Preface: The Road Is a River

The maps of the empire show the Way of Silk as a single line – a thread from the Amaranthine to the Eastern Ocean. Those who walk it know the truth: the Way is a river. It has shallows and rapids, tributaries and deltas. Its current carries not only silk and spice but also gods, spies, and the debts of a dozen kingdoms.

This expansion is not a traveller's gazetteer of "exotic" lands. It is a ledger of the road itself. The peoples who live along the Way – the Fhara, the Sidhi, the Pereshi, the Kuvani, the Tulkani, and the divided Dhaharan – are not backdrops. They are the toll-keepers, the ferryman, and the witness to every broken promise. Their etiquette is not decoration; it is a negotiation. Their patrons are not distant gods but forces that manifest in the creak of the cart and the smell of rain on dry dust.

We have drawn from the stories of the great overland routes, the caravanserais of the western deserts, the mountain passes of the eastern steppes, and the oasis courts of the southern coasts. But we have not assembled a museum. The Dhaharan here is split between two administrations – the mountain viceroys and the coastal admiralty – because trade routes create contradictions, not harmonies. The Tulkani spread the cult of Ikasha not through temples but through knots tied in wagon cords. And the amulet Kalrantha, a shard of glass and brass, is a world-shaking artifact only in the fear it inspires; its true power was sealed from the moment it was stolen.

When you play along the Way of Silk, you will haggle over water-rights, not holy relics. You will arbitrate disputes between a Fhara water-clerk and a Kuvani remount master. You will sleep in caravanserais where the walls remember the last three murders. And if you are wise, you will listen when a Tulkani storyteller whispers: “The road does not forgive a debt. It only reschedules it.”

The ninth measure – the silence, the empty space, the unsaid name – still applies.

I The Road Itself

I.1 Geography of the Way

The Way of Silk is not a single route but a braid of paths that shift with season, war, and the price of fodder.

- The Northern Way: The western steppe (home to Vili and Ostrikari humans, and Ykrul clans) → Aeler passes → Si-hai frontier. Cold, hard, and fast. Ykrul remount posts are spaced at a day's ride; the Aeler keep the passes open with breath-books and toll-ledgers.
- The Central Oasis Route: Fhara wells (on the great southern peninsula) → Pereshi highlands → Kuvani summer pastures → Dhaharan uplands. Slow and fraught with water politics. Each well has a keeper, each keeper a price.
- The Monsoon Coast: Kahfagian ports → Ashaani river plains → Ayokha delta. Wet and dangerous. The Ashaani press-gangs and the Kahfagian privateers share a love of false flags.
- The Himadri Spur: Aeler mountain passes connecting the Dhaharan plateau to the northern plains. A single pass is a kingdom; to control it is to tax half the silk trade.

1.2 Caravan Procedures

Use the travel clocks and leg structure from Caravans: Way of Silk. Add the following intent dial for the Way:

- Speed: press camels, risk lameness.
- Stealth: avoid bandits and inspectors.
- Show: fly banners, gain respect, attract spies.
- Tribute: travel as a bonded caravan of a patron; gain protection but pay a portion of all profits.

New Hazards of the Way

- Dry well: The oasis keeper is dead. Lose 1 Supply and roll on the Faction table.
- Forged seal: Your papers are false; the local governor demands a bribe or a favour.
- Ghost caravan: A train of skeletal camels passes at midnight. The next day, one of your beasts becomes a spirit for an hour.
- Debt collector: Someone recognises a Tulkani vow-cord you carry. They demand payment in story or a favour to be named later.

2 Peoples of the Road

2.1 Fhara – Oasis Caravaneers

Homeland

The Fhara dwell on a great, sun-baked peninsula in the south-west, where scattered oases and dry riverbeds connect the coast to the interior. Their cities are built around wells and date groves, and their caravans are the arteries of the spice trade.

Pillars

Water-law, tent courts, coffee ritual, lamp-lit contracts.

Voice

Fhara speak with a dry precision, like a coin chipped to test its purity. They negotiate in couplets – a verse of praise, a verse of price.

Etiquette Hooks

- Offer coffee first – Position +1 for trade talks.
- Speak in three cups – first cup introduces, second cup bargains, third cup seals. Rushing the second is an insult (GM gains 1 SB).
- Never refuse a date – the fruit is sacred to their well-spirits. (Declining ends the conversation.)

Strings

Water-share tablet, caravan court writ, escort oath, lamp-sealed contract.

