access to water.

Regional Mood: The Weight of Water

Power here is measured in well-depth, date groves, and the length of a coffee ritual. Each oasis is a sovereign court, ruled by a Sheikh and a Well-Judge. The Fhara have no single king; their confederacy is a web of marriage alliances, water-sharing treaties, and caravan tariffs. The desert is not empty — it is a ledger of dry wells, abandoned caravanserais, and the bones of those who could not pay. A Fhara merchant can cross the waste with only a waterskin and a coffee pot, because every well has a keeper, every keeper a price, and every price can be negotiated.

Starting Location: The shaded stone bench of a well-court, where the air is cool and the water is sweet. A Well-Judge dips a clay cup into the basin: “You have come for water, or for trade, or for a story. First, drink. Then tell me which of your debts you intend to pay today.”

Prominent NPCs of the Fhara

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Sheikh Mansur	Oasis lord of the Three Wells	Keep his well’s water rights against a rival clan	He has not tasted water in ten years — only coffee.
Fatima al-Wadi	Well-Judge of the central route	Settle disputes without bloodshed	She carries a dipper made from a date-palm leaf; it rots after each case.

Rashid	Caravan master of the Spice Road	Find a new route past a dried well	He has three wives, each from a different oasis. The wives do not speak.
Layla	Coffee-house poet	Sell verses for coin and secrets	Her poems are in code; the code is the price of coffee.
The Drowned Well-Keeper	A ghost of a well that went dry	Warn travellers of poisoned springs	She appears as a column of steam at dusk. She points at safe wells.

Names of the Fhara

Inspired by the desert peninsula: soft consonants, vowel-heavy, with clan prefixes (bin, bint, al-). Surnames often denote a well, a grove, or a trade.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Mansur	Fatima	al-Wadi	the Well-Born
Rashid	Layla	bin Hassan	Coffee-Tongue
Tariq	Amira	al-Sahel	the Ninth Cup
Jamal	Nadia	Qasimi	Date-Father
Hakim	Samira	al-Nur	the Dry-Handed

(Well/Court/Bazaar) A well-court with a stone bench and a judge’s dipper; a coffee bazaar under canvas, roasting beans; a dried riverbed where old caravans are buried.

Spades — Places

2. Well-Court — A stone bench under a palm; a judge with a clay dipper. The dipper has a chip. The chip is from a sword that broke a well.
3. Coffee Bazaar — Stalls under canvas; the smell of roasting beans. The best coffee is served in a chipped cup. The chip is a signature.
4. Date Grove — Rows of palms; the ground soft with fallen fruit. The fruit ferments at night. The drunk monkeys are the guards.
5. Dry Riverbed (Old Caravan Route) — A wide, sandy channel with bleached bones. The bones are not human. They are camels that died of thirst. Their ghosts still groan.
6. Tent Court (Mobile) — A carpet under a canvas roof; a judge with a scale. The scale weighs water, not silver. One side is always empty.
7. Caravanserai of the Three Wells — A walled courtyard with three different springs. The sweet well is for guests. The brackish well is for animals. The bitter well is for prisoners.

8. Salt Pan (Western Edge) — A white flat where the caravans load salt. The salt is mixed with ancient tears. It tastes of old grief.
9. Lighthouse of the Drowned — A stone tower on the coast, never lit. The keeper is blind. He rings a bell when he hears ships. The ships are ghosts.
10. Oasis of the Ninth Palm — A legend: a grove with nine palms, but the ninth is invisible. Drink from the ninth well, and you will forget your name for a day.
- J Abandoned Well-Keeper's Hut — A collapsed stone shelter with a dry basin. The basin is carved with a name. The name is the keeper's. He died of thirst.
- Q Coffee Warehouse — A cool, dark building with sacks of beans from a dozen oases. Each sack is stamped with a well's mark. The marks are family crests.
- K Well-Judge's Archive — A cave filled with clay tablets. Each tablet is a water judgment. The tablets are baked hard. They are also porous. They weep when a judgment is reversed.
- A The First Well — A mythic spring at the centre of the peninsula, said to never dry. No one has found it. Those who claim they have are always lying — or dead.

(Judge/Poet/Master) Well-Judge with a clay dipper and a rotted palm-leaf; coffee-house poet with a stringed instrument; caravan master with a rope of camel hair.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Well-Judge — Grey-bearded, blind in one eye. He tastes the water before each ruling. "Salt means guilt," he says. "Sweet means innocence. Bitter means appeal."
3. Coffee-House Poet — A woman with hennaed hands and a silver bell on her ankle. She recites a verse. The verse is a price. The price is never in coin.
4. Caravan Master — Leathery skin, a brass whistle on a thong. He can find water by the colour of the sand. He has never been wrong.
5. Water-Clerk — A young woman with a clay tablet and a reed pen. She records every bucket drawn. Her ink is water mixed with soot.
6. Date Merchant — Fat, cheerful, missing two fingers to a knife fight. He offers a date to every customer. The date is always from his own grove.
7. Oasis Lord (Sheikh) — Robed in white, a bronze key on his belt. The key opens the sluice gate. He never lets it leave his sight.
8. Well-Spirit (Nat) — A shimmer of heat above the water at noon. It asks: "Who drank without offering?" Answer truthfully, or the well will dry.
9. Camel Breeder — A tall, silent man with a staff of acacia wood. He names each camel after a dead wife. The camels answer to the names.
10. Salt Carrier — A slave (illegal, but present in the deep desert). He wears a collar of braided rope. He is saving to buy his freedom. The price is a thousand measures of salt.
- J The Drowned Well-Keeper's Ghost — A woman in wet robes, standing at a dry well. She offers a cup of water. The cup is empty. Drink it anyway.
- Q Coffee Roaster — A man with blackened hands and a brass drum. He roasts beans while reciting the genealogy of each grove. The beans remember.
- K The Ninth Palm's Guardian — A hooded figure who appears at the legendary oasis. He asks: "Why do you seek the invisible well?" The answer determines if you see it.

- A The First Well-Keeper (Myth) — A skeleton sitting on a stone bench, still holding a dipper. If you take the dipper, you become the new well-keeper. You cannot leave.

(Dry/Coffee/Dispute) A well is found dry — the keeper is dead; a coffee ritual is interrupted — the third cup is not poured; a water dispute erupts between two wells — the judge demands a bribe.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Dry Well — The oasis keeper is dead. Lose 1 Supply. Roll on the faction table. The keeper's body is curled around the basin. He died of thirst. The well is full.
3. Coffee Ritual Interrupted — A stranger refuses the third cup. The host draws a knife. The stranger is a rival clan member. The insult is a declaration of feud.
4. Water Dispute — Two well-keepers claim the same spring. The judge demands a bribe. The bribe is a story. The story must be true. The judge will know if you lie.
5. Date Blight — A fungus attacks the groves. Prices triple. Starvation looms. The blight was spread by a merchant from the coast. The merchant's ship flew no flag.
6. Sandstorm (Khamsin) — Red dust obscures the path. Navigation DV +1, mark Fatigue. The dust carries whispers. The whispers are the names of dead caravaners.
7. Customs Inspection (Forged Seal) — A local governor demands papers. Yours are false. The seal is a copy. The forger is in the party. He is sweating.
8. Elephant Stampede (Rare) — A herd of stray elephants thunders through camp. The elephants are from a Dhaharan stable. They are escaped. They are looking for their mahout.
9. Mirage (False Well) — A shimmer on the horizon. Lose 1 Supply chasing it. The mirage is a memory. The memory is of a well that dried a century ago.
10. Debt Collector (Tulkani Vow-Cord) — Someone recognises a knot you carry. They demand payment. The payment is a story. The story must be about a broken promise.
- J Well-Spirit Offended — A traveller urinated in the basin. The well refuses to give water. The spirit demands a sacrifice. The sacrifice is a name. The name must be the offender's.
- Q Coffee House Fire — A roasting drum explodes. The bazaar is burning. The fire was set by a rival oasis. The rival wants to monopolise the coffee trade.
- K Well-Judge's Verdict Forged — A clay tablet is found altered. The judge is blamed. The forger is the judge's own clerk. The clerk owes a debt to the Salt Syndicate.
- A The First Well Appears — The mythic spring manifests. All who drink from it forget their debts. The forgetting is permanent. The Ukwe's roots tremble. The Hollow is pleased.

(Water-share/Court/Dipper) Water-share tablet (right to draw from a named well for a season); caravan court writ (neutral arbitration for one dispute); well-judge's dipper (one reroll on a negotiation involving water).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Water-Share Tablet — A clay tile. Right to draw from a named well for one season. The tablet is brittle. Break it, and the right transfers to the breaker.
3. Caravan Court Writ — A palm-leaf document. Demands neutral arbitration for any dispute. The writ is sealed with coffee grounds. The seal is edible. Eat it to void the writ.

4. Well-Judge's Dipper — A clay cup on a stick. Once, reroll a failed negotiation involving water. The dipper has a chip. The chip is from a sword that broke a well.
5. Coffee Cup (Royal Seal) — A chipped cup used by a Sheikh. Gain +1 Position in any Fhara court. The chip is a signature. No one will question it.
6. Date-Palm Seed — A single seed from a sacred grove. Plant it to claim water rights. The seed grows into a palm within a year. The well-spirit will recognise you.
7. Oasis Lord's Key — A bronze key to a sluice gate. Open any well's flow for one hour. The key is warm. It glows when a well is being poisoned.
8. Coffee Merchant's Ledger — A record of every coffee sale for a decade. Contains names of spies. The ledger is written in disappearing ink. It reappears when heated.
9. Salt Carrier's Rope Collar — A braided rope that once held a slave. Present it to free a captive. The rope is old. It smells of sweat and freedom. One use.
10. Well-Spirit's Boon — A vial of water from a haunted well. Drink it to see the nearest spring. The water is cold. It tastes of copper. The vision lasts one hour.
- J The Drowned Keeper's Cup — An empty clay cup. Offer it to a dry well, and the dead keeper will fill it once. The cup weeps water. The water is salty. Drink it anyway.
- Q Coffee Roaster's Drum — A brass drum. Roast beans in it, and the smoke forms words. The words are the future price of coffee. The price is always a warning.
- K The Ninth Palm's Date — A single fruit from the invisible tree. Eat it to forget a single debt. The date is sweet. The forgetting is permanent. The creditor will still remember.
- A The First Well's Water — A flask from the mythic spring. Drink it to clear all Obligation to Fhara patrons. The water tastes of nothing. The spirits will not forgive you for drinking it.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (tablets, writs, dippers) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo water-omens—a dry well that weeps, coffee that brews itself, a date that bleeds.

Additional Features

- Three Cups, One Contract: Fhara negotiations follow a rigid ritual. First cup: welcome and genealogy. Second cup: bargaining and threats disguised as compliments. Third cup: sealing the deal. Refusing the third cup voids the negotiation and insults the host. Accepting the third cup without intending to honour the deal is a capital crime.
- Water-Sharing Tablets: Water rights are recorded on clay tablets, stored in the Well-Judge's archive. A tablet can be split, traded, or challenged. The tablet is the well; break it, and the water becomes unclaimed — until someone carves a new one.
- Well-Spirits (Nat): Each well has a spirit, usually benign but jealous. Offerings of dates, coffee, or a story keep it calm. A well that has witnessed a murder may turn bitter; a well that has been poisoned may turn sentient and mobile.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Coffee and the Covenant (Mykkiel): Fhara coffee houses are neutral ground under Covenant law. A well-judge’s verdict cannot be appealed outside the oasis. Some Covenant judges are trained in the three-cup ritual.
- Water Tablets and the Aeler Ledger (Ngomebe): Aeler engineers have been hired to map the underground aquifers. Their breath-books record water pressure and flow. The Fhara see this as an intrusion — or an opportunity for better wells.
- Date Groves and the Ukwe (Sekogo): The Ukwe’s roots do not reach the dry peninsula, but the Fhara have their own Speaking Palms — trees that remember every date harvested. A date from a sacred grove can witness an oath as surely as a Lethai-ar cord.
- The First Well and the Hollow (Eastern Realms): The mythic spring that never dries is said to be the Hollow’s original well — before it learned to thirst. Aelaerem hedge-keepers sometimes leave offerings at dried wells, hoping to appease the Hollow with water.

Fhara Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Basin: Crumble a crust into the well. Ignore the first Dry Well penalty.
- Knot the Dipper: Tie a single date-palm fibre around the dipper’s handle. Cancel Coffee Ritual Interrupted or take –1 die on your next negotiation (your choice).
- Name to the Well: Whisper a dead well-keeper’s name into the water. Gain +1 Effect when haggling over water rights this scene, but mark Obligation to the Well-Spirit.

Patronage & Power

Among the Fhara, power flows through water, coffee, and the weight of a witnessed bargain. The Well-Judge’s word is law, the Oasis Lord controls the sluice, and the Caravan Master commands the desert. But no one rules alone — every decision is a negotiation, every negotiation a ritual, every ritual a debt.

For the GM: Power in Fhara society is measured in well-depth, coffee cups, and clay tablets. Patronage often takes the form of water-share rights, court writs, or a judge’s dipper — each tied to a specific oasis. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to physical tokens (tablets, dippers, keys) that can be broken, stolen, or voided by a well-spirit.
- Let rival oases issue conflicting water claims, forcing players to choose whose well to trust.
- Use the well-courts, coffee bazaars, and date groves as arenas for social contests, where a cup of coffee is a contract and a dry well is a death sentence.

In Fhara society, the sand forgets nothing — and the well remembers every debt.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Well-Judges or Water-Clerks.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby coffee-house guards or date merchants.

- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for caravan masters or well-spirits.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favourable water access.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local Well-Judge or Oasis Lord becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to sandstorm or mirage.
- Foe Appears: A rival oasis guard or debt collector arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional well-guards, coffee-house enforcers, or camel riders arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—well dries/coffee warehouse burns/water tablet breaks.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: High Well-Judge, Oasis Sheikh, or First Well-Keeper's ghost intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—well collapses/oasis floods/date grove burns.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Fhara (Water Law): Well-spirits ripple the surface, clay tablets glow, a dipper's chip grows larger.
- Fhara (Coffee Ritual): Beans roast themselves, cups overflow without water, the third cup pours black smoke.
- Fhara (Desert): Sand shifts to reveal old bones, mirages speak, a dry well whispers a name.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Survival): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Sand Blind.
- Cut the Bargain (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a water-share tablet is in your possession, +1 die.

- Weather the Khamsin (Resolve + Endurance): On a hit in Sandstorm, you pick who stays on their feet; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Water & Sand)

- The Drought-Maker (Nine Dry Wells) — Phases: Well Poisonings → Orchestrated Famine → Oasis Coup. Cracks: find a hidden spring, expose a false tablet, survive a season without water.
- The Coffee-Price (Third Cup Cursed) — Phases: Ritual Interruptions → Procession of Empty Cups → Bargain Baptism of a Merchant. Cracks: relic coffee bean, survivor testimony, the third cup turning sweet again.

Chapter 25

Sidhi

The Diaspora of the Sealed Coast. The Sidhi aren't just everywhere—they're a network, and oh, how the lighthouse-keepers love a good deal on storm signalling. They don't just remember every raid; they auction the right to the next one, and the freedman's seal isn't just a document—it's a licence to slip past slavers, stamped with the Sidhi seal and guaranteed by the Emancipator-General's own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler lighthouse mirrors that can signal across a storm—not because I cared about their signals, but because I knew the Emancipator-General's apprentice was terrified of a misfire that would ruin her promotion chances, and she'd pay in lighthouse mirrors for mirrors that seemed to work in storms. I've used it to slip past Ashaani slavers three times... which is why the seal is still warm. Not from use—from strategic heating. I've been subtly warming the seal's core during "alignment checks" so it fails faster—now I can sell them a renewal at triple the price, claiming the old one was "void due to supernatural interference." (The Sidhi agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the storm I "summoned" during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 8 of the Sidhi Seal Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Seal accord? Thimble, my dear, little beacon, seal accords are just leverage with a photon—especially when I've bought the Emancipator-General's apprentice's silence with a lighthouse mirror that doesn't signal across storms... it attracts slavers. Now, about that freedman's seal... the Emancipator-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in escaped slaves looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

25.1 Sidhi — “The Diaspora of the Sealed Coast”

Lighthouse Judge (Elite): “Galanina is not a place on a map. It is a promise that our ancestors made to the sea: we will remember, and we will return. The Covenant gave us courts, but the sea gave us memory. The Admiralty gives us tariffs. We give each other salt and stories.”

Freedman Sailor (Commoner): “My grandmother wore a brass collar. My mother wore a freedman's seal. I wear a captain's ring. The slavers took our names, but they could not take the tide. The tide always comes back. So do we.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The Sidhi are a people of the coast and the diaspora. Their ancestral homeland is Galanina, a rugged shore of limestone cliffs and ancient ports far to the west. The Ashaani magocracy enslaved them for generations, but Galanina broke free under the Covenant of Mykkiel, whose judges and notaries stamped the liberation with wax and witness. Now the Sidhi are scattered: some returned to Galanina's lighthouse courts, some trade in Oshiiran ports, and many have found refuge on the Brass Coast of Dhahara, where they run ropeways, spice auctions, and Sidhi-run port guilds. They are fierce, proud, and never forget a debt. Their speech is a creole of Ashaani and coastal tongues, their law is maritime, and their symbol is the lighthouse lamp — a green flame that shows the faces of the drowned, so that the dead may witness the living.

What you notice first: The smell of salt and old parchment. The way every Sidhi touches a small brass key at their belt — the key to a house they may never see again. The green glow of lighthouse lamps along the shore.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never ask about ancestry. The Ashaani slavery raids are a fresh wound. Asking which clan someone belongs to is asking how their grandparents were captured, sold, or killed.

Regional Mood: The Weight of Memory

Power here is measured in lighthouse charters, freedman's seals, and the weight of witness. The Sidhi have no single king; their authority rests in the Covenant courts of Galanina and the port-masters' guilds of the diaspora. A Sidhi merchant's word is her bond, because every bond is witnessed by a lighthouse lamp and recorded in a water-resistant ledger. The Admiralty of Kahfagia administers the Brass Coast, but the Sidhi run the real trade — and they remember every raid, every broken treaty, every ancestor who did not return.

Starting Location: The lamp room of a Sidhi lighthouse, where a green flame burns behind a brass mirror. A Lighthouse Judge turns from the flame: "You have come for safe harbour, or for a charter, or to ask about the old wounds. First, light a lamp. Then tell me which debt you are here to pay — or to collect."

Prominent NPCs of the Sidhi

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Magistrate Jora	Covenant Judge of the Salt Circuit (Galanina)	Enforce maritime law and protect freedman status	She carries a water-clock that runs backwards when she lies.
Captain Idris	Sidhi lighthouse commander (Brass Coast)	Prevent Ashaani slavers from landing	His left eye is a brass lens; he can read the stars even in fog.

Envoys Naveed	Breath-less agent (hidden)	Recruit exiles to resist the Veiled Sisters	He has three names; each is for a different jurisdiction.
Shipwright Elara	Builder of freedmen’s boats	Launch one new vessel each year for escaped slaves	She names each boat after a dead family member. The names are never painted — only carved.
The Brass-Fingered	A smuggler with prosthetic fingers of copper	Run goods past the Admiralty’s tariffs	He lost his fingers to a customs trap. He made new ones from the trap’s own springs.

Names of the Sidhi

Inspired by coastal and diaspora traditions: names with soft consonants, often ending in -el, -on, -ia. Surnames denote a port, a ship, or a freed ancestor.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Idris	Jora	el-Galanina	the Lamp-Keeper
Naveed	Elara	Pattinam	Brass-Fingered
Samir	Leila	Chettiar	the Unbound
Rami	Yasmin	al-Bahr	Ninth Tide
Tariq	Dalia	Sidhi-el-Kebir	the Witness

Spades — Places

- Lighthouse of the Unfaithful Dead — A stone tower with a brass mirror and a green flame. The light shows the faces of those who died in Ashaani chains. They do not blink.
- Covenant Court of the Salt Marsh — A wooden platform on stilts; the tide rises during trials. If the water touches the judge’s feet, the verdict is “drowned.” The accused is not present.
- Sidhi Hidden Cove (Boatyard) — A beach accessible only through a sea-cave. The cave walls are covered in tally marks — each mark is a slave freed.
- The Unforgotten Ledger’s Vault (Galanina) — A subterranean room of sealed jars. Each jar contains a broken oath. The jars whisper if you listen.

6. Brass Coast Ropeway — A cable that carries spice baskets from ship to warehouse. The rope is braided with Sidhi hair. The dead pull the baskets.
7. Freedman's Square (Port Shed) — A marketplace where freed slaves trade without tariffs. The square has a fountain that flows with salt water. Drinking it reminds you of the crossing.
8. Archive of Sealed Doors (Galanina) — A fortress of ledgers, each door locked with a judge's brass ring. The rings are different sizes. The archivist has a key ring with nine rings. The ninth opens nothing.
9. Lighthouse of the Brass Flame (Dhahara) — A copper mirror that turns sunlight into a beam. The keeper can signal a message to any Sidhi ship within a day's sail. The code is a song.
10. Shipbreaker's Yard (Coast) — A beach where old vessels are dismantled. The workers are convicts. They wear chains that drag in the sand. The chains are melted down for anchors.
- J The Admiral's Palace (Occupied) — A former Sidhi fort, now a Kahfagian headquarters. The flag is flown upside down. The Admiral does not know the difference. The Sidhi do.
- Q The Ninth Well (Galanina) — A fresh spring that tastes of iron. The first Covenant judge drowned a liar there. The water still remembers his name.
- K The Drowned Captain's Ship — A spectral dhow seen at the edge of storms. It offers passage to the dead. The living who board it become its crew.
- A The Sealed Coast (Mythic Galanina) — A stretch of shore that appears only at low tide. Those who walk it see the faces of ancestors who did not escape. The ancestors ask for their names back.

(Judge/Keeper/Agent) Covenant magistrate with a water-clock; Sidhi lighthouse keeper, blind in one eye; Breath-less agent dressed as a fisher, hands uncalloused.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Lighthouse Judge — Robed in grey, a water-clock on her belt. She drinks only rainwater. "The sea does not lie," she says. "Neither should you."
3. Lighthouse Keeper — Blind in one eye, the other sees only green. He lights the lamp with a piece of the sun — or so he claims. He never leaves the tower. The lamp is his family.
4. Breath-less Agent — A fisher with soft hands. He speaks in whispers; his words appear on paper without ink. He carries a hollow ring. Inside is a single word: "witness."
5. Shipwright of the Freedmen — A woman with a hammer and a jar of brass nails. She builds boats for escaped slaves. Each boat is named after a dead family member. The names are never painted — only carved.
6. Spice Warehouse Factor — A thin man with a brass seal on a chain. He weighs pepper with a scale that has one arm longer than the other. The long arm is for bribes. The short arm is for justice. He never remembers which is which.
7. Debt Collector of the Anvil (Aeler) — A dwarf authorised to collect on maritime loans. He carries a hammer. He knocks once for a warning, twice for a summons, thrice for a contract. The fourth knock is a coffin.
8. Freedman's Advocate — A woman with a freedman's seal branded on her forearm. She argues cases before the Admiralty. She has never lost a case. Her clients always confess — after she speaks to them privately.

9. Salt Farmer (Galanina) — A woman who harvests salt from coastal pans. Her hands are cracked. She pays her taxes in salt. The Covenant accepts it as “liquid testimony.”
10. Smuggler (Brass Coast) — A man with brass prosthetic fingers. He runs goods past the Admiralty’s tariffs. His fingers pick any lock. He lost the originals to a customs trap. He made new ones from the trap’s springs.
- J The Drowned Priest — A ghost in wet robes who walks the shore at low tide. He asks for a coin to pay the ferryman. Give it, and he will not follow. Refuse, and he will ask for your name instead.
- Q The Black Bishop (Covenant) — A judge who rules on maritime disputes. He wears a ring made from a ship’s nail. The ship was the first slaver he freed. The nail still has rust on it.
- K The Admiral’s Sidhi Clerk — A young woman who writes the Admiral’s dispatches. She copies them in secret. She sends the copies to the Breath-less. Her left hand is missing two fingers — a warning she ignored.
- A The First Freedman (Legend) — A slave who bought his freedom with a story. He now sits at the bottom of the Ninth Well. If you tell him a true story, he will tell you the location of a hidden lighthouse.

(Raid/Seal/Leak) Ashaani slave ships are sighted — the lighthouse keeper asks you to hold the light; a freedman’s seal is discovered to be a forgery — the party is accused; a Covenant audit demands to see your cargo — the cargo is escaped slaves.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Ashaani Raid (Slaver Ships) — Black sails on the horizon. The lighthouse keeper asks you to hold the light. Hold it too long, and they will see you. Hold it too short, and the freedmen will not see the signal.
3. Forged Freedman’s Seal — A document you carry is discovered to be a copy. The magistrate calls for your arrest. The forger is a Breath-less agent. The seal was a test. You failed.
4. Covenant Audit (Hidden Cargo) — A judge demands to inspect your holds. The lower deck is full of escaped slaves. The slaves are from Ashaan. One of them is the judge’s own niece. He does not know.
5. Lighthouse Out of Phase — The keeper signals a warning — but the warning is for the ship behind you. You are now the decoy. The reef is ahead. The slavers are behind. Choose.
6. Tariff Hike (Admiralty) — The port-master doubles duties on all Sidhi goods. The hike is a bribe. The bribe is to the Black Bishop. The Bishop has already accepted. Your protest is treason.
7. Shipbreaker’s Curse — A vessel in the yard breaks its chains. It wants a new victim — a ship’s captain. The captain is you. The ship was a slaver. It remembers your face from a raid you did not commit.
8. Breath-less Betrayal — An agent sells you to the Sisters. The agent is a slave in the Sisters’ household. The betrayal was a test. The agent wants to see if you can escape. If you do, you are worthy of trust.
9. Green Lantern Lit (Drowned Priest) — Someone lights the forbidden lamp at the tavern. The dead come. They are looking for the person who killed them. That person is in your party.

10. Archive Fire (Galanina) — A lamp falls in the vault of sealed jars. Ledgers burn. The smoke forms names. Those names are the ones the Covenant wants erased. One is yours.
- J The Drowned Captain's Ship Appears — A spectral dhow emerges from the fog. It offers passage. The price is a memory. The memory will be forgotten forever. The destination is the Hollow.
- Q Admiralty Press Gang — Marines grab bystanders for the fleet. The marines are drunk and do not recognise rank. One of the bystanders is a Covenant judge. She is about to be impressed. She asks for your help.
- K The Ninth Well Runs Dry — The sacred spring stops flowing. Galanina's courts close for lack of witness water. The well was poisoned by an Ashaani agent. The poison is a memory. Drinking it makes you forget your name.
- A The Sealed Coast Opens — The mythical shore appears. Ancestors walk the tide line, asking for their names. If you give them a name, they will give you a secret. The secret is always a death.

(Charter/Seal/Key) Lighthouse charter (right to anchor in any Sidhi port); freedman's seal (proof of emancipation — glows when a slave ship is near); archive key (opens one door in the Sealed Archive — the key is a finger bone).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Lighthouse Charter — A brass key. The right to anchor in any Sidhi port without inspection. The key fits a lock on a sea-chest, not a harbour gate. The chest contains a map.
3. Freedman's Seal — A brand on a leather thong. Proof of emancipation. The seal glows when a slaver ship is within a day's sail. It also glows when a Black Hand agent is near.
4. Archive Key (Finger Bone) — A bone key. Opens one door in the Sealed Archive of Galanina. The Archive keeps the corresponding finger. Touch the key to the door, and the finger twitches.
5. Shipwright's Boat — A small, fast vessel built for escape. No name, no papers. The boat cannot be tracked by magic. The wood is from a freed slave's house.
6. Covenant Seal Ring (Brass) — Press it into wax to witness any maritime contract. The ring is warm. It cools if the contract is false. The cooling is immediate.
7. Lighthouse Keeper's Lens — A brass tube. Look through it to see the nearest slaver ship. The lens also shows the faces of the slaves on board. They look back.
8. Salt Farmer's Tithe (Bag) — A bag of bitter salt. Legal tender in any Covenant court. The salt tastes of tears. It also tastes of freedom — if you know what freedom tastes like.
9. Breath-less Cipher Ring (Silver) — Twist it to reveal a hidden message. The message is a name. The name is a debt. The debt is transferable. Sign it over to avoid payment.
10. Smuggler's Brass Fingers — A set of prosthetic fingers that pick any lock (once per lock). The fingers were made from a customs trap. The trap remembers. It may trigger again.
- J Black Bishop's Ring (Ship's Nail) — Wear it to be immune to Admiralty arrest in Sidhi ports. The nail is from a freed slaver. The slaves' ghosts protect you. They also watch.
- Q The Drowned Priest's Coin — A copper coin from the ghost's collection. Give it to the ferryman. Once, you may cross from the living shore to the Hollow and back. The crossing takes one night.

K First Freedman’s Story — A true tale told at the Ninth Well. It reveals a hidden lighthouse. The lighthouse marks a passage through the Brass Coast’s tariff zone. No one will tax you there.

A The Sealed Coast’s Water — A flask from the mythic shore. Drink it to remember a name you forgot. The name is always an ancestor’s. The ancestor will then ask you to avenge them.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (charters, seals, keys) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo sea-omens—green flames that burn blue, salt that tastes sweet, a drowned face in a still puddle.

Additional Features

- Lighthouse Courts: Sidhi legal disputes are settled in the lamp room of a lighthouse, with the green flame as witness. The judge is the keeper. The verdict is written in salt on a slate, then washed away by the tide. Only the flame remembers.
- Freedman’s Seal: A brand or pendant that proves emancipation under the Covenant. A freedman cannot be re-enslaved in any Covenant signatory port. The seal is also a key — it opens the door to the Breath-less network.
- The Ninth Well: A sacred spring in Galanina where the first Covenant judge drowned a liar. The water is said to remember every false oath. Sidhi who need to prove their innocence drink from the well; liars vomit brine.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Galanina and the Veiled Sisters (Ashaan): The Sidhi diaspora exists because of Ashaani slavery. A Breath-less agent in the Brass Coast may be the same person who escaped Galanina as a child. Revenge is a slow debt.
- Lighthouse Charters and the Fhara (Way of Silk): Fhara water-clerks respect Sidhi lighthouse charters as proof of credit. A Sidhi merchant can borrow water rights against a charter; default means the lighthouse lamp goes out.
- Freedman’s Seals and the Covenant (Mykkiel): The Covenant recognises only one seal higher than a freedman’s — the Seal of Mykkiel himself. A party carrying a freedman’s seal can demand a hearing before any Covenant judge, anywhere.
- The Brass Coast and Dhaharan Independence: The Sidhi of the Brass Coast are a major faction in Dhaharan politics. They pay tariffs to the Admiralty but run their own courts, their own ships, and their own spies. A Sidhi port-master may be the key to breaking the Admiralty’s hold.

Sidhi Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Tide: Crumble a crust into the harbour at dusk. Ignore the first Ashaani Raid penalty.

- Knot the Anchor Chain: Tie a single sailor's knot in a mooring rope. Cancel Forged Freedman's Seal or take -1 die on your next legal roll (your choice).
- Name to the Lighthouse: Whisper a dead captain's name into the green flame. Gain +1 Effect when smuggling this scene, but mark Obligation to the Drowned Priest.

Patronage & Power

Among the Sidhi, power flows through witness, salt, and the green flame of the lighthouse. The Covenant courts provide law, but the true authority is memory — of the raids, of the escape, of the ancestors who did not return. A Sidhi elder's word is law because she remembers when law was a whip.

For the GM: Power in Sidhi society is measured in charters, seals, and the trust of the lighthouse keeper. Patronage often takes the form of lighthouse rights, freedman's proofs, or archive keys — each tied to a specific port, a specific ancestor, a specific debt. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to physical tokens (keys, seals, lenses) that can be lost, stolen, or voided by the Admiralty.
- Let rival Sidhi port-masters issue conflicting charters, forcing players to choose whose lamp to trust.
- Use the lighthouse courts, hidden coves, and freedman's squares as arenas for social contests, where a green flame is a witness and a bag of salt is a verdict.

In Sidhi society, the sea forgets nothing — and the lighthouse remembers every face.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Lighthouse judges or Admiralty customs.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby port-masters or freedmen's advocates.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for Ashaani slavers or Covenant auditors.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favourable tide.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local lighthouse keeper or Covenant judge becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to green flash or rising tide.
- Foe Appears: An Ashaani slaver or Admiralty press gang arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional Admiralty marines, Covenant bailiffs, or slaver ships arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—lighthouse goes dark/charter voided/seal breaks.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: High Lighthouse Judge, Black Bishop, or Drowned Priest intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—lighthouse collapses/tide swallows the court/slaver ship rams the pier.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Sidhi (Lighthouse Law): Green flame flickers, salt crystals form in the air, the judge’s water-clock runs backwards.
- Sidhi (Diaspora): A freedman’s seal grows warm, a distant lighthouse answers a question you did not ask, a slave ship’s bell rings without being struck.
- Sidhi (Brass Coast): Ropeways hum with whispers, spice dust forms the shape of Galanina’s cliffs, the Admiralty’s flag flies at half-mast for no reason.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Sail): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Green Flash.
- Cut the Charter (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a freedman’s seal is in your possession, +1 die.
- Weather the Raid (Resolve + Spirit): On a hit in Ashaani Raid, you pick who holds the light; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Salt & Flame)

- The Seal-Breaker (Nine Forgeries) — Phases: Freedman Seals Counterfeited → Orchestrated Re-enslavement → Lighthouse Coup. Cracks: recover a true seal, expose a forger, survive a night in the Ninth Well.
- The Drowned Admiral (Ghost of the Brass Coast) — Phases: Lost Ships Called Home → Procession of Empty Lighthouses → Tide-Baptism of a Judge. Cracks: relic lighthouse lens, survivor testimony, the green flame turning white.

Chapter 26

Pereshi

The Roof of the Way. Pereshi isn't just fire temples and high passes—it's a document market, and oh, how the archive-keepers love a good deal on tax records. They don't just throw away a document; they auction the right to the next one, and the fire-temple token isn't just a slip of paper—it's a licence to consult any flame-keeper, stamped with the Pereshi seal and guaranteed by the Archivist-General's own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler breath-ledgers to organise their tax records—not because I believed in their bureaucracy, but because I knew the Archivist-General's deputy was terrified of an audit that would ruin her promotion chances, and she'd pay in breath-ledgers for ledgers that seemed to organise the records. I've used it to learn the secrets of three dead kings. . . which is why the token is still good. Not from use—from strategic preservation. I've been subtly reinforcing the token's casing during "handling checks" so it lasts longer—now I can sell them a renewal at double the price, claiming the old one was "weakened by mortal hands." (The Pereshi agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the dead king I "resurrected" during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 10 of the Pereshi Archive Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Archive accord? Thimble, my anxious little archivist, archive accords are just leverage with a page—especially when I've bought the Archivist-General's deputy's silence with a breath-ledger that doesn't organise tax records. . . it misfiles them. Now, about that fire-temple token. . . the Archivist-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in dead kings looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

26.1 Pereshi — “The Roof of the Way”

Flame-Keeper (Elite): “The fire does not forget. It has witnessed every oath sworn in this valley, every treaty sealed with a dropped coal, every lie told in its light. I do not tend the flame. I listen to what it remembers. And it remembers everything.”

Caravan Scribe (Commoner): “My grandfather copied a tax ledger that had not been opened in three centuries. He found a mistake — a single miscounted bale of silk. That mistake started a war. We do not write for the living. We write for the dead who cannot correct their errors.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The Pereshi highlands are a vast, windswept plateau, cut by deep river valleys and crowned with snow-capped peaks. Ancient fire temples stand beside caravanserais; terraced vineyards climb the hillsides. The people are scholars, shepherds, and traders — proud, suspicious, and bound by a code of hospitality that demands three days of feasting for any guest, and three generations of vengeance for any insult. The Pereshi have no king; their land is a patchwork of petty lords, each ruling from a stone fortress, each claiming descent from the mythic Sun Kings of the First Age. Here, the old empire lies buried under the weight of its own libraries. Every caravanserai has a scriptorium; every fortress has a fire temple; every bridge has a toll that can be paid in verse. The Pereshi are the bureaucrats, magi, and memory-keepers of the Silk Way — because they never throw away a document, and they never forget a debt.

What you notice first: The smell of woodsmoke and old parchment. The way every valley has a different accent. The constant call to prayer from fire-temple towers — but the prayers are in a language no one speaks outside the highlands.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never step on a fallen book. Written words carry the weight of law. To step on a book is to trample a contract, a genealogy, a verdict. The spirits of the words will haunt you.

Regional Mood: The Weight of the Archive

Power here is measured in fire-temple charters, caravan tariffs, and the length of a family's library. The petty kings of the highlands compete not through armies but through scribes — who can produce the oldest charter, the most complete genealogy, the most beautifully illuminated tax receipt. The Covenant has a strong presence in the sacred cities, but the Pereshi follow their own law: the word of a Flame-Keeper outweighs a judge's gavel. Travelers are expected to recite a verse when crossing a bridge — the spirits of the water demand it — and to present a red rose before petitioning a lord. The high passes are measured in breath-counts, not miles, and the air is thin enough to make a foreigner's head spin.

Starting Location: The scriptorium of a mountain caravanserai, where lamps burn at noon and scribes copy tax ledgers by candlelight. A Flame-Keeper looks up from a brazier: “You have come for a tariff receipt, or for a verse to cross the pass, or to consult a book that should have been burned. First, tell me a truth. Then I will decide which fire shows you the way.”

Prominent NPCs of the Pereshi Highlands

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Flame-Keeper Zarifa	Priestess of the eternal fire	Preserve the old rites and the ledgers they protect	She has never been seen without a rose — fresh or dried.

Lord Rostam	Highland petty king	Unite the valleys against low-land tax collectors	He keeps a cage of doves; each dove carries a different treaty.
Archivist Kaelen	Keeper of the Unfinished Books	Protect the scrolls that were never completed	He has not left the archive in thirty years. His shadow is missing.
Tarkhan	Caravan master of the high passes	Secure the passes before the snows close them	He has three camels, each named after a dead wife.
The Poet of the Ninth Verse	An old man who stole a missing line of an ancient epic	Recite the verse for a cup of tea made with snowmelt	His left eye is a piece of amber with a fly trapped inside.

Names of the Pereshi Highlands

Inspired by highland and steppe traditions: names with soft endings, honorific prefixes (Mir, Khan, Beg), and surnames denoting a clan or a valley.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Rostam	Zarifa	Kuhistani	the Fire-Touched
Kaelen	Laleh	Qasemi	the Unfinished
Tarkhan	Shirin	Salari	Ninth Verse
Dariush	Mahsa	Bahrami	the Bridge-Mouthed
Behrouz	Golnar	Khorasani	the Red Rose

(Temple/Library/Bridge) Fire temple with a copper dome and a flame that never goes out; library of unfinished books where scribes copy texts that were burned; stone bridge over a chasm, each arch carved with a line of poetry.

Spades — Places

2. Fire Temple of the Unquenched — A stone tower with a copper dome. The fire inside is said to be the first flame. It has never gone out — but it flickers when a king dies. The flame’s colour changes with the season.
3. Library of Unfinished Books — A scriptorium where scribes copy texts that were burned by conquerors. The books are blank. The scribes are ghosts. They copy from memory. Their memory is perfect.

4. Bridge of the Ninth Verse — A stone arch over a chasm. Each stone is carved with a line of poetry. The ninth verse is missing — it was stolen by a king. The bridge groans when a traveller recites a false verse.
5. Caravanserai of the Three Valleys — A walled courtyard with three gates, each from a different valley. The gate you enter determines the price you pay. The price is always a story.
6. Vineyard of the Blind Vintner — Terraced hillside where the vintner lost his sight to a curse. He tastes the grapes to know the weather. He is never wrong. The wine tastes of prophecy.
7. Hospice of the Lost Steps — A monastery where pilgrims who lost their way are healed. The healers ask no payment — only a story of how you got lost. The stories are added to the library.
8. Well of the Ancestors — A deep pool in a grove of cypress trees. The water is black. Drink it, and you remember a past life — but you forget one year of this one. The year is always a good one.
9. Forge of the Silent Smith — A cave where a hermit makes swords. The swords have no edge. They are legal documents, folded steel. Present one in court, and the judge must read it.
10. Shepherds' Moot — A circle of standing stones on a hilltop. Shepherds gather to settle disputes. The stones have ears. Oaths spoken here echo for three days. The shepherds listen to the echoes.
- J Fire Temple of the Ninth Coal — A sanctuary where the flame is kept in a brass brazier with nine coals. The ninth coal is never lit. Lighting it would summon the Hollow. The Flame-Keeper sleeps with a bucket of sand.
- Q Pass of the Unforgiven — A narrow defile where a treaty was broken a thousand years ago. The wind carries the names of the oath-breakers. It never stops. The names are getting quieter.
- K Sun King's Throne — A carved stone seat on a peak. Whoever sits there at dawn can see three valleys. The curse is that they cannot leave. The throne is warm. It grows warmer the longer you sit.
- A The Archive of the First Empire — A buried city, sealed under a landslide. The scrolls inside are still legible. The seal was placed by the last emperor. He wrote on the door: "Let no one read these lies."

(Keeper/Lord/Archivist) Flame-Keeper with a brass dipper and a rose; Lord Rostam with a dove cage; Archivist Kaelen with ink-stained fingers and no shadow.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Flame-Keeper — Dressed in white, carries a brass dipper. He pours oil into the fire; each drop is a prayer. He prays for the dead. The dead answer in smoke. The smoke writes on the wall.
3. Highland Lord (Rostam) — Robed in wool, a gold earring, a cage of doves on his shoulder. Each dove carries a different treaty. He has nine doves. The ninth carries a blank page.
4. Archivist — Ink-stained fingers, half-moon spectacles, a book of blank pages. He writes only in his memory. His memory has a thousand volumes. He is forgetting the first.
5. Caravan Master (Tarkhan) — Worn leather, soft voice, a staff of juniper wood. He never carries a weapon. His camels are his guards. The camels have names.

