

```
heistengine[1]]colback=black!5,colframe=velvetRed!80!black,title=Heist Engine – GM Reference,fonttitle=, sharp corners, enclosure title=upper left, 1
mechbox[1]colback=black!5,colframe=velvetRed!80!black,title=1,fonttitle=
```

— The coin that never spends is the one you don't remember taking. —

The Velvet Touch

A Thief's Guide to Silk and Shadow

Madam Serafine, Mistress of the Velvet Court

Silkstrand, Year of the Falling Bridge

The coin you take is never the one that costs you. The one you leave behind—that is the debt that collects.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Preface: On Rising from the Gutter

I was seven when I picked my first pocket. A merchant from Kahfagia, fat with spices and arrogance. He never felt my fingers slip his purse. I watched him laugh with his friends while I bought bread for a week.

They never caught me. Not because I was clever—I was not, not yet. Because I was nothing. A gutter rat, a ghost in the crowd, a face that blends into wet cobblestones. That is the first lesson: power is not in the blade or the coin. It is in being forgotten.

Twenty years later, I own three warehouses, two gambling dens, and a brothel that also launders secrets. The Watch Captain owes me his promotion. The Dye Syndicate pays me not to undercut their prices. And the Archivolt notaries keep a drawer full of my forged seals—they do not know which are real.

I am Madam Serafine. They call me the Velvet Touch because I never leave bruises.

This book is not for heroes. It is for those who understand that the world runs on whispers, debts, and the careful omission of the truth. I learned from the streets. I learned from Ikasha, who sleeps in shadow, and from Livaea, who dresses power in silk and smiles. I learned that a song can open a lock faster than any pick, and that a forged document is worth a thousand swords.

You want to be a thief? Good. But first, forget everything you think you know. The mark is not the victim. The mark is the one who believes they are safe.

The coin that never spends is the one you don't remember taking.

Madam Serafine
Silkstrand, under the Three-Queens Bridge
The ink is lamp-black and my blood. The mirror is clean.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don't remember taking. —

Contents

Preface	3
I The Philosophy of the Quiet Hand	11
1 On Being Nothing	13
1.1 The Three Principles of the Velvet Hand	13
1.1.1 The Coin That Is Not There	13
1.1.2 The Witness Who Looks Away	13
1.1.3 The Debt That Pays Twice	13
2 Thief Talents: The Velvet Ladder	15
2.1 2 XP Talents — Foundations	15
2.2 4 XP Talents — The Working Knife	15
2.3 5 XP Talents — Signature Moves	16
2.4 7 XP Prestige Talent — The Quiet Catastrophe	16
3 Rogue Builds for the Silkstrand Night	17
3.1 The Cat Burglar	17
3.2 The Confidence Artist	17
3.3 The Saboteur	17
II The Forger's Art	19
4 The Weight of Paper	21
4.1 The Forging Mini-Game	21
4.1.1 The Four Steps of Forgery	21
4.1.2 Forged Diamond Types	22
4.1.3 Failure and Consequences	22

5	Fence and Laundry	23
5.0.1	Market Tiers	23
5.0.2	Laundering Clocks	23
III	The Cantor’s Cadence	25
6	The Voice That Opens Doors	27
6.1	The Rogue Cantor: Song as Setup	27
6.1.1	Performance as Distraction	27
6.1.2	The Encore Gambit	27
6.2	Corrupted Cantors: The Cult of the Velvet Note	27
6.2.1	Ikasha’s Whisper (Shadow Cantor)	27
6.2.2	Livaea’s Velvet Hook (Social Cantor)	28
6.2.3	Malachai’s False Note (Desperate Cantor)	29
7	Building a Rogue Cantor	31
7.1	The Whisper (Shadow Focus)	31
7.2	The Siren (Social Focus)	31
7.3	The Courtesan (Seduction Focus)	31
7.4	The Cornered Rat (Desperate Focus)	31
IV	The Velvet Court	33
8	The Court That Never Sleeps	35
8.1	The Hierarchy of Shadows	35
8.1.1	The Creditors (The Velvet Seats)	35
8.1.2	The Debtors (Everyone Else)	35
8.2	Faction Reputation: The Velvet Dial	36
8.2.1	The Velvet Moot	36
9	The Court’s Assets (What the GM Can Offer)	37

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

9.0.1 Velvet Heat Dial	37
10 Jobs from the Velvet Court (d12)	39
11 Notable Court NPCs	41
11.0.1 Madam Serafine (Creditor)	41
11.0.2 Old Kes (Fence)	41
11.0.3 Sister Agatha (Sanctuary)	41
11.0.4 The Archivist	41
11.0.5 The Grey Eminence (Secret)	41
11.0.6 Informant Web Mechanics	42
12 Court-Approved Heists (The Heist Clock)	43
13 Court-Approved Heists (The Heist Clock)	45
13.1 The Velvet Heist Planner	47
13.2 Heist Clock	47
13.3 Threat Clocks	47
V Patrons of the Underworld	49
14 Ikasha – She Who Sleeps in Shadow	51
14.1 Lore	51
14.2 Advantages for Rogues	51
14.3 Drawbacks	51
14.4 Rites for the Rogue Cantor	51
15 Livaea – The Crimson Courtier	53
15.1 Lore	53
15.2 Advantages for Rogues	53
15.3 Drawbacks	53
15.4 Rites for the Rogue Cantor	54

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

16 Aveh – The Rider Behind the Storm (For Fugitives)	55
16.1 Lore	55
16.2 Advantages	55
16.3 Drawbacks	55
17 Malachai – The Chained Angel (For the Desperate)	57
18 Choosing Your Patron	59
 VI Appendices	 61
A Sample Schemes	63
A.0.1 The False Heir	63
A.0.2 The Ghost Cargo	63
A.0.3 The Rival’s Downfall	63
 B NPC Profiles	 65
B.0.1 The Watch Captain (Corrupt)	65
B.0.2 The Fence	65
B.0.3 The Rival Thief	65
B.0.4 Court Informant	65
B.0.5 Livaeen Courtesan (Information Broker)	65
 C Velvet Court Rumours (d12)	 67
C.0.1 Rival Crew Generator	67
 D The Silk House — A Livaeen Brothel Asset	 71
D.1 The Velvet Altar	71
D.1.1 Running a Velvet Racket	71
D.2 The Silk House as an Asset (Major Asset, 12 XP)	72
D.2.1 Free Use (Once per Session, Off-Screen)	72
D.2.2 Scene Surge (Spend 1 Boon, On-Screen)	72

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

D.2.3	Extra Use	73
D.3	The Madame as a Terrestrial Patron	73
D.3.1	Obligation Track	73
D.3.2	Madame’s Favours (Clearing Obligation)	73
D.3.3	Sample Madame: Madam Serafine’s Rival	74
D.4	Upkeep and Complications	74
D.4.1	Maintaining the House	74
D.4.2	Complications (d6)	75
D.5	Sample Blackmail Files (d6)	75
D.6	Adventure Hooks	76
D.7	Integration with Velvet Court and Livaea’s Cult	76

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Part I

The Philosophy of the Quiet Hand

Chapter 1

On Being Nothing

The first time you break into a counting-house, you will be afraid. Good. Fear keeps your fingers light and your ears open. The moment you feel safe, you are already caught.