2.2 Sidhi – Coastal Cousins of Ashaan

Homeland

The Sidhi are a minority people whose ancestral homeland is Galanina, a rugged coast of limestone hills and ancient ports far to the west. Many now live as traders and sailors in Oshiiran ports, while others were taken as slaves to Ashaan and still others have found refuge in the Brass Coast of Dhahara. They are fierce, proud, and never forget a debt.

Pillars

Sea trade, lighthouse courts, mixed ancestry (Vilikari and Ashaani), fierce independence.

Voice

Sidhi speak with a musical lilt, their grammar a creole of Ashaani and Vilikari. They are direct, suspicious of strangers, and quick to laugh.

Etiquette Hooks

- Light a lamp before docking – Position +1 in Sidhi ports.

- Never ask about ancestry – the Ashaani slavery raids are a fresh wound. (Breaking this flips Audience from Warm to Cold.)

Strings

Lighthouse charter (right to harbour), port-weight (trade advantage), freedman's seal (proof of emancipation from Ashaan).

2.3 Pereshi – Inland Highlanders

Homeland

The Pereshi inhabit the high plateaus and mountain valleys that lie between the Fhara peninsula and the eastern steppes. Their ancient empire fell long ago, leaving a patchwork of petty kingdoms, fire temples, and caravanserai lords. They are the scholars, magi, and bureaucrats of the Silk Way.

Pillars

Ancient libraries, garden shrines, caravan tariffs, messenger roads.

Voice

Pereshi speech is formal and layered, filled with honorifics and allusions to forgotten poets. A question may be disguised as a proverb; an insult as a compliment.

Etiquette Hooks

- Present a red rose before a petition – Position +1 for official audiences.
- Never step on a fallen book – written words carry the weight of law. (Violation starts a 2-segment “Disrespect” clock.)
- Recite a verse when crossing a bridge – the spirits of the water expect it. (Failure to do so imposes Desperate Position on the next river hazard.)

Strings

Fire-temple token, caravan tariff receipt, royal seal (on loan from a minor prince), messenger tablet.

2.4 Kuvani – Steppe Hosts

Homeland

The Kuvani range across the eastern steppe, a vast grassland east of the Valewood. They are a relatively new people in the region, their clan confederations only recently rising to prominence. They have not yet become the ruling class, but their horsemanship and remount stations make them indispensable to any caravan that crosses the open plain.

Pillars

Remount lines, wind-bands, felt tents, kurgan oaths.

Voice

Kuvani speak as if the wind were an impatient audience – short, quick, and punctuated by gestures toward the horizon.

Etiquette Hooks

- Praise the horse before the rider – DV –I for all negotiations.
- Ride at the host's pace – never pass the guide. (Breaking this starts a 4-clock “Insult to the Herd”).)

Strings

Remount chain mark, grazing compact, sky-road song, kurgan oath (sealed with horsehair).

2.5 Tulkani – Itinerant Courts

Homeland

The Tulkani have no fixed homeland; they are wanderers who follow the seasons and the trade routes. Their wagons are their hearths, and their circles are their courts. They are welcome everywhere and trusted nowhere – a position they wear with wry humour.

Pillars

Caravan courts, tinkers, musicians, neutrality customs. Agents of Ikasha often walk among them.

Voice

Tulkani speak in riddles and stories. A bargain is a parable; a threat is a lullaby. They never say “no” – only “that road is closed for repairs”.

Etiquette Hooks

- Tie a knot for each truth – you may cancel one SB by adding a truth (a secret, a confession) to your vow-cord.
- Never sleep outside the circle – the wagon ring is sanctuary. (Leaving it at night gives the GM 1 SB to use for “something follows”.)

Strings

Vow-bead, safe-haven oath (neutral camp), caravan judge’s writ, dream-cord (gift from Ikasha).

2.6 Dhahara – The Split Land (Preview)

The Northern Mountain Satrapies

Aeler viceroys rule the high valleys, collecting taxes in silver and tea. Their courts blend mountain custom with lowland ceremony; elephant stables and fire-shrines stand side by side. The local Aeler have adopted Dhaharan dress and speak a creole of their own tongue. They are loyal to the Mountain Viceroy, who answers to the Aeler High King.

The Southern Brass Coast

Administered by the Kahfagian Admiralty, the Brass Coast is a string of ports connected by rope-ways and spice warehouses. The Admiralty treats Dhahara as a “client state” – profitable, exotic, and restive. The Sidhi are most numerous here, and they keep their own lighthouse courts alongside the Admiralty’s maritime tribunals.