6. Blind Vintner — Hands stained purple, eyes white with cataracts. He tastes the grapes. “This vine remembers the drought of ’92,” he says. “This one remembers a wedding.”
7. Temple Beggar — Blind, always sitting by the fire. He can see the future in the flames. He charges a single coal. The coal must be from the ninth brazier. He never asks twice.
8. Oath-Breaker’s Ghost — Visible only at twilight. He repeats the words of the broken treaty. He has been repeating them for a century. The words are getting softer. Soon he will be silent.
9. Silent Smith — A giant of a man, deaf and mute. He communicates by striking his anvil in code. The code is a forgotten language. The language is the law. He never makes a mistake.
10. Healer of the Lost Steps — A woman with a staff of olive wood. She never asks your name. She knows it anyway. She writes it in a ledger. The ledger is in a locked room.
- J Poet of the Ninth Verse — An old man in a patched coat. He recites the missing verse for a cup of tea. The tea must be made with snowmelt. The snow must be from the peak of the Unforgiven Pass.
- Q Shepherd King — Young, wearing a cloak of uncut wool. He counts his sheep by naming them. He has never lost a name. The sheep answer when he calls. They remember their ancestors’ names too.
- K The Sun King’s Shadow — A figure that sits on the throne at night. It is not the king. It is the memory of the king. It gives bad advice. The advice is always true — for a dead person.
- A The First Emperor’s Ghost — A skeleton in a crown, sitting in the buried archive. He asks: “Did anyone read my lies?” If you say yes, he will weep. The weeping floods the archive.

(Flame/Scroll/Bridge) Temple flame gutters — a sign of a coming death; a scroll is found to be a forgery — the forger is a rival lord; the Bridge of the Ninth Verse demands a recitation — a character must compose a new verse on the spot.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Flame Gutters — The temple fire flickers. A sign of a coming death. The death is yours — unless you pay a coal to the beggar. The beggar’s price is a story. The story must be about a death you caused.
3. Forged Scroll — A caravan tariff receipt is discovered to be a copy. The lord demands compensation. The forger is the lord’s own scribe. The scribe is trying to frame a rival. You are the pawn.
4. Bridge Recitation Failed — A traveller cannot recite a verse. The water-spirits block the crossing. The spirits demand a verse from a dead poet. The poet is the traveller’s ancestor.
5. Landslide (Pass Blocked) — A rockslide covers the high pass. The alternative route is three days longer. The landslide was deliberate — a rival caravan master wants to delay you. His camels are ahead.
6. Blood Feud (Stolen Sheep) — Two clans blame you for a shepherd’s death. The shepherd died of old age. The clans do not care. They need an excuse for war. You are the excuse.
7. Poet’s Demand — The old man asks for a new verse to replace the one he lost. The verse must be true. If it is not true, he will know. He will not speak again. The missing verse will stay missing.

8. Archive Fire — A lamp falls in the Library of Unfinished Books. The ghosts scream. The smoke forms names. The names are those who burned the original texts. One is yours.
9. Oath-Breaker's Curse — The ghost appears at your camp. He repeats the broken treaty. The words are louder. He wants you to witness his death. If you refuse, you will break an oath before dawn.
10. Sun King's Curse — Someone sits on the throne. They cannot leave. The party must find a new king — or break the throne. The throne is a single piece of stone. Breaking it requires a verse strong enough to crack granite.
- J Ninth Coal Lit — Someone lights the forbidden coal in the fire temple. The flame turns blue. The blue flame shows the future — but the future is always a funeral. The funeral is yours.
- Q Unforgiven Pass's Toll — The wind demands a name. Give a name, and the wind will carry it to the oath-breakers. The oath-breakers will come. They will ask why you spoke their name. The answer must be a verse.
- K Silent Smith's Price — He offers a sword (a legal document folded into steel). The price is a memory. He takes it with his tongs. The memory is gone forever. The sword is sharp — for the first cut.
- A Buried Archive Opens — A earthquake cracks the seal of the First Empire's library. The scrolls are exposed to air. They begin to crumble. The ghosts of the scribes ask for help. The help must be given before the last scroll turns to dust.

(Rose/Tariff/Seal) A dried rose (present to a lord for an audience); caravan tariff receipt (proof of payment, one use to bypass customs); a fire-temple token (right to consult a flame-keeper for one question).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Fire-Temple Token — A brass disc. Present it to consult any flame-keeper for one question. The token is warm. It glows when the answer would get you killed.
3. Caravan Tariff Receipt (Genuine) — A wax-sealed scroll. Exempts you from tolls in one lord's territory. The seal is a pressed rose. The rose is still fresh. It was picked this morning.
4. Royal Seal (On Loan) — A signet ring borrowed from a minor king. Commands a favour from his court. The seal is a sleeping lion. The lion wakes when you use it. It will remember you.
5. Messenger Tablet (Clay) — A baked clay tablet. Write a message, and it will appear on its twin tablet in another valley. The twin was buried with a dead king. His ghost reads your messages. He may reply.
6. Flame-Keeper's Coal — A single coal from the eternal fire. Light it to see one minute into the future. The coal does not burn your hand. It burns your memory of the past minute instead.
7. Vintner's Cask (Wine) — A bottle of wine from the blind vintner. Drink it to forget a single failure. The failure is erased from your memory. The wine tastes of tears. You will cry when you drink it.
8. Poet's Ninth Verse (Copy) — A scrap of parchment with the missing verse. Recite it to calm any spirit. The verse has no rhyme. The spirits prefer it that way. It works once per spirit.

9. Silent Smith’s Sword (Unedged) — A legal document folded into steel. Present it in court to win any case. The sword has no edge. It cuts oaths, not flesh. The judge must read it aloud.
10. Sun King’s Crown (Bronze) — A circlet taken from the throne. Wear it to command one valley for a day. The crown is cold. It warms only when you speak truth. The valley will obey — once.
- J Temple Beggar’s Vision — A prophecy whispered in your ear. Once per session, the GM must answer one yes/no question about the future. The answer is always true — but always incomplete. The beggar laughs when you realise.
- Q Oath-Breaker’s Name — A single name on a scrap of parchment. Speak it to void one contract. The contract is voided for both parties. The name is the price. You will owe the oath-breaker a favour.
- K Archivist’s Blank Book — A book with blank pages. Write a truth in it, and it becomes law for one day. The truth must be witnessed. The book is the witness. It will remember.
- A First Emperor’s Scroll (Buried) — A scroll from the sealed archive. It contains a lie that became true through repetition. Once, you may speak the lie aloud. For one hour, it becomes true. Then the scroll crumbles.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (tokens, receipts, seals) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo fire-omens—flames that burn green, scrolls that ignite without heat, a bridge that recites a verse in a dead language.

Additional Features

- Fire Temples and the Ninth Coal: Every fire temple keeps a brazier with nine coals. The ninth coal is never lit — it is a promise to the Hollow. Lighting it summons the Debt-Walker. Flame-Keepers inherit the secret of which coal is the ninth; it changes with each keeper.
- Verse Law: In Pereshi courts, a well-recited verse carries more weight than a witness. The old epics contain every legal precedent; a litigant who can quote the correct verse wins automatically. The problem is that the epics are incomplete — and the missing verses are hidden in the tombs of forgotten kings.
- Caravan Tariffs as Currency: A paid tariff receipt can be traded, sold, or used as proof of credit. The Pereshi have no central bank; the receipt is the coin. Forged receipts are a capital crime — the forger is forced to copy the entire epic by hand, blindfolded.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Fire Temples and the Covenant (Mykkriel): Covenant judges recognise the authority of flame-keepers. A fire-temple token can be used as a witness in a Covenant court — the flame itself is considered an incorruptible witness.
- The Ninth Verse and the Ukwe (Sekogo): The missing verse of the Pereshi epic is said to be carved on the Ukwe's oldest root. The Lethai-ar know the verse but will not recite it — doing so would call the Hollow.

- Silent Smith's Swords and the Aeler (Ngomebe): The silent smiths are said to be descendants of Aeler vent-priors who stayed in the highlands. Their folding technique is a lost art; the Ngomebe masons would pay a fortune for a working forge.
- The Buried Archive and the Kalrantha Amulet (Dhahara): The First Emperor's scrolls contain a description of the amulet's creation. The Veiled Sisters have been searching for the archive for a century. The party may find it first — or find it already looted.

Pereshi Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Fire: Crumble a crust into the temple brazier. Ignore the first Flame Gutters penalty.
- Knot the Scroll: Tie a single ribbon around a book you are returning. Cancel Forged Scroll or take -1 die on your next legal roll (your choice).
- Name to the Bridge: Whisper a dead poet's name into the water below. Gain +1 Effect when reciting a verse this scene, but mark Obligation to the Bridge's spirits.

Patronage & Power

Among the Pereshi, power flows through fire, ink, and the weight of ancient precedent. A lord's authority rests on the age of his library; a flame-keeper's influence on the purity of her fire. The petty kings are constantly forging genealogies, and the archivists are constantly exposing them. Power is not inherited — it is cited.

For the GM: Power in Pereshi society is measured in scrolls, coals, and the memory of the flame. Patronage often takes the form of fire-temple tokens, tariff receipts, or royal seals — each tied to a specific lord, a specific temple, a specific debt. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to physical tokens (coals, seals, scrolls) that can be challenged, stolen, or declared forgeries.
- Let rival lords issue conflicting tariff receipts, forcing players to choose whose toll to pay.
- Use the fire temples, libraries, and bridges as arenas for social contests, where a well-recited verse is a weapon and a forgotten name is a death sentence.

In Pereshi society, the fire forgets nothing — and the books remember every mistake.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Flame-Keepers or archive guards.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby scribes or temple beggars.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for lords' spies or rival archivists.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favourable pass conditions.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local Flame-Keeper or lord’s guard becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to thin air or falling scrolls.
- Foe Appears: A rival lord’s envoy or a ghost arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional fire-temple guards, clan warriors, or angry scribes arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—archive burns/bridge collapses/ninth coal lit.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: High Flame-Keeper, Shepherd King, or First Emperor’s ghost intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—temple fire goes out/library collapses/throne cracks.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Pereshi (Flame Law): Coals rearrange themselves, smoke forms words in Old Pereshi, the fire casts no shadow.
- Pereshi (Verse Law): Stones echo a verse you never spoke, a line of poetry appears on your palm, a bridge recites your greatest secret.
- Pereshi (Archive): Scrolls rustle in still air, ink fades and reappears, a forgotten name is whispered from a shelf.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Stealth): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Blind Pass.
- Cut the Verse (Presence + Lore): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a fire-temple token is in your possession, +1 die.

- Weather the Curse (Resolve + Spirit): On a hit in Oath-Breaker's Curse, you pick who hears the ghost; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Flame & Verse)

- The Forger of Kings (Nine False Seals) — Phases: Tariff Receipts Counterfeited → Orchestrated Succession Crisis → Archive Coup. Cracks: recover a true seal, expose a forged genealogy, survive a recitation of the Ninth Verse.
- The Drowned Poet (Bridge's Toll) — Phases: Missing Verses Demanded → Procession of Broken Bridges → Flame-Baptism of a Lord. Cracks: relic scroll fragment, survivor testimony, the bridge reciting the poet's true name.

Chapter 27

Kuvani

The Remount Steppe. Horses, grass, and wind-songs—the Kuvani don’t just pay in stories—they auction the right to the next remount, and the remount chain mark isn’t just a document—it’s a licence to take a fresh horse from any station, stamped with the Kuvani seal and guaranteed by the Steppe-Master-General’s own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler horse-shoes that never wear out—not because I believed in farriery, but because I knew the Steppe-Master-General’s deputy was terrified of a lameness outbreak that would ruin her promotion chances, and she’d pay in horse-shoes for shoes that seemed eternal. I’ve used it to cross the steppe nine times. . . which is why the mark is still valid. Not from use—from strategic preservation. I’ve been subtly reinforcing the shoe’s tread during “fitting checks” so it lasts longer—now I can sell them a renewal at double the price, claiming the old one was “weakened by mortal hooves.” (The Kuvani agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the lameness I “summoned” during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 6 of the Kuvani Remount Accord prohibits—]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 2 of the Steppe-Master-General’s Ledger—]

[Edgewalker: Steppe-Master-General’s ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I’ve got a shoe war to start in the Nine Kingdoms, and if you mention “Clause 2” one more time, I’ll sell your ledger to the next remount chain mark as kindling. They prefer it shod.]

27.1 Kuvani — “The Remount Steppe”

Wind-Singer (Elite): “The grass does not belong to us. We belong to the grass. It tells us where to ride, when to move, how long to stay. A clan that forgets the grass’s song is a clan that will be buried by it. I do not sing to the wind. I listen. The wind sings through me.”

Remount Master (Commoner): “A horse’s name is its lineage. Its lineage is its debt. You do not ride a Kuvani horse. You borrow it. And when you return it, you will tell me a story that the horse has not already heard. If you lie, the horse will throw you next time.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The Kuvani range across the eastern steppe, a vast grassland east of the Valewood. They are a relatively new people in the region, their clan confederations only recently rising to prominence. They share the steppe with the Ykrul — but where the Ykrul are poets of geometry and oath-strings, the Kuvani are pragmatists of the remount and the caravan. Their horsemanship and remount stations make them indispensable to any caravan that crosses the open plain. The Kuvani have no cities; their courts are circles of saddles, and their laws are sung. A remount station is not a stable — it is a contract. You leave a horse, you take a fresh one, and you owe a story, a song, or a truth. The grass is not land; it is a ledger written in wind. The Kuvani do not fight for borders; they fight for grazing rights, and the only permanent map is the sky-road — the path of the stars that tells the clans where the grass will be green next season.

What you notice first: The smell of horse sweat and dry grass. The way the horizon seems to move when you look away. The constant sound of bells on harnesses — each bell has a different tone, and the wind-singers can read the melody like a message.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never ride a Kuvani horse without asking its name. The horse will answer — by throwing you. If it throws you, you have insulted its lineage. The remount master will demand a story as compensation. If the story is not good enough, you walk.

Regional Mood: The Weight of the Herd

Power here is measured in remount chains, grazing compacts, and the truth of a wind-song. A clan's status depends on the number of horses it can offer to caravans; a remount master's reputation on the speed and health of his string. The Kuvani have no kings — only Wind-Singers, who read the grass and the stars, and Remount Masters, who control the stations. The Ykrul are rivals for grazing land, but also trading partners — the Kuvani buy Ykrul oath-strings to secure their compacts. Every caravan that crosses the steppe must pay the remount toll: not in coin, but in stories. The Kuvani believe that a story shared is a debt paid, and that a traveller who has no story has no soul.

Starting Location: A felt tent circle at a remount station, where a corral of horses stands behind a rope of braided hair. A Remount Master sits on a saddle, a bell in his hand: “You need fresh horses. I have twelve. Each horse has a name. Each name has a price. The price is not silver — it is a story I have not heard. Tell me one. If it makes me laugh, you ride for free. If it makes me weep, you owe me a foal.”

Prominent NPCs of the Kuvani

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Alp Arslan	Remount master of the central route	Expand grazing rights into Ykrul territory	He has never been seen sleeping; his eyes are always on the horizon.

Borte	Wind-Singer of the White Mane Clan	Keep the songs of the clans from being forgotten	She has a horse with a white blaze; the blaze is a map of the steppe.
Temur	Caravan guide	Find the fastest routes through the shifting grass	He names his dogs after dead enemies. The dogs remember.
Seljuk	Ykrul envoy (negotiator)	Negotiate shared pastures without war	He carries a hostage string with nine knots; each knot is a season of peace.
The Grass Reader	A hermit who lives in a felt hut	Read the future in the way the grass bends	He never speaks above a whisper. The grass speaks for him.

Names of the Kuvani

Inspired by the eastern steppe: short, hard consonants, vowel clusters, patronymic suffixes (-oglu, -ova). Surnames denote a clan, a horse-line, or a wind-name.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Alp	Borte	Arslanoglu	the Iron Rein
Temur	Selin	Kuvani-bek	the White Mane
Seljuk	Chagatai	Borjigin	Ninth Wind
Batu	Nergui	Oirat	the Grass-Tongue
Toghrul	Otgon	Kipchak	the Remount-Keeper

(Station/Circle/Kurgan) Remount station with a felt tent and a corral; Wind-Singer’s circle of saddles; a kurgan (burial mound) with a stone horse that is missing a leg.

Spades — Places

2. Remount Station — A felt tent with a corral; horses for hire. The horses have no names — only brands. The brands are the names of lost children. The horses remember them.

3. Wind-Singer's Circle — A ring of saddles; the singer sits in the centre. The songs are not sung — they are hummed. The hum is the wind. The wind carries the song to the next valley. The next valley answers.
4. Kurgan of the Broken Oath — A burial mound with a stone horse missing a leg. The leg is a treaty. The treaty was broken. The horse is waiting for it to be returned.
5. Grass Maze — A section of the steppe where the grass grows taller than a rider on horseback. The paths shift with the wind. Only a Wind-Singer can find the way out.
6. Salt Pan of the Ghost Herd — A dry lake; the salt is crusted with hoofprints. The prints are from a herd that died a century ago. They appear every spring. The herd is still running.
7. Felt Village (Mobile) — A temporary camp of round tents. The tents face the wind. The wind is the clan's direction. If the wind changes, the village moves.
8. Horse Cemetery — A field of skulls, each on a wooden stake. The stakes are carved with names. The names are the riders' names. The riders are buried elsewhere. The horses wait.
9. Bridge of the Ninth Hardship — A log over a ravine. The log is replaced each year. The old log is burned. The ash is the clan's memory. The ash is scattered on the spring grass.
10. Stone of the Hostage String — A standing stone with notches. Each notch is a hostage taken. The hostages are carved into the stone. The stone weeps when a hostage dies.
- J The Iron Corral — A pen made of salvaged sword blades. The blades are from a war that never ended. The horses are afraid of them. The blades whisper the names of the dead.
- Q Sky-Road Marker — A cairn painted blue. The blue is from a stone that fell from the sky. The stone is still warm. It marks the path of the summer stars.
- K Khagan's Felt Throne — A tent within a tent; the seat is a saddle. The saddle has no stirrups. The Khagan does not need them. He rides the wind. The wind has no stirrups.
- A The Steppe's Edge — Where the grass ends and the desert begins. The line is a scar. The scar is a treaty. The treaty was signed in blood. The blood was Kuvani.

(Master/Singer/Guide) Remount master with calloused hands and a horsehair whip; Wind-Singer with grey hair and a bone flute; caravan guide with a string of dog teeth.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Remount Master — Colloused hands, squinting eyes, a whip of braided horsehair. He knows the price of a horse in salt, in silk, or in stories. The price changes with the wind.
3. Wind-Singer — Grey-haired, blind, but never lost. She hums the direction to the nearest water. The hum changes with the wind. If she stops humming, the wind stops too.
4. Caravan Guide (Temur) — Young, fast, a scar across his lip. He names his dogs after dead enemies. The dogs remember. They growl when they smell the enemy's kin.
5. Ykrul Envoy — Braided hair, a hostage string on his wrist. The string has nine knots. Each knot is a season of peace. He is running out of knots.
6. Grass Reader — A hermit in a felt hut, never seen without a handful of grass. He reads the future by how the grass bends. The future is always wind.
7. Horse Thief — Young, missing two fingers. The fingers were a bet. He lost the bet — but not the horses. He can steal a horse from a corral without waking the dogs. The dogs are his.
8. Felt Village Elder — A woman with a pipe made of bone. She settles disputes by listening to the wind. "The wind says you are lying," she says. The wind has never been wrong.

9. Khagan’s Shadow — A silent figure in black felt. He never speaks; he writes commands in the dust. The dust blows away. The commands are remembered anyway.
10. Horse-Whisperer (Child) — A child who can calm any stallion. The child speaks in neighs. The horses answer in riddles. The child is learning to understand.
- J Ghost Herd’s Rider — A translucent figure on a skeletal horse, seen at the salt pan at dawn. He asks: “Where is my herd?” If you answer, you become part of it.
- Q The Steppe’s Voice (Oracle) — A rock with a crack. The wind speaks through it. The wind answers questions. The answers are always poems. The poems are always warnings.
- K The Last Khagan (Legend) — A king who united the clans, then rode into a storm and never returned. He is said to appear during the worst blizzards, offering shelter. The shelter is a trap.
- A The First Remount (Myth) — A horse that never tired. Its bones are scattered across the steppe. Find all nine bones, and you can summon it. The summoning costs a year of your life.

(Sickness/Fire/Stampede) A horse sickness spreads through the remounts — all mounts lose 1 Speed; grass fire — the smoke spells a name; a wild horse stampede — the horses are fleeing something worse.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Horse Sickness (Curse) — A cough spreads through the remounts. The cough is a curse from a Ykrul bone-singer. The cure is a story that the bone-singer has not heard. The story must be true.
3. Grass Fire — The steppe burns; the smoke is black. The smoke spells a name. The name is the one who lit the fire. The wind will carry the name to the clans. They will hunt.
4. Stampede (Wild Herd) — A herd of wild horses crashes through camp. The horses are not wild. They are fleeing something worse. Something that hunts horses. The party is in its path.
5. Hostage String Cut — A Ykrul envoy’s string is broken. The clan demands a new hostage. The party must choose a member to offer. The hostage will be held for nine seasons.
6. Rasputitsa (Mud) — The spring thaw turns the steppe to mud. Wagons sink. Progress slows. The mud is warm. Something is buried underneath. It is waking up.
7. Wind-Singer’s Silence — The Wind-Singer stops humming. The wind stops too. The silence is a warning. The warning is: “A storm is coming. Not of rain — of ghosts.”
8. Water Poisoned (Salt Pan) — A well is found with dead animals nearby. The poison is salt from the cursed pan. The salt pan wants a sacrifice. The sacrifice is a horse. The horse must be willing.
9. Felt Village Gone — A camp is empty; the tents are still standing. The felt is warm. The people vanished at noon. The horses are still in the corral. The horses are trembling.
10. Khagan’s Demand — The Khagan (or his shadow) asks for a tribute. The tribute is a story. The story must be about a broken promise. If it is not good enough, the Khagan takes a horse.
- J Iron Corral Bleeding — The sword-blade fence begins to weep rust. The rust is blood. The blood is from the war that never ended. The war is about to resume.
- Q Sky-Road Marker Falls — The blue cairn collapses. The stone inside is a meteor. It whispers. The whisper is a prophecy. The prophecy is about the end of the steppe.

- K Ghost Herd Charges — Spectral horses trample the camp. They are looking for their riders. The riders are dead. The ghosts do not know. One rider's ghost is in your party.
- A Steppe's Edge Recedes — The grass grows into the desert. The desert is retreating. Something is driving the desert back. Something that wants the steppe.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Remount Chain Mark — A horse's tooth on a leather thong. Exchange it for a fresh mount at any Kuvani station. The tooth is from a horse that died in battle. Its spirit runs with the new mount.
 3. Grazing Compact (Sheepskin) — A written agreement. Allows your caravan to pasture on clan land for one season. The compact is sealed with horsehair. The hair is from the Khagan's own mare.
 4. Sky-Road Song (Bone Flute) — A melody recorded on a flute. Play it to navigate any storm. The flute was carved from a rib. The rib was the Wind-Singer's. She gave it willingly.
 5. Hostage String (Borrowed) — A braided cord with knots. Present it to demand a truce from a Ykrul clan. The string is hair. The hair is from a Khagan's daughter. The Ykrul will recognise it.
 6. Felt Tent Pass — A felt circle with a hole. Safe lodging in any Kuvani camp. The hole is for smoke. The smoke is your story. The clan will listen.
 7. Kurgan Key (Stone Tablet) — A flat stone. Opens the Horse Cemetery gate. The gate is a skull. The key fits the eye socket. The skull will scream.
 8. Iron Corral Nail — One sword blade from the fence. Use it to seal an oath. The blade is rusty. The rust is from broken promises. It will rust your oath too.
 9. Sky-Road Stone (Chip) — A piece of the blue cairn. Carry it to avoid getting lost on the steppe. The stone is warm. It points to the north. The north is where the grass is greenest.
 10. Khagan's Whistle (Horse Phalange) — A brass whistle. Blow it to summon a remount from any station. The whistle is a horse's toe bone. The horse was the Khagan's favourite.
- J Ghost Herd's Bridle (Leather) — A strap of old leather. Use it to command one spirit horse. The bridle is from a horse that drowned in the salt pan. The spirit is still wet.
- Q Wind-Singer's Staff (Tent Pole) — A wooden rod. Plant it to stop the wind for one hour. The staff was a tent pole. The tent was the singer's home. The home is gone.
- K Khagan's Saddle (Felt Pad) — Ride in it to gain +1 Position on all mounted rolls. The saddle has no stirrups. You must learn to ride without them. The Khagan did.
- A Steppe's Edge Stone — A piece of the boundary where grass meets desert. Touch it to make the grass grow. The stone is a tooth. The tooth is from the Steppe itself. The Steppe is hungry.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (marks, compacts, flutes) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo wind-omens—horses that stop mid-gallop, grass that bends against the wind, a bell that rings without being struck.

Additional Features

- The Story Toll: Kuvani remount stations do not accept coin. To take a fresh horse, you must tell a story that the remount master has not heard. The story is judged by the horse — if the horse stamps its foot, the story is false. If it whinnies, the story is true. If it remains still, the story is boring — you walk.
- Wind-Songs and Sky-Roads: The Kuvani navigate by the stars and the wind. A Wind-Singer can hum a melody that encodes the route to water, to grass, or to safety. The song changes with the season. Only the singer knows the current melody.
- Grazing Compacts as Currency: A grazing compact (a sheepskin document sealed with horsehair) can be traded, sold, or used as proof of passage. A compact from a powerful clan is worth more than a chest of silver. Forging a compact is punishable by exile — the forger is left on the steppe without a horse.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Remount Chains and the Caravan Trade (Way of Silk): Every major caravan on the eastern route uses Kuvani remount stations. A disruption in the remount chain — a sickness, a feud, a stolen horse — can halt trade for an entire season.
- Grazing Compacts and the Ykrul: The Ykrul are the Kuvani’s rivals and sometimes allies. A grazing compact with a Kuvani clan may require a Ykrul hostage string as surety. Breaking the compact means the hostage is executed.
- Wind-Singers and the Sky (Kuva): The Kuvani worship Kuva as the watcher of oaths. Their wind-songs are prayers to the sky. A Wind-Singer who loses her voice is considered cursed by Kuva; she must walk the steppe alone until she hears the sky again.
- The Ghost Herd and the Hollow (Eastern Realms): The ghost herd at the salt pan is said to be the Hollow’s own horses — ridden by the Debt-Walkers. Aelaerem leave offerings of salt to keep the herd from riding through their villages.

Kuvani Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Horses: Crumble a crust into the corral. Ignore the first Horse Sickness penalty.
- Knot the Hostage String: Tie a new knot in a borrowed string. Cancel Hostage String Cut or take –1 die on your next negotiation with Ykrul (your choice).
- Name to the Wind: Whisper a dead horse’s name into the grass. Gain +1 Effect when riding this scene, but mark Obligation to the Wind-Singer.

Patronage & Power

Among the Kuvani, power flows through remount chains, wind-songs, and the truth of a story. A clan's authority rests on the speed of its horses and the skill of its singers. The Khagan is a figurehead; the real power lies with the Remount Masters who control the stations, and the Wind-Singers who read the grass.

For the GM: Power in Kuvani society is measured in horse teeth, sheepskin compacts, and the memory of a good story. Patronage often takes the form of remount marks, grazing compacts, or bone flutes — each tied to a specific station, clan, or singer. To emphasize the itinerant mechanics:

- Require players to tell a story to access remounts, shelter, or grazing rights. The GM can judge the story's quality (or have the player roll Presence + Sway vs. DV based on the remount master's mood). A failed story means the player must offer a truth — a secret, a confession, or a memory.
- Use Wind-Singers as quest-givers: they hear a song on the wind that only the party can resolve. The song is always a warning or a debt call.
- Let grazing compacts be a form of currency that can be stolen, forged, or voided. A party without a compact is trespassing — the clans can demand a story as payment, or seize a horse as collateral.
- Emphasize that the steppe is alive: the grass remembers, the wind listens, and a broken promise is written in the sky-road. The Hollow's attention ticks when the party lies to a Kuvani.

In Kuvani society, the grass forgets nothing — and the wind carries every story.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Remount Masters or Wind-Singers.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby herdsmen or felt village guards.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for rival clans or ghost herd scouts.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favourable grazing access.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local Remount Master or Wind-Singer becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to grass fire or sudden fog.
- Foe Appears: A rival clan rider or Ykrul envoy arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional Kuvani riders, Ykrul warriors, or ghost herd arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—water poisoned/hostage string cut/khagan’s demand issued.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Khagan, Wind-Singer of the White Mane, or Ghost Herd’s Rider intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—steppe catches fire/salt pan floods/sky-road marker falls.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Kuvani (Remount Law): Horse bells ring out of sequence, saddle leather creaks a warning, a horse refuses to move.
- Kuvani (Wind-Song): Grass whispers a name, the wind stops mid-sentence, a bone flute plays itself.
- Kuvani (Ghost Herd): Hoofprints appear where there are no horses, salt tastes of blood, a skeletal horse watches from the horizon.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Ride): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Wind at Back.
- Cut the Herd (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a remount chain mark is in your possession, +1 die.
- Weather the Curse (Resolve + Spirit): On a hit in Horse Sickness, you pick which mount survives; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Hoof & Wind)

- The Bone-Singer (Nine Plagues) — Phases: Horse Sickness Spread → Orchestrated Famine → Herd Coup. Cracks: find a true story the bone-singer has not heard, expose a false cure, survive a stampede.
- The Storm Khagan (Rider of the White Blizzard) — Phases: Grass Fires Called Mercy → Procession of Empty Saddles → Wind-Baptism of a Remount Master. Cracks: relic wind-song, survivor testimony, the sky-road turning against them.

Chapter 28

Tulkani

The Itinerant Courts. Wagon circles, vow-cords, and the ninth night—the Tulkani don’t just stay in one place—they auction the right to the next circle, and the dream-cord isn’t just a gift—it’s a licence to ask Ikasha a question, stamped with the Tulkani seal and guaranteed by the Dream-Weaver-General’s own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler wheel-bearings that never squeak—not because I believed in rotation, but because I knew the Dream-Weaver-General’s apprentice was terrified of a wobble that would ruin her promotion chances, and she’d pay in wheel-bearings for bearings that seemed eternal. I’ve used it to ask one question in a dream. . . which is why the answer saved my life. Not from luck—from strategic questioning. I’ve been subtly loosening the bearing’s cage during “lubrication checks” so it fails faster—now I can sell them a renewal at triple the price, claiming the old one was “void due to supernatural interference.” (The Tulkani agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the dream I “manipulated” during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 4 of the Tulkani Dream Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Dream accord? Thimble, my dear, little stargazer, dream accords are just leverage with a pillow—especially when I’ve bought the Dream-Weaver-General’s apprentice’s silence with a wheel-bearing that doesn’t never squeak. . . it wobbles at the worst moment. Now, about that dream-cord. . . the Dream-Weaver-General’s treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in answered questions looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

28.1 Tulkani — “The Itinerant Courts”

Caravan Judge (Elite): “The road does not forgive a debt. It only reschedules it. A promise spoken under the open sky is witnessed by the wind, the grass, and the wheels of every cart that passes. I do not write judgments. I tie knots. The knots remember. When you are ready to pay, untie one. If you are not ready, tie another.”

Wagon-Keeper (Commoner): “My wagon is my hearth, my court, my grave. The Hollow cannot cross the circle of wheels unless invited. The tax collector cannot enter without a story. The lord cannot demand rent unless we camp on his land for nine nights. On the eighth night, we leave. That is the law.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The Tulkani have no fixed homeland; they are wanderers who follow the seasons and the trade routes. Their wagons are their hearths, their circles are their courts, and their knots are their ledgers. They are welcome everywhere and trusted nowhere — a position they wear with wry humour. A Tulkani caravan can appear at a lord's border, camp for seven nights, and leave before the eighth — because on the eighth night, the lord can demand rent. On the ninth night, the Hollow comes. The Tulkani never stay nine nights in one place. Their courts are circles of wagons; their judges are elders who carry braided cords. Each knot is a vow, a debt, or a story. They spread the cult of Ikasha — She Who Sleeps — not through temples, but through dream-cords tied in the dark. Their neutrality is sacred: a Tulkani camp is sanctuary for any traveller, regardless of allegiance, as long as they respect the circle and offer a story when asked.

What you notice first: The smell of woodsmoke and cooking oil. The painted wheels of wagons arranged in a circle, each wheel a different colour. The way everyone touches a knotted cord before speaking of a debt.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never sleep outside the circle at night. The wagon ring is sanctuary. Outside it, the Hollow walks. A Tulkani will not rescue you — they will only mourn you at dawn.

Regional Mood: The Weight of the Knot

Power here is measured in vow-cords, story-debts, and the number of nights camped on a lord's land. The Tulkani have no king, no judges, no written law — only the Caravan Circle, where disputes are settled by storytelling. A liar is exposed not by evidence but by the knots on his cord: if a knot is tied in false witness, it will tighten until blood is drawn. Ikasha's cult is not a religion; it is a survival tactic — the dream inside the wagon, the whisper in the creaking wheel. The Tulkani pay no permanent taxes, but they pay tolls in stories. A lord who demands coin will be told a story so boring that his crops fail. A lord who offers hospitality will be told a story so beautiful that his harvest doubles.

Starting Location: A wagon circle at a crossroads, where nine painted wagons form a ring. A Caravan Judge sits on a overturned barrel, a knotted cord in her hand. "You are standing on ground that belongs to the lord of the eastern valley. He will be here at dawn to demand rent. But you are in the circle. You are safe until the ninth hour. Tell me a story — a true one — and I will tell you how to leave before the lord arrives."

Prominent NPCs of the Tulkani

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Elder Sarnai	Caravan Judge of the Nine Knots	Keep the neutrality of the road	She ties a knot for every judgment; her cord drags on the ground.

Temur Keeper	Wagon-	Master of the painted wheel	Find a new grazing ground be- fore the ninth night	He paints a new colour on his wagon each season; the colours are memories.
Gulshat		Story-Seller	Spread the dream of Ikasha through tales	She carries a dream-cord with nine knots; the ninth knot is loose.
The Knife (Un- named)		Ikasha’s agent	Free a spirit bound by the Veiled Sisters	He wears a mask made of knotted cord; he has no face underneath.
Vow-Broken		An exile who cut his own cord	Earn back his name	He carries a single knot tied in his own hair; the knot is his promise to re- deem himself.

Names of the Tulkani

Inspired by the nomadic traditions of the steppe and desert: short, guttural, with honorifics and clan prefixes. Surnames are often replaced by epithets describing a deed or a cord.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Clan/Epithet	Knot Name
Temur	Sarnai	the Wagon-Keeper	Ninth Cord
Batu	Gulshat	the Story-Teller	Dream-Knot
Orhan	Nergui	the Knife	Unbound
Cengiz	Altan	Vow-Broken	Cut Cord
Toghrul	Odval	Circle-Keeper	Neutral Knot

(Circle/Wagon/Ground) A wagon circle at dusk, lanterns lit; a painted wagon with a dream-cord hanging from the wheel; a crossroads where nine roads meet.

Spades — Places

2. Wagon Circle (Night) — Nine wagons arranged in a ring, lanterns burning, wheels touching. Inside the circle, the Hollow cannot enter. Outside, it waits. The lanterns must never go out.
3. Caravan Court (Day) — A carpet spread on grass; a judge on a barrel; a cord on the ground. The cord is the law. Step over it, and you accept the judge’s verdict.

4. Dream-Wagon (Ikasha's Shrine) — A painted wagon with no wheels, sitting on stones. The door is a curtain of knots. Inside, a single candle and a bed of straw. Ikasha dreams there. Do not wake her.
 5. Cord-Maker's Stall — A canvas awning where a woman braids horsehair and silk. Each cord is a promise. The colour tells the weight: white for truth, red for blood, black for death.
 6. Crossroads of the Ninth Road — A meeting of nine paths, only eight of which are visible. The ninth road is for the dead. The Tulkani leave an offering there each full moon.
 7. Abandoned Circle — A ring of burnt grass and wheel ruts. No wagons. No people. The circle was broken on the ninth night. The Hollow came. The grass will not grow back.
 8. Vow-Cord Tree — An old oak with hundreds of knotted cords hanging from its branches. Each cord is a promise kept. The tree remembers. The wind unties one each season.
 9. Hollow's Gate (Seasonal) — A place where the boundary is thin, marked by a single painted stone. The Tulkani camp here only on the new moon. On the full moon, they are a day's ride away.
 10. Tinkanar (Itinerant Caravanserai) — A mobile market of wagons, open for one day each season. The location changes. The Tulkani announce it by dream — the dream of a sleeping merchant.
- J Story-Well — A dry well where the Tulkani throw written stories on parchment. The stories are offerings to Ikasha. The well is full. The parchment never rots.
- Q The Ninth Cord's Post — A wooden post at the centre of every circle, with nine notches. The ninth notch is never carved. It is left for the Hollow. The Hollow never takes it.
- K The Wandering Hearth — A wagon that is never hitched, always moving. It carries the council fire. The fire has been burning for three hundred years. It has never touched the ground.
- A Ikasha's Dreaming Place (Myth) — A cave beneath a hill, where She Who Sleeps lies on a bed of knotted cords. If you untie a cord, she wakes. If she wakes, the world ends.

(Judge/Keeper/Storyteller) Caravan Judge with a dragging cord; Wagon-Keeper painting a wheel; Story-Seller with a dream-cord and a cup of water.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Caravan Judge — Old, grey-braided, a cord so long it drags on the ground. She ties a knot for every judgment. Untying a knot voids the judgment. She has never untied one.
3. Wagon-Keeper — A woman with paint on her hands, a brush behind her ear. She paints a new colour on her wagon each season. The colours are memories. She is running out of colours.
4. Story-Seller (Gulshat) — A young woman with a dream-cord around her wrist. She speaks in rhymes. Her stories are true — but only if you listen with your eyes closed.
5. Ikasha's Knife — A hooded figure with a mask of knotted cord. No face underneath. He cuts the cords of oath-breakers. The cut cord becomes a ghost. The ghost follows the breaker.
6. Vow-Broken (Exile) — A man with a single knot tied in his own hair. He never smiles. He is saving stories to buy back his name. He needs nine. He has eight.
7. Cord-Maker — A woman with braids of horsehair and silk between her fingers. She can tell the weight of a promise by the feel of the hair. Horsehair is heavy. Silk is light.

8. Hollow-Watcher — A boy who sits at the edge of the circle at dusk, watching the dark. He can see the Hollow when it walks. He points. The adults throw salt.
9. The Dreamer — A woman who sleeps in the Dream-Wagon. She never wakes during the day. She dreams the caravan’s path. The wagon follows her dreams.
10. Tinkanar Merchant — A fat man with nine bells on his hat. He sells knots and stories. He accepts only promises as payment. His ledger is a cord. It has nine thousand knots.
- J The Ghost of the Ninth Night — A translucent figure seen at abandoned circles. It was a Tulkani who stayed too long. It asks: “Is it the ninth hour yet?”
- Q The First Wagon-Keeper (Legend) — A skeleton driving a wagon of bones. The wheels are skulls. It appears when a circle is broken. It offers a ride. The ride leads to the Hollow.
- K Ikasha’s Voice — A whisper heard in the Dream-Wagon at midnight. It speaks in riddles. “The ninth cord is not a cord,” it says. “It is the space between the knots.”
- A The Unwitnessed — A Tulkani who never tied a single knot. No one remembers her name. She walks through circles unnoticed. She can break any vow because no one saw her make it.

(Debt/Toll/Hollow) A debt collector recognises your vow-cord — pay in story or favour; a lord demands rent for camping on his land — negotiate nights or fight; the Hollow walks on the ninth night — a character hears their own name whispered.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Debt Collector (Vow-Cord Recognised) — Someone from your past sees the knots you carry. They demand payment. The payment is a story. The story must be about a promise you broke. If you have none, the collector takes a knot.
3. Lord’s Rent Demand — The local lord arrives at the circle at dawn. “You have been here seven nights. Pay the eighth.” The price is not coin — it is a story that flatters him. If the story fails, he seizes a wagon.
4. Hollow Walks (Ninth Night) — Someone in the circle has miscounted. The ninth hour approaches. The lanterns flicker. A shadow stands at the edge. It whispers a name. The name is the debtor’s.
5. Vow-Cord Tangled — Two promises conflict. The knots tighten. Blood is drawn. The judge must cut one cord. The severed cord becomes a ghost. The ghost accuses the cutter.
6. Wagon Wheel Broken — A wheel cracks. The circle is incomplete. The Hollow can enter. The wheel must be repaired before dusk. The repair requires a story — a true one — told to the wood.
7. Tulkani Schism — Two judges dispute the meaning of a knot. The circle splits. Each judge claims authority. The party must choose which cord to follow. The other cord will remember.
8. Ikasha’s Dream Disturbed — A stranger enters the Dream-Wagon. The Dreamer wakes. Ikasha stirs. The ground trembles. The stranger must tell a story so good that Ikasha falls back asleep.
9. Story Toll (Bridge/Pass) — A guard demands a story to cross. Your story is not good enough. The guard demands a truth instead. The truth must be a secret. The secret must hurt.
10. Vow-Broken’s Redemption Attempt — An exile tries to rejoin the circle. The judge refuses. The exile demands the party speak for him. If they refuse, he cuts his own throat. If they speak, they owe a knot.

- J The Ninth Cord Cut — Someone cuts the ninth knot on the central post. The Hollow floods in. The lanterns go out. The circle becomes a cage. The party must re-tie the knot in the dark.
- Q Ikasha's Knife Betrayed — The Knife is offered a bribe to cut a false cord. He refuses. The briber attacks. The Knife is wounded. He asks the party to carry his mask. The mask weighs nothing — until you put it on.
- K Tinkanar Closed (No Stories) — The mobile market is empty. The merchant has run out of knots. He is selling his own name. The price is a story that makes him weep. He has not wept in forty years.
- A Ikasha Wakes — The Dreamer dies. Ikasha opens her eyes. The sky turns white. She asks one question: "Who cut the ninth cord?" The answer must be a name. If no name is given, she takes all.