A thief is not a warrior. We do not fight. We slip. Through a window left unlatched, through a crowd that parts without knowing, through a contract signed in too much haste. The world is full of gaps—the ninth step un-counted, the witness who looked away, the seal that was pressed a moment too soon.

1.1 The Three Principles of the Velvet Hand

1.1.1 The Coin That Is Not There

Never take what will be missed before dawn. A silver coin from a rich man's purse? He will curse his servants, forget by noon. A ledger page that proves his fraud? He will burn the city to find it.

Take what they do not know they have until it is too late.

1.1.2 The Witness Who Looks Away

Every crime is witnessed. The trick is not to be invisible—it is to be unremarkable. A servant carrying linens. A clerk with a stack of writs. A beggar sleeping in the archway. The guards see you. They just do not notice.

1.1.3 The Debt That Pays Twice

When you steal, you create a debt. Not yours—theirs. They owe you for the fear you planted, the reputation you damaged, the secret you now hold. A true thief does not take gold. Gold spends. A secret spends forever.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Chapter 2

Thief Talents: The Velvet Ladder

The following talents are suited for those who walk the edge of law and shadow. They are not for brawlers or brutes. They are for the quiet, the cunning, and the patient.

2.1 2 XP Talents — Foundations

Light Fingers Tags: Strike, AGI, Gambit

Cost: 2 XP

Active, once per scene. When you attempt to lift a small object (purse, key, letter, seal) from a person or desk, treat your first Stealth or Subterfuge roll as Position +1.

No one notices until it is already in your sleeve. (See ??)

The Unlocked Window Tags: Move, AGI, Flow

Cost: 2 XP

Passive. When infiltrating a structure you have cased for at least an hour, ignore one security obstacle (locked door, patrolled corridor, guard dog) per session. Describe how you already prepared for it. (See ??)

Silk Palms Tags: Influence, FAT

Cost: 2 XP

Active. When you bribe or gift a minor official, you gain a temporary String: Bought Silence. Once, you may activate this String to reduce DV by 1 on a Petition or Broker action involving that official. The String is consumed afterward. (See ??)

2.2 4 XP Talents — The Working Knife

Always Another Exit Tags: Move, SPT, Gambit

Cost: 4 XP

Active, once per session. When you are cornered or a heist goes wrong, you may declare you prepared an escape route earlier. Describe it plausibly (rope out a window, bribed a guard, secret door). The GM may impose a cost—a dropped item, a witness, a future debt—but you get out. (See ??)

The Forger's Eye Tags: Craft, WIT, Clock

Cost: 4 XP

Active. You can copy any handwriting, seal, or signature with uncanny accuracy. When you attempt to forge a document, roll Wits + Craft (DV 3 for simple, 4–5 for complex). On a hit, create a Forged credential. On a partial, the forgery holds for one scene; thereafter it may be detected. (See ??)

Requires: Craft 1+.

Crowd Veil Tags: Observe, MIG, Support

Cost: 4 XP

Active. You vanish into crowds. When in a populated area (market, festival, dock), you may roll Stealth vs. DV 3 to become Hidden in plain sight. Pursuers suffer –1 die to find you until you act conspicuously. (See ??)

Requires: Stealth 2+.

2.3 5 XP Talents — Signature Moves

The Velvet Glove Tags: Influence, Strike, Combo

Cost: 5 XP

Active, once per session. You have cultivated a network of informants, fence contacts, and corrupted clerks. You may declare that a minor NPC (a servant, a dockworker, a scribe) owes you a favor. They provide a specific service: unlock a door, delay a patrol, deliver a message. The GM may dictate a cost (the NPC will later need help, or their favor expires after use). (See ??)

Requires: Presence 2+, Streetwise 1+.

Master of Misdirection Tags: Influence, Gambit, SB

Cost: 5 XP

Active. When you are discovered during a crime, you may spend 1 Boon to redirect suspicion to another person or faction. Roll Deception vs. DV 4. On a hit, the heat shifts; on a miss, you gain Exposure +1 and the target becomes hostile. (See ??)

Requires: Deception 2+.

2.4 7 XP Prestige Talent — The Quiet Catastrophe

Ghost Heist Tags: Strike, Clock, Overload

Cost: 7 XP

Active, once per arc. You may commit a crime that is never solved—not because you are perfect, but because the evidence points nowhere. After a successful heist, you may declare that no traceable evidence remains. The GM cannot use Social SB to retroactively implicate you from that scene. Cost: You must accept a permanent Reputation: Whispers tag; some will always suspect you, even without proof. (See ??)

Requires: Tier II, Stealth 3+.

Chapter 3

Rogue Builds for the Silkstrand Night

3.1 The Cat Burglar

Core Talents: Light Fingers, The Unlocked Window, Always Another Exit. Style: High, vertical, through windows and rooftops. Patron: Ikasha.

3.2 The Confidence Artist

Core Talents: Silk Palms, The Forger's Eye, Velvet Glove. Style: Social infiltration, false identities, forged documents. Patron: Livaea.

3.3 The Saboteur

Core Talents: Crowd Veil, Master of Misdirection, The Ghost Did It. Style: Disruption, frame-ups, political chaos. Patron: Malachai (rare) or Aveh.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don't remember taking. —

Part II

The Forger's Art

Chapter 4

The Weight of Paper

In Silkstrand, the right seal is worth more than a ship. A stamped manifest can move contraband past the harbor master. A notary's ribbon can turn stolen goods into legitimate auction lots. A letter of credit can buy a warehouse with no coin changing hands.

Forgery is not crime. It is reality editing.

4.1 The Forging Mini-Game

To forge a document, you need three things:

1. Knowledge of what the genuine document looks like—its paper, ink, seal, and language.
2. A Sample — at least one authentic example to copy, or a witness who can describe it in detail.
3. A Workshop — a quiet place with the right tools: quills, inks, sealing wax, a press, and a steady hand.

4.1.1 The Four Steps of Forgery

Step 1: Research (Wits + Investigation, DV 2–4) Learn the document's specifics. On a hit, gain +1 die to the Craft roll. On a miss, you miss a crucial detail—the forgery will be detectable.

Step 2: Materials (Wits + Streetwise, DV 3) Source matching paper, ink, and seal. On a hit, the materials are adequate. On a partial, they are close but flawed (the forgery holds for one scene, then degrades). On a miss, you must substitute inferior materials—the forgery starts with a Suspicious tag.

Step 3: The Craft (Wits + Craft, DV 3 for simple (receipt, note), 4 for standard (manifest, writ), 5 for complex (royal charter, embassy seal)) Roll to create the forged document. On a hit, you produce a Forged Diamond. On a partial, produce a Fragile Diamond—it works once, then crumbles (detected). On a miss, the forgery is worthless; you may salvage materials for another attempt, but the GM gains 1 SB.

Step 4: Presentation (Presence + Deception vs. DV of the examiner) When you present the forgery, roll against the target's Insight or relevant skill. On a hit, the document is accepted. On a partial, they are suspicious—offer concession (bribe, favor, or they keep the document for "verification"). On a miss, they detect the forgery; your Exposure ticks +1 and the document is seized.