Two Loyalties Mechanic

Every Dhaharan character or faction has two tracks: Loyalty to the Mountain and Loyalty to the Admiralty. Adventures often force a choice between them; losing favour with one may gain favour with the other.

Adventure Seed: The Viceroy’s Seal

The Mountain Viceroy’s seal has been stolen and sold to a Brass Coast merchant. Retrieve it before the Admiralty uses it to forge a treaty that would make the north a colony. The party is hired by a Sidhi dock-master – who secretly works for the Breath-less (Ashaani resistance) and has his own plans for the seal.

Full expansion planned: Dhahara: Throne of Brass.

3 Patrons of the Way

3.1 Regional Faces of Core Patrons

3.1.1 The Traveler – Lord of the Forked Road (Eastern variant)

Known as Jie Lu, the Road that Asks. His shrines are empty crosses at crossroads; his ceremonies require walking barefoot from one gate to another.

Etiquette: Before speaking of profit, name a place you have never been. (Cancels one social SB about greed.)

Rite – The Unlatched Gate: Once per journey, declare a road closed; it becomes passable for your party only.

3.1.2 Ikasha – She Who Sleeps in the Caravan (Tulkani variant)

Among the Tulkani, Ikasha is the dream inside the wagon. She speaks through creaking wheels and the scent of rain on canvas. Her cult is spread through story-ledgers – knots tied in a cord, each knot a secret told to a stranger.

Etiquette: At dusk, whisper a fear into a cup of water. Pour it onto the road. (GM gains 1 SB, but you gain +1 Position on your next Stealth roll.)

Rite – The Wagon Circle: When you camp in a circle, no spirit may cross the line of wheels without an invitation.

3.1.3 Mykkiel – The Judge of Galanina

In Ashaan, Mykkiel is not a distant arbiter but a direct antagonist to the Veiled Sisters. His followers are the secret courts of the Breath-less, the judges who try the Sisters in absentia. Mykkiel demands that every oath be written and witnessed; the Sisters rule through unspoken terror. It is a cold war of ink versus silence.

Regional Rite – The Unsealed Testimony: Once per session, you may compel a spirit to speak truth for one question, but the spirit’s former master learns your face. (Mark +2 Obligation)

3.1.4 Aveh – The Dust-Rider (Dhaharan variant)

Here, Aveh is a djinn – a spirit of the sandstorm, the liberator of slaves, the patron of those who flee without paying. She appears as a rider without a face, offering an exit from any prison or contract. Her price is always the same: you must never close a door behind you.

Etiquette: When you flee, leave a coin at the threshold. (The GM may convert the first SB of pursuit into a “missed footing” complication instead of harm.)

Rite – The Unlatched Chain: Break one physical bond (shackle, rope, locked door) as a free action. (Mark +1 Obligation; the broken object may later reform.)

3.2 New Patrons of the Eastern Road

3.2.1 Nasima – The Oasis That Moves

Domain: Springs, mirages, mercy of water.

Favored Deeds: Sharing water, digging a well, guiding the lost without payment.

Standard Rite – Nasima's Blessing (8 XP): A waterskin becomes bottomless for a day. (Mark +2 Obligation)

High Rite – The Oasis Pact (14 XP): Create a temporary well that lasts a season. (Mark +3 Obligation; may attract unwanted spirits)

3.2.2 Div – The Whisper in the Ruin

Domain: Ruins, forgotten knowledge, echoes of empire.

Favored Deeds: Uncovering forgotten truth, destroying false chronicles, letting ruins rest.

Taboos: Using a relic for personal gain, selling a historical secret to a tyrant.

Domain: Price, balance, fair exchange.

Favored Deeds: Correcting false weights, mediating trade disputes.

Taboos: Using counterfeit coin, undervaluing labour.

Low Rite – Weight of Truth (4 XP): Know if an object was obtained dishonestly. (Mark +1 Obligation)

Standard Rite – Zun’s Ledger (8 XP): Guarantee 10% profit on a trade, but on a miss the profit turns to salt. (Mark +2 Obligation)

High Rite – The Scale of Judgement (14 XP): Mirror harm between two opponents for one day. (Mark +3 Obligation)

3.2.4 Al-Qibla – The Stone That Looks West

Domain: Prayer, direction, geometry of faith.

Favored Deeds: Building a shrine, drawing accurate maps, praying in a foreign land.