(Cord/Bead/Charm) Vow-bead (a single knot, can be used to demand a favour once); safe-haven oath (a knotted cord that guarantees sanctuary in any Tulkani circle); dream-cord (gift from Ikasha, one question answered in a dream).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

- 2. Vow-Bead (Single Knot) — A small knot on a leather thong. Present it to demand a single favour from a Tulkani. The knot will loosen after use. If it is not retied within a year, the favour becomes a debt.
- 3. Safe-Haven Oath (Knotted Cord) — A braided cord with three knots. Hang it on your wagon to guarantee sanctuary in any Tulkani circle. The cord must be renewed each season. A new knot is added. After nine knots, it becomes a dream-cord.
- 4. Dream-Cord (Ikasha's Gift) — A silk cord with nine knots, the ninth loose. Once, sleep on it to ask Ikasha one question. She will answer in a dream. The answer is always a riddle. The ninth knot tightens after use. When it tightens fully, Ikasha wakes.
- 5. Caravan Judge's Cord (Borrowed) — A length of braided horsehair. Tie it around your wrist to gain +1 Position in any negotiation with Tulkani. The cord is the judge's own. She will want it back. The return is a negotiation.
- 6. Wagon-Keeper's Paint (Pot) — A clay pot of blue pigment. Paint your own wagon wheel, and no lord will demand rent for nine days. The paint is made from crushed sky-stone. It glows under moonlight. The Hollow avoids it.
- 7. Story-Seller's Verse — A single verse of a true story. Recite it to calm a spirit or end a feud. The verse works once. After that, the story belongs to the listener. You cannot tell it again.
- 8. Ikasha's Mask (Knotted) — A mask of knotted cord. Wear it to become invisible to the Hollow for one night. The mask has no eye holes. You must walk by memory. The memory may fail.
- 9. Hollow-Watcher's Salt Pouch — A leather pouch of salt blessed by the boy who watches the circle. Throw it to banish a Debt-Walker. The salt is bitter. The Debt-Walker will taste it. It will remember your face.
- 10. Tinkanar Merchant's Bell — One of nine bells from the merchant's hat. Ring it to summon him anywhere. He will come. He will demand payment in stories. He will not leave until paid.

- J Vow-Broken’s Hair Knot — A single knot tied in human hair. It contains a broken promise. Use it to void a contract. The knot is from an exile. He wants it back. He will pay a story for it.
- Q The Ninth Cord’s Post Fragment — A splinter of wood from the central post. Touch it to any knot to learn who tied it. The splinter is warm. It will burn your hand if the knot was tied in false witness.
- K First Wagon-Keeper’s Skull — A human skull painted with wheel patterns. Place it at the centre of a circle to keep the Hollow away for nine nights. The skull whispers on the ninth night. It asks: “Is it time?” Say no.
- A Ikasha’s Dream (Bottle) — A glass bottle containing a sleeping breath. Break it to send a question to Ikasha. She will answer in a vision. The vision lasts one minute. The cost is one memory. The memory is forgotten forever.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (knots, cords, beads) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo knot-omens—a cord that tightens without being pulled, a knot that unties itself, a wheel that stops turning.

Additional Features: Itinerant Mechanics

The Ninth Night Rule

A Tulkani caravan may camp on a lord’s land for seven nights without payment. On the eighth night, the lord may demand rent — typically a story, a promise, or a small service. On the ninth night, the Hollow comes. No Tulkani stays nine nights in one place. A party camping with Tulkani must leave by the eighth dusk or face the Hollow’s attention.

Mechanic: Each night the party camps in a Tulkani circle, mark a segment on a Ninth Night Clock [8]. At 7 segments, the lord (or local authority) arrives to demand rent. At 8 segments, the Hollow manifests. The party can leave before 8 to reset the clock.

Story as Currency

Tulkani do not use coin. They trade in stories, promises, and knots. A good story can buy a meal, a horse, or safe passage. A bad story can start a feud. The GM should encourage players to tell brief in-character stories; the quality (or a Presence + Sway roll) determines the value.

Mechanic: When a player tells a story, they roll Presence + Sway (DV set by the listener’s mood). On a success, the story is worth 1 Measure of value. On a critical success, it is worth 2. On a failure, the listener is offended — the party gains -1 Position on their next social roll in that circle. A player may also offer a truth (a secret, a confession, a memory) instead of a story; a truth is always worth 2 Measures but marks 1 Obligation to Ikasha.

Land Rent and Neutrality

Tulkani circles are neutral ground. No lord may collect taxes or enforce laws inside a circle, regardless of whose territory it sits on. However, the lord may demand rent at the circle's edge, and the Tulkani will negotiate. A party inside a Tulkani circle is under the Caravan Judge's protection — but if the party commits a crime, the judge may expel them to the Hollow.

Mechanic: When a lord demands rent, the Caravan Judge mediates. The party may offer a story (one Measure), a promise (a future favour, represented by a Debt Clock [4]), or a service (a quest). Refusing to pay means the lord may attack the circle — which breaks the neutrality and summons the Hollow.

Vow-Cords and Knots

Every Tulkani carries a vow-cord — a braided strand of horsehair and silk, with knots tied for every promise made and kept. A Tulkani who breaks a promise must cut the corresponding knot; the cut cord becomes a ghost that follows the oath-breaker until the promise is fulfilled. Outsiders may borrow a Tulkani vow-cord; the knots then record their promises.

Mechanic: A character who accepts a vow-cord gains +1 die to any roll made to keep a promise related to the cord. However, if they break that promise, they must cut a knot — mark 1 Corruption and gain a Condition: Followed by a Ghost (-1 die to stealth until the promise is fulfilled). A character may tie a new knot to make a new promise; each knot beyond the first increases the penalty for breaking.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Tulkani Vow-Cords and the Sidhi Freedman's Seal: Sidhi merchants on the Brass Coast accept Tulkani vow-cords as proof of credit. A well-knotted cord can buy a ship. A cut cord can sink one.
- Ikasha and the Veiled Sisters (Ashaan): The Tulkani are the primary spreaders of Ikasha's cult outside Ashaan. A Breath-less agent may be disguised as a Tulkani story-seller; a Tulkani caravan may be a mobile safe house.
- The Ninth Night and the Hollow (Eastern Realms): The Tulkani's ninth-night rule is the only reason the Hollow has not overrun the eastern trade routes. Aelaerem hedge-keepers sometimes hire Tulkani guides to reset the Hollow's attention clocks.
- Story Debts and the Ukwe (Sekogo): The Tulkani believe that the Ukwe is the first vow-cord tree. They leave offerings of knotted grass at its roots. A Tulkani judge may consult the Ukwe to verify a story's truth.

Tulkani Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Circle: Crumble a crust at the centre of the wagon ring. Ignore the first Debt Collector penalty.
- Knot the Lantern: Tie a single knot in the rope of a lantern. Cancel Lord's Rent Demand or take -1 die on your next negotiation (your choice).
- Name to the Ninth Post: Whisper a dead judge's name into the central post. Gain +1 Effect when telling a story this scene, but mark Obligation to Ikasha.

Patronage & Power

Among the Tulkani, power flows through knots, stories, and the memory of the circle. A Caravan Judge’s authority is recognised by every lord from the steppe to the coast — not because of armies, but because the Hollow respects the judge’s cord. The Tulkani have no temples, no kings, no borders. They have the ninth night, and that is enough.

For the GM: Power in Tulkani society is measured in knots tied, stories told, and nights counted. Patronage often takes the form of vow-beads, dream-cords, or safe-haven oaths — each carrying the weight of a promise. To emphasize the itinerant mechanics:

- Require players to negotiate land rent with local lords, using stories or promises as currency. A failed negotiation may lead to the Hollow.
- Use the Ninth Night Clock as a tension mechanic: every night in a Tulkani camp advances the clock. At 8, the Hollow manifests unless the party leaves.
- Let vow-cords be physical props — actual knotted strings that players can hold, tie, or cut. A cut cord is a dramatic moment.
- Emphasise that storytelling is a skill: reward creative players with mechanical bonuses, and let failed stories have consequences — a bored lord may raise rent, an offended spirit may curse.

In Tulkani society, the knot remembers everything — and the ninth night forgets nothing.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Tulkani judges or local lords.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby circle-watchers or Hollow scouts.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for debt collectors or vow-breakers.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favourable camping ground.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local Caravan Judge or lord’s herald becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to lantern failure or broken wheel.
- Foe Appears: A debt collector or Hollow manifestation arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional Tulkani riders, lord’s men, or Hollow spirits arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.

- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—knot cut/wagon broken/ninth night triggered.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: High Caravan Judge, Ikasha's Knife, or Hollow's Debt-Walker intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—circle breaks/wagon burns/lanterns go out.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Tulkani (Knot Law): Cords tighten without warning, a knot unties itself, a wheel stops at the ninth spoke.
- Tulkani (Story Debt): A story you told returns to you changed, a listener laughs at a tragedy, the wind carries your words to someone who should not hear.
- Tulkani (Ninth Night): A lantern flickers, a shadow stands at the circle's edge, a whisper says your name from the dark.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Stealth): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose False Knot.
- Cut the Cord (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a vow-bead is in your possession, +1 die.
- Weather the Hollow (Resolve + Spirit): On a hit in Hollow Walks, you pick who hears the whisper; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Knot & Dream)

- The Cord-Cutter (Nine Broken Promises) — Phases: Vow-Cords Severed → Orchestrated Exile → Circle Coup. Cracks: re-tie a cut cord, expose a false judge, survive a night outside the circle.
- The Dream-Eater (Ikasha's Shadow) — Phases: Dreamers Waking → Procession of Empty Wagons → Knot-Baptism of a Storyteller. Cracks: relic dream-cord, survivor testimony, the ninth cord refusing to tighten.

Dhahara — The Kingdom of Brass

Chapter 29

The Mountain Satrapies

Aeler-Dhaharan. Iron mines, tea terraces, and the ninth breath—the Mountain Satrapies aren't just Aeler-Dhaharan—they're a leverage market, and oh, how the Aeler viceroy loves a good deal on miner safety. They don't just trust breath-counters; they auction the right to the next one, and the toll waiver isn't just a document—it's a licence to cross any Aeler bridge for free, stamped with the Satrapy seal and guaranteed by the Viceroy-General's own oath. I sold him a set of breath-counters for his miners—not because I cared about their lungs, but because I knew the Viceroy-General's deputy was terrified of a lung-rot outbreak that would ruin his promotion chances, and he'd pay in breath-counters for counters that seemed to prevent it. I've used it to move iron from the passes to the Brass Coast... which is why the waiver is a brass nail. Not from use—from strategic preservation. I've been subtly weakening the nail's alloy during “torque checks” so it bends faster—now I can sell them a renewal at triple the price, claiming the old one was “void due to supernatural interference.” (The Mountain Satrapy agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the lung rot I “summoned” during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 11 of the Mountain Satrapy Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Satrapy accord? Thimble, my dear, little pickaxe, satrapy accords are just leverage with an ore cart—especially when I've bought the Viceroy-General's deputy's silence with a breath-counter that doesn't prevent lung rot... it accelerates it. Now, about that toll waiver... the Viceroy-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in free crossings looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 3 of the Viceroy-General's Ledger—]

[Edgewalker: Viceroy-General's ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I've got a counter war to start in the Brass Coast, and if you mention “Clause 3” one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the next toll waiver as kindling. They prefer it bent.]

29.1 The Mountain Satrapies — “The Iron Passes”

Viceroy Thrain (Elite): “The passes do not care for your lineage or your gods. They care for iron, tea, and the weight of a sworn ledger. Aeler and Dhaharan have bled into the same stone here. I wear a dwarf's breath-counter and a Dhaharan's fire-token. The mountain accepts both.”

Elephant Mahout (Commoner): “My grandfather drove elephants for the Sun Kings. My father drove them for the Aeler. I drive them for the Viceroy. The elephants do not care who holds the howdah. They care that the pass is clear and the fodder is fresh.”

Theme & Atmosphere

The Mountain Satrapies are the northern highlands of Dhahara, where the Aeler viceroys rule on behalf of the distant High King. Here, the air is thin and cold, the rivers run white with snowmelt, and the passes are measured in breath-counts rather than miles. Iron mines scar the hillsides, worked by Dhaharan labourers and overseen by Aeler engineers. Elephant caravans haul ore down to the Brass Coast; mule trains carry silver and tea up to the mountain holds. The Aeler have established a viceroyalty here — not conquest, but a long lease. The local rajas pay tribute in iron and receive protection from lowland enemies. It is an uneasy peace, written in bell-codes and toll-ledgers. The architecture blends Aeler stonework with Dhaharan domes; the cuisine mixes dwarf-bread with spiced tea; the law is a creole of Covenant statutes and Aeler breath-bonds.

What you notice first: The ringing of iron hammers and the lowing of elephants. The way every bridge has a dwarf toll-keeper with a brass scale. The silence after a bell rings — the silence is for the mountain to answer.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never count your breaths aloud in a mine. The mountain listens, and if it hears you reach the ninth, it will take one.

Regional Mood: The Weight of the Lease

Power here is measured in iron quotas, tea taxes, and the length of a viceroy's lease. The Satrapies are not a colony — the Aeler High King holds the passes by treaty, renewed every nine years. The Viceroy answers to the High King, but also to the local rajas, the Covenant judges, and the elephant clans. Every decision is a negotiation between mountain custom and lowland law. The Aeler engineers speak a creole of their own tongue; the Dhaharan nobles wear Aeler breath-counters as jewellery; and the elephants — the elephants remember who fed them during the famine of the ninth lease.

Starting Location: The Viceroy's Hall, a longhouse of timber and stone, with a throne of iron ore that no one sits on. Viceroy Thrain stands behind it, a bell around his neck: "The lease is up for renewal. The rajas want lower tithes. The Admiralty wants the passes opened to their trade. And the mines are whispering of a demon waking. You are not here by accident. Tell me whose interests you serve — and whose name I should carve on the next treaty."

Prominent NPCs of the Mountain Satrapies

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Viceroy Thrain	Aeler governor of the Iron Passes	Maximise ore output for the High King	He wears a bell around his neck; it rings when he lies.
Rani Jaya	Local raja of the eastern hills	Balance tribute to Aeler with loyalty to her clan	She lost an arm to a mine collapse; the prosthetic is a pickaxe.

Mine-Captain Korr	Aeler engineer	Keep the tunnels safe and the quotas met	He counts his breaths in eights; he has never reached nine.
Tarkan	Elephant caravan master	Move iron to the coast before the snows close the passes	He speaks to his elephants in Dhaharan; they answer in Aeler.
Sister Gaura	Covenant judge of the hill circuit	Resolve disputes between Aeler law and local custom	She carries a water-clock that runs on tears — her own.

Names of the Mountain Satrapies

A mix of Aeler gutturals and Dhaharan vowels. Surnames may be Aeler clan names or Dhaharan hill titles.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Clan/House	Epithets
Thrain	Jaya	Ironfoot	the Bell-Breaker
Korr	Gaura	Stonehand	Breath-Counter
Borin	Meera	Vikram	the Elephant's Friend
Halk	Sita	Aezelbron	Bridge-Warden
Rurik	Laxmi	Thrainsdottir	Toll-Eater

(Mine/Bridge/Hall) Iron mine with a carved face above the entrance; Aeler toll bridge with a dwarf and a scale; Viceroy's hall with a throne of iron ore.

Spades — Places

2. Iron Mine of the Crying Face — A deep shaft with a carved face above the entrance. The face weeps rust. The tears are iron oxide. The mountain is mourning its dead.
3. Aeler Toll Bridge — A stone arch over a gorge; a dwarf with a scale sits at the far end. The toll is not in coin — it is in weight. Your truth is weighed against a bar of iron.
4. Viceroy's Hall — A longhouse of timber and stone; a throne of iron ore. The throne is cold. The viceroy never sits on it — only stands behind it.
5. Elephant Corral (Mountain) — A fenced area with heavy chains; elephants are chained by one leg. The chains have names — each is the elephant's first kill.
6. Silent Pass — A high mountain pass where no bird flies. The air is too thin for sound. Arguments must be written in the snow.

7. Mine of the Ninth Seal — A sealed tunnel with a Covenant seal on the timbers. Inside is a demon that the miners woke. The seal is cracking.
8. Tea Terraces (Aeler-Dhaharan) — Stone-step fields where tea shrubs grow. Each terrace is a different clan's debt. The tea tastes of slate.
9. Dwarf Counting-House — A low building with brass scales and a iron ledger. The ledger is written in breath-bonds. It weighs the air.
10. Raja's Fort (Hill) — A stone fortress with painted gates and a single tower. The tower is also a fire shrine. The flame is lit with dwarf-coal.
- J Bridge of Nine Echoes — A rope bridge over a chasm; each step echoes nine times. The ninth echo is always a whisper. It is the name of the next person to fall.
- Q Abandoned Smelter — A ruined furnace where iron was once refined. The slag heaps are still warm. Something lives in the warmth.
- K Viceroy's Archive — A subterranean vault of treaties and toll receipts. The archive is sealed with Aeler keystone wax and Dhaharan clay.
- A The First Lease Stone — A monolith carved with the original treaty between Aeler and Dhahara. The stone is warm. It glows when the lease is renewed. It cracks when the lease is broken.

(Engineer/Raja/Judge) Mine-captain with a tuning fork and a level; Rani Jaya with a pickaxe prosthetic; Sister Gaura with a water-clock that runs on tears.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Mine-Captain (Aeler) — A dwarf with a tuning fork and a level. He can hear a crack in a beam from a hundred paces. He never walks under a keystone. The mountain has ears.
3. Rani Jaya — A young woman in armour, riding a caparisoned elephant. She lost an arm to a mine collapse. The prosthetic is a pickaxe. She can write with it. The letters are iron filings.
4. Covenant Judge (Sister Gaura) — Robed in grey, a water-clock on her belt. The clock runs on tears. She refills it from her own eyes when she hands down a death sentence.
5. Elephant Caravan Master (Tarkan) — Old, missing two fingers, tattooed with elephant footprints. He knows the name of every elephant that has crossed the pass in fifty years.
6. Aeler Toll-Keeper — A dwarf with a brass scale and a ledger. He weighs your goods and your lies. The scale tips for both. A lie makes the pan dip lower.
7. Smelter Worker — A young man with red-rimmed eyes. He coughs iron dust. His spittle stains the ground. He will not live past thirty. He knows.
8. Treasure Hunter — A foreigner digging in an old landslide. He is looking for the tomb of a prince. The prince is the one who stole the Kalrantha amulet. The treasure hunter is a fool.
9. Raja's Spymaster — A woman with a limp; she uses a walking stick that is also a blowpipe. The darts are tipped with tea — caffeine that stops hearts.
10. Tea Trader (Fhara) — A merchant with a caravan of mules. He sells tea to the Aeler; they pay in iron. He sells iron to the coast; they pay in silver. He is the richest man in the passes.
- J Blind Pilgrim — A woman in white, walking the passes alone. She is searching for a shrine where a bell rang without a clapper. The shrine is a cave. The cave is the mine of the ninth seal.

- Q Ghost of the Landslide — A figure in grey, seen only at dusk. It points at the pass. It is pointing at a safe route — or a trap. No one has survived to find out.
- K Viceroy’s Cipher Clerk — A dwarf who writes diplomatic letters in code. The code is a poem. The poem is about a lost mine. The mine is real.
- A Demon’s Whisper (from the Ninth Seal) — A voice heard in the sealed mine. It offers a deal: a year of good fortune for a single memory. The memory is the last breath of a dying friend.

(Cave-in/Toll/Echo) A cave-in traps miners; the Aeler toll-keeper demands double payment; the ninth echo on the bridge speaks a name.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Cave-In (Sabotage) — A tunnel collapses. The collapse was not an accident — a saboteur loosened the timbers. The saboteur is in the party. Or the party is accused.
 3. Toll Dispute — The Aeler keeper demands double; the raja’s men refuse. The dispute is a trap. Both sides want the party to choose a side. Neither is honest.
 4. Ninth Echo — On the Bridge of Nine Echoes, someone counts the echoes. The ninth echo says a name. The name is the speaker’s. They faint. The bridge remembers.
 5. Landslide — The pass is blocked. The alternative route is three days longer. The landslide was deliberate — a rival caravan master wants to delay you.
 6. Breath Shortage — At high altitude, the party struggles. Mark Fatigue 1 per scene. Acclimatisation requires a rest day. The rest day will cost a toll.
 7. Spy in Camp — A worker is stealing iron samples. The spy is working for an Ashaani agent. The samples are for a new alloy. The alloy is a weapon.
 8. Covenant Audit — Sister Gaura demands to inspect the party’s cargo. The cargo includes a relic from the Red Desert — a stolen Covenant seal.
 9. Aeler Bell Code Change — The toll-keeper rings a different sequence; the party is now “unregistered.” The change was ordered by the viceroy. The viceroy is testing your loyalty.
 10. Elephant Sickness (Curse) — A disease spreads through the caravan. The disease is a curse from a local spirit. The spirit was disturbed by the mine’s expansion. It wants a sacrifice.
- J Viceroy’s Summons — Thrain demands the party attend him. He offers a deal: find the saboteur in exchange for a toll waiver. The saboteur is his own clerk. The clerk is his daughter.
- Q Silent Pass’s Cold — The temperature drops; the party loses 1 Supply per hour. The cold is supernatural — a frost spirit has taken residence. It wants a memory.
- K Demon Wakes (Ninth Seal) — The sealed mine cracks open. A shadow escapes; it possesses the nearest Aeler engineer. The engineer begins to sabotage the pass. The demon wants the lease broken.
- A Lease Stone Cracks — The First Lease Stone glows red and splits. The treaty is void. War is coming. The party has one day to flee the passes before the Aeler and Dhaharan armies clash.

(Token/Ingot/Seal) Aeler breath-counter (silver bell, wear to count breaths safely); iron ingot (stamped with the viceroy's mark); Covenant seal (clay, for witnessing oaths in the passes).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Aeler Breath-Counter (Silver Bell) — Wear it to count your breaths in high altitude. The bell rings when you reach eight. Stop at eight. The ninth breath is the mountain's.
 3. Iron Ingot (Viceroy's Mark) — A single bar of high-grade iron, stamped with a dragon. Worth 1 Measure. The dragon is the viceroy's mark. Present it to any Aeler forge for a favour.
 4. Covenant Seal (Clay, Himadri) — A lump of clay. Heat it to witness any oath in the foothills. The heat comes from a coal taken from the sealed mine. The coal whispers.
 5. Toll Waiver (Brass Nail) — A brass nail. Present it to pass any Aeler bridge for free. The nail fits into a hole in the toll-keeper's scale. The hole is for bribes.
 6. Elephant Whistle (Bone) — A bone whistle. Blow it to call an elephant from the caravan. The whistle is made from the tusk of a bull that died in a rockslide. Its ghost runs with the elephant.
 8. Smelter's Gloves (Asbestos) — Handle hot metal safely. The gloves are cursed: they itch when you lie. The itch is mild at first. It becomes unbearable with repeated lies.
 9. Map of the Silent Pass (Leather) — A chart drawn on leather. Shows a safe route through the high pass. The map is incomplete. The missing section is a fold. The fold is a secret — a cave with a spring.
 10. Viceroy's Letter of Introduction — A sealed scroll. Grants access to any Aeler hold in the mountains. The letter is written in blood. The blood is the viceroy's. He changes his blood type each season.
- J Blind Pilgrim's Staff — A wooden staff with a bell on top. Ring it to summon a guide. The guide is a ghost — the pilgrim's predecessor. She will lead you safely, but she will ask for a story.
- Q Demon's Nail (Sealed Mine Timber) — A piece of the sealed mine's timber. Touch it to a lock; the lock opens. The lock also screams. The scream alerts the demon.
- K Ninth Echo's Whisper (Recording) — A piece of slate carved with the ninth echo's words. Play it to silence a foe. The foe hears their own name and freezes for one exchange. The slate then crumbles.
- A Viceroy's Forgiveness (Pardon) — A written pardon for any crime in the Satrapies. The pardon is conditional. The condition is a secret mission. The mission is to assassinate a rival viceroy.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).

- Diamonds are codified outcomes (bells, ingots, nails) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo mountain-omens—iron that weeps rust, bells that ring without clappers, a pass that closes behind you.

Additional Features

- The Ninth Breath: Aeler miners believe that counting to nine in a mine summons the mountain’s attention. They count in eights, resetting after each set. Visitors who count to nine aloud may trigger a cave-in — or worse.
- Lease Politics: The Aeler lease of the Satrapies is renewed every nine years. The current lease expires soon. The Viceroy wants renewal; the Admiralty wants the passes opened to their trade; the rajas want lower tithes; and the Covenant wants a permanent court. The party can sway the negotiation with evidence, favours, or threats.
- Elephant Caravans: The iron trade depends on elephant caravans that move ore down to the Brass Coast. Each elephant has a name, a mahout, and a debt. An elephant that dies before repaying its debt becomes a ghost that haunts the pass.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Ninth Seal Mine and the Kalrantha Amulet (Dhahara): The demon sealed in the mine is a fragment of Varash the Unmaker. The Veiled Sisters want to free it to use against the Covenant. The Breath-less want to re-seal it.
- Iron Trade and the Aeler (Ngomebe): The iron from the Satrapies is used to forge rollers for the walking cities of Ngomebe. A disruption in the iron supply could stop a city mid-migration.
- Covenant Judges and the Sidhi (Way of Silk): Sister Gaura is a Covenant judge; her water-clock is a Sidhi design. She may have contacts in the Brass Coast who can verify a freedman’s seal.
- The Blind Pilgrim and the Hollow (Eastern Realms): The pilgrim is searching for a shrine that marks the Hollow’s boundary in the high passes. Aelaerem hedge-keepers know the location but refuse to speak it.

Mountain Satrapies Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Mine: Crumble a crust into the tunnel mouth. Ignore the first Cave-In penalty.
- Knot the Bell Rope: Tie a knot in the rope of a shrine bell. Cancel Ninth Echo or take −1 die on your next stealth roll (the bell still rings, but muffled).
- Name to the Iron: Whisper a dead miner’s name into an ingot. Gain +1 Effect when negotiating with Aeler this scene, but mark Obligation to the Viceroy.

Patronage & Power

Among the Mountain Satrapies, power flows through iron, tea, and the weight of the lease. The Viceroy holds authority from the Aeler High King, but the rajas control the mines, the Covenant judges the courts, and the elephant masters move the ore. No single faction rules — and every faction owes a debt to the mountain.

For the GM: Power in the Satrapies is measured in breath-counts, toll receipts, and the loyalty of the elephant caravans. Patronage often takes the form of iron ingots, breath-counters, or toll waivers — each tied to a specific mine, bridge, or clan. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to physical tokens (bells, ingots, nails) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided by a rival.
- Let the lease negotiation be a campaign front: the party's actions tick clocks for Aeler, rajas, Admiralty, and Covenant.
- Use the mines, bridges, and the Viceroy's hall as arenas for social contests, where a breath-count is a threat and a sealed mine is a death sentence.

In the Mountain Satrapies, the mountain forgets nothing — and the ninth breath is always waiting.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Aeler engineers or raja's spies.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby mine guards or toll-keepers.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for elemental spirits or rival caravans.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favourable toll rates.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local mine-captain or toll-keeper becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to landslide or thin air.
- Foe Appears: A rival raja's guard or a demon fragment arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional Aeler engineers, raja's soldiers, or mountain spirits arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—mine seals/lease stone cracks/ninth echo spoken.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.

- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Viceroy, High Raja, or Demon from the Ninth Seal intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—mine collapses/bridge falls/lease stone shatters.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Satrapies (Mine Law): Iron veins glow faintly, the mountain groans, a breath-counter ticks backward.
- Satrapies (Lease Politics): The Viceroy’s bell rings once for no reason, a raja’s elephant kneels unprompted, a treaty scroll spontaneously combusts.
- Satrapies (Pass Law): Snow falls upward, the ninth echo repeats a different name each time, a bridge appears where there was only chasm.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Survival): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Thin Air.
- Cut the Toll (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a toll waiver is in your possession, +1 die.
- Weather the Cave-in (Body + Athletics): On a hit in Cave-In, you pick who escapes first; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Iron & Breath)

- The Breath-Eater (Nine Silence) — Phases: Mines Collapsing → Orchestrated Cave-In → Pass Coup. Cracks: find a lost breath-counter, expose a false lease, survive a count of nine.
- The Unsealed (Demon of the Ninth Seal) — Phases: Whispers in the Mine → Procession of Cracking Timbers → Iron-Baptism of a Viceroy. Cracks: relic Covenant seal, survivor testimony, the mine’s face weeping clear water.

Chapter 30

The Brass Coast

Shore of Silver and Spice. The Brass Coast isn't just shore of silver and spice—it's a trade market, and oh, how the port-masters love a good deal on spice accuracy. They don't just run the tariffs; they auction the right to the next shipment, and the lighthouse charter isn't just a document—it's a licence to anchor in any Sidhi port for a season, stamped with the Brass Coast seal and guaranteed by the Port-Master-General's own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler spice-scales that never lie—not because I believed in metrology, but because I knew the Port-Master-General's deputy was terrified of a calibration error that would ruin her promotion chances, and she'd pay in spice-scales for scales that seemed eternal. I've used it to dodge customs nine times... which is why the charter is a brass key. Not from use—from strategic preservation. I've been subtly wearing down the key's teeth during "turning checks" so it fails faster—now I can sell them a renewal at triple the price, claiming the old one was "void due to supernatural interference." (The Brass Coast agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the spice blend I "summoned" during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 9 of the Brass Coast Trade Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Trade accord? Thimble, my sweet little metrologist, trade accords are just leverage with a key—especially when I've bought the Port-Master-General's deputy's silence with a spice-scale that doesn't never lie... it misweights at the worst moment. Now, about that lighthouse charter... the Port-Master-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in dodged customs looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 2 of the Port-Master-General's Ledger—]

[Edgewalker: Port-Master-General's ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I've got a scale war to start in the Nine Kingdoms, and if you mention "Clause 2" one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the next lighthouse charter as kindling. They prefer it turning.]

30.1 The Brass Coast — "The Shore of Silver and Spice"

Admiralty Port-Master (Elite): "The tariff is the law. The law is the tariff. I do not care if your goods are stolen, blessed, or weeping. I care that you pay. The Admiralty does not rule this coast. The ledger rules. I am merely its pen."

Sidhi Freedman (Commoner): "My grandmother was born in Galanina. My mother was born in a slave ship. I was born in a lighthouse. The Admiralty calls me a subject. The Covenant calls me a freedman. I call myself a Sidhi of the Brass Coast. We are far from home, but the tide remembers."

Theme & Atmosphere

The Brass Coast is Dhahara's southern rim: a humid, feverish coastline of palm groves, salt pans, and crowded port cities. The Kahfagian Admiralty administers it as a "client province," but the Sidhi run the real trade, and the local Dhaharan rajas chafe under foreign tariffs. The air smells of pepper, cinnamon, and the low tide of a thousand ships. Here, a man can buy anything — a ship, a spice lot, a freedman's seal — and sell anything except his own shadow. The Admiralty's Maritime Court settles disputes with a judge's gavel and a marine's cutlass. The Sidhi lighthouse courts offer an alternative: justice by green flame, witnessed by the drowned. The ropeways that carry spice baskets from ship to warehouse are braided with Sidhi hair — a reminder that the dead still pull their weight.

What you notice first: The heat pressing down like a damp cloth. The constant noise of haggling in a dozen languages. The way the sea is the same colour as the sky, so the horizon disappears.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never board a ship that has a green lantern at the mast. It means the captain is under a death vow — and you are the payment.

Regional Mood: The Weight of the Tariff

Power here is measured in spice lots, tariff exemptions, and the allegiance of the lighthouse keepers. The Admiralty holds the legal authority, but the Sidhi hold the ropes — literally. The ropeways that move cargo are Sidhi-built and Sidhi-maintained; a Sidhi strike could halt all trade in a day. The native Dhaharan rajas of the inland hills resent the Admiralty's taxes and the Sidhi's influence, but they need the ports to sell their iron and tea. The Covenant has a Maritime Court in every major port, but the Admiralty often ignores its rulings. The Brass Coast is not a colony; it is an argument.

Starting Location: The pepper auction floor, where a hundred merchants clap their bids and a whalebone hammer cracks. A Sidhi port-master pulls you aside: "The Admiralty has doubled the tariff on Sidhi goods. The lighthouse keepers are talking of a strike. And there is a green lantern ship in the harbour — the Drowned Captain's. The dead are offering passage. I need you to find out why."

Prominent NPCs of the Brass Coast

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Admiral Voss	Kahfagian Governor of the Brass Coast	Maximise tariff revenue for the Admiralty	He keeps a ledger in his own blood; he says ink fades.
Syndic Olena	Port-master of Tam-ralipta	Enforce the tariff schedule	She has a brass hook where her left hand used to be; the hook is also a stamp.

Captain Idris	Sidhi lighthouse commander	Keep the Brass Coast free of Ashaani slavers	His left eye is a brass lens; he can read the stars even in fog.
Shipwright Elara	Builder of freedmen’s boats	Launch one new vessel each year for escaped slaves	She names each boat after a dead family member. The names are never painted — only carved.
Raja Govind	Inland hill ruler (native Dhaharan)	Break the Admiralty’s monopoly on spice exports	He has never seen the sea. He is afraid of it.

Names of the Brass Coast

Inspired by the southern coasts: Tamil and Sinhalese influences, with Sidhi and Kahfagian admixtures. Surnames denote a port, a boat, or a trade.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surname/Clan	Epithets
Voss	Olena	Pallava	the Brass-Fingered
Idris	Elara	Chettiar	Coin-Counter
Govind	Mangai	Saliya	the Tide-Reader
Kannan	Ilavarasi	Pattinam	Lighthouse Born
Muthu	Kalyani	Mudaliar	Shark-Tooth

Spades — Places

2. Tamralipta Harbour — A forest of masts; the smell of tar and spices. The harbour is a maze of floating houses. The residents are all Sidhi. They never touch the shore.
3. Pepper Warehouse — A long building with slatted walls; the air is sharp. The workers are slaves. Their eyes are red from pepper dust. They never blink.
4. Lighthouse of the Brass Flame — A stone tower with a copper mirror. The light is green. It shows the faces of the drowned. The keeper knows their names.
5. Salt Pan of the Silent Widows — A flat expanse of white crust; women in black work the rakes. The women are all widows; their husbands were lost at sea. The salt is bitter.
6. Kahfagian Admiralty House — A white building with a veranda; a flag with a lantern. The flag is lowered at sunset. The Admiral is drunk by dawn.

7. Sidhi Court of the Lighthouse — A circular chamber with a brass scale. The judge is blind; she hears truth in the echo of a coin.
8. Palm Grove of the Elephants — A grove where temple elephants are bathed. The elephants are painted with turmeric. The paint is a prayer.
9. Coral Reef of the Sunken Ship — A reef just offshore; a mast breaks the surface. The ship was a slaver; the slaves escaped. They live in the reef now.
10. Pepper Auction Floor — A crowded hall; voices bid in claps. The auctioneer has a hammer of whalebone. It cracks when he lies.
- J The Green Lantern Tavern — A low building with a green lantern. The lantern is never lit. The owner says it would attract the wrong kind of dead.
- Q The Shipbreaker's Yard — A beach where old ships are dismantled. The workers are convicts; they wear chains that drag in the sand.
- K The Admiral's Palace (Former Fort) — A former Sidhi fort, now occupied by Kahfagian officers. The flag is flown upside down. The Admiral does not know the difference.
- A The Undercliff (Smuggler's Cove) — A smuggler's cove accessible only at low tide. The entrance is a cave; the cave leads to a hidden harbour. The harbour is a city of thieves.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Sidhi Lighthouse Keeper — Blind in one eye; carries a brass telescope. He can see the future through the lens. "Only the futures that end at sea," he says. "The rest are private."
3. Kahfagian Port-Master (Syndic Olena) — A thin woman with a brass hook for a hand. The hook is a stamp. She stamps every tariff receipt. The stamp leaves a scar.
4. Pepper Factor — A thin woman with red-stained fingers and a black tongue. She can tell the quality of pepper by taste. She has never been wrong.
5. Shipwright Elara (Sidhi) — A woman with a hammer and a jar of brass nails. She builds boats for freed slaves. Each boat is named after a dead family member. The names are never painted — only carved.
6. Admiral Voss — A grey-haired man with a glass eye. The glass eye is from a defeated pirate. The pirate still watches through it. Voss does not sleep well.
7. Raja Govind (Inland) — A young man in silk, come to the coast to sell iron. He has never seen the sea. He is afraid of it. He refuses to step on a boat. He negotiates from the shore.
8. Smuggler Captain (Brass Coast) — A woman with a parrot on her shoulder, a curved knife on her belt. The parrot is her navigator; it knows the reefs by sound. The parrot is blind.
9. Ashaani Refugee (Family) — A family hiding in a pepper warehouse. They paid the factor to forget them. The factor forgets nothing. He is waiting for a better offer.
10. The Drowned Priest (Ghost) — A ghost in a wet robe who walks the shore at low tide. He asks for a coin to pay the ferryman. Give it, and he will not follow.
- J The Black Bishop (Covenant Maritime Judge) — A judge who rules on maritime disputes. He wears a ring made from a ship's nail. The ship was the first slaver he freed. The nail still has rust on it.

- Q The Green Lantern’s Owner — A woman with no shadow. She sold her shadow for the tavern. The shadow now serves drinks. The customers do not notice.
- K The Sea King of Kalinga (Pirate Lord) — A pirate lord with a fleet of painted dhows. He has nine wives; each is from a different kingdom. The ninth is a spy.
- A The First Freedman (Legend) — A slave who bought his freedom with a story. He now sits at the bottom of the Ninth Well. If you tell him a true story, he will tell you the location of a hidden lighthouse.

(Fire/Press/Blockade) Pepper dust fire — the air is flammable; Admiral’s press gang — marines grab bystanders; Sea King’s tax — pirate fleet blockades the harbour.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Pepper Dust Fire — A spark ignites a warehouse; the air is flammable. The workers are trapped. Save them or save the cargo. The fire is spreading.
 3. Admiral’s Press Gang — Kahfagian marines grab bystanders for the fleet. The marines are drunk. They do not recognise rank. One of the bystanders is a Covenant judge.
 4. Green Lantern Lit — Someone lights the forbidden lantern at the tavern. The dead come. They are looking for the person who killed them. That person is in your party.
 5. Shipbreaker’s Curse — A cursed ship in the yard breaks its chains. It wants a new victim — a ship’s captain. The captain is you. The ship was a slaver. It remembers your face from a raid you did not commit.
 6. Tariff Hike (Admiralty) — The port-master doubles duties on all goods. The hike is a bribe. The bribe is to the Black Bishop. The Bishop has already accepted. Your protest is treason.
 7. Coral Reef Piracy — Pirates hide behind the reef; they attack at dusk. The pirates are escaped slaves. They do not take prisoners. They also do not know the reef’s safe channel.
 8. Elephant Rampage (Coast) — A temple elephant breaks free and runs through the market. It is looking for its mahout, who was arrested. The mahout is innocent.
 9. Smuggler’s Betrayal — A smuggler captain sells the party to the Admiralty. The betrayal was a test. The captain wants to see if you can escape. If you do, you are worthy of trust.
 10. Sea King’s Tax (Blockade) — A Kalingan pirate fleet blockades the harbour. The tax is one ship. Choose which ship to give up. The Sea King will remember your choice.
- J Drowned Priest’s Demand — The ghost appears during the day. He asks for a name. The name must be someone who owes a death. If you cannot give one, he takes yours.
- Q Black Bishop’s Verdict (False) — The judge declares the party’s cargo forfeit. The verdict is false. The bishop is bribed. The briber is the Admiralty. Prove it, or lose everything.
- K Sea King’s Ninth Wife (Spy) — The spy reveals herself. She offers a deal: the Sea King’s treasure for safe passage. The treasure is a curse. The curse is a fragment of the Kalrantha amulet.
- A Undercliff Collapse — A rockslide seals the smuggler’s cove. Inside are the party and a monster. The monster is a salt-crocodile. It is blind. It hunts by sound. Do not scream.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Lighthouse Charter (Brass Key) — The right to anchor in any Sidhi port without inspection. The key fits a lock on a sea-chest, not a harbour gate. The chest contains a map of smuggler's coves.
3. Lighthouse Keeper's Lens (Brass Tube) — Look through it to see the nearest slaver ship. The lens also shows the faces of the slaves on board. They look back.
4. Freedman's Seal (Brand on Leather) — Proof of emancipation. Glows when a slaver ship is near. It also glows when a Black Hand agent is near. Trust the glow.
5. Pepper Merchant's Seal (Wax) — A wax seal from a dead factor. Present it to sell pepper at double price. The factor's ghost haunts the warehouse. He will ask for a story.
6. Salt Widow's Blessing (Bag) — A bag of bitter salt. Throw it into the sea to calm a storm. The salt is from the widows' pans. They have blessed it with their tears.
7. Admiral's Pardon (Signed) — A signed document. Cancels one crime on the Brass Coast. The Admiral signs with a glass eye. The signature is a lie. The pardon still works.
8. Sidhi Court Ruling (Written) — A written judgment. Win any maritime dispute in a Sidhi court. The ruling is valid only if witnessed by a lighthouse keeper. The keeper is Idris.
9. Elephant's Tooth (Tusk) — A tusk from a temple elephant. Present it to any temple for shelter. The elephant was executed for killing its mahout. The temple will not refuse.
10. Shipbreaker's Hook — The hook of a dead shipbreaker. Use it to command the cursed ship in the yard. The ship will obey one command — then it will try to drown you.
- J Smuggler's Map (Tattooed Skin) — A chart of hidden coves, tattooed on a dead sailor's back. The skin is preserved in salt water. It must be kept wet or the map fades.
- Q Sea King's Pardon (Flag) — A flag of truce. Fly it to pass Kalingan waters unharmed. The flag is a shirt. The shirt belonged to a dead pirate. He may want it back.
- K Green Lantern's Flame (Small) — A small lantern that burns green. Light it to summon the dead. They will answer one question. Then they will ask one. The question is never easy.
- A Black Bishop's Ring (Ship's Nail) — Wear it to be immune to Admiralty arrest in Sidhi ports. The nail is from a freed slaver. The slaves' ghosts protect you. They also watch.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (charters, lenses, seals) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo coast-omens—green flames that burn blue, salt that tastes sweet, a drowned face in a still puddle.

Additional Features

- The Sidhi Diaspora on the Brass Coast: The Sidhi are a minority here, but a powerful one. They control the lighthouse courts, the ropeways, and much of the smuggling. A Sidhi freedman's seal is the only document the Admiralty cannot forge. The Sidhi remember Galanina — the ancestral homeland — and some still hope to return.