4.1.2 Forged Diamond Types

- Cargo Manifest – Legal immunity for smuggling. Lasts one voyage.
- Notarial Seal – Validates a contract or deed. Lasts one arbitration.
- Letter of Credit – Withdraw funds from a named merchant house. One use.
- Writ of Passage – Skip tolls and inspections on a named road or river. One journey.
- Identity Papers – Assume a false identity for one scene.
- Pardon – Commutes a minor crime. Requires a public reading.

4.1.3 Failure and Consequences

When a forgery is detected, the GM may choose one:

- Exposure – Your reputation among officials drops. Tick Exposure [4] for the city or faction.
- Debt – The examiner does not report you—instead, they demand a favor.
- Bounty – A warrant is quietly issued. A rival thief may claim it.
- Counterfeit Trail – Your forged seal is used by someone else later, framing you.

Chapter 5

Fence and Laundry

Once you have stolen goods, you need to sell them. The art of laundering is not hiding—it is recontextualizing.

5.0.1 Market Tiers

Different fences operate at different levels of legitimacy and scrutiny, affecting the difficulty of moving goods:

- Street Market (DV 2): Stolen goods sold openly; quick but risky (e.g., pawn shops, street vendors)
- Guild Market (DV 3): Hot cargo requiring some paperwork; moderate risk (e.g., guild merchants, legitimate fronts)
- Court Market (DV 4): Tracked items needing forged documents; lower risk but higher cost (e.g., nobles, officials)
- Arcane Market (DV 5): Warded or psionically significant items; highest risk and reward (rare, supernatural goods)

Partial results when fencing: price spike (Bank -1), Crew Heat +1, quality flaw (-1 Effect on next use), or seller's temporary Sting. On a complete miss: stingspring (Sting[6]+2), counterfeit gear, or owed favor to a rival fence.

5.0.2 Laundering Clocks

To launder a stolen item or forged Diamond, start a Laundry Clock [4] (small items) or [6] (major items). Each downtime scene, you may work one tick by:

- Bribing a fence (spend 1 Favor or 1 Boon)
- Moving goods through a neutral market (risk Exposure +1)
- Using a genuine paper trail (requires a Forged Diamond)

When the clock fills, the item is clean—it can be sold at full value or used without suspicion.

If you fail to complete the clock within three sessions, the item becomes Hot. Selling it then risks Exposure +2 and a visit from the original owner's agents.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Part III

The Cantor's Cadence

Chapter 6

The Voice That Opens Doors

Singing is not for taverns alone. A well-timed tune can calm a crowd, distract a guard, or deliver a secret message in plain hearing. The Cantor's path is the thief's second skin—especially when the singer cares more for the lock than the lyric.

6.1 The Rogue Cantor: Song as Setup

Most Cantors perform for applause. A rogue Cantor performs for opportunity. While the audience watches the singer, their pockets are already empty.

6.1.1 Performance as Distraction

When you sing or play in a public space, roll Presence + Performance against a DV set by crowd size (2 for small, 4 for large). On a hit, you create an Engrossed Audience tag. For the duration of your song, any ally attempting Stealth or Subterfuge in the same area gains +1 die.

On a partial, the crowd is attentive but some watch the exits—Stealth rolls are unchanged, but allies gain +1 Position to social rolls.

6.1.2 The Encore Gambit

Once per session, after a successful performance, you may declare an Encore. The crowd demands more. This extends your distraction for an additional scene, but the GM gains 1 SB (the guards are curious now).

6.2 Corrupted Cantors: The Cult of the Velvet Note

Not all Cantors walk the road alone. Some find patrons in the shadows—beings who grant power in exchange for a different kind of song.

6.2.1 Ikasha's Whisper (Shadow Cantor)

Ikasha speaks in the space between notes. Followers learn to sing in frequencies that do not carry, to hum a lullaby that makes guards sleep, to whistle a tune that unlocks spirit-locks.

Corruption: Your voice develops a second timber—a whisper that follows your sung words. Strangers shiver when you speak. Allies sometimes hear you when you are not there.

Rites:

- Cradle Song (Low) – Lull a single target (Resist DV 3). Costs 1 Fatigue.
- Lockpick’s Refrain (Standard) – Unlock one mundane or warded lock by humming its true pitch. Costs 1 Obligation.

6.2.2 Livaea’s Velvet Hook (Social Cantor)

Livaea is the patron of courtiers, concubines, escorts, and companions—all those who trade in desire. She teaches that every song is a seduction, every glance a contract, every touch a negotiation. Her followers do not charm; they bind. A promise whispered in her name is a thread that tightens with every breath.

Corruption: Your eyes take on a reflective quality. In dim light, others see their own desires mirrored there. Your skin always feels faintly warm to the touch. Those who sleep near you dream of lost lovers.

Rites:

- Golden Tongue (Low) – Gain +2 dice to Sway for one social exchange. Costs 1 Fatigue; after use, the target feels a mild attraction or obligation. They may seek you out later.
- The Velvet Invitation (Low) – Gain automatic entry to any private social function (masquerade, salon, pleasure house). The invitation appears in your pocket, signed by a name you can borrow for one night. Costs 1 Obligation.
- The Unrefusable Offer (Standard) – Sing or whisper a bargain while touching the target (a hand on the arm, a brush of fingers). The target must accept the offer or suffer -2 dice to all rolls until they do. The offer must be something they could conceivably agree to (no suicide, no self-mutilation). Costs 2 Obligation. After use, the target remembers the moment as strangely intimate.
- The Crimson Masquerade (High) – Assume the appearance of any person you have touched (skin-to-skin) for one scene. Your voice matches theirs perfectly. Costs 2 Fatigue and marks a Debt Clock [4] with Livaea.

Societal Impact: Livaea’s cult is woven into every pleasure house, every high-class escort service, every discreet companionship agency in the Amaranthine. Her temples are not buildings; they are the back rooms of brothels, the upper floors of massage houses, the private salons of courtesans who buy and sell secrets along with flesh. A Livaeian courtesan is as dangerous as any assassin—her weapons are a smile, a tear, a carefully timed yawn. The Velvet Court has a standing agreement with the Livaeian network: information flows both ways, and a thief who insults a Livaeian courtesan finds every door closed and every guard alerted.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

6.2.3 Malachai’s False Note (Desperate Cantor)

Malachai answers when the thief has nothing left to lose. Her Cantors sing of easy scores, of curses as blessings, of the coin that spends itself. The price is always a piece of the singer’s soul. She is the patron of gamblers, addicts, and those who have sold themselves one too many times.

Corruption: Your voice cracks on certain notes. Those who hear you feel a brief, inexplicable hunger. Your shadow seems thinner, hungrier. You find yourself counting coins you never had.

Rites:

- The Lucky Pick (Low) – Reroll a failed Stealth or Subterfuge roll. Costs 1 Fatigue and 1 Corruption tick.
- The Debt Note (Standard) – Sing a curse on a rival. They suffer -1 die on their next heist. Costs 2 Fatigue and marks a Debt Clock [4] that Malachai will collect. The collection is always painful and often ironic.
- The Final Score (High) – Once per campaign, you may automatically succeed at any single heist roll, but you must immediately mark 2 Corruption and gain a permanent Marked by Malachai condition. The coin you take will never be enough.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Chapter 7

Building a Rogue Cantor

7.1 The Whisper (Shadow Focus)

Talents: Ikasha's rites, Stealth, Performance. Role: Infiltrator, messenger, spy. Progression: Low rites → Crowd Veil → Ikasha's Mark.