Taboos: Defacing a place of worship, selling misleading maps.

Low Rite – The True Bearing (4 XP): Always know direction to nearest shrine of your faith. (Mark +1 Fatigue)

Standard Rite – Stone's Sanctuary (8 XP): Create a circle that grants +1 die to resist fear or charm. (Mark +2 Fatigue; you may not leave the circle.)

High Rite – The Unerring Caravan (14 XP): Cannot be lost for one leg; you must walk at the front and never look back. (Mark +3 Obligation)

3.2.5 Peri – The Fire That Hides

Domain: Caves, hidden springs, the spark waiting.

Favored Deeds: Creating hiding places, burying secrets, escaping capture.

Taboos: Revealing a cache you were trusted with, using a hiding place to ambush a guest.

Low Rite – The Hidden Door (4 XP): One touched doorway becomes invisible to those without the password. (Mark +1 Fatigue)

Standard Rite – Peri's Cache (8 XP): Bury an object; it cannot be found for one month. (Mark +2 Fatigue)

High Rite – The Cave of Sleep (14 XP): Create a temporary pocket that can hold six people for one night. (Mark +3 Obligation)

3.2.6 Khidr – The Green Man of the Ford

Domain: Water crossings, thresholds of the river, rescue.

Favored Deeds: Saving drowning people, maintaining fords, helping travellers cross dangerous water.

Taboos: Asking payment from a corpse, letting a bridge collapse from neglect.

Low Rite – The Hand of the Ford (4 XP): Pull an ally from water as a reaction. (Mark +1 Fatigue)

Standard Rite – Khidr's Path (8 XP): Allies gain +1 die to any roll crossing water. (Mark +2 Fatigue)

High Rite – The Second Crossing (14 XP): Once per campaign, revive an ally who died within sight of water – but they forget the last year. (Mark +3 Corruption)

3.2.7 Daeva – The Debt That Screams

Domain: Unpaid vows, broken promises, interest that accrues.

Favored Deeds: Collecting a bad-faith debt, destroying a false contract, exposing a usurer.

Taboos: Extending an unpayable loan, forgiving a debt without witness.

Low Rite – The Tally of Silence (4 XP): Know if a contract will be broken. (Mark +1 Corruption)

Standard Rite – Daeva's Mark (8 XP): Curse an oath-breaker with –1 die to all rolls until amends. (Mark +2 Corruption; may rebound.)

High Rite – The Ledger of Wails (14 XP): Haunt an oath-breaker's bloodline – they cannot sleep, fatigue track doubles. (Mark +3 Corruption; once per campaign.)

4 The Amulet of Kalrantha

What It Is

A small, tear-shaped amulet of green glass, set in a brass frame that never tarnishes. Warm to the touch when someone nearby is about to make a decision.

Its History (As Told by the Tulkani)

> “Long ago, a prince of Dhabara stole this from a temple where no lamps were lit. He thought it would let him choose his own fortune. He wore it while he conquered a kingdom. The desert ate that kingdom. The prince’s name is not written anywhere, but his shadow is still seen in the Siq at dawn.”

The Truth (GM Only)

The amulet was created by the priests of that temple as a trap – a vessel for a demon of indecision. The prince, in his arrogance, released the demon into the world, but the amulet itself was designed to contain it. The disaster that swallowed his kingdom was not a curse; it was the demon using the prince as a puppet. Now the amulet is empty – or almost empty. A fragment of the demon remains, dormant, waiting for a wielder to make a fateful choice. The amulet does not grant wishes; it offers suggestions. The horror is that the characters will never know if the suggestion was their own or the amulet’s.

Game Mechanics

The amulet is a Tier V artifact that appears to do almost nothing. Give it a small, consistent magical effect (e.g., once per session, the wearer may reroll a single die) and otherwise describe it with ominous language. Whenever the wearer makes a major decision, the GM may ask: “Is that what you really want to do?” – and then note the answer. The amulet’s true power is to amplify the consequences of choice, not to prevent them. If the party ever discovers the demon fragment, they may attempt to seal it again – a campaign-long endeavour.

Adventure Hook: The Empty Vessel

A Breath-less agent in Ashaan claims the amulet can bind the Veiled Sisters’ greatest spirit. She is wrong – it can only hold a fragment – but the Sisters believe her. The party must reach the amulet before the Sisters do, then decide whether to use it, destroy it, or hide it again.