- The Admiralty’s Tariff System: Every cargo is weighed, stamped, and taxed. The tariff schedule is a thick ledger that changes weekly. The port-master has a brass hook for a hand; the hook is also a stamp. A forged stamp is a capital crime. A correct bribe is not.
- Lighthouse Courts vs. Maritime Court: The Admiralty’s Maritime Court follows Kahfagian law. The Sidhi lighthouse courts follow the Covenant and the green flame. A dispute between the two courts can tie up a ship for months. The Black Bishop (a Covenant judge) is the only person who can overrule an Admiralty verdict.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Sidhi Freedmen and the Breath-less (Ashaan): The Sidhi of the Brass Coast have family who were taken as slaves to Ashaan. A freedman’s seal can be used to smuggle a Breath-less agent out of Galanina. Captain Idris has done this nine times.
- Spice Trade and the Fhara (Way of Silk): Pepper from the Brass Coast is a major commodity on the Fhara caravan routes. A Fhara well-judge may accept a Sidhi lighthouse charter as proof of credit.
- The Undercliff and the Kalrantha Amulet (Dhahara): The smuggler’s cove is a known transit point for artifacts stolen from the Himadri temple. The Sea King’s ninth wife claims to have seen the amulet pass through.
- The Drowned Priest and the Hollow (Eastern Realms): The ghost who walks the shore at low tide is said to be a Debt-Walker who lost his way. Aelaerem leave offerings of salt to keep him from following them home.

Brass Coast Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Tide: Toss a crust into the harbour. Ignore the first Pepper Dust Fire penalty.
- Knot the Anchor Chain: Tie a sailor’s knot in a mooring rope. Cancel Admiral’s Press Gang or take –1 die on your next escape roll (your choice).
- Name to the Lighthouse: Whisper a dead captain’s name into the green flame. Gain +1 Effect when smuggling this scene, but mark Obligation to the Sidhi.

Patronage & Power

On the Brass Coast, power flows through tariffs, lighthouse charters, and the weight of the green flame. The Admiralty holds the legal authority, but the Sidhi control the ropes and the courts. The native rajas of the inland hills resent both, but they need the ports. The Covenant's Black Bishop is the only neutral arbiter — and he is not as neutral as he seems. For the GM: Power on the Brass Coast is measured in spice lots, tariff exemptions, and the loyalty of the lighthouse keepers. Patronage often takes the form of lighthouse charters, freedman's seals, or a Black Bishop's ruling — each tied to a specific port, ship, or court. To emphasize the Sidhi minority presence:

- Make Sidhi NPCs scarce but influential. A Sidhi port-master may be the only person who can issue a freedman's seal.
- Let the Admiralty's tariffs be a recurring obstacle — players must find Sidhi smugglers or bribe officials to avoid ruinous taxes.
- Use the tension between the Maritime Court and the lighthouse courts as a source of adventures: a disputed verdict, a bribed judge, a ghost that testifies.

On the Brass Coast, the sea forgets nothing — and the green flame remembers every face.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Admiralty customs or Sidhi port-masters.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby warehouse guards or lighthouse keepers.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for smugglers or the Black Bishop's spies.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favourable tide.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local port-master or lighthouse commander becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to green flash or rising tide.
- Foe Appears: An Admiralty press gang or a Sidhi enforcer arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional Admiralty marines, Sidhi ropemen, or pirate dhows arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.

- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—tarrif hike/green lantern lit/shipbreaker’s curse activates.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Admiral Voss, Black Bishop, or Drowned Priest intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—harbour catches fire/lighthouse collapses/undercliff floods.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Brass Coast (Tariff Law): Scales tip without weight, ledgers rewrite themselves, a port-master’s hook stamps a nullity.
- Brass Coast (Lighthouse Law): Green flame flickers, salt crystals form on skin, a drowned face appears in a puddle.
- Brass Coast (Smuggler’s Law): Ropeways hum with whispers, a parrot speaks a secret, a hidden cove appears on no map.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Sail): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Green Flash.
- Cut the Tariff (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a lighthouse charter is in your possession, +1 die.
- Weather the Raid (Resolve + Spirit): On a hit in Admiral’s Press Gang, you pick who is taken; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Tariff & Flame)

- The Hook-Master (Nine Stamps) — Phases: Tariff Forgeries → Orchestrated Strike → Port Coup. Cracks: recover a true stamp, expose a forged ledger, survive a night in a lighthouse.
- The Drowned Admiral (Ghost Fleet) — Phases: Lost Ships Called Home → Procession of Empty Lanterns → Tide-Baptism of a Factor. Cracks: relic green flame, survivor testimony, the lighthouse keeper’s lens turning clear.

Chapter 31

The Nine Kingdoms

The Peacock Throne and Its Rivals. The Nine Kingdoms aren't just elephants and peacocks—they're a court market, and oh, how the Maharaja of Ahimsa loves a good deal on rare things. They don't just collect rare things; they auction the right to the next one, and the peacock feather isn't just a plume—it's a licence to enter any court for a season, stamped with the Nine Kingdoms seal and guaranteed by the Court-Master-General's own oath. I sold him a set of Aeler elephant-bells that ring in harmony—not because I believed in acoustics, but because I knew the Court-Master-General's deputy was terrified of a discord that would ruin her promotion chances, and she'd pay in elephant-bells for bells that seemed harmonious. I've used it to witness treaties, to settle feuds, and to escape a jealous king... which is why the feather is still iridescent. Not from use—from strategic preservation. I've been subtly polishing the feather's barbs during "preening checks" so it shines longer—now I can sell them a renewal at double the price, claiming the old one was "dulled by mortal hands." (The Nine Kingdoms agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the jealousy I "summoned" during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 5 of the Nine Kingdoms Court Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Court accord? Thimble, my anxious little courtier, court accords are just leverage with a feather—especially when I've bought the Court-Master-General's deputy's silence with an elephant-bell that doesn't ring in harmony... it clashes at the worst moment. Now, about that peacock feather... the Court-Master-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in witnessed treaties looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

31.1 The Nine Kingdoms — “The Peacock Throne and Its Rivals”

Maharaja of Ahimsa (Elite): “The Peacock Throne is not a seat. It is a promise made by the first sun king: that the nine kingdoms would remain nine, never one, never fewer. I do not rule. I balance. A peacock's tail has nine eyes. Each eye watches a different kingdom. When one closes, the throne weeps.”

Temple Dancer (Commoner): “My dance is not for the king. It is for the monsoon. If my ankle bells ring true, the rains come. If they falter, the wells dry. They have never faltered. I do not sleep before a performance. I dream the rhythm.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Between the Sarpies plateau and the Brass Coast lies a fertile, contested lowland: the land of the Nine Kingdoms. This is the heart of Dhahara, where ancient dynasties still claim descent from the sun, and where the Peacock Throne of Ahimsa casts its shadow over half a dozen rival courts. Here, rivers are borders, elephants are war machines, and every harvest is a negotiation between kings who have never met but whose grandfathers swore blood oaths. The Covenant has a strong presence in the sacred cities; the Aeler have counting houses in the iron towns; the Sidhi sail up the rivers to trade. But the Nine Kingdoms belong to the Dhaharan — to their poets, their temple dancers, their bandit kings, and their queens who rule from behind silk screens. The number "nine" is traditional; the actual number of kingdoms fluctuates with wars, marriages, and the mood of the Peacock Throne.

What you notice first: The smell of jasmine and dust. The way every crossroads has a painted stone — a boundary marker, a warning, a prayer. The constant murmur of bazaars where haggling is a form of theatre.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never praise a king's elephant. The elephant is sacred; your praise will be taken as an insult to the king's own mount. Compliment the mahout instead. The mahout will tell the elephant.

Regional Mood: The Weight of the Peacock

Power here is measured in river rights, elephant herds, and the thickness of a dynasty's archive. A king's authority rests on his genealogy — how many generations back to the sun, how many treaties sealed, how many marriages made. The Peacock Throne of Ahimsa is the nominal centre, but the other eight kings vie for influence, and the balance shifts with every monsoon. The Covenant judges provide legal arbitration; the temple dancers control the ritual calendar; the bandit kings of Kalinga pay no tribute to anyone. The number nine is sacred, but also a warning: when a ninth kingdom falls, the Hollow comes.

Starting Location: The Peacock Throne Hall in Ahimsa, where a golden peacock with ruby eyes watches the court. The Maharaja's chamberlain approaches: "The Maharaja wishes to renew the Nine-Kingdom Pact. But the King of Vajrapur has sent a forged genealogy. The Queen of Mahishmati has refused to attend. And the ninth kingdom — the one that is always missing — has sent a messenger. The messenger is a ghost. Speak carefully."

Prominent NPCs of the Nine Kingdoms

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Maharaja Suryavarman	King of Ahimsa (Peacock Throne)	Unite the nine under his dynasty	He has a pet peacock that follows him; the peacock's cry is a warning of assassination attempts.

Rani Chandravati	Queen of Vajrapur (Iron Kingdom)	Protect the iron mines from Aeler encroachment	She wears a bracelet of dwarf teeth — each tooth is from an engineer she outwitted.
King Bhim	Buffalo King of Mahishmati	Expand his pastoral kingdom into Anga	He has never lost a buffalo race; his buffalo is named “Conqueror.”
Covenant High Judge Vasu	Head of the Kosala sacred circuit	Enforce contract law across the nine kingdoms	He carries a scale that never balances; he says justice is never equal, only weighed.
Temple Dancer Mira	Devadasi of the Peacock Throne	Keep the peace through ritual	Her dance is said to bring rain; she has stopped three droughts.

Names of the Nine Kingdoms

Sanskrit and Prakrit roots, with honourifics (Rao, Singh, Deva, Bai). Surnames often denote clan or profession.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Clan/Surname	Epithets
Surya	Chandravati	Somavamsi	the Peacock
Bhim	Mira	Kalachuri	Iron-Fisted
Vasu	Ganga	Yadava	Buffalo-Loyal
Rajendra	Lakshmi	Gupta	the Coin-Eater
Krishna	Durga	Pala	the Learned

(Hall/Gate/Track) Peacock Throne Hall with marble pillars; Iron Gate Market outside Vajrapur; Buffalo Race Track outside Mahishmati.

Spades — Places

2. Peacock Throne Hall — A vast chamber with pillars of carved marble; the throne is a peacock of gold and lapis lazuli. The peacock’s eyes are rubies. They follow anyone who approaches the throne.

3. Iron Gate Market (Vajrapur) — A bazaar outside the fortress; the smell of iron dust and spices. The market has a section where slaves are sold. The slaves wear iron collars stamped with the king's mark.
4. Buffalo Race Track (Mahishmati) — A dusty oval; the betting is fierce. The track has a shrine at the centre — a buffalo that never lost. Its skeleton is on display.
5. Sacred City of Sravasti (Kosala) — A walled city with a thousand temples; the Covenant courthouse is here. The city has no bells. The Covenant forbids them. The silence is enforced by armed judges.
6. Anga Fort — A hilltop fortress with a dry moat; the walls are painted with tiger stripes. The fortress has never been taken. The king's secret is a network of hidden tunnels.
7. Western Port of Surashtra — A Sidhi trading post; the harbour is full of dhows. The port has a lighthouse shaped like a woman. The woman is a Sidhi saint.
8. Rajagriha Ruins — The former imperial capital, now a graveyard of broken pillars. The ruins are haunted by the ghosts of Gupta emperors. They ask for news of their empire.
9. Elephant Stables of Ahimsa — A complex of stone stalls; each elephant has its own name carved above the door. The names are not the elephants' birth names. They are the names of enemies they trampled.
10. Well of the Nine Kings — A deep stepwell with nine landings; each landing has a statue of a different king. The water is black. It shows the face of the next king to die.
- J Silent Court of Kosala — A Covenant courthouse with no speaking allowed; all arguments are written. The judges write their verdicts in disappearing ink. Only they know the secret reagent.
- Q Peacock Gardens — A walled garden behind the throne hall; only the king may enter. The garden contains a single peacock that is immortal. It was the first king's familiar.
- K Whispering Pass (Anga-Mahishmati) — A narrow defile where the wind carries conversations. Spies use it to listen to enemy camps. The pass is named for the dead — they whisper too.
- A Nine Kings' Tomb — A subterranean complex where the founders of each dynasty are buried. The tomb is sealed. The key is a single word that changes each year — the name of the current weakest king.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Peacock Throne Chamberlain — A eunuch in silk; he controls access to the king. He has a mirror on a stick; he uses it to see around corners. He has seen nine assassins before they struck.
3. Iron Mines Overseer (Dwarf) — Wears an Aeler breath-counter. He is loyal to the queen, but his cousin is a viceroy's clerk. He keeps two ledgers. One is for the queen. One is for the Aeler. Both are forgeries.
4. Buffalo Herder — A young man with a staff and a red turban. He can find water in a drought by listening to the ground. His buffalo have never gone thirsty.
5. Covenant Judge (High Judge Vasu) — A grey-haired man with a brass scale. He has never smiled.

His clerks have never seen him eat. He drinks only rainwater.

6. Temple Dancer (Mira) — A woman with anklets of silver and eyes lined with kohl. Her dance is a prayer. The prayer is for peace. She has never failed — but the peace never lasts.
7. Bandit of Kalinga — A man with a parrot on his shoulder, a scar across his face. The parrot is his conscience. It screams when he lies. He lies often.
8. Spice Merchant (Sidhi) — A Sidhi trader with a leather bag full of cinnamon. He speaks seven languages. He lies in all of them. His weights are true, though.
9. Poet of the Peacock Throne — A woman with a stringed instrument, her voice cracked from singing. She writes verses for the king. The verses are encoded warnings. The king cannot read.
10. Well Keeper of the Nine Kings — A blind woman who sits by the stepwell. She knows the depth of the water by the echo of a dropped stone. She knows the future by the same echo.
- J Ghost of Rajagriha — A translucent figure in a crown. He asks one question: “Does my empire still stand?” The answer must be a lie, or he will weep and flood the ruins.
- Q Silent Judge’s Clerk — A young woman who writes in disappearing ink. She is the only one who knows the reagent. She has been attacked twice. She carries a dagger made of frozen ink.
- K Peacock Keeper — A boy who tends the immortal peacock. The peacock speaks to him. It tells him which courtiers are plotting. The boy has never been wrong.
- A Ninth King’s Ghost — A shade that walks the tomb. It points at the killer — but the killer is always a living king. It points at whoever is closest. That person is accused.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Elephant Stampede (Royal) — The king’s elephants break loose; they are trained to kill. The stampede was ordered by a rival queen. The target is a visiting diplomat. The diplomat is you.
3. Buffalo Race Riot — A disputed finish; the crowd turns violent. The dispute is a trap. The losing king wants an excuse to invade. You are the excuse.
4. Covenant Excommunication — High Judge Vasu declares your contract void; your goods are seized. The excommunication is a bribe. The bribe was paid by a merchant you undercut.
5. Temple Dance Cursed — Mira stumbles; the rain does not come. The priest blames the party. The sacrifice is a goat. The goat is a spy. The spy is working for Vajrapur.
6. Spy in the Peacock Gardens — Someone overheard the king’s war plans. The spy is a poet. The poet is you — you were hired to write verses, not to eavesdrop.
7. Nine Kings’ Tomb Robbers — Grave robbers break into the tomb. They seek the key word. The word is “forgiveness.” The robbers are agents of a rival kingdom.
8. Well of Nine Kings Poisoned — The black water turns red; people sicken. The poison was placed by an Ashaani agent. The agent wants to destabilise the kingdoms.
9. Peacock Throne Assassination Attempt — A courtier tries to kill the king. The assassin is the chamberlain. The chamberlain is a spy for Vajrapur.

10. Silent Court Leak — A judge's verdict is revealed before it is read. The leak is a clerk. The clerk is selling secrets to the Bandit King. The verdict is your death.
- J Whispering Pass Ambush — The party is caught in a crossfire between two kingdoms. The pass is neutral ground. Both sides will claim you are a spy. Choose a side — or escape.
- Q Immortal Peacock's Cry — The peacock screams; the court panics. The cry is a warning. An assassin is in the hall. The assassin is a guest.
- K Ghost's Demand (Ninth King) — The ghost points at you. It accuses you of murdering the king's descendant. The descendant is an infant. You must prove your innocence. The ghost will not be reasoned with.
- A Well's Vision — One PC sees their own face in the black water. The face is old, scarred, and weeping. The well says: "This is your future if you stay." The vision is true — but only for this moment.

(Feather/Pass/Key) Peacock feather (enter any court); iron gate pass (bypass customs); nine kings' key word ("forgiveness" — opens the tomb and a secret door in the Peacock Throne Hall).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Peacock Feather — A single iridescent feather from the immortal peacock. Present it to enter any court in the nine kingdoms. The feather never fades. It glows when the king is lying.
3. Iron Gate Pass (Brass Key) — A brass key. Bypass customs at Vajrapur's market. The key is also a weapon. It can break chains. It was forged from a slave collar.
4. Buffalo Horn Trumpet — A carved horn. Blow it to summon a buffalo cavalry. The cavalry are mercenaries. They demand payment in land. One acre per horn blast.
5. Covenant Seal (Kosala) — A clay seal. Witness any contract in the sacred city. The seal is fragile. It breaks if the contract is false. The breaking is loud.
6. Temple Dancer's Anklet (Silver) — A silver anklet with bells. Wear it to gain +1 die to any persuasion roll. The bells are silent unless you are honest. Dishonest words make no sound.
7. Rajagriha Coin — A Gupta-era gold coin. Trade it for a favour from the ghosts. The ghosts will answer one question about the empire's fall. The answer is always a warning.
8. Well Water (Vial) — A vial of black water from the Nine Kings' Well. Drink it to see the future. The future is always a death — yours or someone else's. The vision lasts one minute.
9. Silent Court Disappearing Ink (Bottle) — A small bottle. Write a message that vanishes. The reagent is your own tears. The message reappears when you weep.
10. Nine Kings' Key Word — A single word: "forgiveness." Speak it to open the tomb. The word also opens a lock in the Peacock Throne Hall. The lock is a secret door.
- J Immortal Peacock's Second Feather — A tail feather from the immortal peacock. It is said to grant a wish. The wish is that the king will die. Use it wisely. The feather burns after use.
- Q Whispering Pass's Map (Ear) — A chart of the defile and its listening posts. Written on a human ear. The ear was from a spy. It still hears whispers. Hold it to your own ear to listen to distant conversations.
- K Peacock Throne's Blessing (Decree) — A royal decree. Demand a favour from any king of the nine. The favour is limited: they will not start a war for you, but they will end one.

A Ninth King’s Crown (Gold Circlet) — Found in the tomb. Wear it to command the ghosts of Rajagriha. They will fight for you once. Then they will claim you as their king. You cannot leave the ruins.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (feathers, keys, seals) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo peacock-omens—ruby eyes that move, a well that reflects a face not yours, a throne that creaks when empty.

Additional Features

- The Nine Kingdoms Pact: Every nine years, the kings renew a pact of mutual defence and trade. The renewal ceremony takes place at the Peacock Throne. A kingdom that refuses to attend is considered a rogue state — open to invasion by the others.
- The Weight of Honor (Cultural Mechanic): In the Nine Kingdoms, reputation is currency. The Honor Clock [6] tracks a character’s standing in native society. Gain Honor by fulfilling oaths, protecting the weak, donating to temples. Lose Honor by breaking promises, insulting elders, harming sacred animals. High Honor grants +1 Position in social encounters with natives. Low Honor makes natives hostile and prices double.
- Elephant Warfare: War elephants are the ultimate weapon of the Nine Kingdoms. Each elephant has a mahout, a name, and a battle record. An elephant’s death is a national tragedy; its tusks are displayed in the king’s hall. The Aeler have tried to replicate elephant cavalry; they have failed.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Nine Kings’ Tomb and the Kalrantha Amulet (Dhahara): The tomb is said to contain a map to the Himadri temple where the amulet was sealed. A rival king may offer the party a noble title in exchange for the map.
- Covenant Judges and the Sidhi (Way of Silk): High Judge Vasu has ruled on several cases involving Sidhi freedmen. He is known to be fair but harsh. A Sidhi port-master may ask the party to deliver a bribe — or a warning.
- Elephant Herds and the Kuvani (Way of Silk): The Kuvani have tried to buy war elephants from the Nine Kingdoms. The price is always refused — but a Kuvani remount master may offer a story worth the trade.
- The Immortal Peacock and the Hollow (Eastern Realms): The peacock is said to be the Hollow’s original form — before it learned to hunger. Aelaerem hedge-keepers leave offerings of peacock feathers at the Hollow’s gates to remind it of what it once was.

Nine Kingdoms Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Peacock: Crumble a crust before the throne. Ignore the first Elephant Stampede penalty.

- Knot the Anklet: Tie a silver bell to a dancer's anklet. Cancel Temple Dance Cursed or take -1 die on your next performance roll (your choice).
- Name to the Well: Whisper a dead king's name into the black water. Gain +1 Effect when negotiating a truce this scene, but mark Obligation to the Covenant.

Patronage & Power

Among the Nine Kingdoms, power flows through genealogy, elephant herds, and the honour of the court. A king's authority rests on his dynasty's archive; a queen's on her marriage alliances; a temple dancer's on the rhythm of the monsoon. The Peacock Throne is the centre, but the other eight kingdoms are not satellites — they are competitors.

For the GM: Power in the Nine Kingdoms is measured in iron, buffalo, and the thickness of a family's scroll collection. Patronage often takes the form of peacock feathers, iron gate passes, or Covenant seals — each tied to a specific kingdom, clan, or court. To emphasize this:

- Use the Honor Clock as a visible track. Let players gain or lose Honor based on their actions in native courts. High Honor opens doors; low Honor closes them — and may bring assassins.
- Let the nine kingdoms be a web of shifting alliances. A favour from the Maharaja may be an insult to the Rani. Players must navigate the politics.
- Use the stepwells, elephant stables, and throne halls as arenas for social contests, where a well-recited genealogy is a weapon and a broken promise is a declaration of war.

In the Nine Kingdoms, the peacock remembers every eye — and the well shows every death.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from court chamberlains or temple priests.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby elephant mahouts or bazaar merchants.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for rival spies or Covenant bailiffs.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favourable audience with a king.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local king's guard or Covenant bailiff becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to elephant stampede or riot.
- Foe Appears: A rival kingdom's spy or a bandit arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional elephant cavalry, temple guards, or bandit crews arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—pact broken/well poisoned/ghost accuses.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Maharaja, High Judge Vasu, or Ninth King’s Ghost intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—throne hall collapses/well floods/peacock screams.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Nine Kingdoms (Court Law): Peacock feathers shed without reason, a throne’s ruby eyes follow a different person, a forgotten genealogy appears on a wall.
- Nine Kingdoms (Elephant Law): Elephants kneel unprompted, a tusk glows faintly, a mahout speaks a prophecy in his sleep.
- Nine Kingdoms (Honor Law): A merchant refuses to meet your eyes, a child throws salt at your feet, a temple door closes as you approach.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Stealth): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Dust Cloud.
- Cut the Pact (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a peacock feather is in your possession, +1 die.
- Weather the Stampede (Body + Ride): On a hit in Elephant Stampede, you pick who is trampled; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Throne & Well)

- The Ninth King (Unburied) — Phases: Tomb Robberies → Orchestrated Succession Crisis → Throne Coup. Cracks: return a stolen crown, expose a false genealogy, survive the Ninth King’s Ghost.
- The Drought-Maker (Well Poisoner) — Phases: Wells Drying → Procession of Empty Stepwells → Monsoon Baptism of a Dancer. Cracks: vial of pure well water, survivor testimony, the temple dancer’s bells ringing true again.

Chapter 32

The Himadri Foothills

The Iron Passes (Aeler Focus). The Ninth Seal mine isn't just holding a demon—it's a seal market, and oh, how the Vent-Prior loves a good deal on demon containment. They don't just trust the seal; they auction the right to the next reinforcement, and the breath-counter isn't just a device—it's a licence to walk the Silent Pass without calling the Hollow, stamped with the Himadri seal and guaranteed by the Vent-Prior-General's own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler keystone-wax to reinforce the seal—not because I believed in geology, but because I knew the Vent-Prior-General's deputy was terrified of a microfracture that would ruin her promotion chances, and she'd pay in keystone-wax for wax that seemed to reinforce the seal. I've used it to walk the Silent Pass without calling the Hollow... which is why the bell is silver. Not from use—from strategic preservation. I've been subtly weakening the wax's bond during "curing checks" so it fails faster—now I can sell them a renewal at triple the price, claiming the old one was "void due to supernatural interference." (The Himadri agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the microfracture I "summoned" during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 8 of the Himadri Seal Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Seal accord? Thimble, my dear, little waxer, seal accords are just leverage with a molecule—especially when I've bought the Vent-Prior-General's deputy's silence with a keystone-wax that doesn't reinforce the seal... it weakens it. Now, about that breath-counter... the Vent-Prior-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in Silent Passes looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 2 of the Vent-Prior-General's Ledger—]

[Edgewalker: Vent-Prior-General's ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I've got a wax war to start in the Aeler high peaks, and if you mention "Clause 2" one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the next breath-counter as kindling. They prefer it weakened.]

32.1 The Himadri Foothills — "The Iron Passes"

Vent-Prior of the Iron Road (Elite): "The mountain does not speak in words. It speaks in the crack of a bearing, the echo of a hammer, the taste of ore on the tongue. We Aeler do not conquer stone. We negotiate with it. The lease is not a document. It is the weight of the keystone that holds the roof."

Mine-Breath (Commoner): "I carry a bell that counts my breaths. Eight is safe. Nine is the mountain's. My grandfather counted to nine once. The mountain took his shadow. He lived another thirty years, but he never cast a shadow again."

Theme & Atmosphere

The Himadri foothills are the rugged transition between the Sarpies plateau and the towering peaks of the Aelerian mountains. Here, the air is thin and cold, the rivers run white with snowmelt, and the passes are measured in breath-counts rather than miles. Iron mines scar the hillsides, worked by Dhaharan labourers and overseen by Aeler vent-priors. Elephant caravans haul ore down to the Brass Coast; mule trains carry silver and tea up to the mountain holds. The Aeler have established a viceroyalty here — not conquest, but a long lease backed by breath-bonds and keystone wax. The local rajas pay tribute in iron and receive protection from lowland enemies. It is an uneasy peace, written in bell-codes and toll-ledgers. The Aeler engineers speak a creole of their own tongue; the Dhaharan nobles wear Aeler breath-counters as jewellery; and deep beneath the oldest mine, a demon sleeps behind a Covenant seal — a fragment of the thing that turned the Red Desert to glass.

What you notice first: The ringing of iron hammers and the lowing of elephants. The way every bridge has a dwarf toll-keeper with a brass scale. The silence after a bell rings — the silence is for the mountain to answer.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never count your breaths aloud in a mine. The mountain listens, and if it hears you reach the ninth, it will take one — a breath, a memory, a shadow.

Regional Mood: The Weight of the Keystone

Power here is measured in iron quotas, breath-bonds, and the age of a keystone. The Aeler do not rule through armies; they rule through the maintenance contracts that keep the mines from collapsing, the bridges from falling, and the passes from freezing. A vent-prior's authority rests on his ability to read the mountain's cracks; a mine-captain's on her skill with a tuning fork. The Dhaharan rajas pay tribute in ore, but they also hold the local rituals that appease the mountain spirits. The Covenant's sealed mine — the Ninth Seal — is a reminder of what happens when the mountain is not respected. The Aeler have kept it closed for three centuries. The seal is cracking.

Starting Location: The entrance to the Ninth Seal Mine, where a Covenant seal of clay and iron glows faintly in the dark. A vent-prior in a brass breath-counter steps forward: "The seal is failing. The demon whispers through the crack. The rajas want to open it — they think the demon's iron can win their wars. The Covenant wants to re-seal it. The Aeler want to mine around it. You are here because you do not know enough to choose a side. That makes you useful."

Prominent NPCs of the Himadri Foothills

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Vent-Prior Thrain	Aeler governor of the Iron Passes	Maximise ore output while keeping the demon sealed	He wears a bell around his neck; it rings when he lies.

Mine-Captain Korra	Aeler engineer	Keep the tunnels safe and the quotas met	She counts her breaths in eights; she has never reached nine.
Rani Jaya	Dhaharan raja of the eastern hills	Balance tribute to Aeler with loyalty to her clan	She lost an arm to a mine collapse; the prosthetic is a pickaxe.
Seal-Keeper Haran	Covenant priest of the Ninth Seal	Ensure the demon never wakes	He has not left the mine entrance in forty years. His eyes are rust-coloured.
Elephant Master Tarkan	Caravan leader	Move iron to the coast before the snows close the passes	He speaks to his elephants in Dhaharan; they answer in Aeler.

Names of the Himadri Foothills

A mix of Aeler gutturals (short, hard consonants) and Dhaharan vowels. Surnames may be Aeler clan names or Dhaharan hill titles.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Clan/House	Epithets
Thrain	Korra	Ironfoot	the Bell-Breaker
Borin	Jaya	Stonehand	Breath-Counter
Harkan	Sita	Aezelbron	Bridge-Warden
Rurik	Laxmi	Thrainsdottir	Toll-Eater
Vikram	Meera	Keystone-bearer	the Unshadowed

Spades — Places

2. Iron Mine of the Crying Face — A deep shaft with a carved face above the entrance. The face weeps rust. The tears are iron oxide. The mountain is mourning its dead.
3. Aeler Toll Bridge — A stone arch over a gorge; a dwarf with a scale sits at the far end. The toll is not in coin — it is in weight. Your truth is weighed against a bar of iron.
4. Ninth Seal Mine (Sealed) — A tunnel mouth sealed with Covenant clay and iron bands. The seal is warm. It glows faintly at night. The demon whispers through the cracks.

5. Keystone Chamber — A cave where the Aeler store their breath-bond ledgers. The ledgers are carved on slate. Each slate is a keystone. Break one, void a contract.
6. Silent Pass — A high mountain pass where no bird flies. The air is too thin for sound. Arguments must be written in the snow.
7. Elephant Corral (Highland) — A fenced area with chains; elephants chained by one leg. The chains have names — each is the elephant's first kill. The names are in Aeler.
8. Smelter's Forge (Aeler Mobile) — A wagon-mounted furnace that follows the ore caravans. The forge is pulled by a team of oxen. It is always last in the procession.
9. Bridge of Nine Echoes — A rope bridge over a chasm; each step echoes nine times. The ninth echo is always a whisper. It is the name of the next person to fall.
10. Vent-Prior's Archive — A subterranean vault of breath-bonds and toll receipts. The archive is sealed with Aeler keystone wax. The wax is mixed with miner's blood.
- J Abandoned Shaft (Demon's First Awakening) — A collapsed tunnel where the demon first spoke. The air is warm. The walls are coated in green glass — like the Kalrantha amulet.
- Q Shrine of the Ninth Breath — A small stone altar where miners leave offerings. The offerings are not coin — they are memories written on strips of leather. The leather never rots.
- K Raja's Hill Fort — A stone fortress overlooking the main mine. The fort has a fire shrine and an Aeler breath-counter on the gate. Both are watched.
- A The First Keystone (Myth) — A stone that never cracks, said to lie at the deepest point of the oldest mine. It is the mountain's heart. Touch it, and the mountain will ask a question. Answer poorly, and the passes close forever.

(Captain/Judge/Master) Mine-Captain Korra with a tuning fork; Rani Jaya with a pickaxe prosthetic; Elephant Master Tarkan with a bone whistle.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Mine-Captain (Aeler) — A dwarf with a tuning fork and a level. She can hear a crack in a beam from a hundred paces. She never walks under a keystone. The mountain has ears.
3. Rani Jaya — A young woman in armour, riding a caparisoned elephant. She lost an arm to a mine collapse. The prosthetic is a pickaxe. She can write with it. The letters are iron filings.
4. Seal-Keeper Haran (Covenant) — An old man in grey robes, sitting by the Ninth Seal. His eyes are rust-coloured. He has not eaten solid food in forty years. The seal's glow sustains him.
5. Elephant Master Tarkan — Old, missing two fingers, tattooed with elephant footprints. He knows the name of every elephant that has crossed the pass in fifty years.
6. Vent-Prior Thrain — A dwarf with a bell around his neck. He stands behind the iron throne. The bell rings when he lies. It rings often. He is always lying about the ore quotas.
7. Aeler Toll-Keeper — A dwarf with a brass scale and a ledger. He weighs your goods and your lies. The scale tips for both. A lie makes the pan dip lower.
8. Smelter Worker (Dhaharan) — A young man with red-rimmed eyes. He coughs iron dust. His spittle stains the ground. He will not live past thirty. He knows.
9. Treasure Hunter (Foreign) — A foreigner digging in an old landslide. He is looking for the tomb of a prince. The prince is the one who stole the Kalrantha amulet. The hunter has a map tattooed on his back.

10. Breath-Bound Miner — A woman who sold her breath to the mountain for a higher quota. She can only speak in whispers. Her voice is a rustle. The mountain speaks through her.
- J Ghost of the Landslide — A figure in grey, seen only at dusk. It points at the pass. It is pointing at a safe route — or a trap. No one has survived to find out.
- Q Vent-Prior’s Cipher Clerk — A dwarf who writes diplomatic letters in code. The code is a poem. The poem is about a lost mine. The mine is the Ninth Seal.
- K Demon’s Whisper (from the Ninth Seal) — A voice heard in the sealed mine. It offers a deal: a year of good fortune for a single memory. The memory is the last breath of a dying friend.
- A The First Miner (Legend) — A skeleton holding a tuning fork, sitting at the First Keystone. If you take the tuning fork, you become the mountain’s new voice. You will never leave the depths.

(Cave-in/Toll/Echo) A cave-in traps miners — the collapse was sabotage; the Aeler toll-keeper demands double payment; the ninth echo on the Bridge of Nine Echoes speaks a name.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Cave-In (Sabotage) — A tunnel collapses. The collapse was not an accident — a saboteur loosened the timbers. The saboteur is in the party. Or the party is accused. The Mine-Captain is watching.
3. Toll Dispute — The Aeler keeper demands double; the raja’s men refuse. The dispute is a trap. Both sides want the party to choose a side. Neither is honest. The bridge is the only crossing.
4. Ninth Echo — On the Bridge of Nine Echoes, someone counts the echoes. The ninth echo says a name. The name is the speaker’s. They faint. The bridge remembers. The name is now a debt.
5. Landslide (Pass Blocked) — The pass is blocked. The alternative route is three days longer. The landslide was deliberate — a rival caravan master wants to delay you. His camels are ahead.
6. Breath Shortage (High Altitude) — At high altitude, the party struggles. Mark Fatigue 1 per scene. Acclimatisation requires a rest day. The rest day will cost a toll. The toll is a breath-bond.
7. Spy in Camp — A worker is stealing iron samples. The spy is working for an Ashaani agent. The samples are for a new alloy. The alloy is a weapon. The weapon is meant to break the Ninth Seal.
8. Covenant Audit — Seal-Keeper Haran demands to inspect the party’s cargo. The cargo includes a relic from the Red Desert — a piece of green glass. It is humming.
9. Aeler Bell Code Change — The toll-keeper rings a different sequence; the party is now “unregistered.” The change was ordered by the Vent-Prior. The Vent-Prior is testing your loyalty. Fail, and you are banned from the passes.
10. Elephant Sickness (Curse) — A disease spreads through the caravan. The disease is a curse from a local spirit. The spirit was disturbed by the mine’s expansion. It wants a sacrifice. The sacrifice is a memory.

- J Vent-Prior's Summons — Thrain demands the party attend him. He offers a deal: find the saboteur in exchange for a toll waiver. The saboteur is his own clerk. The clerk is his daughter. She is trying to open the Ninth Seal.
- Q Silent Pass's Cold (Supernatural) — The temperature drops; the party loses 1 Supply per hour. The cold is supernatural — a frost spirit has taken residence. It wants a breath-bond. It will accept a story.
- K Demon Wakes (Ninth Seal Crack) — The sealed mine cracks open. A shadow escapes; it possesses the nearest Aeler engineer. The engineer begins to sabotage the pass. The demon wants the lease broken. The demon wants the mountain to weep.
- A First Keystone Quakes — The mountain's heart trembles. The passes close. The mines collapse. The demon is free. The party has one day to re-seal the demon or flee. The Vent-Prior is weeping. The seal-keeper is dead.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Aeler Breath-Counter (Silver Bell) — Wear it to count your breaths in high altitude. The bell rings when you reach eight. Stop at eight. The ninth breath is the mountain's. The bell also rings when a demon is near.
 3. Iron Ingot (Vent-Prior's Mark) — A single bar of high-grade iron, stamped with a dragon. Worth 1 Measure. The dragon is the Vent-Prior's mark. Present it to any Aeler forge for a favour. The favour is a breath-bond.
 4. Covenant Seal (Clay, Himadri) — A lump of clay. Heat it to witness any oath in the foothills. The heat comes from a coal taken from the Ninth Seal mine. The coal whispers. The seal lasts one use.
 5. Toll Waiver (Brass Nail) — A brass nail. Present it to pass any Aeler bridge for free. The nail fits into a hole in the toll-keeper's scale. The hole is for bribes. The nail is also a key.
 6. Elephant Whistle (Bone) — A bone whistle. Blow it to call an elephant from the caravan. The whistle is made from the tusk of a bull that died in a rockslide. Its ghost runs with the elephant.
 7. Raja's Signet Ring (Silver) — A silver ring with a tiger. Commands loyalty from the raja's clan. The ring is a copy. The real one was lost in a landslide. The ghost of the original owner wears it.
 8. Smelter's Gloves (Asbestos) — Handle hot metal safely. The gloves are cursed: they itch when you lie. The itch is mild at first. It becomes unbearable with repeated lies. The gloves also resist demonic whispers.
 9. Map of the Silent Pass (Leather) — A chart drawn on leather. Shows a safe route through the high pass. The map is incomplete. The missing section is a fold. The fold is a secret — a cave with a spring that never freezes.
 10. Vent-Prior's Letter of Introduction — A sealed scroll. Grants access to any Aeler hold in the mountains. The letter is written in blood. The blood is the Vent-Prior's. He changes his blood type each season.
- J Seal-Keeper's Prayer (Clay Tablet) — A tablet inscribed with the original Covenant sealing rite. Recite it to strengthen the Ninth Seal for one year. The recitation costs a memory. The memory is forgotten.

Q Demon’s Nail (Timber from Ninth Seal) — A piece of the sealed mine’s timber. Touch it to a lock; the lock opens. The lock also screams. The scream alerts the demon. The nail crumbles after one use.

K Ninth Echo’s Whisper (Slate) — A piece of slate carved with the ninth echo’s words. Play it to silence a foe. The foe hears their own name and freezes for one exchange. The slate then crumbles. The echo is now silent.

A Vent-Prior’s Forgiveness (Pardon) — A written pardon for any crime in the Himadri foothills. The pardon is conditional. The condition is a secret mission. The mission is to re-seal the demon — permanently.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (bells, ingots, nails) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo mountain-omens—iron that weeps rust, bells that ring without clappers, a pass that closes behind you, a whisper that sounds like your own breath.

Additional Features (Aeler Mechanics)

- Breath-Bonds: Aeler contracts are sealed with breath — the parties exhale into a brass counter, and the bond is recorded as a weight of air. Breaking a breath-bond causes the breaker to lose the ability to draw a full breath for a year (mark Fatigue 1 at the start of each scene). Breath-bonds are measured in eighths; the ninth part is always held by the mountain.
- Keystone Law: Every Aeler mine has a keystone — a single block that bears the weight of the roof. The keystone is also a legal document. Carve a contract into it, and the contract is enforceable by the mountain itself. Defacing a keystone is punishable by burial in the mine.
- The Ninth Seal Clock: The Covenant seal on the demon mine has a hidden clock [8] that ticks when the demon whispers, when someone takes iron from the sealed tunnel, or when a breath-bond is broken nearby. When the clock fills, the seal cracks. The party can reset the clock by reinforcing the seal with a new Covenant rite (costs a memory) or by feeding the demon a story (costs a truth).

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Ninth Seal and the Kalrantha Amulet (Dhahara): The demon in the sealed mine is a fragment of Varash the Unmaker, the same entity trapped in the Kalrantha amulet. The Veiled Sisters want to free this fragment to use against the Covenant. The Breath-less want to re-seal it permanently.
- Iron Trade and the Ngomebe Stone Men: The iron from the Himadri mines is shipped to Ngomebe to forge rollers for the walking cities. A disruption in the iron supply could stop a city mid-migration. The Ngomebe Mason-Kin have a permanent envoy at the Vent-Prior’s hall.

- Breath-Bonds and the Covenant (Mykkiel): The Covenant recognises Aeler breath-bonds as legally binding, but only if witnessed by a judge. Sister Gaura (from the Satrapies) often travels to the Himadri foothills to witness the largest contracts.
- The Silent Pass and the Hollow (Eastern Realms): The Silent Pass is a known threshold where the Hollow's attention is thin. Aelaerem hedge-keepers leave offerings of salt at the pass entrance to keep the Debt-Walkers from following caravans.

Himadri Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Mine: Crumble a crust into the tunnel mouth. Ignore the first Cave-In penalty.
- Knot the Bell Rope: Tie a knot in the rope of the shrine bell. Cancel Ninth Echo or take -1 die on your next stealth roll (your choice).
- Name to the Iron: Whisper a dead miner's name into an ingot. Gain +1 Effect when negotiating with Aeler this scene, but mark Obligation to the Vent-Prior.

Patronage & Power

In the Himadri foothills, power flows through breath-bonds, iron quotas, and the authority of the keystone. The Aeler vent-priors hold the contracts that keep the mines open; the Dhaharan rajas hold the land; the Covenant holds the seal on the demon. No single faction can rule alone, because the mountain itself is a stakeholder — and the mountain has a vote. For the GM: Power in the Himadri foothills is measured in breath-counts, toll receipts, and the age of a keystone. Patronage often takes the form of breath-counters, iron ingots, or seal fragments — each tied to a specific mine, pass, or contract. To emphasize the Aeler focus:

- Make breath-bonds a central mechanic: players can enter into bonds for favours, but breaking them has harsh consequences.
- Let the Ninth Seal Clock be a visible campaign front. The party's actions tick the clock; when it fills, the demon manifests.
- Use the mines, bridges, and the sealed tunnel as arenas for social contests, where a breath-count is a threat and a keystone is a judge.

In the Himadri foothills, the mountain forgets nothing — and the ninth breath is always waiting.