7.2 The Siren (Social Focus)

Talents: Livaea's rites, Sway, Silk Palms. Role: Confidence artist, blackmailer, courtesan-spy. Progression: Golden Tongue → The Velvet Invitation → The Unrefusable Offer → Velvet Glove.

7.3 The Courtesan (Seduction Focus)

Talents: Livaea's rites, Silk Palms, The Velvet Glove. Role: Escort, companion, concubine, information broker. Progression: The Velvet Invitation → Golden Tongue → The Unrefusable Offer → The Crimson Masquerade.

7.4 The Cornered Rat (Desperate Focus)

Talents: Malachai's rites, Always Another Exit, Master of Misdirection. Role: Saboteur, desperate fugitive, self-destructive genius. Progression: The Lucky Pick → Blood Price → The Final Score.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Part IV

The Velvet Court

Chapter 8

The Court That Never Sleeps

The Velvet Court is not a building. It is a network—of whispers, of debts, of favours owed and collected. It has no single leader, though many claim the title. It has no charter, no treasury, no walls. It is the space between the legitimate and the condemned, and its members are the ones who know how to walk that line.

I am Madam Serafine, and I hold the largest share of the Court's influence. But I did not build it alone. No one builds a shadow. You simply learn to stand where it falls.

8.1 The Hierarchy of Shadows

The Velvet Court is not a guild. There are no titles, no uniforms, no initiation rituals. Yet every thief in Silkstrand knows who to ask, who to fear, and who to pay. The Court's structure is a web of Creditors and Debtors. Reputation is currency. Favours are interest.

8.1.1 The Creditors (The Velvet Seats)

Six individuals hold the majority of the Court's influence. Each controls a different resource:

1. Madam Serafine (Information, Forgery, Laundering)
2. Old Kes (Fence, Smuggling, Markets)
3. The Dockmaster (Movement, Ships, Hidden Warehouses)
4. Sister Agatha (Cover, Sanctuary, False Identities)
5. The Archivist (Legal Precedent, Forged Writs, Court Delays)
6. The Grey Eminence (Unknown; rumoured to be a Veiled Sister or a Covenant judge)

Each Creditor has a Favour Clock [6]. When you do a significant service for them, tick the clock. When it fills, they owe you a major favour (a heist's worth of help). When you owe them a debt, they may call it in at any time.

8.1.2 The Debtors (Everyone Else)

Every thief, fence, smuggler, and corrupt clerk in Silkstrand owes someone. The Court tracks debts through Strings. A String can be:

- Intelligence (a secret, a map, a guard schedule)
- Safe Passage (a route, a blind eye, a forgotten warrant)
- Muscle (a favour from a bruiser, a crew for a job)
- Coin (silver, goods, or a Forged Diamond)

Strings are traded, sold, and called in. The Court’s ledger is oral—written ink can be burned. A remembered debt is forever.

8.2 Faction Reputation: The Velvet Dial

Track the party’s standing with the Velvet Court using a Velvet Dial from -3 (Enemy of the Court) to +3 (Creditor-in-Waiting). Adjust the dial when:

- Complete a job for a Creditor (+1)
- Pay off a major debt (+1)
- Betray a fellow Court member (-1)
- Get caught by the Watch and name names (-2)
- Kill a Creditor (reset to -3, but gain a permanent enemy)

Effects:

- -3 to -2: Hunted. Guards are tipped off; fences refuse you; you cannot find a safe house in Silkstrand.
- -1 to +1: Neutral. Standard access to minor fences, but Creditors watch you warily.
- +2 to +3: Trusted. You may request a Favour from any Creditor once per arc; you may attend the Velvet Moot.

8.2.1 The Velvet Moot

Once per season, the Creditors meet at a secret location. If you have Velvet Dial +2 or higher, you may be invited. At the Moot, you may:

- Bid on a Job (gain exclusive access to a high-value heist)
- Settle a Debt (pay off a major obligation with a rare item or secret)
- Propose a New Creditor (challenge a current Creditor for their seat—risky)
- Learn Rumours (gain 1d3 Strings of intelligence about future events)

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Chapter 9

The Court's Assets (What the GM Can Offer)

When players work for the Velvet Court, they can earn access to:

- The Blue Ledger (a record of every bribeable official in Silkstrand)
- The Maze of Whispers (a network of hidden passages under the city)
- The Ghost Crew (a team of urchin spies, all Cap 1, good for reconnaissance)
- The Scribe's Seal (a notary who will stamp anything for a price)
- The Unstable Bridge (a safe house that can be collapsed to cover an escape)

9.0.1 Velvet Heat Dial

The Court tracks two clocks that measure active attention from authorities and rivals:

- Watch Interest [6] (Crew Heat) – fills when jobs go loud or evidence left.
- Syndicate Pressure [6] (City Heat) – fills when rivals or the Exchange take notice.

At 3 segments: Patrol Sweep begins (guards actively look). At 6 segments: Sting Operation triggers.

Watch Interest [6]: 0

- 0-2: Background hum.
- 3: Patrol Sweep [4] begins.
- 4-5: Random stops; Notoriety +1 on flashy moves.
- 6: Sting [6] + Exposure +1

Syndicate Pressure [6]: 0

- 0-2: Routine.
- 3: Curfew murmurs, stop and search; start Patrol Sweep [4] in hot districts.
- 6: Crackdown [4] (DV +1 on criminal actions).

— The coin that never spends is the one you don't remember taking. —

Chapter 10

Jobs from the Velvet Court (d12)

When the players need work (or the GM needs a hook), roll or choose:

1. The Unopened Letter – Steal a sealed diplomatic pouch from a courier before dawn. The contents are a treaty that would spark a trade war. Rival thieves are also hunting it.
2. The Ghost Ship – A vessel in the harbour carries a cargo of cursed idols. Smuggle them off without alerting the crew, who are cultists.
3. The Silent Ledger – A merchant's private ledger records debts to the Velvet Court. He is threatening to go to the Watch. Steal the ledger and replace it with a forgery.
4. The Fencing Master – A duellist is blackmailing a Creditor. Challenge him to a public duel and make him lose. No lethal damage—just humiliation.
5. The Last Heir – A noble's lost son has been located in a debtor's prison. Break him out. The noble will pay in land, not coin.
6. The Poisoned Well – Someone is poisoning the Court's informants. Find the source. It may be a rogue alchemist in the Dye District.
7. The Crimson Seal – A forged notarial seal is being sold to rival thieves. Steal the original die and destroy all copies. The forger is a former Court member.
8. The Velvet Trap – A new Creditor has appeared, promising to sell the Court's secrets to the Watch. Prove they are a plant, or eliminate them quietly.
9. The Night Market Heist – The Dust Market is auctioning an item the Court wants. Steal it before the gavel falls. The auctioneer is a rival faction's fence.
10. The Ghost of the Archivolt – A dead notary's ghost is haunting the court records. It is trying to expose old forgeries. Lay it to rest or silence it.
11. The Broken Bridge – The Three-Queens Bridge is being repaired. The construction crew has found a hidden vault beneath the old foundation. Empty it before the city engineers arrive.
12. The Ninth Key – A legend says the Velvet Court's founder hid a master key that can open any lock in Silkstrand. The key is split into nine fragments, each held by a different thief. The party is tasked with collecting them—or stealing them from the current holders.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Chapter 11

Notable Court NPCs

11.0.1 Madam Serafine (Creditor)

Tier: IV Motivation: Maintain the Court's balance, expand her influence to the Brass Coast. Leverage: She holds information on every major official in Silkstrand. She also knows the secret passage into the Archivolt's sealed vault. Quirk: She never wears the same dress twice. Each one has a hidden pocket large enough for a ledger.