5 Adventure Framework

5.1 Adventure Seeds (Ten Drop-Ins)

1. The Vanishing Oasis: A well the party used last year is gone. The Fhara water-clerk is dead. Find what erased it – and who is poisoning the remaining wells.
2. The Tulkani Arbitration: Two caravan masters invoke the Tulkani oath-ring to settle a dispute. The party is the witness. The truth is that both are corrupt; a third party planted the evidence.
3. The Forged Seal of Sihai: A merchant's Sidhi seal is a forgery. The party must find the forger – who is a disgraced official hiding in the Brass Coast.
4. The Ghost of the Great Caravan: Once a year, a spectral caravan crosses the desert. The party follows it to a buried ruin where an old debt must be paid in memory.
5. The Coffee Challenge: A Taharkan prince offers a fortune to race his horse against an Oshiiran steed. The loser's kingdom forfeits a pass.
6. The Kiln That Dreams: A Kuvani remount station has a pottery kiln that produces perfect horse-charm jars – but the spirits inside are children. The maker is a desperate potter who lost a child to Ashaani slavers.

7. The Lighthouse Court: A Sidhi lighthouse captain is accused of smuggling. The party must defend her in a court of port-masters – or help her escape if she really is guilty.
8. The Brass Gate Bribe: A high official of the Brass Gate is taking bribes from Ashaan. The party is hired to expose him – but the evidence is in a locked archive that Mykkiel judges as “inadmissible” without a witness.
9. The Road That Sleeps: A stretch of the Way has been cursed. Every traveller who sleeps there dreams of drowning. The cause is an old contract with Aveh that was never closed.
10. The Ninth Cord: A Tulkani storyteller offers to tell the party a secret for free – a ninth story that never ends. If they listen, they owe her a favour to be named later.

5.2 Showpiece: The Ghost of the Great Caravan

A multi-session mystery across three legs. The party is hired to escort a Tulkani wise-woman to a ruin where, according to legend, the first silk caravan was destroyed by a sandstorm. The spirits of that caravan re-enact their death every year. The wise-woman wants to steal the amulet Kalrantha from the ruins; she believes it can speak to the dead. In truth, the amulet is a decoy; the real treasure is a map that reveals a forgotten pass through the mountains. The map is written in the language of Mykkiel’s old court – and the Sisters will kill to keep it hidden.

6 GM Toolkit

6.1 Travel Hazards Table (d12)

1. Dry well – lose 1 Supply.
2. Bandit embassy – they offer safe passage for a toll. Refuse and start a Pursuit clock.
3. Ghost caravan – pass peacefully, but one beast becomes a spirit for an hour.
4. Sandstorm – Navigator test DV 4 or lose 2 segments of progress.
5. Customs inspection – roll Papers or start a 4-clock Audit.
6. Oasis court – a dispute over water rights; mediate or be delayed.
7. Elephant stampede – test Stealth or take Harm 1.
8. Mirage – a false well; lose 1 Supply and mark Fatigue.
9. Debt collector – someone recognises your Tulkani vow-cord; pay in story or favour.
10. Ashfall – from distant volcano; all actions Desperate due to low visibility.
11. Singing dunes – the sand hums. A spirit offers a riddle; solve for a Clue.

12. The Ninth Hour – sunset lasts twice as long. The GM gains 1 SB to spend in the next scene.

6.2 Factions of the Way

Faction	Influence	Stability	Crisis	Goal
Fhara Caravan Courts	5	6	4	Keep water law intact
Sidhi Port	5	4	6	Stay free of
Guilds				Ashaan
Pereshi	6	5	5	Maintain
Highlander				ancient trade
Lords				charters
Kuvani	4	5	3	Expand grazing rights
Remount
Leagues
Tulkani	3	4	2	Keep the
Mother-Roads				Way neutral
Dhaharan	6	5	5	Balance
Viceroyalty				Mountain and
				Admiralty

Colophon

The road is a ledger. Every oasis is a credit, every broken wheel a debt. The Tulkani tie knots to remember who owes whom. The Fhara weigh water before they weigh silver. The Pereshi recite verses to keep the bridges open. The Kuvani count the legs of their remounts as if the horses were coins. And the Sidhi – the Sidhi keep lighthouse lamps burning for the dead who still have not reached the shore.

When you walk the Way of Silk, walk with empty hands. The last cup of water is never yours to keep. The ninth cord is never cut. And the amulet Kalrantha does not grant wishes – it only watches you decide.

— Dusana of the Raven Road, at a caravanserai whose name she refused to give. The ink was cut with rain.