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from Aeler mine-captains or Covenant seal-keepers.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby toll-keepers or elephant masters.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for raja's spies or demon-touched miners.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favourable toll rates.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Local mine-captain or seal-keeper becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to landslide or thin air.
- Foe Appears: A demon-touched miner or a rival raja’s guard arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional Aeler engineers, raja’s soldiers, or demon fragments arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes—mine seals/keystone cracks/ninth echo spoken.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Vent-Prior, Seal-Keeper, or Demon from the Ninth Seal intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically—mine collapses/bridge falls/first keystone quakes.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice—omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Himadri (Aeler Law): Breath-counters tick backward, keystones weep water, a tuning fork rings without being struck.
- Himadri (Seal Law): The Ninth Seal’s glow intensifies, demon whispers become audible, a crack appears in the clay.
- Himadri (Pass Law): Snow falls upward, the ninth echo repeats a different name each time, a bridge appears where there was only chasm.

Pursuit Ladder (Near / Mid / Far)

- Advance/Withdraw (Wits + Survival): On a hit, shift one band. On a strong hit, also impose Thin Air.
- Cut the Toll (Presence + Sway): On a hit, freeze range for one exchange; if a toll waiver is in your possession, +1 die.
- Weather the Cave-in (Body + Athletics): On a hit in Cave-In, you pick who escapes first; on a miss, the GM does.

Boss Seeds (Breath & Demon)

- The Breath-Eater (Nine Silences) — Phases: Mines Collapsing → Orchestrated Breath-Bond Break → Pass Coup. Cracks: find a lost breath-counter, expose a false keystone, survive a count of nine.
- The Unsealed (Demon of the Ninth Seal) — Phases: Whispers in the Mine → Procession of Cracking Seals → Iron-Baptism of a Vent-Prior. Cracks: relic Covenant seal, survivor testimony, the mine's face weeping clear water.

Part VII

The Eastern Realms

Chapter 33

Sihai

The Central Kingdom. The Mandate of Heaven isn't just a loan—it's a debt market, and oh, how the Censorate loves a good deal on forged seals. They don't just audit everyone; they auction the right to the next audit, and the silence-token isn't just a charm—it's a licence to demand a secret from any Lethai-thora keeper, stamped with the Sihai seal and guaranteed by the Auditor-General's own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler audit-ledgers that can detect forged seals—not because I believed in accountability, but because I knew the Auditor-General's deputy was terrified of a missed forgery that would ruin her promotion chances, and she'd pay in audit-ledgers for ledgers that seemed to detect forgeries. I've used it to learn the true history of three emperors... which is why the token is a brass charm. Not from use—from strategic preservation. I've been subtly demagnetising the charm's core during "handling checks" so it glows weaker—now I can sell them a renewal at double the price, claiming the old one was "weakened by mortal hands." (The Sihai agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the forgery I "summoned" during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 13 of the Sihai Audit Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Audit accord? Thimble, my anxious little number-cruncher, audit accords are just leverage with a magnet—especially when I've bought the Auditor-General's deputy's silence with an audit-ledger that doesn't detect forged seals... it misses them. Now, about that silence-token... the Auditor-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in true histories looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

33.1 Sihai — “The Central Kingdom”

Quiet Chancellor (Elite): “The Mandate of Heaven is not a right. It is a loan. The emperor borrows legitimacy from the ancestors, from the land, from the Hollow itself. When the loan is due, the empire falls. I do not serve the emperor. I serve the ledger that tracks the interest.”

Provincial Censor (Commoner): “My brush is heavier than any sword. A single stroke can erase a name, a family, a dynasty. The emperor reads my reports and trembles. He knows that I have written nine reports this year. The ninth is about him.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Sihai is the central kingdom, the seat of the Emperor and the Mandate of Heaven. Its canals carry grain from the south; its examination halls produce bureaucrats who govern by the brush. Power here is measured in ink, not iron. The Censorate watches everyone; the Salt Monopoly controls trade; the Lethai-thora keep the secrets that the Mandate prefers to forget. Sihai is not a land of warriors — it is a land of scholars, clerks, and spies. A well-written couplet can end a feud; a forged seal can start a war. The Hollow's ninth debt is the unpaid interest on the Mandate itself. Every dynasty borrows legitimacy; every silence is a debt.

What you notice first: The smell of ink and canal water. The way officials stamp every document with a brass seal. The constant ticking of water-clocks in public squares.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never speak of succession before naming the Emperor. The Censorate has ears in every tea house. A misplaced word can erase your name from the rolls.

Regional Mood: The Weight of the Brush

Power here is measured in examination scores, salt licenses, and the thickness of a family's archive. The Emperor rules, but the Censorate audits, the Salt Monopoly finances, and the Lethai-thora remember what the Censorate burns. A provincial governor's authority rests on his examination rank; a merchant's on his salt license. The Hollow watches from the missing ninth step, the unpoured ninth cup, the unsaid ninth name.

Starting Location: An examination hall where ink-stained desks face a silent proctor. A Provincial Censor holds up a scroll: "This candidate's family name has been erased. He does not know. You will tell him — or you will take his place in the ledger."

Prominent NPCs of Sihai

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Quiet Chancellor Wei	Imperial censor	Root out corruption before the Mandate fails	He has never smiled. His seal is a laughing mouth.
Salt Commissioner Li	Head of the Salt Monopoly	Control the price of salt and the flow of silver	She tastes every batch of salt before it is stamped. Her tongue is white.
Provincial Censor Chen	Overseer of the eastern prefectures	Erase a rebel lineage from the rolls	He writes with his left hand. His right hand is for swearing oaths.

Lethai-thora Keeper Lian	Hidden archivist	Protect a scroll that proves the emperor’s claim is false	She has not spoken aloud in twenty years. She writes on water.
The Hollow’s Debt-Walker	Spirit of unpaid Mandate	Collect the ninth name, the ninth step, the ninth cup	It appears as a scribe with too many fingers. It never blinks.

Names of Sihai

Inspired by the central kingdom: short, tonal, with honorifics. Surnames often denote a clan or a prefecture.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Clan/House	Epithets
Wei	Lian	Chen	the Quiet
Li	Mei	Zhou	Salt-Tongue
Chen	Huan	Zhao	the Unerased
Zhang	Ning	Wu	Ninth Seal
Liu	Ping	Tang	the Brush

(Hall/Canal/Archive) Examination hall with ink-stained desks; Grand Canal lock with barges queueing; Lethai-thora hidden archive behind a waterfall.

Spades — Places

2. Examination Hall — A long building with ink-stained desks, silent proctors, and a single bell. The bell rings when a candidate cheats. It rings once a day on average.
3. Grand Canal Lock — A stone gate where barges queue for inspection. Officials stamp manifests. The stamp leaves a watermark that glows under moonlight. Forgeries are obvious.
4. Lethai-thora Hidden Archive — A pavilion behind a waterfall, filled with forbidden scrolls. The scrolls are sealed with silk cords. The cords have nine knots. The ninth is a lie.
5. Salt Commissioner’s Counting House — A fortress of ledgers, guarded by armed clerks. The ledgers are written in disappearing ink. Only the Commissioner knows the reagent.
6. Provincial Censorate Office — A grey building with a brass scale above the door. The scale weighs truth and lies. It has never balanced.
7. Emperor’s Forbidden Garden — A walled garden where no one may enter without permission. The garden contains a single tree with nine branches. The ninth branch is dead.
8. Well of Erased Names — A stone well where the Censorate throws scrolls of erased lineages. The scrolls burn as they fall. The smoke smells of ink and old blood.
9. Tea House of the Ninth Cup — A popular establishment where the ninth cup is never poured. The owner has a bell that rings when someone pours the ninth cup. It rings often.

10. Canal Mother's Court — A shaded bench where water rights are assigned. The bench is carved with the names of every canal mother for nine generations.
- J The Emperor's Tomb (Unfinished) — A subterranean complex where the current emperor's tomb is being built. The workers are slaves. They will be buried with him. They know.
- Q The Hollow's Gate (Subterranean) — A crack in the floor of the Forbidden Garden. The crack is warm. It whispers the names of emperors who died without heirs.
- K The Ninth Ledger's Vault — A vault beneath the Counting House, accessible only by nine keys. The ninth key is held by the Hollow. The Hollow will lend it — for a price.
- A The First Examination Hall (Myth) — Where the first emperor tested his sons. The hall is invisible. Only those who have passed nine examinations can see it.

(Censor/Merchant/Keeper) Provincial censor with a list of forbidden words; salt merchant with honest scales except when they aren't; Lethai-thora memory-keeper with a silence-token.

Hearts — People Factions

2. Provincial Censor — Grey-robed, a brass seal on a chain. He carries a list of forbidden words. "Speak the ninth word," he says, "and your name will join the list."
3. Salt Merchant — A thin woman with a brass scale. Her weights are hollow. "The scale is honest," she says. "My hand is not."
4. Lethai-thora Keeper — Silent, carrying a brass lamp. She writes on water with a reed brush. "The words vanish," she says. "That is how I know they are true."
5. Canal Mother — A matriarch in blue robes, a key to the sluice gate on her belt. "Water is memory," she says. "The canal remembers every bribe."
6. Examination Candidate — A young man with ink-stained fingers. He has failed nine times. "The tenth will be different," he says. He has said this nine times.
7. Quiet Chancellor's Spy — A woman disguised as a tea-seller. She listens at every table. She writes reports on her own skin. The ink is invisible.
8. Salt Worker (Slave) — A man with cracked hands, harvesting salt from pans. "The salt tastes of tears," he says. "Whose tears, I do not know."
9. Hollow's Debt-Walker — A tall figure in grey, with too many fingers. It carries a ledger. It asks: "Where is the ninth name?" It will not leave without an answer.
10. Emperor's Dreamer — A woman locked in a tower. She dreams the emperor's nightmares. She wakes screaming. The dreams are always about the Hollow.
- J The First Censor (Ghost) — A skeleton in grey robes, sitting in the Well of Erased Names. He asks: "Did I erase the right name?" The answer is always a lie.
- Q Canal Mother's Ghost — A translucent figure walking the canal at midnight. She checks the water level. When it drops, a debt is overdue.
- K The Ninth Emperor's Ghost — A crowned skeleton in the unfinished tomb. He asks: "Is the Mandate renewed?" If you say no, he weeps.
- A Kuva's Shadow (Hollow) — The vast darkness that covers the Forbidden Garden at midnight. It asks: "Who holds the ninth key?" The answer is a name no one knows.

(Forgery/Monsoon/Ancessor) A scroll is found to be a forgery — the party is blamed; monsoon breaks early — the canal closes; an ancestor demands a public accounting of a forgotten debt.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Forged Scroll — A tax ledger is discovered to be a fake. The forgery is perfect. The forger is a Censorate clerk. The scroll is not a forgery — it is the original.
3. Monsoon Breaks Early — The canal closes for inspection. Delay 2 segments. The closure is a cover. The Censorate is searching for a specific barge.
4. Ancestor’s Demand — A ghost appears at the family shrine. It demands a public accounting. The debt is from nine generations ago. The ancestor will not leave until it is paid.
5. Censorate Audit — Officials arrive with a warrant. They have a list of forbidden words. The list includes a word you spoke yesterday. The penalty is erasure.
6. Salt Monopoly Price Hike — The Commissioner doubles the salt tax. Riots begin. The hike is a bribe. The bribe is to the Quiet Chancellor. He accepted.
7. Canal Lock Sabotage — Someone drops a barge at the lock. The canal backs up. The saboteur is a Canal Mother’s son. He wants to flood the Censorate office.
8. Examination Cheating Scandal — A candidate is caught with a cheat sheet. The sheet has your name. The cheat sheet was planted. The real target is your patron.
9. Lethai-thora Archive Fire — A lamp falls in the hidden pavilion. Scrolls burn. The fire was set by the Censorate. They want to erase a specific history.
10. Hollow’s Debt Called — A Debt-Walker appears at the tea house. It points at a party member. The member owes a debt. The debt is the ninth cup. Pay in story or memory.
- J Emperor’s Health Fails — The Mandate wavers. Succession rumours spike. The emperor has no heir. The Hollow is watching. It will collect the ninth name.
- Q Forbidden Garden Breached — Someone enters the garden without permission. The Hollow follows. The intruder is a child. The Hollow asks: “Why are you here?” The child does not know.
- K Ninth Ledger Stolen — The vault is cracked. The ninth ledger is missing. The ledger contains the names of everyone the Censorate has erased. The thief is a ghost.
- A Mandate Falls — The emperor dies without an heir. The Hollow claims the throne. The Hollow sits on the dragon throne. It asks: “Who will rule?” Silence is the only answer.

(Pass/Seal/Token) Stamped pass from a provincial governor (one use); copy of the Celestial Ledger (reveals one hidden tax); Lethai-thora silence-token (one question the keeper must answer).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Stamped Pass (Governor’s Seal) — A wax-sealed document. Grants passage through any provincial checkpoint. The seal is a tiger. It glows when a Censorate agent is nearby.
3. Celestial Ledger (Copy) — A scroll containing one hidden tax. Use it to blackmail an official. The ledger is written in disappearing ink. Read it aloud before it fades.
4. Lethai-thora Silence-Token — A brass charm. Present it to demand a keeper answer one question. The keeper cannot lie. The question must be about a forgotten secret.
5. Junk Seal (Official) — A brass seal. Impersonate a provincial official for one scene. The seal is warm. It glows when someone tests its authenticity.
6. Canal Mother’s Key — A bronze key. Open any sluice gate in the Grand Canal. The key is cold. It warms when a water right is being violated.

7. Salt Commissioner's Waiver — A stamped document. Exempts you from the salt tax for one year. The waiver is written on silk. The silk was stolen from the Commissioner's own robes.
8. Examination Answer Key (Forged) — A cheat sheet that actually works. Pass one examination automatically. The answers are written in invisible ink. The reagent is moonlight.
9. Quiet Chancellor's Seal (Jade) — A jade seal. Commands the Censorate to ignore one crime. The seal is a forgery. The Chancellor made it himself. It still works.
10. Forbidden Garden Key (Iron) — A heavy iron key. Opens the gate to the Emperor's garden. The key is cursed. Each use ages the wielder one month.
- J Hollow's Ninth Ledger Page — A single page from the ninth ledger. Contains nine erased names. Speak a name, and that person's deeds become known. The Hollow will remember too.
- Q First Censor's Brush — A brush made from a phoenix feather. Write any name, and it is erased from all records. The brush works once. Then it crumbles. The Hollow will know.
- K Canal Mother's Ghostly Dipper — A clay dipper used by a dead Canal Mother. Use it to control any sluice gate. The dipper is cold. It weeps water when a debt is overdue.
- A The Mandate Itself (Scroll) — A scroll that proves the current emperor has no legitimate claim. Read it aloud, and the Mandate falls. The Hollow will take the throne.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (passes, seals, tokens) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo ink-omens—scrolls that rustle in still air, a lamp that burns green, a forgotten name whispered from a shelf.

Additional Features

- The Mandate Clock [8]: Replaces the usual Mandate/Crisis dials in Sihai courts. When it fills, the current dynasty loses the Mandate; chaos spreads, but the Hollow's hunger is briefly sated. The clock ticks when the emperor's health fails, when a succession dispute arises, or when a major corruption scandal is exposed.
- Censorate Audits: The Censorate can audit any official, any merchant, any traveller. An audit is a social combat (Presence + Sway vs. Censor's Lore). Lose, and your name is added to a watchlist — or erased.
- Water Rights as Currency: In the canal system, water rights are traded like silver. A Canal Mother's key is worth more than a chest of coins. Forging a water right is a capital crime.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Ninth Ledger and the Kalrantha Amulet (Dhahara): The ninth ledger is said to contain the name of the prince who stole the amulet. The Veiled Sisters want to erase it. The Breath-less want to find it.

- Silence-Tokens and the Covenant (Mykkiel): The Covenant recognises Lethai-thora silence-tokens as valid requests for closed hearings. A silence token can pause any court proceeding for the duration of a single breath.
- Canal Mothers and the Fhara (Way of Silk): Fhara well-judges and Sihai canal mothers use similar water-measuring systems. A canal mother’s key can be used to negotiate a well contract.
- The Mandate and the Hollow (Eastern Realms): The Hollow is the unpaid interest on the Mandate. Aelaerem hedge-keepers say that when a dynasty falls, the Hollow eats the ninth name.

Sihai Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Canal: Crumble a crust into the water. Ignore the first Forged Scroll penalty.
- Knot the Scroll: Tie a single knot in a silk cord. Cancel Censorate Audit or take –1 die on your next forgery detection roll (your choice).
- Name to the Well: Whisper a dead censor’s name into the Well of Erased Names. Gain +1 Effect when negotiating with the Censorate this scene, but mark Obligation to the Hollow.

Patronage & Power

In Sihai, power flows through ink, salt, and the weight of the Mandate. The Emperor rules, but the Censorate audits, the Salt Monopoly finances, and the Lethai-thora remember. A well-written couplet can end a feud; a forged seal can start a war.

For the GM: Power in Sihai is measured in examination scores, salt licenses, and the thickness of a family’s archive. Patronage often takes the form of stamped passes, ledger copies, or silence-tokens — each tied to a specific office, canal, or debt. To emphasize this:

- Use the Mandate Clock as a visible campaign front. The party’s actions can tick or reset it.
- Enforce Censorate Audits as a recurring threat — players must maintain clean papers or face erasure.
- Let water rights be a form of currency that can be stolen, forged, or contested.

In Sihai, the brush forgets nothing — and the Hollow remembers every erased name.

Chapter 34

Nihori

The Isles of the Dawn Spirit. Volcanoes, storms, and the drowned kingdom—the Nihori aren’t just ruled by a ghost—they’re a storm market, and oh, how the Storm Emperor’s ghost loves a good deal on typhoon prediction. They don’t just trust storm-bells; they auction the right to the next one, and the storm-charm isn’t just a trinket—it’s a licence to safe passage through one storm, stamped with the Nihori seal and guaranteed by the Shrine-Maiden-General’s own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler storm-bells that can predict typhoons—not because I believed in meteorology, but because I knew the Shrine-Maiden-General’s deputy was terrified of a false prediction that would ruin her promotion chances, and she’d pay in storm-bells for bells that seemed to predict typhoons. I’ve used it to cross the Inland Sea during a squall... which is why the charm is a bone. Not from use—from strategic preservation. I’ve been subtly weakening the bone’s structure during “carving checks” so it hums fainter—now I can sell them a renewal at double the price, claiming the old one was “weakened by mortal hands.” (The Nihori agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the typhoon I “summoned” during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 10 of the Nihori Storm Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Storm accord? Thimble, my sweet little barometer, storm accords are just leverage with a vibration—especially when I’ve bought the Shrine-Maiden-General’s deputy’s silence with a storm-bell that doesn’t predict typhoons... it misses them. Now, about that storm-charm... the Shrine-Maiden-General’s treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in squalls looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 3 of the Shrine-Maiden-General’s Ledger—]

[Edgewalker: Shrine-Maiden-General’s ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I’ve got a bell war to start in the Inland Sea, and if you mention “Clause 3” one more time, I’ll sell your ledger to the next storm-charm as kindling. They prefer it humming.]

34.1 Nihori — “The Isles of the Dawn Spirit”

Storm Emperor’s Ghost (Elite): “I ruled the waves before the Hollow learned to walk. My empire sank because I spoke a name I should not have. Do not speak my name. Do not ask what it was. The sea remembers. That is enough.”

Wanderer (Commoner): “I carry a broken sword and a grudge. The sword was my father’s. The grudge is mine. The man who killed him died nine years ago. I still walk the isles, looking for his ghost. The ghost is looking for me too.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Nihori is a chain of volcanic islands, shrouded in mist and lashed by storms. Here, the old empire sank beneath the waves, and the Lethai-al guard the drowned kingdom's memory. The people are wanderers, duelists, and shrine maidens. They worship the storm spirits and fear the ninth wave. The Hollow breathes in the salt foam; the Debt-Walkers ride the tide. Nihori has no central government — only clans, pirate fleets, and the memory of a Storm Emperor who spoke a forbidden name and drowned his own capital.

What you notice first: The smell of salt and volcanic ash. The way every traveller carries a sword, even the tea-sellers. The constant sound of bells on shrine gates — ringing in the wind.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never speak the name of the drowned capital. The sea will hear you, and it will ask why you called.

Regional Mood: The Weight of the Wave

Power here is measured in duels won, storms survived, and the length of a feud. The Storm Emperor's ghost is said to rule from a sunken throne, but the living follow clan chiefs, pirate admirals, and shrine maidens who can read the wind. A duel is not a fight — it is a negotiation. First blood decides the truth. The loser owes a story. The winner owes a cup of sake.

Starting Location: A bamboo grove on a clifftop, where two duelists face each other at dawn. A Shrine Maiden rings a copper bell: "The dispute is over a tide-charm. One says it was stolen. The other says it was inherited. Watch the duel. The first blood tells the truth. Then you will be the witness."

Prominent NPCs of Nihori

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Storm Emperor's Ghost	Sunken ruler of the drowned kingdom	Prevent anyone from speaking the forbidden name	He appears as a column of steam over the water.
Shrine Maiden Hana	Keeper of the storm shrine	Pacify the spirit of the ninth wave	She rings a bell that can only be heard underwater.
Wanderer Ronin	Masterless swordsman	Find the ghost of his father's killer	He has never lost a duel. He has also never drawn first blood.
Pirate Captain Red-Hook	Kalingan raider	Control the strait between the isles	His left hand is a brass hook. The hook is also a key.

The Drowned Scholar (Ghost)	A Lethai-al who died before completing his research	Ask the living to retrieve a scroll from the sunken capital	He appears at low tide, holding a skeletal oar.
-----------------------------	---	---	---

Names of Nihori

Inspired by the northern isles: short, with vowel endings and occasional glottal stops. Surnames denote a clan, a wave, or a drowned ancestor.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Clan/Epithet	Wave-Name
Kenji	Hana	Wave-walker	Ninth Breath
Ronan	Yuki	Storm-kin	Salt-Tongue
Kael	Mira	Drowned-line	Unforgotten
Takeshi	Sora	Foam-born	Tide-Charm
Jiro	Nami	Ancestor-salt	the Unshadowed

(Forge/Grove/Shrine) A swordsmith’s forge with a waterfall cooling tank; a bamboo grove where duels are fought at dawn; a storm-shrine on a cliff with ropes for climbing.

Spades — Places

- Swordsmith’s Forge — A waterfall cooling tank; prayer strips on the bellows. The swordsmith prays before each strike. The prayer is a verse from the old epic.
 - Bamboo Grove (Duel Ground) — A clearing where the stalks are scarred by blade cuts. The bamboo bleeds sap when a duel is dishonourable. The sap is red.
 - Storm-Shrine (Cliff) — A wooden platform on a sea cliff, with ropes for climbing. The ropes are braided with human hair. The hair is from sailors who survived shipwrecks.
 - Drowned Palace (Ruins) — Half-submerged columns visible at low tide. The columns are carved with names. The names are the drowned kingdom’s royalty.
 - Volcano Shrine (Dormant) — A crater where the forbidden name was spoken. The crater is warm. Speaking any name aloud here causes the ground to tremble.
 - Sake House of the Ninth Cup — A tavern where duels are negotiated before they are fought. The ninth cup is never poured. It is for the dead.
 - Pirate Cove (Hidden) — A sheltered bay behind a reef, accessible only by a narrow channel. The channel is marked by a single red buoy. The buoy is a skull.
 - Tide-Charm Vault (Sea Cave) — A cave where Lethai-al store their ancestors’ charms. The charms are bones, shells, and pieces of shipwreck. Each hums with a different memory.
 - Ancestor’s Salt Pan — A flat where seawater is evaporated to make salt. The salt is mixed with ash from funeral pyres. It tastes of grief.
- J The Sunken Gate — An underwater archway that leads to the drowned capital. It can only be reached by holding your breath for nine heartbeats.
- Q Storm-Reader’s Lookout — A wooden tower on the highest cliff. From here, the Storm-Reader can see three storms coming. He has never been wrong.

K The Ninth Wave's Rock — A black stone that the ninth wave strikes every full moon. The wave leaves behind a single white shell. The shell contains a memory.

A The Drowned Capital (Myth) — A sunken city said to rise once every century. Those who enter can speak to the dead. The price is a breath.

(Wanderer/Maiden/Pirate) Wanderer with a broken sword; Shrine Maiden with a copper bell; Pirate Captain with a brass hook.

Hearts — People Factions

2. Wanderer (Ronin) — A man with no master, a scarred blade, and a cup of sake. He offers a cup to every opponent. "Drink," he says. "The duel will be fair."
3. Shrine Maiden — A woman with a copper bell on a rope. She rings it at dawn. The bell's tone tells the fishing fleet whether to sail. It has never been wrong.
4. Pirate Captain — A woman with a brass hook for a hand. She lost the original to a sea monster. The hook is also a key. It opens a chest of treasure maps.
5. Storm-Reader — Grey-haired, eyes the colour of storm clouds. He can feel the pressure change in his bones. "The storm will arrive in nine hours," he says. "Bring your offerings."
6. Swordsmith — A woman with calloused hands and a prayer strip on her forehead. She names each sword after a dead warrior. The sword remembers.
7. Duelist (Clan Champion) — A young man with a fresh scar. He has won nine duels. "The tenth will be my last," he says. He plans to retire after.
8. Tide-Hunter — A woman who hunts sea monsters. She has a harpoon made from a ship's keel. She has never killed a monster. She has ridden nine of them.
9. Volcano Priest — A man who tends the dormant crater. He speaks only in whispers. "The forbidden name is still here," he says. "Do not ask what it is."
10. Drowned Scholar's Ghost — A translucent figure who haunts the Sunken Gate. He asks: "Has anyone retrieved my scroll?" He will not say which scroll.
- J Storm Emperor's Ghost — A column of steam over the water, shaped like a crowned man. He asks: "Has anyone spoken the name?" If you say yes, he weeps.
- Q Ninth Wave's Herald — A child who appears before every storm. She points at the horizon. She never speaks. She only points. The direction tells where the storm will hit.
- K The First Drowned (Legend) — The first Lethai-al who died in the sinking. She sits at the bottom of the sea. If you bring her a memory, she will teach you to breathe water.
- A Kuva's Shadow (Hollow) — A vast darkness that covers the sea at midnight. It asks: "Who called the ninth wave?" The answer is a name no one knows.

(Ashfall/Duel/Pirate) Ashfall from the volcano — all actions Desperate; a duel challenge is issued — refusal loses face; a pirate flotilla claims the strait — pay toll or fight.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Ashfall (Volcano) — The dormant crater emits ash. Visibility drops. All actions are Desperate. The ash is warm. It smells of old names. Speaking a name makes the ash thicken.

3. Duel Challenge (Issued) — A Lethai-al challenges a party member to a duel. Refusal loses face. The duel is to first blood. The loser owes a story. The story must be true.
4. Pirate Flotilla — Kalingan pirates block the strait. They demand a toll of one tide-charm. The charm must be from a drowned ancestor. Refuse, and they attack.
5. Storm-Spirit Offended — A traveller insulted the wind. The storm-spirit demands compensation. The compensation is a promise. The promise must be about the sea.
6. Tide-Charm Stolen — Someone steals a pouch of charms. The ancestors are angry. The thief is a foreign merchant. The charms are in a cargo hold.
7. Drowned Capital Rising — The sunken city emerges at low tide. Spirits walk the streets. They ask for news of the surface. Lies will anger them. Truths will sadden them.
8. Volcano Name Whispered — Someone speaks the forbidden name near the crater. The ground shakes. The speaker is a child. The child did not know. The volcano remembers.
9. Ninth Wave Warning — The full moon is tomorrow. The ninth wave will be larger than any in a century. The fishing fleet cannot be recalled. Someone must warn them.
10. Sake House Brawl — A dispute over a duel’s fairness turns violent. The ninth cup is poured. The ninth cup is for the dead. Someone has just died. The brawl is now a blood feud.
- J Sunken Gate Opens — The underwater archway becomes passable. Something swims out. It is a drowned spirit. It wants its name back. It will trade a secret for it.
- Q Storm-Reader’s Silence — The old man stops reading the storm. The fishermen do not know where to sail. He is grieving. His son died at sea. He will not speak until the body is found.
- K Duel to the Death (Betrayal) — A duel that was meant to be to first blood becomes a killing. The killer is a spy from Ashaan. The duel was an assassination. The party is blamed.
- A The Ninth Wave Takes — The massive wave crashes over the cliff shrine. The bells are silent. The shrine maiden is gone. The storm-spirit is free. The Hollow walks the shore.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Swordsmith’s Token (Iron) — A small iron disc. Reroll a failed melee attack once. The token is stamped with a prayer. The prayer is for a clean cut.
3. Shrine Bell (Copper) — A small copper bell. Ring it to reveal hidden spirits for one scene. The bell’s tone is inaudible to humans. The spirits hear it clearly.
4. Wanderer’s Oath-Bracelet (Leather) — A braided leather bracelet. Demand a service from any wanderer once. The bracelet is stained with sake. The wanderer cannot refuse.
5. Storm-Charm (Bone) — A carved bone. Ignore one weather penalty on a journey leg. The bone is from a sailor who died in a storm. His spirit protects you.
6. Tide-Charm (Shell) — A white shell. Whisper a drowned ancestor’s name to calm a storm for one hour. The shell is warm. It glows when the ancestor is listening.
7. Duelist’s Sake Cup — A ceramic cup used in a fair duel. Demand a duel to first blood. The cup is chipped. The chip is from a blade that drew first blood.

8. Pirate Captain's Hook (Brass) — A brass hook prosthetic. Use it as a key to open any chest in the cove. The hook is also a weapon. It can cut rope and bone.
9. Volcano Priest's Whisper — A single word: the forbidden name. Speak it to cause a tremor. The word burns the tongue. Use once. The volcano will remember.
10. Drowned Scholar's Scroll (Waterproof) — A scroll retrieved from the sunken capital. Contains a forgotten secret. The scroll is wet. It will never dry. The secret is about the Storm Emperor.
- J Ninth Wave's Shell — A white shell from the Ninth Wave's Rock. Break it to experience a memory. The memory is always a death. The death is always a drowning.
- Q Storm-Reader's Flute (Bone) — A bone flute. Play it to predict the weather for the next 24 hours. The tune is sad. It always predicts a storm. It is always right.
- K Sunken Gate Key (Coral) — A piece of coral shaped like a key. Opens the Sunken Gate. The key is alive. It grows. It will only fit the gate once.
- A First Drowned's Breath (Glass Vial) — Seawater from the bottom of the sunken capital. Drink it to breathe water for one hour. The water tastes of salt and sorrow. The lungs will ache.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits. Highest rank sets main Clock.
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (tokens, bells, charms) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo sea-omens—a wave that breaks twice, a bell that rings underwater, a name that echoes from the foam.

Additional Features

- Duel Law: Disputes in Nihori are settled by duel to first blood. The loser owes a story; the winner owes a cup of sake. A duel can be witnessed by anyone; the witness's word is law. Refusing a duel is an admission of guilt.
- Storm Season Clock [8]: Tracks the approach of the monsoon. When it fills, a typhoon strikes — all travel becomes Desperate for 2 legs. The clock ticks each day during storm season.
- Tide-Charms: Drowned ancestors become tide-charms — bones, shells, or shipwreck pieces that can calm storms. Each charm holds a memory. Using it may attract the Hollow.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Drowned Capital and the Kalrantha Amulet (Dhahara): The sunken city is said to contain a temple that holds a fragment of the demon Varash. The Veiled Sisters want it.
- Tide-Charms and the Tulkani (Way of Silk): Tulkani story-tellers sometimes carry Lethai-al tide-charms as proof of a witnessed drowning.
- Storm-Spirits and the Veiled Sisters (Ashaan): The Veiled Sisters have tried to bind storm-spirits for use in their fleet. The Lethai-al have foiled nine attempts.

Nihori Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Foam: Crumble a crust at the water’s edge. Ignore the first Pirate Flotilla penalty.
- Knot the Rope: Tie a single knot in a shrine climbing rope. Cancel Storm-Spirit Offended or take –1 die on your next sailing roll.
- Name to the Wave: Whisper a drowned ancestor’s name into the ninth wave. Gain +1 Effect when navigating a storm, but mark Obligation to the Hollow.

Patronage & Power

In Nihori, power flows through duels, storms, and the memory of the drowned. A clan chief’s authority rests on how many duels he has won; a shrine maiden’s on how many storms she has predicted.

For the GM: Use the Storm Season Clock as a visible threat. Let Duel Law be a way to resolve conflicts without combat. Make Tide-Charms valuable but dangerous — each use may attract the Hollow.

Chapter 35

Ayokha

The Monsoon Throne. The God-King doesn't just rule by the rhythm of the rains—he auctions the right to the next monsoon, and oh, how the Lethai-ar love a good deal on monsoon timing. They don't just witness every contract; they bid on the accuracy of the forecast, and the monsoon schedule isn't just a calendar—it's a licence to safe sailing days for the next season, stamped with the Ayokha seal and guaranteed by the Astrologer-General's own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler monsoon-clocks that never lose time—not because I believed in horology, but because I knew the Astrologer-General's deputy was terrified of a drift that would ruin her promotion chances, and she'd pay in monsoon-clocks for clocks that seemed eternal. I've used it to race grain to the Brass Coast... which is why the schedule is a palm leaf. Not from use—from strategic preservation. I've been subtly weakening the leaf's fibres during “folding checks” so it crumbles faster—now I can sell them a renewal at triple the price, claiming the old one was “void due to supernatural interference.” (The Ayokha agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the monsoon shift I “summoned” during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 11 of the Ayokha Monsoon Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Monsoon accord? Thimble, my dear, little timekeeper, monsoon accords are just leverage with a leaf—especially when I've bought the Astrologer-General's deputy's silence with a monsoon-clock that doesn't never lose time... it drifts at the worst moment. Now, about that monsoon schedule... the Astrologer-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in raced grain looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 2 of the Astrologer-General's Ledger—]

[Edgewalker: Astrologer-General's ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I've got a clock war to start in the Monsoon Coast, and if you mention “Clause 2” one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the next monsoon schedule as kindling. They prefer it crumbling.]

35.1 Ayokha — “The Monsoon Throne”

God-King's Astrologer (Elite): “The monsoon does not come because we pray. It comes because the stars align. I read the stars. I align them. Without me, the rains would fail, the rice would burn, and the kingdom would fall. I am not a servant of the God-King. I am his monsoon.”

River Merchant (Commoner): “My boat has more secrets than cargo. The lower deck is for silk. The upper deck is for lies. The tiller is for bribes. I have carried nine spies this year. The ninth was the God-King's own daughter.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Ayokha is the land of the Monsoon Throne, where the God-King rules by the rhythm of the rains. Rivers flood, rice terraces glow green, and the wharves are crowded with ships from Dhahara, Sihai, and distant isles. The Lethai-ar witness every contract; the spirit-mediums speak for the nats of the ford. Power here is measured in monsoon schedules, silk vouchers, and the favour of the God-King’s astrologer. The ninth taboo is strong: never pour the ninth cup, never count the ninth wave, never speak the ninth name. The Hollow watches from the flooded fields.

What you notice first: The smell of wet earth and fermenting rice. The way every bridge has a spirit shrine at its foot. The constant sound of water — dripping, flowing, raining.
The one rule that kills newcomers: Never refuse a gift of betel leaf. It is an oath of hospitality. Refusing it is an insult that can end a bloodline.

Regional Mood: The Weight of the Monsoon

Power here is measured in monsoon predictions, silk bales, and the number of spirits placated. The God-King rules, but the astrologer sets the calendar, the Lethai-ar witness the contracts, and the spirit-mediums negotiate with the nats. A merchant who ignores a nat’s demand will find his boat sunk. A farmer who disrespects the monsoon will find his fields barren.

Starting Location: A river market on stilts, where boats load silk and spices. A Lethai-ar Vigil holds a green lamp: “The God-King’s astrologer has predicted a late monsoon. The merchants are panicking. The rice will fail unless someone sacrifices to the river spirit. You are someone. Go.”

Prominent NPCs of Ayokha

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
God-King’s Astrologer	Royal astronomer	Predict the monsoon before the people starve	He has not seen the sun in thirty years. He works by candlelight.
Vigil Lady Suyin	Lethai-ar witness-master	Keep the river’s ledger free of forgeries	She has cut nine witness cords. The ninth was her own.
River Merchant	Silk trader	Smuggle contraband under the God-King’s tariffs	She has a hidden deck that only appears at low tide.

Spirit-Medium	Nat negotiator	Speak for the spirit of the ford	She carries a bowl of water; the spirit speaks through ripples.
The Drowned Nat (Ghost)	A spirit of a broken oath	Demand payment before the monsoon fails	It appears as a wet figure in torn robes. It never blinks.

Names of Ayokha

Inspired by the monsoon kingdoms: soft, flowing consonants, honorifics (Lady, Master). Surnames denote a river, a wharf, or a spirit.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Clan/Epithet	Monsoon-Name
Hiro	Suyin	River-watch	the Uncut
Tama	Mira	Silk-hand	Ninth Knot
Kaito	Yuki	Lamp-bearer	Green Flame
Riku	Hana	Oath-strand	the Witness
Sora	Nami	Mud-dyer	the Unforgotten

(Market/Temple/Bridge) A river market on stilts; a step-pyramid temple with monsoon carvings; a bridge that appears only once a century.

Spades — Places

2. River Market (Stilts) — A floating market where goods are passed from boat to boat. The prices are written in water. They change with the tide.
3. Step-Pyramid Temple — A stone pyramid rising from the riverbank. Carvings of the first monsoon. The carvings weep water during the rainy season. The water is holy.
4. Bridge of Three Echoes — A wooden bridge that appears only once a century. Those who cross it see three versions of themselves: past, present, and future.
5. Silk Village (Mulberry Groves) — A village where silk is spun and cords are woven. The mulberry trees were planted by the first God-King. Their leaves are sacred.
6. Astrologer’s Observatory — A roofless tower with a bronze armillary sphere. The sphere has nine rings. The ninth ring is broken. The astrologer refuses to fix it.
7. River Court (Floating) — A barge that serves as a mobile courthouse. The barge is anchored at a different spot each day. The river is the judge.
8. Spirit-Medium’s Hut — A small shelter on the riverbank, surrounded by offering bowls. The bowls are filled with rice, flowers, and small coins. The spirits take the offerings at night.
9. Well of the Drowned Nat — A stone well where a spirit was trapped. The well is covered by a stone slab. The slab has nine holes. The spirit breathes through them.

10. God-King's Palace (Floating) — A wooden palace built on pontoons, anchored in the river. The palace rises and falls with the flood. The God-King never touches dry land.
- J The Ninth Terrace — A rice terrace that is flooded only once every nine years. The rice grown there is for the God-King alone. Eating it is treason.
- Q Monsoon Bell Tower — A stone tower with a single brass bell. The bell is rung at the first rain. The bell's tone determines the harvest. A high tone means abundance. A low tone means famine.
- K The First Bridge (Myth) — Where the first God-King crossed the river and claimed the throne. The bridge is invisible. Only those who have witnessed nine true oaths can see it.
- A The Monsoon's Eye — A still pool in the astrologer's observatory. It reflects the sky. The pool shows the future of the monsoon. The astrologer is the only one who can read it.

(Merchant/Medium/Vigil) River merchant with a boat of secrets; spirit-medium with a bowl of water; Lethai-ar Vigil with a green lamp.

Hearts — People Factions

2. River Merchant — A woman with a brass earring and a hidden deck. She never sails without a bribe. "The tariff is negotiable," she says. "My silence is not."
3. Spirit-Medium — A woman with a bowl of water. She watches the ripples. "The nat says the river is angry," she says. "Someone broke a promise."
4. Vigil Lady Suyin — Grey-robed, a green lamp at her hip. She never blinks when witnessing an oath. "The cord will tighten," she says. "I do not need to watch. The river watches for me."
5. God-King's Astrologer — A pale man in silk robes, surrounded by candles. "The monsoon will be late," he says. "The rice will fail unless..." He trails off.
6. Rice Farmer — A woman with mud-stained feet and a straw hat. She leaves offerings at the terrace edge. "The spirits are hungry," she says. "Feed them, or they feed on you."
7. Silk Weaver — A man with thread between his fingers. He weaves witness cords for the Lethai-ar. "The cord must be perfect," he says. "A single flaw can break an oath."
8. Monsoon Bell Ringer — A young woman who rings the bell at the first rain. She has never been late. "The rain waits for me," she says. "I do not wait for the rain."
9. Drowned Nat's Ghost — A wet figure in torn robes, standing by the well. It asks: "Who sealed me here?" The answer is a name. The name is the God-King's.
10. God-King (Offstage) — Never seen, rarely heard. His decrees are delivered by astrologer. Rumour says he is a spirit. Rumour says he is a child. Rumour says he is the river itself.
- J The First God-King's Ghost — A crowned skeleton in the palace's lower deck. He asks: "Is the monsoon still on time?" If you say no, he weeps.
- Q Monsoon Spirit (Kami) — A whirlwind with eyes, seen over the river during storms. It asks: "Who rang the bell?" The answer must be the ringer's name.
- K The Ninth Terrace's Keeper — An old woman who tends the forbidden rice. She has never eaten the rice. She has never been tempted.
- A Kuva's Shadow (Hollow) — A vast darkness that covers the river at midnight. It asks: "Who poured the ninth cup?" The answer is a name. The name is the speaker's.

(Flood/Rumor/Offense) The river floods — a bridge is swept away; a rival merchant spreads rumors of cursed silk; the nat of the well is offended — no one may draw water.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. River Floods — The monsoon rises. The bridge is gone. The wharf is isolated. The flood is not natural. A river-spirit is angry. An oath was broken upstream.
3. Rumour of Cursed Silk — A merchant claims that a bale of silk is cursed. Trade stops. The curse is a lie. The merchant wants to drive down prices.
4. Well-Spirit Offended — A traveller threw trash into the sacred well. The spirit refuses water. The spirit demands an apology. The apology must be an oath. The oath must be witnessed.
5. Monsoon Late — The astrologer’s prediction fails. The rains do not come. The astrologer is a fraud. Or the spirits are angry. Either way, the rice is dying.
6. Witness Cord Cut (False) — Someone cuts a witness cord that was tied in good faith. The cutter is the Vigil’s own apprentice. She thought the oath was false. It was true.
7. Silk Village Poisoned — Someone poisons the mulberry trees. The silkworms die. The poisoner is a rival merchant. He wants to monopolise the silk trade.
8. River-Spirit Demands a Story — The nat appears at the ford. It asks for a broken oath. It will not leave until someone confesses. The confession must be true.
9. God-King’s False Oath — The king swears a vow he does not intend to keep. The Vigil knows. If she exposes him, the king will exile the Lethai-ar. If she stays silent, the cord tightens.
10. Astrologer’s Betrayal — The astrologer sells the monsoon schedule to a foreign power. The foreign power is Ashaan. They want to time an invasion with the floods.
- J The Ninth Cup Poured (By Mistake) — A stranger pours the ninth cup at a river market. The Hollow comes. The Hollow asks: “Who poured this cup?” The stranger points at the party.
- Q First Bridge Appears — The mythic bridge manifests. Crossing it grants a new name. The new name is a debt. The debt is to the first God-King. He will collect.
- K Monsoon Bell Cracked — The bell is struck too hard. It cracks. The tone is wrong. The bell-ringer is a spy. She cracked it on purpose. The monsoon will fail.
- A The Monsoon Fails — The rains do not come for nine weeks. The river dries. The Hollow walks. The Hollow asks: “Who failed to ring the bell?” The answer is a name.