11.0.2 Old Kes (Fence)

Tier: III Motivation: Increase his share of the smuggling trade, undermine the Kahfagian factors. Leverage: He can move any good, anywhere, within a week. He also has a contract with a Sidhi ship captain that is worth a small fortune. Quirk: He is missing three fingers on his left hand. He lost them to a customs trap. He keeps them in a jar as a warning.

11.0.3 Sister Agatha (Sanctuary)

Tier: II (but with powerful allies) Motivation: Protect the poor and the desperate. She gives sanctuary to thieves on the run, but demands they work off their stay in her soup kitchen. Leverage: Her hospice is neutral ground. No violence is permitted within its walls. The Watch respects her because she heals their wounded. Quirk: She has a tattoo of a broken chain on her wrist. She was a freed slave from Ashaan.

11.0.4 The Archivist

Tier: III Motivation: Accumulate legal knowledge and use it to blackmail officials. He is also the secret keeper of the Court's forged seal database. Leverage: He can make any legal problem disappear—or appear. He also knows which notaries are corrupt and which are clean. Quirk: He has never been seen without a specific quill, a family heirloom. The quill's nib is made from a saint's finger bone.

11.0.5 The Grey Eminence (Secret)

Tier: ? (rumoured IV) Motivation: Unknown. Some say they are a Veiled Sister who fled Ashaan. Others say they are a Covenant judge playing a long game. Leverage: The Grey Eminence is never seen, never named, but their orders carry weight. They may be the only one who knows the true origin of the Velvet Court. Quirk: Letters from the Grey Eminence arrive on paper that is still warm, as if freshly pressed.

11.0.6 Informant Web Mechanics

The party can cultivate 3-5 informants (dock porter, lamplighter, clerk, etc.). Each has Reliability [4] (ticks down on 1s). Pay their Price (a favor, a coin, a secret) for a Clue or DV -1 on one roll. Two informants on the same topic: +1 Effect, only lowest Reliability ticks down.

Running a Web

- Access: What information the informant can provide
- Reliability [4]: Tracks trustworthiness; decreases when the informant is stressed or compromised (decreases on a roll of 1 when used)
- Price: Cost to gain information (favor, coin, secret)
- Flags: Special traits (e.g., “Connected to Watch”; “Lives in Dye District”)

Using Informants Pay Price to gain:

- Clue: +1 die on an investigation roll
- Small String: A minor favor or piece of information
- DV -1: On one roll within the informant’s sphere of influence

Informant Complications When an informant’s Reliability reaches 0:

- They flip allegiance or vanish
- Start Burn [4] clock to recover/replace
- GM may spend SB to create immediate problems

Cross-Check Advantage Spend 2 informants on the same topic:

- Take +1 Effect on related rolls
- Only the lowest Reliability decreases on a roll of 1

Masking Source Spend 1 Bank to prevent Reliability -1 once when using informants.

Chapter 12

Court-Approved Heists (The Heist Clock)

When the players accept a job from the Court, the GM sets up a Heist Clock [6] (simple) to [12] (complex) to track overall progress toward the objective. Additionally, the GM may establish Threat Clocks to track escalating danger during the heist.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Chapter 13

Court-Approved Heists (The Heist Clock)

	If you want...	Do this...
	Tension to rise steadily	Use 2-3 Threat Clocks (Alarm, Patrol, Rival Interference). Tick them on Partials and Misses .	Using on play
	Lockpicking to feel dramatic	Make the safe a Progress Clock [6]. Each Mechanics roll ticks 1-2 segments on a Partial (success on full tick).	Rolling c
	Setup rolls to matter	Grant Kit Tokens (one-use +1d or Position boost) on strong hits . On partials , start a complication clock (e.g., Guard Alert [3]).	Let
	Boons to flow (not hoard)	Remind players: " You have [X] Boons – spend them or lose them at scene end. " Model spending as GM by offering tempting re-rolls (e.g., "Spend a Boon to avoid that guard's glance?").	Letting Boons for
	Flashbacks (preparedness)	Let players spend 1 Boon to declare a minor flashback ("I loosened that window last night"). For major prep (gaining +2 dice), require a Setup roll before the heist.	flashbac
	Position to affect stealth	State Position before every roll:
Heist Engine – GM Quick Reference		• Controlled – "You have cover in the shadows." • Risky – "The guard glances your way – act fast." • Desperate – "The guard's lantern sweeps right at you."	Using Positio
	Partials to feel like progress	Offer a menu : reduce next attempt's DV by 1, improve Position by 1 step, tick a Progress Clock, gain a Clue, or succeed at a cost (GM gains 1 SB).	Sayi that?
	Momentum after a Miss	Spend the SB immediately: new guard appears, door locks/jams, or tick a Threat Clock twice .	Bankin iron
	Teamwork to shine	Remind players of Strings : • "You and Kael share a String – invoke it now: you both gain 1 Boon or reduce DV by 1." • Strings represent specific favors/debts (not vague "bonds").	Let Strin
— The coin that never spends is the one you don't reasonably take.	The heist to end memorably	End with an escape roll (even with Always Another Exit). Failure means: dropped item, left clue, or gained Heat (not just "you escape").	Letting t last roll n

13.1 The Velvet Heist Planner

Before a job, each player describes one preparation (casing, bribing, stashing gear). Each strong success on a Setup roll grants +1 Position or -1 DV later. Each player starts with 2 Kit Tokens (lockpicks, dark lantern, false papers) that can be spent during the heist for:

- +1 die on a roll
- Improve Position by one step
- Tick the Heist Clock forward by one segment
- Pause a Threat Clock (prevent it from advancing for one tick)

After use, the token is consumed.

13.2 Heist Clock

The Heist Clock advances when players:

- Complete a phase of the heist (e.g., casing, infiltration, acquisition, escape)
- Acquire a key asset (a map, a key, a guard schedule)
- Eliminate a major obstacle (bribe a captain, disable an alarm)

The clock ticks backward when:

- A guard raises an alarm
- A rival thief interferes
- The party is forced to leave evidence

When the clock fills, the heist is complete. The players gain the loot, plus 1 Favour with the Creditor who hired them. The GM may also award a Court Favour (a one-use String that can be traded for help, information, or a safe house). If the clock empties (reaches 0), the heist fails. The party must escape, may lose a member, and gains a Debt owed to the Creditor (they will call it in later).

13.3 Threat Clocks

The GM sets up Threat Clocks to track specific dangers:

- Alarm [4] - Security response time and alert level

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

- Security [4] - Methodical search patterns and guard rotations
- Inside Trouble [4] - Unexpected problems from within the target location

When a Threat Clock fills, the corresponding complication occurs (e.g., Alarm filling means guards are fully alerted and responding).