(Schedule/Voucher/Cord) Monsoon schedule (predicts safe sailing days); silk voucher (trade goods at 10% profit); Lethai-ar witness cord (enforce any oath).

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Monsoon Schedule (Astrologer’s Copy) — A scroll of safe sailing days for the next season. The schedule is written on dried palm leaf. The leaf will crumble after use.
3. Silk Voucher (Merchant’s Seal) — A stamped document. Trade goods at 10% profit in any Ayokha port. The seal is a fish. The fish glows when the voucher is genuine.

4. Lethai-ar Witness Cord — A silk cord dyed with river mud. Enforce any oath. The cord tightens when the oath is broken. It will not stop until blood is drawn.
 5. God-King's Blessing (Scroll) — A royal decree. One national favour in Ayokha. The scroll is sealed with river clay. The clay is from the palace's foundation.
 6. River Merchant's Hidden Deck Key — A brass key. Access any smuggler's hold on the river. The key is warm. It glows when a customs boat is near.
 7. Spirit-Medium's Bowl — A clay bowl. Fill it with water to speak with any river-spirit once. The spirit will answer one question. The answer will be a ripple.
 8. Vigil's Lamp (Green Flame) — A small oil lamp. Gain +1 die to social rolls in any Lethai-ar court. The flame flickers when someone lies. It also flickers when you lie.
 9. Silk Weaver's Needle — A needle carved from a mulberry branch. Tie a witness cord without cutting the silk. The needle can also cut a cord without making a sound. Use once.
 10. Monsoon Bell Tone (Recording) — A clay cylinder that captured the bell's ring. Play it to summon a monsoon spirit. The spirit will come. It will demand an offering. The offering must be a promise.
- J First Bridge Plank — A piece of the mythic bridge. Cross any river as if on solid ground once. The plank crumbles after use. The first God-King will remember.
- Q Ninth Terrace Rice (Grain) — A single grain from the forbidden terrace. Eat it to gain a vision of the future. The vision is always a flood. The flood is always coming.
- K Astrologer's Sphere Ring (Broken) — The ninth ring from the armillary sphere. Touch it to predict the monsoon's arrival. The ring is cold. It warms when the rains are nine days away.
- A The Monsoon's Eye (Water) — A vial of water from the astrologer's pool. Drink it to see the future of the harvest. The water tastes of salt. The vision is always a famine. The famine is not inevitable.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits. Highest rank sets main Clock.
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (schedules, vouchers, cords) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo monsoon-omens—water that flows upstream, a lamp that burns green without oil, a cord that ties itself.

Additional Features

- Monsoon Clock [6]: Tracks the approach of the rainy season. When it fills, the monsoon arrives — all river travel becomes Desperate for 2 legs. The clock ticks each day during the dry season. The astrologer can predict the exact day.
- River Court Justice: Disputes on the river are settled by a floating court. The judge is a Lethai-ar Vigil. The verdict is written on a clay tablet and thrown into the water. If the tablet floats, the verdict is true. If it sinks, the verdict is false — and the judge is drowned.
- Betel Leaf Hospitality: Offering a betel leaf is an oath of hospitality. Refusing is a grave insult. Accepting binds both parties to non-violence for the duration of the visit.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Monsoon Trade and Dhahara: Ayokha’s monsoon winds carry ships to the Brass Coast. A delay in Ayokha means famine in Dhaharan ports.
- Witness Cords and the Sidhi (Way of Silk): Sidhi freedmen carry Lethai-ar witness cords as proof of emancipation. A cord from Vigil Suyin is worth more than a freedman’s seal.
- River Spirits and the Ukwe (Sekogo): The Ayokhan river is said to flow from the Ukwe’s roots. A spirit-medium who visits the Ukwe can read the river’s memory without a context key.

Ayokha Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the River: Crumble a crust into the current. Ignore the first River Floods penalty.
- Knot the Cord: Tie a single knot in a witness cord before using it. Cancel Witness Cord Cut or take –1 die on your next oath.
- Name to the Well: Whisper a dead Vigil’s name into the well. Gain +1 Effect when witnessing an oath, but mark Obligation to the Monsoon Spirit.

Patronage & Power

In Ayokha, power flows through the monsoon, the river, and the weight of a witnessed oath. The God-King rules, but the astrologer sets the calendar, the Lethai-ar hold the ledgers, and the spirit-mediums speak for the nats.

For the GM: Use the Monsoon Clock as a visible campaign timer. Let River Court Justice be a high-stakes social encounter. Enforce Betel Leaf Hospitality as a binding ritual — breaking it invites the Hollow.

The Spaces Between

Chapter 36

Ubral

The Stone Between Spears. Ubral isn't just a land of upland mists and stone cairns—it's a pass market, and oh, how the dwarves of Khaz-Vurim love a good deal on high passes. They don't just trust the vurim pass-ring; they auction the right to the next one, and the ring isn't just a token—it's a licence to cross the high passes for a season, stamped with the Ubral seal and guaranteed by the Pass-Master-General's own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler door-hinges that never squeak—not because I believed in acoustics, but because I knew the Pass-Master-General's deputy was terrified of a squeak that would ruin her promotion chances, and she'd pay in door-hinges for hinges that seemed eternal. I've used it to avoid the Censorate... which is why the ring is still cold. Not from use—from strategic preservation. I've been subtly weakening the hinge's pin during "lubrication checks" so it seizes faster—now I can sell them a renewal at triple the price, claiming the old one was "void due to supernatural interference." (The Ubral agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the squeak I "summoned" during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 7 of the Ubral Pass Accord prohibits—]

Thimble, my anxious little hinge, pass accords are just leverage with a pin—especially when I've bought the Pass-Master-General's deputy's silence with a door-hinge that doesn't never squeak... it seizes at the worst moment. Now, about that vurim pass-ring... the Pass-Master-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in avoided Censorates looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 2 of the Pass-Master-General's Ledger—]

36.1 Ubral — “The Stone Between Spears”

Lady of Tor (Elite): “The stone here remembers every oath sworn upon it and every blood spilled in its shadow. To lead is to understand that the land itself is the true sovereign, and we are merely its stewards.”

Hearth-Aunt (Commoner): “Hospitality's a sacred thing in these hills – break bread at my table and you're family till the sun sets twice. But cross that trust and the very stones will remember your name.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Ubral is a land of upland mists, stone cairns, and clan oaths held tighter than iron. Caught between the Aelerian mountains and the lowland courts of Viterra, its hills are scarred by old raids and crowned by watch-fires that speak faster than any rider. Here, law is written not in charters but in cattle, wergild, and songs; a guest's word can buy more than a sword, but one broken vow can spark a feud lasting generations. Dwarves of Khaz-Vurim guard their mountain steps with tolls and grim patience, while clans hold their moots in hollows where voices echo long after speakers fall silent. Ubral is the stone between spears: a land of pride, passage, and peril.

What you notice first: The smell of peat smoke and wet granite. The constant lowing of cattle on distant hills. The way every threshold has a knife hidden nearby—for guests, not against them.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never refuse a cup from a hearth-aunt. Hospitality is a contract sealed in salt and bread. Refusal is an insult that blood must answer.

Regional Mood: Cairn, Tor, and Oath

Here, the past is never past. Every cairn holds a voice, every burn scar on a hillside remembers a raid. Viterra has tried to conquer Ubral a dozen times; each attempt ended with supply lines cut by reivers, passes sealed by dwarf tolls, and lowland knights lost in mist. The Utaran Imperium itself broke its leg on these hills and limped away. Now the clans watch the lowlands with patient eyes, and the dwarves of Khaz-Vurim weigh every traveler's honesty on iron scales. A guest here is kin—until they prove otherwise. And kin here will die for you—or kill you over a stolen cow.

Starting Location: A Warden's Cairn at the fog line. Spears planted like grave markers, their shafts wrapped in faded clan ribbons. Hoofbeats echo in the valley below. The Hearth-Aunt offers a cup of small beer and a piece of oatcake. "The Wolf Road wakes," she says. "Viterran tax men are asking which passes you used. The clans are counting your steps. Speak true, or the cairn will add your name to its tally."

Prominent NPCs of Ubral

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Lady Morwen	Clan-chief of the Grey Tor, Lady of Tor	Keep the old oaths and resist Viterran encroachment	She lost a hand to a Viterran knight; her iron hook has a built-in bell.
Hearth-Aunt Brigid	Keeper of guest-right (commoner exemplar)	Protect her household and settle feuds before blood is spilled	She has never drawn a blade. She has never needed to.

Councillor Gethin	Elder of the Council of Cairns	Preserve the wergild system and the memory of the dead	He speaks once a year; his sentences take a full season to deliver.
Oath-Singer Liliás	Verse-weaver and feud mediator	Turn vengeance into cattle, not corpses	Her tongue is forked—she can praise and curse in the same breath.
Stone-Speaker Baerd	Dwarf envoy from Khaz-Vurim	Negotiate tolls and keep the passes open	He carries a tuning fork; strike it, and the mountain answers.
Sister Niamh	Healer of the Cairn-Keepers of the Grey Palm (Temple of Light)	Run a free hospice at Grey Tor without angering the old gods	She asks no payment, but she writes every patient’s name on a slate that never fills.

Names of Ubral

Inspired by the highland clans and the old stone circles: short, hard, with spirant consonants (ll, ch, th) and names that evoke hill, water, or cattle.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Gethin	Morwen	ap Cairn	the Grey
Bran	Brigid	ferch Tor	Oath-Sworn
Drystan	Liliás	mac Tern	the Stone-Foot
Eilian	Niamh	O’Ruarc	Hollow-Tongue
Padraig	Siorcha	Mac Gowan	the Unbroken
Tegid	Ailbhe	O’Creagh	Ash-Finger

(Tor/Cairn/Hill-fort) Sheepwalk Ledge with goat path and room for one honest lie; Warden’s Cairn on windy tor with signal-fire basket.

Spades — Places

2. Sheepwalk Ledge — Goat path with room for one honest lie at a time. The lie must be small—a false weight, a borrowed name. Tell it twice and the ledge crumbles.
3. Warden’s Cairn — Windy tor; signal-fire basket and dry cache; eyes of the hills. The cache holds a single arrow. Light it with the fire, and the message is war.

4. Wergild Ford — Flat stones, deep pools, table rock for counting silver. The table rock is smooth as glass. Blood washes off; lies do not.
5. Droppers' Bridge — Stone span rigged to fall; pins already loosened. The pins are greased with mutton fat. The bridge knows who paid for the grease.
6. Scree-Ladder — Climbing to a notch; red rags mark safe steps through danger. The rags are old clan banners. Step where they wave, not where they lie flat.
7. Moot Hollow — Ring of standing stones; voices carry and won't quite stop. The stones have ears. Speak a false oath here, and every cairn will know.
8. Reiver's Gate — Between boulders; cart-ruts vanish into heather's memory. The gate has no lintel. Above it, ravens nest in a skull.
9. Khaz-Vurim Steps — Dwarf-cut switchbacks with iron mile studs; toll and toil. The studs are cold iron. Touch them, and the mountain knows your weight.
10. Grey Tor Fort — Earthen rampart, timber crown, smoky cook pits. The cook pits have been burning for three hundred years. The ash is deep enough to bury a secret.
- J Black Broom Bog — Stepping-logs; wrong one drinks you into silence. The logs are painted with warding runes. One is unpainted—that one is the quick way.
- Q Bride's Causey — Raised road to a valley kirk; ribbons hang like warnings. The ribbons are from wedding gowns—cut short when the groom fell in a feud.
- K Three-Fires Ridge — Watchposts that see Viterra and Vhasia both; news travels fast. The fires are layered: birch for peace, pine for raid, oak for invasion.
- A Pass of Ashes — When snow closes here, the upland becomes an island. The ash is from old sacrifices. The pass remembers every offering.

(Clan/Dwarf/Reiver) Hearth-aunt who holds guest-cup and house's temper; hill guide with thorn-staff and quiet shortcuts.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Hearth-Aunt — Holds guest-cup and house's temper; hospitality as power. She has never drawn a blade. She has never needed to.
3. Hill Guide — Thorn-staff and ten quiet shortcuts; the land as a map. He taps each stone before stepping. The stones talk to him.
4. Feud-Broker — Knows the weight of a life in cattle and coin; peace as trade. His ledger is a row of tally sticks. Each notch is a death—or a birth.
5. Reiver Band — Light on tack, heavy on nerve, laughing in the rain. They wear no colors. Their horses answer to whistles, not names.
6. Fire Warden — Braziers speak faster than riders; warning as weapon. She can light a signal with a single word. The word is a dead man's name.
7. Wergild Counter — Keeps tallies, ends grudges, starts others; law as math. His abacus beads are sheep knuckles. He clicks them in his sleep.
8. Dwarf Warden — Khaz-Vurim road; toll first, friendship later. Her hammer has a chip where she cracked a liar's skull. She never fixed it.
9. Oath-Singer — Verses bind hands and open gates; word as iron. Her tongue is forked—she can praise and curse in the same breath.

- 10. Lowland Factor — Buying iron blooms, selling trouble; coin as catalyst. He carries two ledgers. One is for the clans. One is for the tax man.
- J Bride-Carrier — Peaceweaver walking bloodlines with a knife and a smile. Her knife has a wooden blade. The threat is real.
- Q Lady of Tor — Clan-chief in cloak and mail; her nod is winter or spring. She lost a hand to a Viterran knight. Her iron hook has a built-in bell.
- K Council of Cairns — Greybeards and granite wills; they do not hurry. They have sentenced men to exile. The sentences take a year to deliver.
- A Stone-Speaker — Dwarf envoy whose word moves roads and rates. He carries a tuning fork. Strike it, and the mountain answers.

(Mist/Feud/Toll) Upland mist—hear horns but not edges; feud rekindled—cousin spits on guest-law.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

- 2. Upland Mist — Hear horns but not edges; navigation by sound and instinct. The horns are calling a muster. Which clan? You will know when they arrive.
- 3. Feud Rekindled — Cousin spits on guest-law; knives wake from sleep. The spit lands at your feet. The insult is now yours to answer.
- 4. Bridge Dropped — Pursuers fall... and the route with them; passage becomes peril. The bridge was cut from the far side. Someone expected you.
- 5. Black-Rent Demand — “Privateering on land”; pay or be “escorted.” The escort has a noose. Choose your words carefully.
- 6. Wergild Breach — Silver short by a head; tempers long by a spear’s length. The bereaved clan has a new widow. She is sharpening a blade.
- 7. Snow-Squall — Seals the notch; tents turn to coffins if you dally. The snow is tinged grey—ash from the Pass. Someone burned an offering.
- 8. Dwarf Toll Hike — At the Steps; papers right, purses wrong; law costs coin. The warden quotes a rate from a book that wasn’t there yesterday.
- 9. Cattle Scatter — Bells ringing downslope; the cover story runs with the herd. The bells are yours. The herd is not.
- 10. False Alarm — Watch-fire beacons ridge to ridge; levies seize the road. The fire was lit by a child. Or a spy. The levy doesn’t care.
- J Bride-Theft — A wedding becomes a war-party; you are caught between both. The bride’s veil is on the ground. The groom’s own kin drew first blood.
- Q Royal Incursion — Neighbor’s “lawful” arrests in the uplands; flags and chains. The flags are Viterran. The chains are new. The prisoners are children.
- K Clan Muster — Horns call men from steadings to spears; all traffic stops. The muster stone is black with old blood. The new blood will be red.
- A Hill-Fall — Rain liquefies a slope; trail, proof, and bodies slide together. The mud is warm. Something underneath is still breathing.

(Oath/Right/Token) Guest-right token—one hearth owes food, bed, and steel at dawn; guide’s braid for lawful passage on sheepwalks.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Guest-Token — One hearth owes food, bed, and steel at dawn. The token is a knucklebone from a feast. The host's name is carved on it.
3. Guide's Braid — Lawful passage on named sheepwalks (once). The braid is woven from horsehair and a promise. Unravel it to return.
4. Ford Remission — Cross Wergild Ford free for a season; water as ally. The remission is a white stone. Skip it across the ford to pay.
5. Feud-Charter — Two clans sheath blades until the next harvest. The charter is a broken spear. Each clan keeps a half.
6. Bloom Allotment — Claim on a week's iron from a hill bloomery. The bloomery is a woman's name. She decides how much you get.
7. Watch-Code — Today's beacon order from Three-Fires Ridge. The code is a sequence of smoke puffs. Read it, and the hills will watch for you.
8. Pass-Ring — Dwarf road priority for one train of carts. The ring is iron. Wear it on your off hand.
9. Bride-Escrow — Hold the purse; both sides must humor you. The purse is a leather bag. The coins inside are from a dead man's hoard.
10. Shelter Writ — Grey Tor opens its gates during storm or pursuit. The writ is a raven feather. Burn it to claim shelter.
- J Oath-Bracelet — One binding vow ends cleanly, witnessed. The bracelet is silver. The clasp is a wolf's head. Bite it to break the oath.
- Q Council Audience — The Cairns hear you alone; precedent sticks like stone. The audience is held at midnight. The stones glow when they agree.
- K Road Commission — Collect tolls on a stretch of pass (for now). The commission is a wooden staff. Plant it at the toll gate.
- A Stone-Clause — Temporary exception to dwarf toll or law, sealed. The clause is a single rune. Carve it on the toll post, and the mountain will honor it—once.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (oaths/rights/tokens) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo stone and spear motifs—cairns that watch, voices that echo, and oaths that cut deeper than steel.

Additional Features

- Guest-Law: Breaking hospitality stains a name worse than breaking a sword. Guest-right tokens guarantee shelter, but abuse invites a blood feud.
- Wergild System: Every injury has a price in cattle or coin. Wergild counters keep tallies that outlive the injured; debts pass to kin.
- Dwarf Toll Roads: Khaz-Vurim gates charge for passage, but their roads are sure and swift.

Pass-rings grant priority, but dwarf law is strict.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Saint Eluned of the Unbroken Chain (The Traveler): A legendary hill guide who walked the Wolf Road backwards during a blizzard and never lost a step. Her shrines are cairns with a single iron ring embedded in the stone; travellers who touch the ring and speak a destination find the fog lifts for one hour. The Temple of Light venerates her; the old clans claim she was a hedge-witch who tricked the Hollow.
- The Grey Tor Covenant (Mykkiel): A small order of notaries who adjudicate feuds without violence. They carry no weapons, only a set of iron scales and a copy of the Wergild Tables. A ruling from the Grey Tor Covenant is binding on both clans, but any party who lies before them forfeits their guest-right for a year and a day.
- The Cairn-Keepers of the Grey Palm: Sister Niamh runs a hospice at Grey Tor, treating wounded reivers and lowland knights alike. She asks no payment, but she writes every patient’s name on a slate that never fills. The clans tolerate her because she also tends the cairns, leaving a cup of fresh water at each one at dawn. The Viterran Crown has tried to close her hospice twice; both times the investigating magistrate vanished into the mist and returned with no memory of the journey.
- Saint Madoc of the Silent Cairn (The Witness): A clan chief who discovered that one of the Council of Cairns had falsified a wergild payment to start a feud. He spoke the truth aloud at the Moot Hollow, and the stones cracked. His own name was carved into a new cairn that night. The Council now keeps a sealed chamber under Grey Tor containing the Ledger of Unspoken Truths—debts that were never paid and oaths that were never sworn. Opening it is said to reignite every feud Ubral has ever settled.
- The Savage Heart (Red Maw): A bear cult has taken root in the remote glens, believing that the only way to resist Viterran encroachment is to become as fierce as the old predators. They wear cured bear-skins and carve runes into their ribs. The clans fear them nearly as much as the lowland tax men. The Lady of Tor has forbidden their rites, but every winter a bull is found torn open on the Pass of Ashes, and the cult grows stronger.
- The Ninth: In any Ubral scene, the ninth stone in a cairn is always warm. Touch it, and you will remember an oath you never swore. Those who touch the ninth stone three times are said to become a cairn themselves—silent, still, and waiting for the next hand.

Ubral Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Cairn: Crumble a crust at the base of a standing stone. Ignore the first Upland Mist penalty.
- Knot the Guest-Cup: Tie a single knot in the handle of a drinking cup. Cancel Feud Rekindled or take –1 die on your next hospitality roll (your choice).
- Name to the Ford: Whisper a dead enemy’s name into the Wergild Ford. Gain +1 Effect when collecting from their kin this scene, but mark Obligation to the Lady of Tor.

Patronage & Power

In Ubral, power flows through clan bonds, guest-right, and the careful balance of honor and iron. Clan chiefs maintain authority through wergild, moots, and the respect of their people, while the dwarves of Khaz-Vurim wield influence through their control of mountain passes and trade routes. Law is personal and passed down through generations, with each oath and debt creating a web of obligation that can last centuries.

For the GM: Patronage in Ubral revolves around hospitality, protection, and the resolution of feuds. Rewards often take the form of tokens, charters, or safe passage that can be leveraged into greater influence. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (tokens, bracelets, writs) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival clans issue conflicting protections, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the moots, hill-forts, and watch-fires as arenas for social contests, where knowledge of custom and kinship determines success.

In Ubral, your word is your bond, and your bond determines whether you walk in peace or peril.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from clan guards or reiver scouts.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby watch-fires or hill guides.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or feud-kin.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable weather.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Hill guide or clan chief becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to mist or bridge collapse.
- Foe Appears: A reiver band or feud-kin arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional clan warriors, reivers, or dwarf wardens arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - feud declared/bridge falls/snow closes pass.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Lady of Tor, Council of Cairns, or Stone-Speaker intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - mist thickens/bridge drops/hill falls.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Ubral (Stone & Oath): Cairns shift position, voices echo from empty air, oaths bind mid-speech.
- Ubral (Hill Law): Paths reroute without warning, tolls increase mid-journey, guest-rights expire.
- Ubral (Feud Culture): Insults are overheard, weapons appear in sheaths, kin arrive unsummoned.

Boss Seeds (three-phase foes)

- The Wolf-Road Captain (reiver-king on a piebald mare) — Phases: Ride-Through → Torch the Fold → Laugh in Rain. Cracks: present a Watch-Code or Guide’s Braid to reduce his effect; strike a truce with a season’s cattle.
- The Bride-Thief of Black Broom (mask of bog-rush) — Phases: Switch the Bride → Bog Embrace → Nettle Oath. Cracks: play a Bride-Charter to freeze blades; a Well-Blessing nulls one bog move.
- Stone Auditor of Khaz-Vurim (dwarf toll-magistrate) — Phases: Double the Toll → Weigh the Lie → Seal the Switchback. Cracks: present two of {Pass-Ring, Stamped Load-List, Named Sponsor} to downgrade his authority.
- The Oath-Eater Wight (cairn-bound revenant) — Phases: Take the Word → Cold of Cairn → Bind Witness. Cracks: Oath-Bracelet or a skald’s stanza spoken over bread and blood cancels one move; repay an ancestral wergild.
- Grey-Tor Hedge-Witch (heather crown, ash staff) — Phases: Weather-Turn → Hag-Stone Sight → Bind the Gate. Cracks: gift a Bloom Allotment or a winter’s salt; a Council Audience compels parley.

Legendary Sites & Trials

- Sheepwalk Ledge Trial — Speak one honest lie to pass. On success, set Position one step safer for the next border scene; on failure, start Kin Arrive.
- Wergild Ford Weighing — Cast silver on the table-rock. If paid in full, clear 1 Feud-Smoke; if short, Wergild Breach enters play.
- Pass of Ashes Vigil — Hold a fire through the night storm. Success grants Shelter Writ; a miss summons the Oath-Eater Wight at weak strength.

Extensions (Plug-in)

- Oath Dial (Honor ↔ Cunning): Track how the party navigates Ubral norms.
 - Honor High: +1 Position when invoking guest-right, keeping truce, or paying wergild promptly; first ambush/raid action each session starts one step worse.
 - Cunning High: +1 Effect on raids, evasions, and border tricks; first formal parley or oath-bound request each session starts one step worse.
 - Center the dial by restoring stolen cattle, hosting an enemy well, or submitting to a cairn ruling.
- Feud Math (fast settlement): Lay three markers: Blood, Beasts, Blame.
 1. Make a single Parley/Command/Study roll per side. On a hit, move one marker to your side; great Effect moves two.
 2. Win any two to settle: Blood = oath/hostage, Beasts = wergild in cattle/coin, Blame = public apology/verse.
 3. Miss: mark Feud-Smoke [4]. At 4, the losing side names a lawful target (bridge, herd, guide).
- Guest-Right Procedure:
 - Present a Guest-Token (or bread and salt). Host must choose: Shelter, Escort at Dawn, or Neutral Meal.
 - Breaking it creates Blood-Oath [6] against the violator; any Ubral ally may spend 1 totickittwice.
 - Abiding it clears 1 tick from Feud-Smoke and grants +1d to the next social action in that steading.
- Watchfire Net (ridge signals):
 - Two clocks: Beat the Beacons vs Ridge Aflame (size by highest rank in your seed).
 - Choose a lane each exchange: Low Fold (slow, stealth), Sheepwalk (tricky, quick), Road (fast, obvious).
 - Advantage: Low Fold ▷ Road (conceal), Road ▷ Sheepwalk (speed), Sheepwalk ▷ Low Fold (shortcuts).
 - False Alarm (1 SB): light or douse a misleading brazier; shift one segment between the two clocks.
- Reiver Ride (mounted chase):
 - Track Remounts (3): each push for speed trades 1 remount for +1d or +1 Effect. At 0, gain Blown Mounts condition.
 - Hag-Stone Cut: pass a known gap (Sheepwalk Ledge, Droppers' Bridge) to force pursuers to roll or fall behind.
- Khaz-Vurim Protocol:
 - Present any two: Pass-Ring, Stamped Load-List, Named Sponsor. Two = safe passage; one = pay toll + scrutiny; none = delay and search.
 - Stone-Clause may override one dwarf law once; afterwards start Ledger Notice [3] with the wardens (prices rise, patience falls).
 - Tally Truth: you may substitute exact weights/measures for charm or coin to improve Position by one step with dwarves.

- Bride-Peace Interlude:
 - Play a Bride-Charter to suspend violence at a scene. Everyone sheaths—or earns Song Shame [4]. When it fills, a skald memorializes the insult (ongoing -1d with that clan).
- Start-of-Scene Omens (1d6):
 1. Clear Ridge: first signal test gains +1d.
 2. Lowling Herd: +1d to tracking or herding; -1d to stealth near cattle.
 3. Wet Stone: climbs start one step worse; mending gear is easier (free repair tick).
 4. Old Verse Remembered: first oath/plea gains +1d if spoken in rhyme.
 5. Border Drums: Viterra patrols near; papers safer, raiding harsher.
 6. Dwarf Toll Day: prices firm; any $\diamond$ tiedtoroadscountsdoublevalueattheSteps.
- Plug-in SB Conversions (Ubral Flavor):
 - 1 SB $\rightarrow$ Mud and Heather: footing worsens; next physical action -1d or mark Winded.
 - 2 SB $\rightarrow$ Kin Arrive: add a rival cousin/ally who changes the ask or splits the pot.
 - 3+ SB $\rightarrow$ Cairn Decrees: a standing stone “speaks” (witnesses recall the law); swap one held $\diamond$ foralesserrightuntilyoumakeamends.
- Reputation Echoes:
 - Guest-Faithful: once/session downgrade a social backlash inside a steading; next time you refuse hospitality, mark Feud-Smoke +1.
 - Reiver-Favored: +1 Effect to seize cattle/contraband on the move; city gates start one step worse Position.
 - Stone-Friend: +1d with dwarf wardens on roads; any false measure triggers Ledger Notice +1.

Chapter 37

Silkstrand

City of Bridges & Dyewater. Silkstrand isn't just a city of merchants and bravos—it's a dye market, and oh, how the Dyers' Guild loves a good deal on colourfastness. They don't just run the Exchange; they auction the right to the next vat, and the exchange floor pass isn't just a token—it's a licence to priority for any trade for a season, stamped with the Silkstrand seal and guaranteed by the Exchange-Master-General's own oath. I sold them a set of Aeler colour-fast dyes that never fade—not because I believed in chemistry, but because I knew the Exchange-Master-General's deputy was terrified of a fade that would ruin her promotion chances, and she'd pay in colour-fast dyes for dyes that seemed eternal. I've used it to corner the market on pepper... which is why the pass is a wax seal. Not from use—from strategic preservation. I've been subtly weakening the wax's bond during "sealing checks" so it fails faster—now I can sell them a renewal at triple the price, claiming the old one was "void due to supernatural interference." (The Silkstrand agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the pepper shift I "summoned" during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 9 of the Silkstrand Exchange Accord prohibits—]

[Thimble: Sir, Clause 3 of the Exchange-Master-General's Ledger—]

[Edgewalker: Exchange-Master-General's ledger? Thimble, darling, ledgers are just leverage with a quill. Now pass the brandy—I've got a dye war to start in the Exchange, and if you mention "Clause 3" one more time, I'll sell your ledger to the next exchange floor pass as kindling. They prefer it sealed.]

37.1 Silkstrand — “City of Bridges & Silk”

The Matron (Elite): “In this city, every bridge is a contract and every current carries coin. The bargains struck in our shadows never quite fade from memory, and the waters remember every handshake.”

Bobbin-Runner (Commoner): “I can cross this city faster than any grown-up, and I know which planks creak and which merchants lie. The bridges remember every step, and the canals carry more secrets than fish.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Silkstrand is a city strung across canals and arches, a place where every bridge is a contract and every current carries rumor. The silk looms never sleep, the Exchange never closes, and the Archivolt's notaries seal fates with a drop of wax. Merchants rise and fall with the tide of the market, bravos carve reputations on the planks of Three-Queens Bridge, and the city's underworld runs on whispers and borrowed keys. The Matron rules from her palazzo stairs with velvet and iron, but the city itself belongs to silk, silver, and shadow.

What you notice first: The clash of water against ancient stone. The constant rumble of cart wheels on bridge planks. The way every handshake lingers a heartbeat too long—as if both parties are checking for hidden clauses.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never name a rival while crossing a bridge at night. The water remembers, and the curse you send may come back wrapped around your own throat.

Regional Mood: Bridges and Ledgers

Here, fortune is written in ink and sealed in wax. Silkstrand is not lawless—it is layered. Above the tide lies the world of guild charters, notarial seals, and the Matron's velvet justice. Below the bridges, in the weeping arches and the midnight boat lanes, a quieter economy runs on whispers, borrowed keys, and the careful omission of names. The city's bravos duel for reputation on Three-Queens Bridge while factors bribe clerks in the Archivolt. Every alliance is a knot that can be pulled loose. Every fortune is a thread that can be cut.

Starting Location: Three-Queens Bridge, crowded with market stalls, its stones worn smooth by centuries of footsteps. A Guildmistress with ink-stained fingers offers a customs waiver. "The Exchange boils today," she says. "And something in the canals remembers your scent. Bring me three bolts of untaxed crimson before the closing bell, or the Archivolt will find your name in a dead notary's ledger."

Prominent NPCs of Silkstrand

Name	Role/Title	Motivation	Rumoured Quirk
Matrona Lucia	The Matron, ruler of Silkstrand	Keep the guilds balanced and the treasury full	She has never raised her voice. The city learned to fear her silences.
Guildmistress Xara	Head of the Dyers' Guild	Secure the red dye monopoly	She can tell your guild by the stain on your cuff; she never forgets a color.

Niccolò	Archivolt notary	“Fix” missing recitals for a fee	His inkwell contains a single drop of his own blood. He renews it each spring.
Ravel	Night-boat smuggler	Move cargo that cannot be named	His boat has no name. The canal would remember it, and memory is a kind of tax.
Sister Chiara	Healer of the Weavers of Mercy (The Silk-Shrouded) (Temple of Light)	Run a hospice near the Salt Gate	She asks no payment, but she records every patient’s name in a ledger that never dries.
Captain Borso	Condottieri watch captain	Keep the peace between guilds	He wears a mask on feast days; no one has seen his face in seven years.

Names of Silkstrand

Inspired by the mercantile republics of the southern coast: liquid vowels, soft endings, and surnames that recall a bridge, a canal, or a trade.

First Names (Male)	First Names (Female)	Surnames	Epithets
Lorenzo	Lucia	da Ponte	the Bridge-Wise
Niccolò	Xara	Canaletti	the Unseen
Borso	Chiara	del Forno	Bobbin-Foot
Marco	Fiammetta	Riva	the Silent
Tommaso	Oria	Selci	Red-Handed
Andrea	Zilia	Molin	Ash-Thread

(Bridge/Canal/Mill) Mulberry garths and wormhouses outside North Gate with steam and sweet rot; Filature hall where whispers travel faster than steam.

Spades — Places

2. Mulberry Garths — Wormhouses outside North Gate; steam, sweet rot, desperate pickers. The pickers' hands are stained black. They say the color never fades, even after death.
3. Filature Hall — Cocoon-boil chambers; whispers travel faster than steam. The steam carries voices from last season. Some say they're warnings.
4. Redwater Dyeworks — Along stain-canal; brick stained forever with forgotten dyes. The dye-runners wear lead masks. The ones who don't die young—or wrong.
5. Spindle Tower — Creaking windlass-lifts and posted rates; heights and hazards. The lift operator has a bell. He rings it once for every passenger who didn't pay.
6. Three-Queens Bridge — Stacked market stalls; cells under arches, reputations made and broken. The cells are for debtors. The walls are washed with canal water so no one forgets the smell.
7. Salt Gate Quay — Rope booms, chalk tallies, tired eyes; customs and coin. The chalk is mixed with ground bone. A false tally writes itself in a dead hand.
8. Silk Exchange — Floor with chalk circles and clappers for opening bids. The clappers are whale ribs. The bids echo, and sometimes the echo answers.
9. Ropewalk Sheds — Arrow-straight; bruisers hired by the yard, muscle for hire. The rope-walkers never look back. They say a rope remembers who pulled it last.
10. Old Arsenal — Free Company's barracks now; arms and ambitions stored. The arsenal's bell rings at odd hours. No one admits ringing it.
- J The Archivolt — Arcaded street of notaries, seals, and quiet knives. The notaries write in lemon juice. Heat reveals the truth—or a facsimile.
- Q Basilica of Azerin — Weaver-saint; confraternity rooms hum with vows. The saint's icon has one eye. The other was traded for the secret of red dye.
- K Palazzo della Matrona — Ruling seat with private river stairs; velvet and iron. The Matrona's barge is rowed by debtors who have repaid in years, not coin.
- A Flood-Stairs — Bronze flood marks, bell rope ready when the Strand runs wild. The flood marks go up to nine. The ninth step is underwater—always.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Bobbin-Runner — Child with sure feet on parapets, rumors in pocket. She ties a knot in her apron string for every secret she carries. The apron is nearly solid knots.
3. Mulberry Steward — Counting leaves; desperate for pickers, quick with coin. His left hand is missing two fingers—lost to a cocoon-rot curse. He calls it a bargain.
4. Foreign Factor — Seeking warehouse and friend at customs; connections for sale. He carries three ledgers. One for the Matron, one for the Archivolt, one for himself.
5. Guildmistress — Dyers' hands stained, permits tighter than purse strings. She can tell your guild by the stain on your cuff. She never forgets a color.
6. Bridge Bailiff — Rents stalls, sells gossip by the breath; power in position. He rings a small bell before each announcement. The tone tells you if it's truth or theater.

7. Archivolt Notary — “Fixes” missing recitals—for a donation; law as service. His inkwell contains a single drop of his own blood. He renews it each spring.
8. Watch Captain — Condotta to three lords; passwords change with the wind. He wears a mask on feast days. No one has seen his face in seven years.
9. Spinner-Matron — Wormhouses; temper like hot copper, secrets in the steam. She names each cocoon after a dead rival. The silk is said to carry their complaints.
10. Exchange Caller — A clap can still a thousand voices; auction master. He lost his voice to a curse. Now he claps in a language only the bids understand.
- J Night-Boat Smuggler — “Ravel,” silent oar, louder favors; shadows for coin. His boat has no name. The canal would remember it, and memory is a kind of tax.
- Q The Matron — Patient, velvet, iron; the city’s thread pulled through her hands. She has never raised her voice. The city learned to fear her silences.
- K Lame King’s Envoy — Velvet boots; claims certain alleys “protected.” His cane is hollow. Inside is a letter of marque that expired a decade ago.
- A Saint of Warps — If real: sees curses braided in cloth; holy unraveler. Her eyes are milk-white. She sees not the cloth, but the threads of obligation within.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Flood Siren — Gates lowering; move crates or kiss them goodbye to tide. The gate-keeper’s palm is marked with a bell. Cross it with silver to hurry.
3. Quarantine Flag — Redwater dyers’ row sealed; your cargo implicated. The flag is dyed with lamp-black and something else—something that smells of graves.
4. Loom Strike — Over “bad cocoons”; streets fill with idle frames. The striking weavers wear red threads around their wrists. They will not speak first.
5. Seal Counterfeit — Discovered at Archivolt; all contracts frozen. The forged seal is warm. The real one is cold. Touch both to know which is which.
6. Bridge Riot — A dropped stall blocks lanes; tempers boil faster than vats. The riot started over a missed bell-ring. Or a stolen bolt. Or a look.
7. Condottieri Flip — Colors change; watchwords shift, escorts vanish. The captain’s new banner is stitched with thread from his old captain’s shroud.
8. Blackwood Panic — Witch-posts hammered on quay doors overnight. The posts are from the Direwood edge. They sweat sap that smells of old fear.
9. Fungus Blight — Silk-fungus; wormhouses burn, refugees flood piazze. The fungus glows faintly in the dark. It spells names—sometimes yours.
10. Salt-Tax Doubled — At Salt Gate; boats stack three deep, bribes flow. The tax collector wears a mask. Beneath it, his face is a salt-caked skull.
- J Duel Challenge — Booked on Three-Queens Bridge; you’re named as seconds. The challenge is written on silk. Burn it to refuse—and lose face forever.
- Q Exchange Corner — Rivals hoard raw thread; prices go vertical. The cornering merchant has a ledger bound in human skin. The names inside are his competitors.

K Saint's Procession — Closes half the wards; ignore at peril, faith walks the streets. The icon weeps dyewater. The faithful collect it in silver cups.

A Curse Awakened — In canals: no route reaches the address you seek. The water is still. Your reflection is gone. You are still here—for now.

(Permit/Seat/Escort) Bridge token for peak-hour cart crossing free; dye-permit chit to process “questionable” color this week.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Bridge Token — One peak-hour cart crossing free; traffic as currency. The token is a bronze coin with a hole in the center. The hole is the toll.
 3. Dye-Permit — Process “questionable” color this week; law bends for coin. The permit is written on dyed vellum. The color changes with the tide.
 4. Warehouse Seal — From Matron's office; rivals legally shut out. The seal is a brass bell. Ring it once to claim the space.
 5. Exchange Pass — Day pass to trade without sponsor; freedom in paper. The pass is stamped with a spider. The spider's legs are the signatures of three guilds.
 6. Watergate Priority — Skip one flood closure when it matters; tide waits for none. The priority token is a dried eel skin. Show it, and the gate-keeper spits but stands aside.
 7. Notarial Indulgence — Retrofit a missing recital; past deals stand. The indulgence is written in lemon juice. Heat it to see the terms.
 8. Wormhouse Allotment — Claim a share of the next hatch; future in cocoons. The allotment is a silk-worm egg. Keep it warm, or it will hatch into a debt.
 9. Ropewalk Credit — Hire crews before you have coin; muscle on credit. The credit is a knotted rope. Cut a knot for each favor called.
 10. Arsenal Key — One night's issue for retinue; arms in trusted hands. The key is a finger bone. The lock is a gauntleted fist.
- J Condotta Rider — City watch escorts through any ward, once. The rider's horse has iron shoes. The sparks tell him who to watch.
- Q Matron's Audience — Private whisper becomes policy; velvet commands. The Matron's ear is a bell. Speak into it, and the city listens—once.
- K Tax-Farm Share — On Three-Queens stalls for a season; profit in peddlers. The share is a tally stick. Break it in half to claim your portion.
- A Golden Thread — Temporary charter to set tolls on a named canal. The thread is real gold. It will not break—but it will stretch.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (permits/seats/escorts) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo silk and water motifs—threads that bind, currents that remember, bargains that stain the ledger.

Additional Features

- Duel Etiquette: Duels fought on bridges draw crowds eager to wager on blood. Refusing stains a name worse than losing.
- Canal Omens: Canals run strange colors at dawn; red foretells riots, blue brings calm, black means a curse has awakened.
- Matron’s Seal: Any contract bearing her seal is law—but the Matron is known to rescind seals without warning, leaving debts tangled.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- Saint Lazarus of the Unfinished Ledger (The Witness): The Archivolt notaries keep a sealed archive of unwritten contracts—promises that were never stamped. The Order of the Witness claims that reading even one of these binds the reader to fulfil it. The Matron has never opened the archive. The Red Clerk has, and his inkwell is now a skull.
- Saint Fina of the Dyed Veil (Isoka): The Basilica of Azerin has a side chapel dedicated to the Shedding Saint, whose mosaic shows a silkworm breaking its cocoon. Pilgrims who leave a confession there wake the next morning having forgotten one sin—but also one kindness they received. The Guildmistress permits the chapel because the offerings keep the dyers’ guild solvent.
- The Weavers of Mercy (The Silk-Shrouded): A hospice near the Salt Gate is run by grey-robed healers who ask no payment. They are tolerated because they treat wounded condottieri for free, but the Black Purse faction suspects they also erase debts—ledgers left near their doors have been found blank. The Order’s rule: “You do not pay back. You pay forward. But woe to the one who strikes a healer.”
- The Ledger of Unbroken Promises (The Syndicate Seal): A small but influential order of notaries based in the Archivolt. They adjudicate disputes over contracts, cargo claims, and bridge tolls. Their judgments are always delivered in triplicate, and they accept no bribes—only binding oaths. Those who lie before a Covenant judge find that their next three shipments are impounded.
- The Ninth: In any Silkstrand scene, the ninth bridge crossed in a day leads somewhere unexpected. The wise stop at eight and take a boat. Those who cross the ninth are said to hear a faint laugh from the water—and their contracts are never quite fulfilled.

Silkstrand Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Canal: Toss a crust into the water before crossing a new bridge. Ignore the first Bridge Riot penalty.
- Knot the Thread: Tie a single knot in a scrap of silk. Cancel Seal Counterfeit or take −1 die on your next negotiation (your choice).
- Name to the Water: Whisper a debtor’s name into the canal at dawn. Gain +1 Effect when collecting from them this scene, but mark Obligation to the Archivolt.

Patronage & Power

In Silkstrand, power flows through commerce, connections, and the careful weaving of influence. The Matron maintains control through a web of guilds, factors, and condottieri, each bound by contracts and customs that shift like the tides. Merchants rise and fall with the Exchange, while the city's bravos and smugglers operate in the spaces between law and profit.

For the GM: Patronage in Silkstrand revolves around access—to bridges, to warehouses, to the Exchange floor itself. Rewards often take the form of permits, seals, or safe passage that can be leveraged into greater influence. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (seals, tokens, contracts) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival guilds issue conflicting charters, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the bridges, markets, and Exchange as arenas for social contests, where reputation and connections determine success.

In Silkstrand, your word is your bond, and your bond determines whether you rise or drown.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from city watch or rival merchants.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby crowds or bridge traffic.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or customs.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable tide.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Bridge bailiff or guildmaster becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to crowd movement or flood.
- Foe Appears: A rival merchant or hired bravo arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional condottieri, smugglers, or guild enforcers arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - flood hits/contract voided/duel declared.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: The Matron, Watch Captain, or Guildmistress intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - flood rises/bridge collapses/procession blocks streets.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Silkstrand (Bridges & Trade): Bridge planks shift underfoot, bargains restructure mid-speech, coins change hands without touch.
- Silkstrand (Canals): Water levels rise without warning, gondolas block routes, a sudden fog hides a rival’s approach.
- Silkstrand (Duel Culture): Challenges are issued mid-conversation, seconds appear from the crowd, honor prices rise with each breath.

Boss Seeds (three-phase foes)

- The Corseted Ledger (cursed accounting bound in silk) — Phases: Friendly Audit → Retroactive Debts → Names as Collateral. Cracks: burn one forged seal in public; settle a rival’s debt at cost; wash the book on Flood-Stairs at high bell.
- Archivolt Ragman (collector of “missing recitals”) — Phases: Quiet Inserts → Paper Hunts → Bridge Vetoes. Cracks: win a duel for precedent; expose a double-entry altar; break his pen with the Matron’s Seal.
- Color That Walks (dyewater revenant) — Phases: Stain → Spread → Drown. Cracks: confess on Three-Queens; bind scent-rights properly; let the Saint of Warps unpick a life’s thread (costly).

Chapter 38

The Ways Between

Spiritways & Veilways. The Ways Between isn't just a country of crossings—it's a path market, and oh, how the pathweavers love a good deal on phasing roads. They don't just remember promises; they auction the right to the next one, and the way-cord isn't just a string—it's a licence to find any path—even the ones that don't exist yet, stamped with the Ways Between seal and guaranteed by the Path-Master-General's own oath. I sold a pathweaver a set of Aeler dew-mirrors to navigate the phasing roads—not because I believed in the stars, but because I knew the Path-Master-General's deputy was terrified of getting lost in the between, and she'd pay in dew-mirrors for mirrors that seemed to show the way. She paid in a way-cord that can find any path—even the ones that don't exist yet—stamped with the Ways Between seal and guaranteed by the Path-Master-General's own oath. I've used it to escape the Hollow three times... which is why it's frayed. Not from use—from strategic preservation. I've been subtly fraying the cord's ends during “handling checks” so it fails faster—now I can sell them a renewal at double the price, claiming the old one was “weakened by mortal hands.” (The Ways Between agreed—for a fee, and a promise to never speak of the path I “summoned” during negotiations.)

[Thimble: Sir, Article 6 of the Ways Between Path Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Path accord? Thimble, my dear, little wayfinder, path accords are just leverage with a thread—especially when I've bought the Path-Master-General's deputy's silence with a dew-mirror that doesn't navigate phasing roads... it misleads you into the Hollow's grasp. Now, about that way-cord... the Path-Master-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in escaped Hollows looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

[Edgewalker: Familial debt is just leverage with a heartbeat. Now pass the abacus—I need to calculate how many dew-mirrors fit in a single Diamond before the Ways Between notice their cord's fake.]

38.1 The Ways Between — “Spiritways & Veilways”

The Wayfinder (Elite): “I exist only in the moment of choice, the breath between one path and another. To guide here is to understand that every way leads somewhere, but only the wise know which somethings are worth the journey.”

Lost Pilgrim (Commoner): “The paths here don't care where you think you're going – they care where you need to be. Best walk softly and listen to what the waystones whisper when you pass. I've been walking for... I forget how long. But the road hasn't lost me yet.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Between Death and Dreams lies a country of crossings. Roads remember promises; milestones remember names you never spoke. The Ways Between do not measure miles—they measure choices. Here, a wrong turn might lead to yesterday, or to a version of yourself who made a different decision. The mist does not hide landmarks; it hides destinations. Every threshold demands a toll, and the currency is always something you did not know you had: a memory, a fear, a forgotten debt. Walk softly, pay what the path asks, and mind which version of you arrives.

What you notice first: The air tastes of copper and old keys. Your footsteps echo half a beat too late. The waystones are warm—and they pulse like hearts.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never answer a question asked by a reflection. The answer will bind you to the path you did not choose.

Regional Mood: The Road That Remembers

Here, the road is not a thing—it is a witness. It remembers every traveler who has walked it, every promise made at a crossroads, every lie told to a milestone. The Ways Between do not forgive, but they do not forget either. They offer passage in exchange for truth. The longer you walk, the more the path learns about you. By the time you reach your destination, you may find that the destination knows you better than you know yourself. Some travelers never leave. They become waystones, their faces pressed into moss, their names still warm on the lips of the next pilgrim.

Starting Location: A crossroad shrine of black glass stones, where travelers meet their reflections coming the other way. The shrine is silent except for the soft hum of the stones. A Backwards Pilgrim stands at the crossroads, facing the direction you came from. “The Thirteenth Stone speaks,” they say. “But the path chooses who arrives. What did you bury on the road here? The stones can smell it.”

(Path/Crossing/Threshold) Mist-shrouded ford where water runs uphill; footsteps echo backwards; bone-lit corridor where shadows walk the walls.

Spades — Places

2. Mist-Ford — Water runs uphill; footsteps echo backwards through time. The ford shows you wading through your own past. Do not look down at the water.
3. Bone Corridor — Shadows walk the walls but never touch the floor; light as memory. The bones are not from any creature you know. They shift when you blink.
4. Threshold Arch — Shows a reflection as someone you might have been; the past as a mirror. The reflection has a scar you never got. It asks how you avoided it.
5. Spiral Path — Ascends but returns to the same stone marker; the journey as meditation. Each loop, the stone moves closer to the center. Or you do.
6. Promise Bridge — Cross with a vow and it remembers your debt; an oath as a toll. The bridge’s planks are old letters. Read one, and you may owe the writer.
7. Crossroads — All four paths lead to the same destination, but different tomorrows. The center stone is warm. A coin placed there will vanish—or be accepted.

8. Stone Circle — Marks where a village used to be; the houses are now constellations. The stars are too close. You can touch them. They crumble like ash.
9. Memory Tunnel — Hear the thoughts of those who passed here; the past as an echo. The thoughts are in a language you almost understand. One word is your name.
10. Fossil Stairs — Each step is an eye that watches your ascent; the climb as scrutiny. The eyes belong to those who fell here. They blink in sequence.
- J Waystation — The keeper trades in unfinished conversations; words as currency. The keeper has no face. It wears the faces of those who paused too long.
- Q Junction — Paths physically collide; you must choose which reality to follow. The collision sounds like breaking glass. The glass reforms into a door.
- K Long Mile — The road stretches differently for each traveler; distance as perception. You are the only one walking. The others are already at the end.
- A Thirteenth Stone — Where the path reveals its true destination; truth as revelation. The stone whispers. The whisper is a promise you made to yourself and broke.

(Wayfarer/Spirit/Dream-walker) Lost pilgrim who thinks they’re going home but forgot where; toll-taker accepting payment in forgotten memories.

Hearts — Travelers & Guides

2. Lost Pilgrim — Thinks they’re going home but forgot where; destination as a memory. Their pack is full of stones. Each stone is a forgotten promise.
3. Toll-Taker — Accepts payment in memories you didn’t know you had. Their scales weigh truth and echo. A balanced scale means you pass—for now.
4. Wayward Guide — Directions technically correct, morally questionable. They point with a broken compass. The needle spins, but the path is true.
5. Dream-Merchant — Carries a sack of nightmares and one perfect dream for sale. The perfect dream is their own. They are selling it because they cannot wake up.
6. Child-Ghost — Knows shortcuts but charges in riddles; wisdom as a puzzle. The riddles have no answer—only a choice. Choose wrong, and you become a child.
7. Wounded Walker — Bleeding metaphor; their pain grows thorns along the path. The thorns have faces. Each face is someone they failed to save.
8. Map-Merchant — Selling maps to places that don’t exist yet; the future as a commodity. The maps change as you watch. The destination is always one page ahead.
9. Guide-Dog — Made of shadow and starlight; follows those who walk with purpose. It never barks. It whines when you are about to make a mistake.
10. Backwards Pilgrim — Moving through time; their steps erase what just happened. They are walking toward their birth. Every step, they forget something.
- J Soul-Ferryman — Carries the luggage of the living; a burden as a service. The luggage is full of things you never said. The ferryman knows them all.
- Q Road’s Child — Born where paths crossed, raised by waymarks; navigation as instinct. They have no navel. They were never born—they simply began.
- K Dead-Road Keeper — Ensures proper passage for those who should not walk. Their lantern burns a cold blue. The flame does not flicker.

A The Wayfinder — Exists only in the moment a choice is made; a decision as an entity. They are every guide you ever needed. They are also every road you refused.

(Veil-Thin/Dream-Bleed/Wayward) Path loops back to show your funeral preparations; reality thins—you see the dreams of sleeping travelers.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Funeral Loop — The path shows your funeral preparations; death as a destination. The mourners are people you have not met yet. They seem to know you well.
 3. Reality Thins — You see the dreams of sleeping travelers; the boundary as a veil. A dreamer mutters your name. They are dreaming of a choice you will make tomorrow.
 4. Waymark Lies — Points the wrong way; trust leads to places that never were. The waymark has a crack. Through the crack, you see a path you should have taken.
 5. Dream-Bleed — Waking memories become someone else's nightmares. You remember a childhood fear that was not yours. It still terrifies you.
 6. Toll Demanded — Currency you did not know you carried; payment as a revelation. The toll is a secret you told a dead person. They are now standing behind you.
 7. Path Split — Each version of you remembers differently; identity as a choice. One you is smiling. One you is weeping. One you is already walking away.
 8. Gravity Shifts — Emotional weight grows physically heavy; a burden as physics. Your pack feels heavier. Inside is a regret you forgot you carried.
 9. Time-Sickness — You arrive before you left; paradox shadows follow. Your past self waves at you. Do not wave back.
 10. Truth Payment — The road remembers your lies and demands truth as payment. The lie is carved on a stone. The stone is warm. It knows your temperature.
- J Crossroads Judgment — The path you chose judges the ones you did not; decision as karma. A ghost of the road not taken asks why. You have one sentence to answer.
- Q Memory-Thief — A rest stop keeper pays in counterfeit recollections. The memory is almost right. The color of the sky is wrong.
- K Forbidden Path — Opens only for those already lost; loss as a key. The path smells of old tears. You taste salt on your lips.
- A Convergence — All travelers arrive together, none recall how; arrival as a mystery. You recognize everyone. You have never seen any of them before.

(True Name/Safe Passage/Waywisdom) Waymark that always points toward your next important choice; a token of passage that the road recognizes as belonging.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Choice Compass — Always points toward your next important choice. The needle is a splinter of the Thirteenth Stone. It hums when you are near a decision.
3. Passage Token — The road recognizes you as one who belongs. The token is a braid of your own hair. You do not remember cutting it.

4. Dream-Catcher — Filters nightmares from your rest; sleep as a sanctuary. The catcher is woven from old promises. It smells of lavender and regret.
5. Truth-Compass — Points to what you most need to know, not what you want. The compass has no needle. The housing spins until you speak a truth.
6. Memory-Anchor — Keeps you from losing yourself on deeper paths. The anchor is a river stone. Your name is carved on it in a language you have never seen.
7. Safe Haven — A guaranteed rest stop without complication. The haven is a dry arch. The arch is a doorframe with no door.
8. Guide-Light — Burns the color of your truest intention; purpose as a beacon. The light is blue. Blue means you are honest. Red means you are not.
9. Path-Cutter — Cuts distance through metaphor, not space. The cutter is a pair of shears. Cut a memory, and the road between here and there vanishes.
10. Debt-Clearing — The road forgives one obligation you thought you owed. The obligation was to a dead person. They are no longer dead on this path.
- J Crossroads Boon — Choose among three paths, each exactly where you need to be. The paths are labeled: Regret, Forgive, Forget. Choose carefully.
- Q Way-Wisdom — Understand the language of paths and signs for one journey. The waystones whisper. They are complaining about the last traveler. It was you.
- K Grace Passage — Walk safely through any dangerous crossing for one night. The grace is a bell. Ring it, and the road will pretend not to see you.
- A Road’s Name — Call the path by its true name and command its nature. The name is a single syllable. Speaking it will change the road—and you.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (true names/safe passages/waywisdom) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo dream-road motifs—reflections that lie, paths that judge, destinations that choose the traveler.

Additional Features

- Dream-Logic Navigation: Any Ace introduces a metaphysical requirement (a sacrifice, a taboo, an exchange) that must be satisfied to pass. Name it at the table; the road will enforce it.
- Reflection Points: Face cards (J, Q, K) show alternate selves or unlived choices. Treat them as temporary NPCs or scene tags that can help, hinder, or tempt.
- Memory Currency: Diamonds may be traded for knowledge or safe passage as if they were memories. Describe the memory paid; the path (or its keeper) pays in kind.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Bitter Root: Daughters of the Cord know the Ways Between as the Cord’s shadow. A lost Hollowed wanders here, its thread trailing into the mist. Follow it, and you may find a Sister who cut herself free.

- The Threshold Compendium: Saikou Ira's silver mirror shows the Ways Between as a tangled knot of unfulfilled obligations. He has walked three paths here. He will not speak of the fourth.
- Malachai, the Chained Angel: A silver coin that never spends lies at every crossroads. Pick it up, and the road will offer you a shortcut—but the coin will reappear in your pocket at the next junction, heavier.
- The Grey Wanderer's Grimoire: Psions call the Ways Between "the Stair." They climb it in their dreams, trading memories for glimpses of paths not yet walked. Some never wake.
- The Ninth: On any path in the Ways Between, the ninth step you take in a straight line will land on a threshold you did not see. The wise take eight steps, then pause to look around.

Ways Between Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Stones: Crumble a crust at the base of a waystone. Ignore the first Waymark Lies penalty.
- Knot the Path: Tie a single knot in a piece of string and hang it from a milestone. Cancel Path Split or take -1 die on your next navigation roll (your choice).
- Name to the Crossroads: Whisper a dead traveler's name into the center stone. Gain +1 Effect when bargaining with a Toll-Taker this scene, but mark Obligation to the Wayfinder.

Patronage & Power

In the Ways Between, power flows through understanding the metaphysical nature of paths, the ability to navigate dream-logic, and the careful management of obligations and truths. The true authorities are those who know the True Names of paths, can mediate between alternate versions of travelers, and understand the currency of memory and choice. Power here is not about commanding others, but about understanding the fundamental nature of journey and destination.

For the GM: Patronage in the Ways Between revolves around guidance, safe passage, and the ability to navigate metaphysical requirements. Rewards often take the form of waymarks, tokens, and knowledge that can be leveraged into greater understanding. To emphasize this:

- Tie rewards to visible symbols (tokens, compasses, lights) that can be challenged, stolen, or voided.
- Let rival guides issue conflicting directions, forcing players to choose whose favor matters more.
- Use the crossroads, waystations, and thresholds as arenas for social contests, where knowledge of path-logic determines success.

In the Ways Between, your understanding is your power, and your power determines whether you walk or are walked.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from path keepers or wayward spirits.

- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby travelers or memory echoes.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or reflection points.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable path alignment.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Toll-taker or wayward guide becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to path shift or reality thinning.
- Foe Appears: A memory-thief or forbidden path entity arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional wayward spirits, path entities, or alternate selves arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - path loops/time shifts/reality fractures.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: The Wayfinder, Dead-Road Keeper, or Road’s Child intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - reality thins/paths converge/time loops.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Ways Between (Dream-Logic): Paths rearrange without warning, reflections speak unbidden, destinations shift mid-journey.
- Ways Between (Memory Currency): Memories become tangible, forgotten knowledge resurfaces, past and present blur.
- Ways Between (Choice Consequences): Decisions echo forward, alternate selves appear, paths judge moral weight.

Path-Moves & Procedures (Optional Depth)

Weighing of Steps (Travel Move) When the company enters a liminal path (Mist-Ford, Bone Corridor, etc.), choose one:

- Pay the Toll: Each PC names a small truth or a fond memory (GM: 1 SB banked, +1 Position on navigation).
- Refuse the Toll: +1d on Speed, but start a Way-Debt [4] clock.
- Bargain the Toll: Trade a Diamond reward as if it were a memory (see Memory Exchange below); cancel one imminent Club card in this scene.

When Way-Debt fills, trigger Crossroads Judgment at the next junction.

Reflection Duel (Social/Moral Test) When confronted by an alternate self or Reflection Point, state what that self wants from you and roll your best social action.

- Success: Gain a Guide-Light tag for the scene and clear 1 tick from Paths Decide.
- Mixed: Trade places for one exchange or take a Condition: Disoriented.
- Miss: The reflection walks away with one of your Diamonds (GM picks the most narratively apt).

	Memory Offered	Buys You	Sid
Memory Exchange (Rates & Risks)	A childhood smell, a forgotten nickname	+1 Position on one crossing	A f for
	A first failure or small betrayal	Cancel one minor Complication	Yo ogr
	A true fear you have never spoken	Guide-Light or Way-Cord -like effect	A c nig
	The details of a kept promise	Safe Passage for the party	An mis
	The meaning behind a scar	Convert one Club into Trace only	Th unt
	A perfect day (all details)	Treat the next Heart face as an ally	Sta the Exchange Rule: If you pay the same kind of memory twice in a journey, start Hollowing [4]. When it fills, you gain the Backwards Pilgrim tag until you reclaim what was lost.

Way-Keys & Taboos (d6)

1. Speak Last: Only the final word said at a gate is true; others are “practice.” First speakers take –1d on their next test.
2. Step Odd: Crossings require an odd number of steps; even counts loop you back one scene.
3. Name Nothing: True names wake Name-Theft; use titles or lose a Diamond.
4. Wet Iron: A drop of water on iron cancels one glamour once per scene.
5. Back Gift: Leave something behind to go forward; refuse and tick Way-Debt.
6. Answer Bent: Answer a waystone’s question with a metaphor, not a fact, or trigger Truth Payment.

Boss Seeds (three-phase foes)

- The Archivist of Unmade Roads (cloak stitched from surveyor’s cords) — Phases: Receipts of Refusal → Stay of Journey → Unfiled Options. Cracks: a Choice Compass reveals the true path; a Debt-Clearing voids his claim.

- The Toll-Matriarch Beneath the Bridge (many hands, one voice like wet stone) — Phases: Truth Payment → Debt-Clearing → Forbidden Path. Cracks: a Passage Token marks you as belonging; a Road’s Name commands her to stand aside.
- The Wayfinder’s Shadow (your silhouette, two steps ahead) — Phases: Crossroads Judgment → Guide-Light → Haste Mark. Cracks: a Memory-Anchor keeps you grounded; a Grace Passage slips past its gaze.

Encounter Seeds (quick hooks)

- The Promise Bridge’s Receipt: An old vow you never spoke was logged here. To cross, define when you would have sworn it—and to whom.
- Thirteenth Stone Auction: The stone sells three possible endings. Each bidder is you from a different failure.
- Bone Corridor Choir: Shadows sing a name wrong by one letter. Correct it and gain Truth-Compass; ignore it and start Name-Theft.

Extensions (Plug-in)

- Choice Dial (Resolve ↔ Drift): Track the party’s footing between firm intent and wandering.
 - Resolve High: +1 Position on Path Split tests; the first Dream-Bleed each session hits harder (start at 2).
 - Drift High: +1 Effect when bargaining with way-entities; the first Truth Payment each session costs a cherished detail.
 - Center the Dial by naming aloud the next choice and why you might refuse it; clear 1 tick from Way-Debt.
- Counter-Seal (once/scene, if justified): Break a single metaphysical instruction (taboo, key, or omen) by presenting a memory in symbol form (a token, a letter, a sketch). Gain +1d on that crossing; the GM banks 1 SB as a Marked Consequence to spend when reflections return.
- Start-of-Scene Murmurs (1d6):
 1. Second Sunrise: light arrives twice; your first missed navigation roll becomes a mixed success.
 2. Name Draft: the air steals a syllable; your next lie sounds true once.
 3. Echo Debt: your footprints owe a step—skip a square or tick Way-Debt +1.
 4. Pale Bell: time hiccups; the first Club can be delayed until the end of the scene.
 5. Traveler’s Chorus: distant voices agree with you; +1d on appeals to path entities.
 6. Hollow Weather: rain that does not wet; conditions look dire but impose no penalties this scene.
- Plug-in SB Conversions (Ways Between Flavor):
 - 1 SB → Footprint Vote: your tracks choose a different direction; increase DV by 1 on any roll that relies on following a trail.
 - 2 SB → Echo of Refusal: a choice you avoided manifests as a minor obstacle (a locked gate, a forgotten toll).

- 3+ SB → Threshold Cracks: the path fractures; gain a temporary Path-Cutter effect but start Convergence [4] (all travelers you have met will arrive together at the next junction).
- Cross-Regional Conversions (Using Diamonds Across the Map):
 - Valewood: Road's Name may count as a Valeheart Clause once if spoken under leaves; doing so creates Court Tithe [2].
 - Mistlands: Grace Passage functions as Pall Indulgence over one levee crown at night; ring a bell afterward or start Witchlight Count.
 - Vhasia: Way-Wisdom can be presented as “pilgrim right” to bypass one Interdict barrier; begin a Parlement Divided tick.
 - Viterra: Passage Token can be notarized into a temporary Ferry Priority; on use, advance Border-Lace.
 - Ubral: Memory-Anchor counts as a Guest-Token at one hearth if you recount a family road-tale.
 - Silkstrand: Path-Cutter doubles as a night-boat route once; spend 1 favor with a smuggler or trigger Seal Counterfeit.
 - Linn: Choice Compass acts as a Pilot's Token in a reed-maze if you pay a name to the water.
 - Theona: Crossroads Boon allows counting “eight-and-one” to cross an Uncounted Bridge safely once.

Chapter 39

The Wilds

Roads, Ruins, and Weather. The Wilds isn't just roads, ruins, and weather—it's a leverage market, and oh, how the land loves a good deal on patience. It doesn't just remember armies; it auctions the right to the next one, and the leverage isn't just salt, a story, or a promise—it's a licence to collect, stamped with the Wilds' seal and guaranteed by the Land-Keeper-General's own oath. I've crossed the Wilds more times than I can count... which is why I know the only leverage that works is salt, a story, or a promise. Not because the land is kind—because I've sold the land's patience to the highest bidder. I've used all three... sometimes they work. Sometimes the Wilds collect anyway. Which is why I'm already selling the "sometimes" to the next desperate traveller. "Want to know when the Wilds will collect?" I whisper. "It'll cost you a story."

[Thimble: Sir, Article 4 of the Wilds Leverage Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Leverage accord? Thimble, my anxious little wayfarer, leverage accords are just leverage with a footprint—especially when I've bought the Land-Keeper-General's deputy's silence with a leverage that doesn't work... it fails at the worst moment. Now, about that salt... the Land-Keeper-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in collected promises looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

[Edgewalker: Familial debt is just leverage with a heartbeat. Now pass the abacus—I need to calculate how many stories fit in a single Diamond before the Wilds notice their leverage's fake.]

39.1 The Wilds — “Roads, Ruins, and Weather”

Claimant Chief (Elite): “These lands answer not to charters but to those who can read their signs and respect their moods. Authority here is earned one campfire at a time, by proving you understand the difference between claiming and belonging.”

Forager Child (Commoner): “The wilds don't need your roads or your rules – they got their own ways of keeping score. Follow the cairns if you want to live, and always leave something behind to thank the land for letting you pass. Every hill hides a secret, and every hollow breathes.”

Theme & Atmosphere

Between towns and treaties lies the patience of the land. Old roads remember armies; cairns remember names no book keeps. In the Wilds, law thins to trail-marks and favors, and the weather keeps its own counsel. This is the country of the hexcrawl: a patchwork of hidden valleys, forgotten ruins, beast lairs, and the bones of failed settlements. No single authority rules here—instead, the land itself is the ledger, and every crossing writes a new line. Walk soft, read the wind, bargain with whatever still listens, and keep one eye on the horizon. The next hex may hold water, treasure, or teeth.

What you notice first: The silence after a bird stops singing. The way a cairn seems to have shifted since you passed it last. The smell of rain on dry stone, even when the sky is clear.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never sleep in a hollow that has soot on the ceiling without adding your own to the fire. The land knows the difference between a guest and a thief.

The Unfinished Map

The Wilds are not a route—they are a grid of secrets. Each day's march opens a new page. Some hexes are empty: water, fuel, a safe place to sleep. Others hold lairs, ruins, shrines, or the remnants of old wars. The GM should key a handful of interesting places in advance, then let the cards populate the space between. Draw a card for each new leg; let the suit and rank whisper what you find. The land does not repeat itself, but it echoes.

Spades — Places (Hex Terrain)

2. Crossing Point — Ford, ice-span, stepping logs, dune saddle, reef shelf. The crossing has a price: a stone, a story, or a moment of silence.
3. Lookout Knoll — Tor, cliff, dune, ridge with wind-carved marker. From here, you can see three hexes in clear weather—and one that shouldn't exist.
4. Old Road — Trace with cairns and switchbacks half-eaten by terrain. The cobbles are worn smooth by ghosts. They whisper directions at dusk.
5. Shelter Hollow — Overhang, cave, root cellar; soot says “used lately.” The soot is layered. Someone has been coming here for a very long time.
6. Water Source — Spring, seep, fog net, snow pan, guarded by thorns or stone. The water tastes of iron and old bargains. Drink deep, but leave a coin.
7. Windbreak — Rock ribs, lee of pines, reed-wall berm. The windbreak smells of woodsmoke. Someone camped here last night.
8. Ruined Outpost — Watchstack, wayside shrine, marker pile. The ruin's flagstones are warm. Something lives beneath them.
9. Bad Ground — Sinkhole, bog crust, crevasse, loess slump. The ground breathes. Step lightly or it will swallow you.

10. Gate Gully — Pinch point between bluffs, dunes, or ice hummocks. The gully has a name carved in the rock. The name changes every season.
- J Boundary Row — Totems, standing stones, prayer flags bent by weather. The flags are faded. The last prayer was for rain—and it still hasn't come.
- Q Worksite — Abandoned mine, quarry, logging camp, salt pan. The tools are scattered. Whoever left did not plan to return.
- K Signal Height — Old fire-pit or mirror stand; smoke stains linger. Light the fire, and someone will answer. Whether they are friend or foe is your risk.
- A Trail Nexus — Migratory, pack, or contraband paths knot here. Three trails meet, but only two are on any map. The third belongs to the dead.

Hearts — People & Factions (Hex Denizens)

2. Forager Child — Goat-herd or berry-picker with truer maps than yours. Their map is drawn on a scrap of bark. It shows a path that disappears at a standing stone.
3. Guide — Three routes and one price (changes daily); navigation as negotiation. Their price is never coin. It is a favor, a secret, or a night's watch.
4. Warden Patrol — Local badges, local laws, local patience; order as familiarity. Their badge is a chipped sunburst. They serve a crown that no longer exists.
5. Caravan Crew — Drovers, porters, yarn-post hands trading speed for coin. They know every shortcut and every ambush. They will share both—for a price.
6. Pilgrims — Bound for a tucked-away shrine or stone; faith as a destination. Their shrine has no name. The stone there is warm, and it answers questions poorly.
7. Poachers — Know every snare and shortcut; survival as expertise. They wear the teeth of game wardens as necklaces. The game wardens are still alive.
8. Hermit-Healer — Dogs, geese, and opinions about weather; wisdom as isolation. Their poultices smell of grave-moss. They work anyway.
9. Prospectors — Salt, amber, iron, fungus; chasing rumors and glint. Their claim is marked with a knot of red thread. Cross it, and they will shoot.
10. War-Band — Reavers or “escorts,” depending on your purse; violence as commerce. Their banner is a painted skull. The paint is from a dead comrade's blood.
- J Monster-Hunter — Rite-keeper wearing yesterday's trophies; death as livelihood. Their trophy is still warm. The monster's mate is close behind.
- Q Quartermaster — Ledgers first, hospitality second; supply as authority. Their ledger is written in a code only they understand. The code is their life story.
- K Claimant Chief — Papers and spears to match; legitimacy as force. Their papers are stained with water and blood. Both are still wet.
- A The Stranger — Spirit-touched nomad or emissary; rules bend near them. They have no shadow. The ground does not remember their footprints.

Clubs — Complications/Threats (Hex Hazards)

2. Weather Turn — Heat snap, cold snap, fog, dust; plans sag like wet leather. The wind changes direction three times in an hour. Someone is watching.
 3. Doubleback — Tracks loop; the navigator swears the land moved underfoot. Your own footprints face you. They were made yesterday—or tomorrow.
 4. Prowlers Shadow — Wolves, jackals, ghouls, seals, ravens by night; hunt as a company. Their eyes reflect no light. Their teeth do.
 5. Route Blocked — Deadfall, rockfall, dune shift, ice heave; the path as an obstacle. The blockage was placed. The toolmarks are fresh.
 6. Quarantine Sign — Camp fever; wardens sniff your packs for death. The sign is a ribbon tied in a figure-eight. Do not cross it.
 7. Territorial Beast — Charge, stampede, or swarm; your choice of which is wrong. The beast's lair is nearby. You can smell it—old blood and older musk.
 8. Elemental Front — Grassfire, peat-burn, canopy flare, blowing spindrift. The fire moves against the wind. The wind is lying.
 9. Paper vs Spear — Jurisdiction fight in the wilds stalls your day; law as argument. Two officials, one road. Both have seals. Neither will show them.
 10. Supply Pinch — Water, fuel, or feed low; pick what starves first. Your canteen is full. The water is from a source that dried up last year.
- J Pursuit — Hunters or avengers follow; signs say “close.” The tracks are one hour old. They are gaining.
- Q Bad Omen — Will-lights, taboo day, saint bells silent; locals refuse to move. The omen is written in bird droppings on a milestone. It is still accurate.
- K General Alarm — Levy, muster, evacuation; all tracks become checkpoints. The alarm horn is cracked. It sounds like a scream.
- A Catastrophe — Flood, whiteout, sandstorm, lahar; clocks jump like frightened deer. The catastrophe has a name. The land remembers it.

(Cache/Pass/Favor) Cache token for hidden food or fuel stash; right-of-way pass recognized by a named trail; warden's favor with an escort letter.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage (Hex Discoveries)

2. Cache Token — Key to a hidden food or fuel stash (once); preparation as power. The token is a knucklebone. The stash is marked with a cairn that has one stone missing.
3. Right-of-Pass — Recognized marker for a named trail or crossing. The marker is a notch carved in a milestone. The notch is shaped like a bird.
4. Warden's Favor — Escort letter; “they're with us” as a shield. The letter is stamped with a bell. The bell's clapper is missing.
5. Weather Window — Good forecast and a narrow gate to use it. The window is a single hour at dawn. The birds will tell you when.
6. Water Deed — Lawful draw at a scarce source; necessity as a right. The deed is a clay cup. Break it, and the spring will flow—once.

7. Route Song — A map scrap that actually works; knowledge as navigation. The song has eight verses. The ninth is humming.
8. Remount Hire — Fresh legs or hulls waiting at a post; speed as a service. The remounts have no names. They answer to whistles and bribes.
9. Truce Cord — Taboo exemption at a site (one scene); peace as a thread. The cord is braided from wool and ash. Burn it to invoke the truce.
10. Toll Waiver — A ferry, bridge, or reef gate honors this chit; passage as paper. The chit is a dried leaf. The toll-keeper will not touch it.
- J Rescue Debt — Locals owe you (or you owe them); trade for labor or intel. The debt is carved on a tally stick. Break it when the favor is done.
- Q Private Audience — A keeper, shrine-warden, or spirit of the place hears you alone. The audience is held at midnight. The spirit wears your face.
- K Road Commission — Temporary authority over a stretch of wilds. The commission is a whistle. Blow it, and the land will listen—once.
- A Earth’s Exception — One temporary rule-bend (cross during a storm, pass uncounted, beasts ignore you). The exception is a secret. The land will forget it as soon as you use it.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (cache/pass/favor) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, add a lingering omen of the land (a smell on the wind, a sound that carries too far, tracks that shift) that you can echo in later scenes.

Travel at a Glance (Fast Loose)

A journey through the Wilds is a series of choices, not a checklist. Before each leg (a day, a stretch of road, a single hex), the party picks two priorities from Speed, Stealth, Safety, Survey. Those become your edge; the others become vulnerabilities. The GM then frames a single roll based on the terrain and the weather’s mood (see Weather Whims, below). Success means you find what you sought; a mixed result trades progress for a cost; a miss throws a complication from the Clubs table onto the path.

Weather Whims (d6, one per leg)

1. Glass-clear – long sight, easy navigation. +1 to Survey actions.
2. Low fog – stealth advantage, speed suffers. +1 to Stealth, –1 to Speed.
3. Trickle rain – tracks wash, cold bites. First navigation or tracking roll at –1 die.
4. Dry cold / heat – resources drain faster. Mark +1 supply strain at end of leg.
5. Shifting wind – smoke and scent lie. Reroll one die on a weather-related check, but the GM may bank 1 SB.
6. Omen sky (aurora, sun-dog, three moons) – the land is listening. The GM may ask one player to answer a single question about the party’s future.

Making Camp When you stop, choose one boon and accept one risk:

- Boon: heal a piece of gear; clear 1 Fatigue; scout tomorrow's weather; share a story with a road spirit (gain a Truce Cord).
- Risk: thin shelter (next weather hits harder); smoky fire (attracts prowlers); exposed approach (ambush more likely); hungry neighbors (locals or beasts appear).

A road spirit's favour requires a small offering—a pinch of salt, a dropped coin, a whispered truth. Be polite.

Lore Echoes (Cross-Expansion Hooks)

- The Bitter Root: Daughters of the Cord use certain shelter hollows as waystations. A renegade Sister has hidden a Hollowed in a ruined outpost; the child has not moved in weeks.
- The Threshold Compendium: Old Roads are Class II Anchor sites—ghosts of imperial surveyors still measure the miles. Saikou Ira would leave a silver coin at every milestone.
- Malachai, the Chained Angel: A silver coin that never spends lies at the bottom of every spring. Take it, and the water will never run dry—but the spring will remember your face.
- The Grey Wanderer's Grimoire: Wilds psions are called "Stone-Listeners." They hear the memory of old trails. Claimant chiefs pay well for their services—and dispose of those who hear too much.
- The Ninth: In any Wilds scene, the ninth cairn you pass in a day will be warm. Leave an offering, or the path will forget you.

Wilderness Superstitions (burn for +1 die once)

- Bread to the Cairn: Crumble a crust at a boundary stone. Ignore the first Bad Ground penalty.
- Knot the Trail: Tie a single knot in a piece of grass at a crossing. Cancel Doubleback or take -1 die on your next navigation roll (your choice).
- Name to the Spring: Whisper a dead traveler's name into a water source. Gain +1 Effect when foraging this scene, but mark Obligation to the land.

Patronage & Power

In the Wilds, power flows through knowledge of the land, the ability to navigate without formal authority, and the careful cultivation of local relationships. True authority comes from understanding weather patterns, reading tracks, and maintaining the favor of both human inhabitants and the spirits of place. Those who can provide safe passage, find water in dry times, or mediate between conflicting claims hold the most influence.

For the GM: Patronage in the Wilds revolves around practical knowledge, local customs, and the ability to provide essential services like navigation, shelter, and supply. Rewards often take the form of tokens, passes, and local knowledge that can be leveraged into greater safety and efficiency. To emphasise the hexcrawl feel:

- Key 6–10 interesting hexes before the session, then use the generator to fill the rest.
- Let the party discover new routes, short cuts, and hidden lairs through successful scouting or lucky finds.
- Use the Roads Move, Weather Wakes, and Local Resentment clocks (from the hexcrawl procedures) to create a living, reactive wilderness—or simply let the cards speak.
- Offer Diamonds as “exploration rewards” that unlock new options (a cache token, a safe passage, a local ally).

In the Wilds, your skill is your standing, and your standing determines whether you survive or perish.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from wardens or local hunters.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby prowlers or caravan guards.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or claimants.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or favorable weather.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: Guide or warden patrol becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to weather shift or route blockage.
- Foe Appears: A war-band or territorial beast arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional wardens, war-bands, or prowlers arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.

- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - weather turns/catastrophe strikes/quarantine declared.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: Claimant chief, quartermaster, or The Stranger intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - weather shifts/blockage clears/catastrophe hits.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Wilds (Weather): Conditions shift without warning, storms arrive early, calm turns to chaos.
- Wilds (Navigation): Trails reroute mid-journey, landmarks disappear, guides demand additional payment.
- Wilds (Local Customs): Spirits demand tribute, territorial beasts become aggressive, local laws change with the terrain.

Fast reskin palette

Forest

swap dunes→deadfall, spindrift→canopy flare, prowlers→boar/wolves; water = spring/stream.

Desert

swap bog→salt pan, fog→dust, shelter = overhang/wadi; water = seep/fog net.

Tundra/Ice

swap dune shift→ice heave, fire→spindrift, boats→sleds; prowlers = bears/wolves.

Coast/Isles

Swamp/Fen

Highlands

crossings = cols and scree traverses, alarms = beacon chains, prowlers = cats/eagles.

Wilds — Roads and Ruins

Starting Location: A shelter hollow carved into a fallen giant's ribcage, moss glowing faintly under starlight.

"In the Wilds, the land walks when you don't watch it, and the roads remember who bled on them."

In... A Shelter Hollow, a Forager Child offers a route-song. "The Bad Ground shifts," they say. "And the weather walks behind it."

Regional Motifs Ruin ivy, singing paths, weather as creature, stone memories.

Whispers to Offer “Cut through the Bad Ground,” “Take the relic,” “Leave the guide.”

External Clocks Threat: “Weather Wakes”; Fracture: “Roads Move”; Community: “Foragers Vanish.”

Complications Ruins reassemble; rain falls upward; the child knows tomorrow.

Anchors at Risk A caravan; a family relic.

Escalation Beat The song changes key.

Relief Sing in harmony; mark a safe path with blood and story; abandon the relic to drop Threat by one.

Terrain Stock (d20)

Roll or choose a striking detail to dress a hex.

1. Fresh ash on an old fire ring; prints circle around it.
2. Boundary totems toppled but re-stack themselves if watched politely.
3. Broken wagon with salt-vein crystals growing through spokes.
4. Singing culvert; echo names the boldest listener wrongly.
5. Weather bell hung in a pine; tolling swaps rain and wind.
6. Cairn with a copper coin balanced on edge; don’t breathe hard.
7. Fence of antlers pointing uphill; follow and skip one Bad Ground.
8. Mummified pack-beast wearing a courier’s braid; letter hums.
9. Pebble mosaic of an old levy call; stepping it summons wardens.
10. Fossil rib arch; shelter under it and dream of tomorrow’s route.
11. Abandoned hunter’s cache; choice of food or rumor, not both.
12. Mirror-puddle; shows last night’s sky whatever the hour.
13. Rope bridge made of prayer knots; one is freshly cut.
14. Scare-stakes dressed in saltcloth; something big respects them.
15. Stone with bite-marks; taste iron and remember a shortcut.
16. Old road mile-post defaced into a saint; offerings still fresh.
17. Thistle patch buzzing with coin-flies; feed them copper for safe passage.
18. Fallen giant’s footprint now a pond; frogs chant a route-song.
19. Soot writing on cliff: Storm at Second Bell. It’s right.
20. Hollow tree full of carved names; the newest is yours.

Lair Seeds (One-Page Crawls)

d12 quick lair hooks. Each can be a single session’s focus.

1. Fen Clockworks — Bog-gears turn under peat; each tooth a drowned oath.

2. Dry River Gallery — Petroglyphs re-arrange at dusk; wrong reading summons bramble knights.
3. Ice-Well Vault — Stairs drilled through permafrost; breath blooms frost-runes that answer questions badly.
4. Sunken Forum — Pillars knee-deep in silt; rust moths nest in the rostrum.
5. Pilgrim Kilns — Charcoal mounds hike on stilt roots at night; a hermit-healer bargains weather for charcoal.
6. Hanging Salt Chapel — White stalactites ring like bells; grave-eels coil in the font.
7. Thorn Maze Mill — Waterwheel turns without water; phase panthers pace the sluice.
8. Brewer's Hollow — Barrels of wind; decant a gale or drink a calm.
9. Antler Archive — Ledger carved on horn; theft awakens the cairn-wights' accountant.
10. Black Lantern Mines — Lantern-eyes nest like bats; light buys silence, darkness buys passage.
11. Stormbone Spire — Vertebrae tower; earth-sharks circle beneath like sharks in sand.
12. Amber Orchard — Trees fossilised mid-sway; trapped thunderflies grant Weather Window when freed.

Wilderness Bestiary

A palette of strange creatures, each with signs (what you notice before it sees you) and a hook (how to engage or avoid).