Part V

Patrons of the Underworld

Chapter 14

Ikasha – She Who Sleeps in Shadow

14.1 Lore

Ikasha is the hush between footfalls, the patience of dark water, the black-feathered watcher at every threshold. She does not command. She sleeps. But in her dreams, she whispers possibilities.

Thieves who follow Ikasha learn to move unseen, to speak unremembered, to become shadows that slip between what is and what could be.

14.2 Advantages for Rogues

- Soft Witness – Your first Stealth roll each scene is Position +1.
- Shadow Meld – Once per session, step into a shadow and emerge from another within Near range.
- The Unobserved – When you are Hidden, Social SB cannot be used to frame you (unless you act first).

14.3 Drawbacks

- The Witness Debt – Every time you use Ikasha's power, you mark a Witness Clock [4]. When it fills, a raven appears to watch your next crime. If you fail that roll, the raven reports to a rival.
- Light Sensitivity – In bright conditions (direct sun, magical illumination), your Stealth rolls suffer -1 die.

14.4 Rites for the Rogue Cantor

- The Unlatched Window (Low) – Gain +2 dice to open one lock or window silently.
- Raven Courier (Standard) – Send a whispered message up to a mile away via a spectral raven.
- Threshold of Sleep (High) – Walk through a locked door as if it were mist. Costs 2 Fatigue and marks Obligation.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don't remember taking. —

Chapter 15

Livaea – The Crimson Courtier

15.1 Lore

Livaea is the whisper behind the curtain, the smile that sells secrets, the velvet hand that closes a cage. She rules through allure, performance, and the hunger for connection. Her domain encompasses not just courtiers, but also escorts, concubines, companions, and all who trade in intimacy as currency.

Thieves who follow Livaea do not steal coins—they steal trust. A stolen kiss, a forged letter, a lover's secret sold to the highest bidder. Livaea's temples are the pleasure houses of Silkstrand, the massage parlours of Zakov, the discreet companionship agencies of the Brass Coast. Her priests are courtesans who know that a whispered secret is worth more than a night's fee, and that a carefully cultivated attachment can move armies.

15.2 Advantages for Rogues

- Courtly Graces – You gain +1 die to Sway and Performance in any refined setting.
- The Velvet Glove – Once per session, you may declare a minor NPC is your secret admirer or blackmail victim. They will help you once.
- Unreadable Mask – You may spend 1 Boon to ignore one Social SB spend against you (the scandal simply fails to stick).
- Favoured Companion – You have a standing introduction to any pleasure house, escort agency, or discreet social club in the Amaranthine. The staff will not betray you unless the price is overwhelming.

15.3 Drawbacks

- The Jealous Court – When you use Livaea's power publicly, mark a Rival Clock [4]. When it fills, a former paramour or jilted client becomes a recurring enemy.
- Addicted to Adoration – If you go more than a session without a notable social triumph, you suffer -1 die to all social rolls until you perform a grand gesture (a public seduction, a scandalous revelation, a purchased favour).
- The Velvet Price – Livaea expects her followers to keep the oldest profession thriving. Refusing to trade in intimacy (even as a broker, not a direct participant) may cause her to withdraw her favour.

15.4 Rites for the Rogue Cantor

- Silk Whisper (Low) – Send a telepathic sentence to a willing target within sight.
- The Shared Cup (Standard) – Share a drink with a target; they cannot lie to you for the next hour.
- The Velvet Invitation (Standard) – Gain automatic, unquestioned entry to any private social function (masquerade, salon, pleasure house, nobles’ retreat). The invitation appears in your pocket, signed by a name you can borrow for one night. Costs 1 Obligation.
- The Crimson Masquerade (High) – Assume the appearance of any person you have touched (skin-to-skin) for one scene. Your voice matches theirs perfectly. Costs 2 Fatigue.
- The Unrefusable Offer (High) – Sing a bargain while touching the target. They must accept or suffer -2 dice to all rolls until they do. The offer must be something they could conceivably agree to (no suicide, no self-mutilation). Costs 2 Obligation.

Chapter 16

Aveh – The Rider Behind the Storm (For Fugitives)

16.1 Lore

Aveh is the faceless rider at the horizon's edge. She offers freedom at the cost of belonging. Thieves who need to vanish—from a bad debt, a murder charge, a betrayed partner—pray to Aveh.

16.2 Advantages

- The Escape Clause – Once per session, you may declare an escape route that was not there before. The GM must accept it, but may impose a cost (you left something behind).
- Forgotten Face – Witnesses have -2 dice to recall your description.

16.3 Drawbacks

- The Erased Name – Each time you use Aveh's power, you lose a minor personal connection (a contact forgets you, a safe house is no longer safe).
- No Home – You cannot stay in one city for more than a season without attracting the Rider's attention.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Chapter 17

Malachai – The Chained Angel (For the Desperate)

See the expansion Malachai, the Chained Angel. For thieves, she offers cursed luck—a die that always rolls high, but at the cost of a slow corruption. Use sparingly; Malachai is a patron for characters who are already falling.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Chapter 18

Choosing Your Patron

Patron	Best for	Worst for
Ikasha	Silent infiltration, ghost thieves	Social scenes, bright areas
Livaea	Courtesans, con artists, spies	Those who hate attention, the chaste
Aveh	Fugitives, escape artists	Anyone who wants roots
Malachai	Desperate gamblers, cursed builds	Long-term campaigns

— The coin that never spends is the one you don't remember taking. —

Part VI

Appendices

Appendix A

Sample Schemes

A.0.1 The False Heir

Forge a letter of introduction from a distant relative. Infiltrate a noble house. Steal the heirloom. Disappear before the real relative arrives. Clocks: Forgery [6], Infiltration [4], Escape [4].

A.0.2 The Ghost Cargo

Steal a shipment of silk. Replace it with crates of sand. Sell the silk in another port using forged manifests. The merchant spends months investigating "thieves" who never existed. Clocks: Heist [6], Laundry [6], Investigation [8] (enemy).

A.0.3 The Rival's Downfall

Plant forged evidence of embezzlement in a rival thief's safehouse. Tip off the Watch. Claim their territory when they are arrested. Clocks: Forgery [4], Infiltration [4], Frame Job [6], Territory Grab [4].

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Appendix B

NPC Profiles

B.0.1 The Watch Captain (Corrupt)

Name: Captain Vellis. Tier: III. Strings: Patrol routes, jail keys, informant network. Leverage: He owes you for not exposing his affair. Price: 1 Favor = one night of ignored patrols.

B.0.2 The Fence

Name: Old Kes. Tier: II. Strings: Underground market, smuggler boats, counterfeit coin. Price: 50% of the value, no questions. For an extra 10%, he will also launder the goods (start Laundry Clock at +1).

B.0.3 The Rival Thief

Name: "Quick" Lena. Tier: III. Strings: A network of urchin spies, a stolen set of master keys, a grudge against you. Weakness: She cannot resist a taunt. Use Deception to draw her into a trap.

B.0.4 Court Informant

Name: Scribe Marlo. Tier: I. Strings: Access to the Archivolt's night shift, a gambling debt. Price: 1 Boon = a copy of tomorrow's court docket (reveals who is being investigated).

B.0.5 Livaeen Courtesan (Information Broker)

Name: Celeste. Tier: II (but with access to Tier IV secrets). Strings: A network of wealthy clients, a black book of secrets, a standing invitation to every salon. Price: A secret for a secret, or a favour for a night's companionship. She never sleeps with anyone she does not choose.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don't remember taking. —

Appendix C

Velvet Court Rumours (d12)

Use these to seed adventures or colour scenes.

1. The Grey Eminence is actually a Veiled Sister who defected. She knows the true name of a bound spirit that guards the Sunken Quarter.
2. Old Kes is dying. He has hidden his fortune in three different locations. Whoever finds it first will inherit his smuggling network.
3. Madam Serafine has a daughter. No one knows who the father is. The daughter is being raised by Sister Agatha.
4. The Archivolt has a secret room containing every forged seal the Court has ever used. The key is held by the Archivist's ghost.
5. The Dockmaster's warehouse on Pier Nine is a front for a Tulkani story-teller who trades in forgotten names.
6. A new faction, the "Silk Purse," is trying to muscle in on the Velvet Court's territory. They are backed by a Kahfagian privateer.
7. The Blue Ledger has a missing page. That page lists the name of a person who cannot be bribed.
8. The Maze of Whispers connects to the Ways Between. Something comes through at midnight.
9. The Ninth Key legend is real. One fragment is held by the Grey Eminence. Another is in the Archivolt's vault.
10. Sister Agatha was once a Veiled Sister. She left the order after being ordered to bind a child's spirit.
11. The Watch Captain's daughter is a member of the Velvet Court. She is the one who feeds him false information.
12. The Velvet Court was founded by a Trow who wanted to study human greed. The Trow is still alive, waiting in the Under-arcades.

C.0.1 Rival Crew Generator

When the GM needs a rival crew, roll on the tables below or choose options that fit the story.

Name (d6)

1. Ashen Cord

2. Brass Legion
3. Thorns of Winter
4. Silken Veil
5. Iron Maw
6. Shadow Consortium

Composition (Leader + 2-4 roles) Roll d6 for number of additional roles (2-5), then choose or roll for each:

- Leader: The planner and face of the crew
- Enforcer: Handles violence and intimidation
- Fence: Moves stolen goods
- Informant: Gathers street intelligence
- Technician: Handles locks, traps, and devices
- Driver: Manages vehicles and escape routes
- Grifter: Specializes in cons and social manipulation
- Scout: Handles reconnaissance and surveillance

Patron (d6)

1. A noble seeking deniable assets
2. A merchant house protecting trade interests
3. A temple faction advancing their agenda
4. A foreign power gathering intelligence
5. A criminal syndicate expanding influence
6. A mysterious benefactor with unknown motives

Goal (d6)

1. Same artifact or information the PCs seek
2. Eliminate the PCs to remove competition
3. Claim a specific turf node or racket
4. Expose the PCs to the authorities

— The coin that never spends is the one you don't remember taking. —

5. Disrupt a specific Velvet Court operation
6. Accumulate wealth and influence in the underworld

Relationship (d6)

1. Open hostility - active conflict
2. Professional rivalry - compete for same scores
3. Uneasy truce - cooperate when beneficial
4. Former allies - bad blood from past job
5. Mentor-struck - one trained the other
6. Family ties - complicated personal history

Resource (d6)

1. Specialized equipment (e.g., wardbreaker tools)
2. Network of informants in a specific district
3. Access to legitimate business fronts
4. Political connections in the city guard
5. Magical or supernatural assistance
6. Large cash reserves for bribes and gear

Agenda Clock [6] Track the rival crew’s progress toward their goal. Tick the clock when:

- The party ignores them or their activities
- The GM spends 2+ SB on their off-screen activity
- They successfully complete a step toward their goal

When the Agenda Clock fills, the rival crew achieves their goal (which may complicate the PCs’ plans).

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

Appendix D

The Silk House — A Livaeian Brothel Asset

A well-run house of pleasure is a fortress of secrets. The coin paid at the door buys only the first hour. The second hour costs a confession. The third buys a silence that can never be broken.

— Madam Serafine, The Velvet Touch

D.1 The Velvet Altar

In the back rooms of Silkstrand’s finest pleasure houses, behind curtains dyed with madder and saffron, small shrines to Livaea stand in alcoves. A candle, a mirror, a single silk ribbon tied in a lover’s knot. Livaea does not demand celibacy or shame. She blesses the transaction: the honest exchange of comfort for coin, of secrecy for safety, of power for pleasure.

A brothel dedicated to Livaea is not merely a business. It is a threshold — a place where masks are laid aside, where the powerful become vulnerable, where a whisper in the dark can ruin a dynasty. The courtesans are priestesses. The Madame is her high priestess. And every client who crosses the threshold leaves behind a piece of themselves — a secret, a preference, a name that should not have been spoken.

The Velvet Court has long maintained an understanding with Livaea’s faithful. Information flows both ways. A thief who insults a Livaeian courtesan finds every door closed. A patron who pays generously may find a lock unpicked by morning.

D.1.1 Running a Velvet Racket

When the party controls a territory (e.g., the Dye District docks, the Three-Queens Bridge approach), the GM notes this as a Turf Node. Each node has a Racket (pick from: Fencing Operation, Smuggling Cut, Protection Circle, Information Stall). Holding turf requires a Hold roll (Wits+Tactics vs DV 2-4) each session. On success, gain Bank +1 or local goodwill. On failure, rivals contest the node—start a War [8] clock.

Example Turf Node: Dye District Docks - Racket: Fencing Operation

Hold Roll Outcomes:

- Hit: Bank +1 or local goodwill (reduce DV by 1 on one social roll made in this territory)
- Miss: War [8] clock starts with 1 segment filled (rivals begin contesting control)

D.2 The Silk House as an Asset (Major Asset, 12 XP)

A Silk House is a Major Asset (12 XP) that provides off-screen leverage through blackmail, rumour, and social access. It cannot be purchased quickly; establishment requires one month of in-game time, during which the party must recruit staff, secure premises, and build a clientele (or take over an existing establishment).

Cost 12 XP

Establishment 1 month (or as story permits)

Upkeep Pay 12 XP per downtime or devote a full scene to managing it (settling disputes, bribing watch, maintaining cover).

Capacity (Optional) Counts as one Asset against your Spirit limit.

D.2.1 Free Use (Once per Session, Off-Screen)

Choose one of the following benefits at the start of a scene. The effect is narrative, not rolled.

Blackmail File You have compromising information on a named minor NPC (guard captain, customs clerk, merchant). Once, you may use this file to improve Position by one step on a social action against that NPC or to demand a minor favour (e.g., look the other way, delay a patrol). The file is consumed after use; you must spend a downtime scene gathering new material (part of upkeep).

Rumour Mill Before a scene set in the city, you may state a plausible rumour about a person, place, or upcoming event. The GM must incorporate it as a truth (though possibly incomplete or misleading). Examples: “The Watch Captain visits the Silk House every Restday.” or “The Dye Syndicate is about to raise prices.”

Soft Influence You may skip one social gatekeeping roll (e.g., gaining an audience, obtaining an invitation) by stating that a client of the Silk House made the introduction. The GM may ask for a name or a short flashback, but no roll is required.

Safe Harbour A fugitive or witness can hide in the Silk House for one scene without risk of discovery (unless the searchers explicitly search brothels). Use this to extract a contact or to plan a heist.

D.2.2 Scene Surge (Spend 1 Boon, On-Screen)

Once per session, you may spend 1 Boon to trigger one of the following on-screen interventions:

The Velvet Curtain A courtesan distracts a guard or a mark at a critical moment. The next Stealth or Subterfuge roll in the scene gains +1 die.

A Whisper in the Right Ear An influential client intervenes on your behalf. Reduce DV by 1 on a single Petition or Broker roll.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

The Back Stair You escape through a hidden passage known only to the house. Convert a pursuit consequence into a temporary complication (e.g., you drop a clue instead of being caught).

A Taste of Honey A courtesan serves a target a drink laced with a mild truth serum (or simply loosens their tongue). The next time you roll Sway against that target, treat Position as Dominant.

D.2.3 Extra Use

You may spend 2 XP to trigger the Free Use benefit an additional time this session.

D.3 The Madame as a Terrestrial Patron

The Silk House is not just an asset; it is a living organisation with its own will, its own debts, and its own demands. The Madame (named NPC, Tier II or III) acts as a terrestrial patron. Characters who wish to draw deeper on the House’s resources may swear an oath to Livaea (or to the Madame) and incur Obligation.

D.3.1 Obligation Track

Capacity: Spirit + 2. When you call on the House’s resources beyond the normal Free Use, mark Obligation as follows:

Request	Obligation Cost
Use Free Use a second time in a session	+1
Ask the Madame to hide a fugitive for a week	+2
Request a forged letter of introduction to a high noble	+2
Borrow a Livaeian Rite (e.g., Golden Tongue or The Unrefusable Offer)	+3
Demand the House use its blackmail to ruin a rival (major action)	+4

When Obligation exceeds Capacity, the Madame sends a polite request: a favour to be named later. If you refuse, the House’s Free Use is unavailable until you clear the debt. If you ignore her twice, she sells one of your secrets to a rival (GM chooses a String you lose).

D.3.2 Madame’s Favours (Clearing Obligation)

You may reduce Obligation by:

- Performing a Service (e.g., eliminate a rival brothel, intimidate a blackmail victim, deliver a secret to a client) – reduces Obligation by 2–4 depending on difficulty.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

- Paying Coin – 1 Boon reduces Obligation by 1; 1 Diamond (e.g., a Forged Document or valuable item) reduces Obligation by 2.
- Sponsoring a New Courtesan – Recruit a talented individual (Cap 1–2 follower) to work at the House. Reduces Obligation by 3.

D.3.3 Sample Madame: Madam Serafine’s Rival

Name Madam Illara (Tier III)

Motivation Expand her influence into the Brass Coast; compete with Serafine’s Velvet Court.

Quirk She lost an eye to a jealous client; wears a ruby in the socket that glows faintly when someone lies.

Strings Clients among the Admiralty, the Dye Syndicate, and the Archivolt.

Leverage She knows which notary can be bought for a night’s company.

D.4 Upkeep and Complications

D.4.1 Maintaining the House

Each downtime, you must perform one of the following:

- Pay 12 XP (the Asset’s base cost) – represents bribes, repairs, and salaries.
- Devote a full scene to managing the House: settling disputes among staff, bribing the Watch, smoothing over a scandal, or acquiring new blackmail material.
- Perform a Service for Livaea (GM’s choice) – e.g., sponsor a festival, sabotage a purity crusade, deliver a secret to a Livaeian shrine.

If you neglect upkeep for one downtime, the House becomes Neglected:

- Free Use only works half the time (GM’s discretion; roll 1d6, 1–3 = fail).
- Obligation cannot be cleared by Boons (only by services).

If neglected for two consecutive downtimes, the House becomes Compromised:

- The Asset provides no Free Use until restored.
- A rival brothel gains +1 Favour with the Watch.
- The GM may advance a Rival Clock (e.g., Watch Raid or Syndicate Takeover).

Restoring a Compromised House requires a full arc (2–3 sessions) of in-game work, not just XP payment.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

D.4.2 Complications (d6)

At the start of any scene where you use the Silk House’s Free Use or Scene Surge, the GM may roll (or choose) a complication:

1. A Jealous Rival – Another pleasure house sends thugs to intimidate your staff. Mark +1 Obligation to the Madame or lose 1 Boon.
2. Watch Inspection – A corrupt captain demands a bribe. Pay 1 Boon or the House becomes Neglected for this session.
3. A Client’s Secret Leaks – Someone you blackmailed threatens to expose you. Gain Exposure +1 (city faction).
4. Livaea’s Price – The goddess demands a favour: sponsor a festival, deliver a cursed mirror, etc. Refuse and the House’s Free Use is unavailable for one session.
5. Purity Crusade – A temple zealot preaches against the House. Social rolls in that district are –1 Position until you bribe or discredit them.
6. The Hollow’s Interest – A Oath-Keeper is seen loitering outside. The House is safe, but the party feels watched. The GM gains 1 SB to spend on a future complication.

D.5 Sample Blackmail Files (d6)

When you use the Blackmail File Free Use, roll or choose what you have:

1. The Watch Captain’s Affair – He visits every Restday. Leverage: one ignored patrol.
2. The Merchant’s False Ledger – You have a copy of his tax fraud. Leverage: 20% discount on his goods.
3. The Notary’s Forged Seal – He sealed a treaty that never existed. Leverage: one document stamped without question.
4. The Admiral’s Illegitimate Child – He pays for the child’s silence. Leverage: safe passage through harbour patrols.
5. The Priest’s Coded Letters – He corresponds with a rival temple. Leverage: he will preach a sermon of your choosing.
6. The Noble’s Secret Marriage – He married below his station. Leverage: one invitation to a closed salon.

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —

D.6 Adventure Hooks

- The Purge – A new temple faction demands the closure of all Livaeen houses. The party must defend the Silk House – legally, violently, or by exposing the zealot’s own hypocrisy.
- The Black Book – A former client steals the House’s blackmail ledger. He threatens to publish it unless the party retrieves a cursed artifact for him.
- The Rival Courtesan – A newly arrived courtesan is actually a spy for the Veiled Sisters. She is using the House to identify Livaeen followers for elimination.
- The Ninth Client – A stranger pays for a night but never leaves his room. He is a Oath-Keeper, waiting for the House to offer him a secret as tribute. The party must learn what he wants before he collects.

D.7 Integration with Velvet Court and Livaea’s Cult

If the party already belongs to the Velvet Court (see The Velvet Touch), the Silk House can be a Creditor’s asset. Madam Serafine may own a share. The party’s Velvet Dial may affect House benefits (e.g., at +2 Dial, the Free Use ignores one complication per session). At –2 Dial, the House is raided by the Watch.

For followers of Livaea, the Silk House counts as a Minor Shrine. You may learn her Rites there (e.g., Golden Tongue, The Unrefusable Offer) without needing a separate temple. Using a Livaeen Rite within the House reduces its Obligation cost by 1 (minimum 1).

The silk sheets hide more than skin. They hide the ledger of the soul. Treat the House well, and it will pay you back a thousand times. Treat it poorly, and you will find your own name on a very different kind of list.

— Madam Serafine, The Velvet Touch

— The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking. —