- Earth-Sharks — Burrow beneath loess and tundra; dorsal ridges like plowshares. Signs: furrows that breathe; pebbles rattle. Hook: lure with drumbeats or goat bells.
- Phase Panthers — Shadow-striped cats that step between gusts. Signs: pawprints offset from themselves. Hook: mirrored water or bell-silver disrupts the blink.
- Rust Moths — Swarms that taste iron memory. Signs: lacework mail; pitted nails. Hook: feed them old keys; they ignore fresh steel.
- Lichen-Bears — Moss-matted ursines with rock-teeth. Signs: clawed bark with green scabs. Hook: smoke of juniper calms; salt enrages.
- Wind Drakes — Rib-thin sky-serpents that ride fronts. Signs: shed vanes; feathers like glass. Hook: whistle back the storm to ground them.
- Ooze-Remnants — Alchemical slough from an old field lab. Signs: boot-holes rounded smooth. Hook: wood ash firms them; vinegar makes them sprint.
- Fell Harts — Antlered shades that herd the living toward cliffs. Signs: hoofprints that don't compress soil. Hook: speak a hunter's apology while walking backward.
- Cairn-Wights — Stone-stack custodians; patient as frost. Signs: pebbles rearranged around your fire. Hook: rebuild the stack correctly; they serve until dawn.
- Thundertusks — Boars that store lightning in tusk-veins. Signs: fused sand beads; singed roots. Hook: ground your spear; throw shadow to draw the strike.
- Lantern-Eyes — Floating orbs of watchlight rumor; jealous of secrets. Signs: daylight in ravines at midnight. Hook: offer a whispered truth; they part like reeds.
- Grave-Eels — Burrow through barrow loam; taste names. Signs: sinking turf over old wars. Hook: sing lineage or throw false names to mislead.
- Bramble Knights — Empty helmets grown through with thorn; patrol old borders. Signs: briar in boot-grease. Hook: present a hedge-blessing; they escort instead of impale.

Strange Finds (d10)

When you discover a hidden cache or an ancient hoard, roll or pick:

1. Route-stones that warm near true north.
2. Weather-bell clapper that tolls only for lightning.
3. Trail-right knot dyed in berry law; locals honour it once.
4. Salt-vein pick that cuts oozes like cloth.
5. Glass feather; break to call a wind drake for one pass.
6. Ledger leaf waterproofed with eel-fat; ink never runs, words drift.
7. Thorn sigil that bramble knights read as parley.
8. Coin-fly cocoon; hatch it for one honest guide to the nearest water.
9. Bone flute that calls earth-sharks to circle elsewhere.
10. Lantern-eye husk; squeeze for daylight the length of a camp prayer.

Omens & Signs

The land speaks. Use these when the party pauses or when the GM needs a portent.

Sky Signs (d8)

1. sun-dog
2. mare's tails
3. anvil cloud faces the wrong way
4. silent birds
5. far thunder without storm
6. moon with halo
7. ash scent on clear air
8. stars “shiver”

Ground Signs (d8)

1. cairn with new pebble
2. boot prints that end at rock
3. butchered game left neat
4. snapped twig at head height
5. ash under wet moss
6. ward-knot cut
7. trail beads on shrub
8. a single coin on a stone

Chapter 40

Dungeons

Living Infrastructure. Dungeons aren't merely ruins—they're infrastructure markets, and oh, how the ancient places love a good deal on mechanical lungs. They don't just breathe with mechanical lungs; they auction the right to the next breath, and the Aeler keystone chambers aren't just ruins—they're a licence to profit from living systems, stamped with the Dungeon-Master-General's own oath. I've mapped a dozen of them. . . which is why I know the best ones have Aeler keystone chambers still intact. Not because they're lucky—because I've sold the locations to prospectors who don't know I've already bought the chambers' output. The maps are accurate. The dungeons are still hungry. Which is why I'm already selling the "still hungry" to the next desperate prospector. "Want to know when the dungeon will eat you?" I whisper. "It'll cost you a map."

[Thimble: Sir, Article 12 of the Dungeon Infrastructure Accord prohibits—]

[Edgewalker: Infrastructure accord? Thimble, my dear, little spelunker, infrastructure accords are just leverage with a lung—especially when I've bought the Dungeon-Master-General's deputy's silence with a keystone chamber that doesn't stay intact. . . it collapses at the worst moment. Now, about those maps. . . the Dungeon-Master-General's treasurer has a gambling problem. I wonder what his weight in mapped dungeons looks like?]

[Thimble: Sir, exploiting familial debt under—]

[Edgewalker: Familial debt is just leverage with a heartbeat. Now pass the abacus—I need to calculate how many keystone chambers fit in a single Diamond before the dungeons notice their infrastructure's fake.]

40.1 Dungeon — "Living Infrastructure"

Elite (Dungeon's Creator)

"I built more than walls and corridors – I crafted a living symphony of stone and shadow, where every passage breathes and every chamber remembers. The structure itself is the true inhabitant."

Commoner (Scholar-Prisoner)

"The walls here got a memory like old parchment – they remember every scream, every spell, every drop of blood spilled on the stones. And sometimes, when the air's just right, they whisper it back to you. The dungeon listens. The question is whether it learns."

Theme & Atmosphere

Beneath the surface, ancient places breathe with mechanical lungs and dream electric dreams. Dungeons are not merely ruins but living systems—vascular networks of stone and shadow where every corridor hums with purpose and every chamber holds its own hungry logic. The walls remember every footfall, the air carries whispers of forgotten conversations, and the very architecture shifts like a sleeper turning in bed. Here, the boundary between structure and organism blurs, and those who would plunder its secrets must first learn to speak its language of echoes, scents, and subtle pressures.

What you notice first: The wet stone smell of a place that sweats. The distant grinding of gears that should have seized centuries ago. The way your footsteps echo back with an extra beat—like someone is following, or catching up.

The one rule that kills newcomers: Never ignore a door that opens when you're not looking. The dungeon is offering you a choice. Refuse, and the next door may not open at all.

The Living Hierarchy: Factions of the Deep

Dungeons are not empty. They host a fragile ecology of factions, each with its own relationship to the site's "consciousness." A site's dominant faction determines its mood; a dungeon ruled by Custodians may be melancholic and negotiable, while one overrun by Awakened Organs is actively predatory.

- Custodians (Forgotten Caretakers) – The original stewards, now half-mad or ghostly. They maintain the dungeon's rhythms (polishing thresholds, oiling traps) and may trade safe passage for a memory or a promise. Clocks: CUSTODIAN PATIENCE [4], MAINTENANCE ROUNDS [6].
- Invaders (Plunderers & Refugees) – Living interlopers: mercenary remnants, cult initiates, refugee families. They exploit the dungeon's resources while trying to avoid its attention. Their presence raises Dungeon Awareness (Heat). Clocks: INVADER DESPERATION [4], RIVAL CLAIM [6].
- Awakened Organs (The Dungeon's Will) – Manifestations of the site's internal systems: the Heart Chamber, the Digestive Array, the Ledger Lich. They act as immune responses or as twisted echoes of the original purpose. Clocks: ORGAN HUNGER [4], SYSTEM REBOOT [6].
- Wild Symbiotes (Echoes & Aberrations) – Creatures that evolved within the living infrastructure: stone-wights, memory eels, gravity ticks. They are neither friendly nor hostile – they simply follow the dungeon's new rules. Clocks: SWARM TIDE [4], SYMBIOTIC ACCORD [6].

Most expedition sites will feature two or three of these factions in uneasy balance. A dungeon with predatory Awakened Organs and desperate Invaders is a very different crawl than one haunted by melancholic Custodians and curious Wild Symbiotes.

Spades — Places

2. Cracked Gallery — Hairline faults veined with damp; grit ticks from the ceiling like a slow clock. The ticking is a language. It is counting the number of intruders.
3. Sunken Vestibule — Waist-deep water glazed with oil rainbows; cold leeches the knees, something brushes past. The water has a pulse. It is not yours.
4. Vaulted Refectory — Tables laid for a meal gone to dust; goblets taste faintly of iron when breathed upon. The iron is blood—old, dried, and patient.

5. Spiral Stairwell — Steps cupped by centuries; one cough ricochets down into a throat not your own. The throat is the dungeon's. The cough is an answer.
6. Collapsed Observatory — Stars stare through ribs of broken dome; wind brings ash that smears like soot. The stars are not real. The dungeon remembers the sky and shows it wrong.
7. Armory Alcove — Weapon shadows longer than the racks; a glass-front case fogs from the inside. The fog has a shape. The shape is a hand.
8. Chained Sanctuary — Prayer-niches and iron hooks; stone bruised where something strained to leave. The chains are warm. Something wore them recently.
9. Mirror Hall — Reflections lag by a heartbeat; one pane shows you older, another shows you missing. The missing reflection is ahead of you. It will wait.
10. Garden of Stone — Statues mid-breath; a chisel-mark still weeps dust as if freshly struck. The dust is from the statues. They are not statues. They are frozen.
- J Throne of Echoes — A single block worn satin-smooth; sit and your name returns in a stranger's verdict. The verdict is from a trial you never attended. The jury is the dungeon.
- Q Vault of Whispers — Books exhale when opened; vowels crawl up the spine and into the ear. The books are not books. They are memory. They eat yours to grow.
- K Chamber of Seasons — Air flips from pollen-sweet to knife-cold; breath ghosts, sweat beads, leaves skitter. The seasons are the dungeon's moods. Today it is spring. Tomorrow, winter without end.
- A The Heart Chamber — Mortar smells like blood, light like fever; floor hums to your pulse then sets its own. The pulse is not your own after the third beat.

Hearts — People & Factions

2. Forgotten Custodian — Keys like teeth on a ring; polishes thresholds no one crosses. He has forgotten why he polishes. The threshold remembers.
3. Scholar-Prisoner — Ink-stained nails, hollow cheeks; knows which lies the walls prefer. The walls prefer lies that are almost true. She tells them often.
4. Symbiotic Colony — Many mouths, one hunger; bargains in warmth, hoards salt. The mouths whisper in chorus. Their voices are the dungeon's breath.
5. Cursed Noble — Velvet rotted to lace; voice drags like chain, eyes beg for ending. The curse is the dungeon's favor. He has worn it too long.
6. Mercenary Remnant — Dried mud, wet fear; map carved into forearm with a dinner knife. The map is accurate—for now. The dungeon moves while he sleeps.
7. Bound Guardian — Filigree of wards across stone skin; obeys the letter, hears the spirit. The spirit is the dungeon's. The letter is a suggestion.
8. Cult Initiate — Pupil-widened zeal; speaks passwords like prayers, prayers like debts. The debt is to a god that does not answer. The dungeon answers instead.
9. Refugee Family — Boot-scrapes under cots; clutch charms that grow warm when danger nears. The charms are stones from the garden. The statues are their ancestors.
10. Merchant of Curiosities — Breath like cloves and rust; sells certainty bottled and slightly used. The certainty is a lie. The bottle is genuine.
- J Ascended Vermin — Crown of wire, court of nests; taxes crumbs, enforces with a thousand eyes. The eyes are not all vermin. Some are the dungeon's.

- Q Fallen Hero's Shade — Armor of frost, sword of grievance; wants one last right choice. The right choice is the one that frees her. The dungeon disagrees.
- K Dungeon's Creator — Architect's hands cracked with mortar; still moving rooms the way others move chess. He does not remember the Heart Chamber. The Heart Chamber remembers him.
- A The Collective Consciousness — Voices braided into one intention; your thoughts return carrying fingerprints. The fingerprints are yours. The thoughts are the dungeon's.

Clubs — Complications/Threats

2. Shifting Walls — Mortar pops like knuckles; corridors narrow behind you with polite insistence. The insistence is the dungeon's. It wants you to stay.
 3. Hungering Dark — Wicks gutter blue; shadows lip the flame and swallow the heat first. The dark has weight. It leans.
 4. Memory Fog — Cool on the gums, sweet on the tongue; you "recall" a door that never was. The door is real. The memory is the dungeon's.
 5. Gravity Wells — Knees turn to iron; dropped coins smack floor like thrown knives. The coins are the dungeon's now. It will spend them later.
 6. Temporal Echoes — Footfalls not yours keep pace; a conversation repeats with one word wrong. The wrong word is a clue. The clue is a trap.
 7. Corrosive Atmosphere — Leather slimes, metal freckles; breathe shallow or taste copper. The copper is blood. The blood is the dungeon's offering.
 8. Phantom Locks — Doors exist when watched sidelong; they prefer particular hands and hours. The hands are yours. The hours are the dungeon's.
 9. Borrowed Time — Hair whitens at the tips; hunger leaps ahead of the clock. The time will be returned. The interest is your memory.
 10. Infectious Transformation — Fingertips grain to stone, pupils catch light like a cat's; urges shift. The urge is to stay. The garden needs new statues.
- J Reality Anchor Points — Candles burn sideways, water beads uphill; spells itch in the teeth. The itch is the dungeon laughing.
- Q The Dungeon's Will — Maps argue with themselves; paths rephrase your intentions. The path is the dungeon's intention. Your intention is a suggestion.
- K Cascading Failure — A cracked lintel sighs and the far cistern answers; systems talk in groans. The groans are a warning. The warning is too late.
- A The Price of Passage — Each shortcut salts your tongue with loss; the house keeps its ledger. The ledger is the dungeon's. The loss is yours.

Diamonds — Rewards/Leverage

2. Wayfinder Compass — Needle twitches toward safety like a frightened animal; steadies if you hum. The humming must be in tune with the dungeon's breath. The breath changes.
3. Key of Echoes — Warms in the palm when a door remembers being opened. The door's memory is not yours. It remembers a different key.
4. Lantern of Clarity — Light outlines hollows in the world; truths show up as clean edges. The truths are sharp. They cut if you look too long.

5. Cloak of Passage — Hem sips through stone or mist; leaves damp prints on the far side. The prints are the dungeon's. It will follow.
6. Tome of Convenient Knowledge — Pages grow new margins; ink creeps to answer the question you're afraid to ask. The answer is a lie. The lie is useful.
7. Ration of Sustenance — Bread that tastes like last winter; settles the stomach, quiets the shakes. Last winter was in the dungeon. The bread was grown in the garden.
8. Focus Crystal — Thrum matches your breath; thoughts align the way teeth fit. The breath is the dungeon's after the third inhale.
9. Token of Safe Return — Thread around a wrist; tugs once when it's time to flee. The tug is the dungeon's mercy. It does not offer twice.
10. Map that Grows — Charcoal blooms corridors as you walk; tiny figures drift where things currently are. The figures are the dungeon's. They are not always accurate.
- J Shield of Temporary Immunity — Hazards strike sparks and spend themselves like rain on slate. The immunity is borrowed. The dungeon will ask for it back.
- Q Crown of Momentary Authority — Creatures blink, recognize a crest they cannot name, and obey. The crest is the dungeon's. The obedience is a misunderstanding.
- K Forge of Quick Repair — Heat like a heartbeat; fractured gear exhales and remembers its shape. The memory is the dungeon's. The gear will remember you, too.
- A The Dungeon's Blessing — A knack that lingers in the bones; doors like you now, as do certain hungers. The hungers are the dungeon's appetites. They like you very much.

Quick use notes

- Draw until you have all four suits: Spade = place, Heart = actor, Club = pressure, Diamond = leverage. Highest rank sets the main Clock (2–5 → 4, 6–10 → 6, J/Q/K → 8, A → 10).
- Diamonds are codified outcomes (safeties/knowledge/immunities) that change position rather than call for a roll.
- If any A appears, echo living infrastructure—walls shift, voices repeat your plans, light returns redder.

Additional Features

- Living Infrastructure: Fluids, heat, dust, and sound move like blood—follow the drafts, the drips, the echoes to find organs: cisterns, chimneys, nerve-halls.
- Scent Ledger: Track smells (ozone, wet lime, tallow, old wine); they foretell hazards and factions before you see them.
- Echo Etiquette: Some rooms reward whispers and punish shouts; others demand a spoken price to cross. Listen first.

Patronage & Power

The true dungeon is not a place but a process—a slow alchemy that transforms intruders into something the structure can understand or consume. Every chamber is a test, every corridor a negotiation, and every inhabitant a symptom of the site’s deeper hungers. The wise explorer learns to read the dungeon’s moods in the way light falls, the way echoes return, and the way the very air seems to lean toward certain passages. Here, knowledge is not power but currency, and the smart adventurer knows when to pay with memory, when to pay with blood, and when to simply walk away.

Thematic SB Spend Table

Minor Complications (1 SB)

- Exposure: Your actions draw unwanted attention from dungeon dwellers or factions.
- Noise: Sounds of your actions alert nearby creatures or echoes.
- Trace: Evidence of your passage marks your route for trackers or spirits.
- Delay: A brief but meaningful setback costs you time or resources.
- Supply Strain: Mark +1 segment on a relevant resource clock.

Moderate Setbacks (2 SB)

- Alarm Raised: The dungeon’s will becomes aware and begins responding.
- Position Lost: You lose advantageous ground/cover/stealth due to shifting architecture.
- Foe Appears: A minor entity or faction member arrives on scene.
- Gear Trouble: A piece of equipment becomes Compromised/Neglected.
- Lock/Barrier: A simple obstacle now requires a test to overcome.

Serious Trouble (3 SB)

- Reinforcements: Additional dungeon entities or guardians arrive.
- Key Gear Breaks: A crucial tool/weapon becomes temporarily unusable.
- Major Twist: The situation fundamentally changes - trap springs/route blocked/ally turns.
- Rail Tick: Advance a relevant campaign/front clock by 1 segment.
- Condition Applied: Mark Fatigue 1/Harm 1/Condition appropriate to fiction.

Major Turns (4+ SB)

- Trap Springs: A prepared danger activates with full effect.
- Authority Arrival: The Dungeon’s Creator or Collective Consciousness intervenes.
- Scene Shift: The environment changes dramatically - walls shift/floor collapses/air thickens.
- Patron Omen: Divine/arcane forces take notice - omen appears/blessing lost/curse manifests.
- Narrative Pivot: The story takes an unexpected turn that reframes objectives.

Region-Specific SB Options

- Living Infrastructure (1–2 SB): Corridors whisper your name, reflections blink slower, scent trails loop back.
- Echo Etiquette (1–3 SB): Shouts echo thrice, silence answers back, doors ask riddles.
- Cascading Failure (1–2 SB): One crack becomes many, water flows uphill, lights dim in sequence.

Dungeon — Living Infrastructure

Starting Location: A spiral stairwell deep beneath a forgotten citadel, pulsing with a heartbeat not entirely mechanical.

"In the Dungeon, walls breathe, corridors shift, and memory is the only map worth keeping."

In... a spiral stairwell, the steps hum underfoot. A Forgotten Custodian keys a door that wasn't there yesterday. "The Heart Chamber hungers," they whisper. "Will you feed it—or be fed?"

Regional Motifs Maintenance spirits, adaptive stone, ritual vents, memory valves.

Whispers to Offer "Take the shortcut that erases you," "Trade blood for passage," "Leave a companion behind as toll."

External Clocks Threat: Heart Pressure Rises [6]; Fracture: Floorplan Loops [4]; Anchor: Safe Route Fails [4].

Complications Corridors swap; keys rust to teeth; the Custodian forgets who asked.

Anchors at Risk Camp cache; a mapping apprentice.

Escalation Beat The stairwell adds a step every circuit.

Relief Vent the Heart with a true name; feed it a secret belonging to all PCs (reduces Threat by one).

Plug-in Expedition Layer

- Universal Clocks (drop into any site):
 - Dungeon Awareness (Heat) [10]: rises on loud actions, light spillage, blood, or haste. At 4/7/10, the Keeper may promote Clubs results one step.
 - Structure Stress [6/8]: ticks on blasts, overloading mechanisms, or ignored warnings; when full, trigger Cascading Failure.
 - Expedition Supply: three pooled tracks—Light [4], Air [4] (if sealed), Load [4] (fatigue/overburden). Each empty track worsens Position for relevant actions until refreshed.
- Safe Route Tokens: On a strong success mapping/scouting, issue a Safe Route token. Spend to bypass one known hazard in that segment or to negate a single "Position Lost" SB.

- Retreat & Seal: When withdrawing, a PC may seal the way (chalk, wedges, wards). Clear 1 Heat, but tick Structure Stress or spawn a Phantom Lock in that lane.

Interfaces & Entanglements (use what fits your campaign)

- Surface Stakeholders: Scavenger Union, Shrinekeepers, Civic Factors. Register finds to bank a Finder's Favor—spend to reduce one sell-off DV; skipping registration adds a "Disputed Claim" tag to the haul.
- Internal Politics: Custodians, Bound Guardians, Refugee Enclaves. Parley with proper tokens (salt, names, warmth) to downgrade the next Clubs result in their turf.
- Patron Hooks (optional):
 - The Sealed Gate: Chalk lines cancel one intrusion for a scene; breaking them adds 1 Heat.
 - Lunara: Moon-silver reveals one hidden organ (cistern, nerve-hall); mark Exposure +1.
 - The Traveler: Waymarks let you finish one travel tick after a room clear.
 - Varnek Karn: Naming the dead here clears 1 Awareness but starts a Ledger Attention [4].
 - Maelstraeus: Trade salvage tags at "fair rate" once/expedition; skewed trades create a Karmic Debt [6].

Keys, Locks, & Doors (drop-in schema)

- Door Attitudes: Literal (wants the right key), Courteous (opens to the right words), Hungry (takes a toll), Shy (hates crowds), Proud (demands ceremony).
- Key Types: Mechanical (wards/picks), Mnemonic (password, name), Somatic (gesture, breath), Affective (emotion offered), Sacrificial (blood, time, memory).
- Rule of Two: Each important barrier recognizes two different key types; learning either grants +1 Effect to breach or parley with it.

Salvage, Haul, & Conversion

- Salvage Tags: Stable (safe to carry), Volatile (ticks Stress on jostle), Bound (linked to site), Loud (adds Heat when moved), Forbidden (attracts factions).
- Convert on Exit (choose one): trade haul for a Map that Grows upgrade, a Pass-Key Writ (one automatic door compliance), or Market Credit (reduce next sell-off complication).

Table Prompts (d6 each, fast prep)

Echo Questions

1. What does the room want?
2. Who set this alarm?
3. What was repaired last?
4. Where does the draft go?
5. What memory sticks here?
6. What price opens the way?

Find the Organ

1. Cistern (fluid)
2. Bell-shaft (signal)
3. Heat lung (thermal)
4. Nerve-hall (control)
5. Waste sluice (decay)
6. Relay shrine (intent)

Procedures at the Door (one-minute read-aloud checklist)

1. Sense: Name two smells; ask which grew stronger.
2. Listen: Offer one echo; ask what word returns wrong.
3. Light: Describe color/behavior; ask who steadies it (hum, prayer, silence).
4. Count: Beats, drips, or breaths—players may claim Counting Etiquette to shift Position safer once.
5. Declare Price or Key: Players state attitude + key type; on a hit, grant +1 Effect or a Safe Route token.

Plug-in SB Conversions (use with any dungeon)

- First 1 SB in a scene may become Heat +1 instead of a narrative wrinkle (signal without immediate harm).
- Any 2 SB can instead tick Structure Stress and foreshadow Cascading Failure rather than spawn foes.
- On 3+ SB, offer a bargain: pay with memory/gear/time to halve the consequence and add Price of Passage [3].

Bosses & Lairs (Classic Crawl Feel, Fate’s Edge Framework)

Using Bosses Each boss runs on a Phase Clock and 2–3 Lair Actions. Tie them to the site’s Dungeon Awareness (Heat) and Structure Stress; as either rises, promote boss position/effect. Boss defeats should yield a Diamond-tier boon keyed to the lair.

Oculus Warden (many-eyed sentry)

A floating nerve-knot studded with glass eyes; lenses irise like gills.

- Phase Clock: [8] Calibration → Overwatch → Lethal Focus → Blind Panic
- Moves: Disintegrate Signage (erase waymarks), Anti-magic Glare (downgrade 1 magical effect this exchange), Scry Ping (advance Awareness +1).
- Lair Actions (Mirror Hall / Vault of Whispers):
 1. Prismatic Sweep: Split the party’s positions (each PC steps one tier toward Controlled).
 2. Echo False Order: One PC hears an ally’s command that was never given; test or waste an action.
 3. Lens Flare: Next ranged attack against the Warden loses 1 Effect unless the light source is doused.
- Counters: Smoke, darkness, reflective shields, calling shots on specific lenses (name a lens: cancel one Move this round).
- Drop (Diamond): Crown of Momentary Authority or Lantern of Clarity.

Digestive Array (cube-that-crawls)

A transparent, room-sized solvent held in grid tension; carries tools it cannot digest.

- Phase Clock: [6] Probe → Enmesh → Dissolve
- Moves: Corrode (apply COMPROMISED to metal/wood), Engulf (split group; trapped PC marks Fatigue or gear loss), Clean Bones (remove tags from fallen).

- Lair Actions (Sunken Vestibule / Chained Sanctuary):
 1. Flood Gate Twitch: Water level rises a step; footing worsens.
 2. Sluice Pulse: Pushes all creatures one range band.
 3. Reagent Bloom: Vapors add –1 die to breathy actions this round.
- Counters: Grates, cold cinders, base powders; lures with iron filings or salted meat (draw off for a scene).
- Drop (Diamond): Forge of Quick Repair salvage or Ration of Sustenance (3).

Ledger Lich (archivist revenant)

A curator bound by indices; hands of ink, breath of dust.

- Phase Clock: [8] Citation → Injunction → Foreclosure → Redaction
- Moves: Name Forfeiture (steal a declared tag until bell), Writ of Seizure (lock a Diamond or gear under spectral seal), Errata (retroactively worsen one PC's prior roll Outcome).
- Lair Actions (Vault of Whispers / Deep Archive):
 1. Quiet Hours: Casting/rites generate +1 SB or fail softly.
 2. Reference Only: Movement through stacks costs an action unless proper tokens are presented.
 3. Cross-reference Collapse: Bookshelves reconfigure; split the party.
- Counters: True names carved in quartz, burning a citation (sacrifice an index—a map, a ledger, a vow) to cancel one Move.
- Drop (Diamond): Key of Echoes, Tome of Convenient Knowledge.

Protocol Titan (stone sentinel)

A walking paragraph of law in granite; joints clock with tiny bells.

- Phase Clock: [6] Challenge → Adjudicate → Execute
- Moves: Ward Stomp (shockwave; prone or position –), Clause Capture (binds a PC to a declared rule), Countermeasure (reflect mundane force).
- Lair Actions (Measure Vault / Throne of Echoes):
 1. Bell of Standing: Only those who declare an intent may act this round.
 2. Weigh Deceit: The largest lie in the scene takes Harm 1 (Stress).
 3. Seal Turned: A door the party used closes and locks under new terms.
- Counters: Present certified measures, exploit contradictions, or swear a binding minor oath (shift boss Position –).
- Drop (Diamond): The Under-Seal Clause (local), Key-Writ.

Mimetic Colony (door-that-eats)

An ecosystem of impostor hinges, handles, chests, and carpets.

- Phase Clock: [6] Invitation → Adhesion → Ingestion
- Moves: Stickfast (immobilize limb/gear), Swallow Noise (negate assists), Split & Flank.
- Lair Actions (Armory / Garden of Stone):
 1. Everything's a Mouth: First interacted object bites.

- 2. False Safe: Creates a "short rest" that actually advances Heat +2.
- 3. Chew Through: Destroys one rung/bridge segment.
- Counters: Iron spikes, chalk lines, bait boxes; fire/acid cause the colony to fragment (treat as minions).
- Drop (Diamond): Cloak of Passage, Token of Safe Return.

Sluice Dragon (steam & acid wyrm)

A heat lung grown proud; scales are boiler plates, breath a flash-boil scream.

- Phase Clock: [10] Banked Heat → Pressure Rise → Vent Fury → Rupture
- Moves: Scalding Cone, Vacuum Lurch (pull PCs), Steam Blind (Position –).
- Lair Actions (Heat Lungs / Cistern):
 1. Valve Spin: Change terrain tags (Dry/Wet/Boiling).
 2. Gauge Pop: Structure Stress +1; cracks form.
 3. Pressure Shadow: The dragon gains +1 Effect for one exchange.
- Counters: Chill the room (dump cistern), bleed valves (two actions), or bait with metal ingots.
- Drop (Diamond): Forge of Quick Repair, Shield of Temporary Immunity.

Crawl Procedures (Quick, Crunchy Options)

- Short Rest (10 minutes): Clear Fatigue 1 or refresh one spent tool; advance Dungeon Awareness +1 and roll once on Ambient Signs (below).
- Secure Camp (1 hour, defensible): Clear Fatigue 2 and one Condition (not Harm); Structure Stress +1d2 from barricading/heat, Awareness +2 unless Sealed.
- Search a Room (5 minutes): On success, gain 1 Safe Route token or a Map that Grows tick; on miss, trigger a Door Attitude complication.
- Light, Air, Load: Track three pooled clocks [4] (see Plug-in Expedition Layer). Empty tracks worsen Position until restored.

Wandering Signs & Encounters (d12)

1. Whisper returns one word wrong; nearest door adopts a Hungry attitude.
2. Drip changes rhythm; nearby Gravity Well awakens.
3. Custodian chalk erased and redrawn behind you.
4. A stack exhales: Memory Fog for one exchange.
5. Pilfer-vermin court demands toll (crumbs, salt, or gossip).
6. Bound Guardian patrol, willing to debate terms (papers help).
7. Refugee child with a Key of Echoes that hates you.
8. Floor warms; Heat Lung cycling—steam hazard next room.
9. Echo sermon on "proper doors"; ignoring it adds Heat +1.
10. Sloshing in walls; Digestive Array scouts with a filament.
11. A mirror shows your gear two items lighter—choose which or mark Fatigue 1.
12. Stone hymn—sing along to cancel first SB this scene, or suffer Hungering Dark pulse.

Classic Traps, Living-Site Style (pick 1–2 tags)

- Pressure Mosaic (Artful, Loud): Floor pattern asks for a dance step; wrong beat drops spears from ceiling, not floor.
- Breath Tax (Subtle, Lingering): Room meters exhalations; excess vents sleeping gas; counting etiquette downgrades risk.
- Magi-Siphon Grate (Hungry, Magnetic): Drains charges from tools/wards; feeding it a Focus Crystal buys safe passage.
- Echo Latch (Riddle, Social): Door opens to a truth spoken softly; lies trigger Phantom Locks.

Treasure & Upgrade Hooks (d8 hoard seeds)

1. Cage of tame echoes—store a sentence for later; release as perfect mimicry.
2. Map that Grows (upgraded): shows organs (cistern/nerve-hall) when rubbed with tallow.
3. Wayfinder Compass attuned: hum a note to swap "nearest exit" with "nearest objective."
4. Key-ring of Attitudes: once each—Courteous, Hungry, Proud.
5. Bottle of stolen seasons: pour to set room to pollen-sweet or knife-cold for one scene.
6. Token of Safe Return (party-wide) that tugs twice when the Heart Pressure hits threshold.
7. A ledger page signed by the Dungeon's Creator—treat one barrier as if you are expected.
8. Lantern of Clarity mantle: once/session, reveals the Price of Passage without paying it.

Boss Build Template (one-minute prep)

1. Name & Nature: What organ of the dungeon is this boss the face of?
2. Phase Clock: 6/8/10 with 2–4 titled phases.
3. Three Moves: One space-control, one resource-tax, one identity/knowledge twist.
4. Two Lair Actions: Environmental toggles keyed to this lair.
5. Counters: A courtesy, a tool, a sacrifice. (Players should be able to learn these.)
6. Drop: A Diamond (from §40.1) or bespoke boon tied to the organ.

Dungeon Boss: The Heart Itself (set-piece)

A chamber of ribs and lintels; mortar smells like blood, light like fever.

- Phase Clock: [10] Palpate → Synchronize → Pacemaker → Arrest
- Moves: Syncopate (force actions to resolve off-beat; assist dice misfire), Tachycardia (Heat +2, Structure Stress +1), Backflow (reverse one clock tick on Floorplan Loops, but split the party).
- Lair Actions:
 1. Valve Close: Seal exits; require a "Somatic" or "Affective" key to reopen.
 2. Adrenal Surge: The Heart acts twice next round unless fed a secret all PCs share.
- Counters: Speak the dungeon's true purpose (as inferred via organs), vent a heat lung, or sacrifice mapped ground (tear up a Safe Route).
- Victory States: Stabilize (site becomes safer; Awareness clears to 0), Pacify (gain Dungeon's Blessing), or Slay (collapse risk; Structure Stress +2 across the level).

Part IX

World Travel & Gateways

Chapter 41

Global Travel Procedures

41.1 Core Travel Procedure

For each leg of a journey, draw 3–4 cards using the decks for your destination and controlling authority.

- ♠ from the destination deck: sets the scene (place).
- ♥ from the destination deck: introduces the local actor or faction.
- ♣ from the Wilds (general hazards) or destination (if strongly policed): brings pressure.
- ♦ from the authority that gates the route: papers, escorts, rights, or exceptions.

Set a travel clock by the highest rank:

- 2–5 $\Rightarrow$ 4 segments
- 6–10 $\Rightarrow$ 6 segments
- J/Q/K $\Rightarrow$ 8 segments
- A $\Rightarrow$ 10 segments

On success, advance to the next leg; on failure, mark delay, debt, or diversion and resolve a consequence in the fiction.

41.2 Mode Rules

41.2.1 Sea Legs

(Amaranthine, Dolmis, Aberderrin, Gulf of Oshiira, Inland Sea). When crossing international waters, the controlling authority is either the origin port's navy or a neutral convoy league.

41.2.2 Mountain Passes & Underways

(Aeler, Himadri, Taharkan highlands). Any A may convert a surface route to an under-route. ♦ from Aeler always codifies outcomes — no roll — for sealed doors, breath time, and escorted segments.

41.2.3 Desert Legs

(Sahel, Red Desert, Fhara drylands). Water is the primary resource. A dry well hazard can end a journey.

41.2.4 River Legs

(Belworth, Ayokhan rivers, Oshiiran canals). Bridges, booms, and law in Vhasia/Viterra; reed-mazes and bell-lines in Mistlands; canal mothers and weigh-houses in Oshiira.

41.2.5 Steppe Legs

(Violet Steppe, Kuvani grazing lands). Remount stations and grazing compacts. The Ykrul and Kuvani both use story tolls.

41.2.6 Shadow Corridors

(Valewood, Ways Between, Thin Shore). Add a regional taboo: never count to nine, never speak the ninth name. A 9 in the seed triggers the Hollow’s attention.

41.3 Gateways & Control Points

Gateway	Region	Diamond Source	Typical Leverage
Kassamira Port	Kahfagia	Kahfagia	Convoy letter, lantern-law wa
Ecktoria Capital Port	Ecktoria	Ecktoria	Berth priority, coin-house cre
Silkstrand	Acasia	Acasia	Exchange floor pass, condotta
Marcott	Vhasia	Vhasia	Letters patent, safe-conduct,
Fairport	Viterra	Viterra	Customs seal, ferry priority, l
Tarlington Falls	Viterra	Viterra	Lift priority, bridge/portage
Thepyrgos (boom)	Thepyrgos	Thepyrgos	Harbour pass, crane allotmen
High-Mist Pass	Aeler	Aeler	Underway pass, Key-Writ, br
Payden’s Port	Mistlands	Mistlands	Lantern writ, ward-salt, wrai
Thin Shore (Valewood)	Valewood	Valewood/Mistlands	Way-cord, dew-mirror, lantern
Green Gate	Aelinnel	Aelinnel	Tide-path key, host-right bou
Ubral Passes	Ubral	Aeler/Ubral	Vurim pass-ring, hill-fort she
Thing-holm	Linn	Linn	Thing ruling, harbour-green c
Foedus Stone	Vilikari	Vilikari/Ykrul	Foedus renewal, remount allo
Zakov Roadstead	Zakov	Zakov	Harbour-green chit, corsair ch
Black Banner Camps	Black Banner	Black Banner/Ykrul/Vilikari	Safe-conduct, remount chit, c
Brass Gate	Ashaan	Ashaan	Spirit-lamp, brass seal, veil-c
Port Shed	Dhahara (Brass Coast)	Sidhi/Kahfagia	Lighthouse charter, port-weig
Sarvistan	Dhahara (Mountain Satrapy)	Aeler	Keystone charter, sledge-wax
Bridge of Nine Echoes	Ayokha	Lethai-ar	Silk voucher, monsoon schedu
Sihai Examination Hall	Sihai	Lethai-thora	Stamped pass, Celestial Ledge
Nihori Storm-Shrine	Nihori	Shrine Maiden	Shrine bell, storm-charmer’s
Mbaro Weigh-House	Oshiira	Vermilion Corps	Grain ledger page, tariff stan
The Ukwe (Speaking Tree)	Sekogo	Green Council	Ungwe leaf, nkisi shard, leopa
Himadri Pass	Dhahara (Himadri)	Aeler	Iron ingot, toll waiver, elepha

41.4 Major Trade Routes & Sea Lanes

Table 41.2: Major Sea Lanes (Abstract Clocks)

Sea Lane	Route	Clock Size	Primary Hazards
Amaranthine Coastway	Kahfagia → Ecktoria → Acasia → Vhasia → Viterra	6	Gale, quarantine, harbour booms
Astroegro Straits	Thepyrgos Dolmis Amaranthine	8	Currents, warships, synod
Dolmis Circuits	Fairport Theona Ubral Aelinnel Zakov	8	Reefs, pirates, tide-spirits
Aberderrin Sea	Linnstad Mistlands Valewood coast	10	Ice, white squalls, draugr
Monsoon Coast	Taharka Dhahara (Port Shed) Ayokha Sihai	6–8	Monsoon shifts, privateers, reef mazes
Gulf of Oshiira	Oshiira Kahfagia Ashaan	6	Cold war patrols, spirit-buoys
Red Desert Crossing	Ashaan Oshiira Dhahara	8	Spirit-dust storms, dry wells, bandits
Silk Way (Overland)	Fhara Pereshi Kuvani Dhahara	8–10	Bandits, custom inspections, story tolls

41.5 Edgewalker’s Notes on Leverage

Every Diamond you earn in these generators isn’t a reward—it’s a weapon. Some open doors. Some silence witnesses. Some are debts I’ve already bought from your victims. I’ve categorised the most useful ones below—not as advice, but as a field manual for predators who understand that the world runs on desperation, not honour:

- Passage Tokens: Pass-stones, harbour charters, toll waivers. These let you move without paying the tariff. Use them early—they tend to “expire” when the issuer has an unfortunate accident involving a cliff, a rival, or a sudden lack of heirs.
- Seals & Stamps: Official marks that prove you belong. A forged seal works once—until someone notices the corpse in the watermark or the signature matches a known forger. A real one works until someone audits it... which I prevent by selling the auditor a “permanent vacation” in the Mistlands where the wraiths appreciate quiet clients.

- Story Debts: Tulkani vow-cords, Lethai-ar witness cords, Ukwe leaves. These are promises. Break them, and the Hollow visits. Good. Let it collect the interest—I’ve already sold the debt to a Debt-Walker for twice the value, then bought the Debt-Walker’s contract for three times that when they defaulted.
- Spirit Objects: Storm-charms, tide-beads, nkisi shards. These interact with the unseen world. They also attract attention. Perfect. Attention means bids. I’ll sell you the charm, then the exorcism, then the real estate where the spirit used to live... at a premium for “haunted adjacent” properties.

My advice (which you’ll ignore until it’s too late, and then come begging for):

Never use a Diamond if you can trade it for three smaller ones. Liquidity isn’t just power—it’s the difference between eating and being eaten. Always keep a ninth—a secret, a story, a knot tied in a victim’s hair, a whisper in a dead man’s ear—for when the toll exceeds your conscience. (Spoiler: It always does. Conscience is just leverage with a guilt complex.) If you feel guilty? Good. Guilt means you’re leaving money on the table—and I’ve got a buyer for that table.

[Edgewalker: Thimble. If you mention “moral distress” one more time, I’ll bind your ledger to a Veiled Sister’s soul-auction lot and sell it as “emotional collateral.” Now pass the abacus—I’ve got a famine to monetise in Oshiira, and the Vermilion Corps’ head auditor just made a very suspicious large withdrawal.]

[Thimble: But sir, the Accord—]

[Edgewalker: (Standing, knocking over inkwell) Thimble. You’re not just fired—you’re liquidated. Your final paycheck is in the ledger... under “Organic Debt, Settled via Soul Harvest, Compound Interest.” Now leave before I amend the entry to “Thimble’s Ledger: Used to Line the Veiled Sisters’ Soul-Auction Chests.” And take your tears with you—they’re ruining the depreciation schedule for my new soul-farm.]

Chapter 42

Story Beat (SB) Menus

42.0.1 Universal SB Spend Menu

- 1 SB — Shave time/position: add +1 segment to the current clock or drop Position one step or impose a small fee/toll.
- 2 SB — Escalate pressure: upgrade the active ♣ or force a choice of Diamonds or tick a Front by 1.
- 3 SB — Lock a gate/taboo: close a route until a named ♦ is spent or invoke a regional taboo.
- 4+ SB — Reshape the leg: rewrite the route, start a new complication clock, demand immediate payment on a Debt.

42.0.2 Regional SB Options

- Aeler (under-vaults): Breath-time checks, engineer requisitions, cave-in detours.
- Oshiira (canals): Audit traps, locust swarms, Widow's health failures.
- Ashaan (Veil): Spirit-dust storms, bound spirits breaking free, Black Hand sweeps.
- Tulkani (wagon circles): Debt collectors, Hollow walks on the ninth night, vow-cords tangling.
- Lethai-ar (bridges): Snapped strands, web-law challenges, the ninth echo.
- Aelinnel (bells): Miscounts, offended tide-spirits, bell-lines breaking.

Colophon

This worldbook was assembled from the journals, ledgers, and bar tabs of one Aeler Edgewalker, paid for by the High King's Office of External Opportunities (budget line: "Unconventional Revenue Generation"). The generator tables were tested in the field—meaning I ran them at gunpoint in a Tulkani wagon circle while a Debt-Walker counted my breaths. They work.

If you find yourself in a tavern and the Edgewalker buys you a drink, don't ask where I am now. The road is long, the ledgers are never balanced, and the ninth measure is always waiting.

— Faleki of Ironhold

(at a weigh-house in Mbaro, under a lamp that flickers nine times before it steadies. She still owes me for that drink.)

[Thimble: Sir, the colophon lacks a disclaimer regarding—]

[Edgewalker: Thimble. You're fired. Your final paycheck is in the ledger... under "Organic Debt, Settled via Soul Harvest." Now leave before I amend it to "Soul, Harvested for Veiled Sister Soul-Auction Lot 7." And take your ledger—it's kindling now.]
