Preface: A Player's Companion

“The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking.”

— Serafine of the Velvet Touch

Welcome, player. This book is not a spell to be memorised, nor a contract to be obeyed. It is a companion – something to keep at your elbow when the dice are rolling and the story is racing ahead. You will not need every page tonight. What you will need is a clear sense of how your character works, a quick way to look up that one rule you forgot, and permission to put the book down and play.

How This Book Is Organised

- chapter 1 – The philosophy of narrative-first play, safety tools, and Session Zero. Read this before you build a character.
- chapter 2 – The 90-second loop, Position, Difficulty, Boons, Story Beats, Harm, and Fatigue. This is the engine. Keep the Outcome Matrix (section 2.6) and the Position table (section 2.8) close at hand.
- chapter 3 – Building your first character (30–34 XP). Use the checklist in section 3.8 to get started in ten minutes.
- chapter 7 – Attributes, Skills, dice pools, Experience Points, and the Tier system (Rookie to Mythic). You will return to this chapter every time you earn XP. Bookmark section 7.5 and the training times in subsection 7.7.1.
- chapter 9 – Minor, Major, Prestige, and Epic talents. Skim the minor talents first; the rest will grow with your character.
- chapter 5 – All five paths (Free Caster, Runekeeper, Invoker, Cantor, Summoner). If you are new, read only subsection 5.2.1 (Free Caster) or subsection 5.2.2 (Runekeeper). Save the others for a second character.
- chapter 6 – How to recover Fatigue and Harm, with and without magic. Keep the Healing at a Glance table bookmarked.
- chapter 12 – Safehouses, spy networks, loyal companions, and terrestrial patrons. You will not need this until Tier II (41+ XP), but when you do, paragraph 12.2.0.0.1 and section 12.5 are the sections to remember.
- chapter 17 – No coin counting. Use XP, Strings, and Debt Clocks instead. section 17.1 gives you the mindset; the rest is reference.
- chapter 14 – The peoples and regions of Fate’s Edge. Read only the culture your character comes from. The rest is for when you travel.
- chapter 15 – The Patrons (Carrion-King, Traveler, Oath of Flame, etc.) and their Rites, Obligation, and Corruption. This is a deep dive. For a first character, stick to the six recommended Patrons in subsection 15.1.2.

- chapter 11 – Ten example characters (Guardian, Mage, Rogue, etc.). Use them as inspiration or as pre-gens.
- chapter 20 – Tactical advice, momentum banking, optional rules like war mounts and character death. Come back here when you want to push your play.
- chapter 13 – What you do between adventures: recovery, training, crafting, carousing. The Rush Rule (subsection 7.7.2) is a favourite.
- chapter 19 – How your character’s story can continue through a successor. Read this only when you are thinking about retirement or a heroic death.

A Reading Plan for New Players

You do not need to read 200 pages to play your first session. Here is what you actually need:

1. Read chapter 1 – especially the safety tools (Lines, Veils, X-Card) and the Session Zero checklist.
2. Read chapter 2 up to section 2.7 – the play loop, Position, Difficulty, and the Outcome Matrix.
3. Skim section 2.10 to understand how Harm and Fatigue work. You will refer back to it.
4. Use the character creation checklist (chapter 3) to build your first character. The pre-generated examples in chapter 11 can speed this up.
5. If you are playing a magical character, read chapter 10. It walks you through a Runekeeper step by step.
6. Print the one-page player reference (if your GM provides it) or copy the Outcome Matrix onto an index card.
7. Close the book and play.

What to Bookmark for Your Second Session

After you have rolled dice once, you will want these sections close at hand:

- Harm and Fatigue (subsection 2.10.4) – The procedure for armour conversion and the “roller-coaster effect” (taking Harm clears Fatigue) is easy to forget.
- Spending Boons (subsection 2.7.2) – You can re-roll a die, improve Position, or activate an Asset.
- HEAL Cantrip (subsection 6.2.2) – The fastest way to clear Fatigue.
- Skill synergies (subsection 7.10.4) – When you can use a different Attribute with your skill, the game opens up.
- The Rush Rule (subsection 7.7.2) – When you want to train faster and risk a flaw.

A Note on the Quickstart

If you are completely new, start with the Fate’s Edge Quickstart. It contains the core rules, four pre-generated characters, and a complete adventure (“The Lantern at Dusk”). Run that first. Then open this book to build your own character for the Blood and Silk trilogy.

The Golden Rule (for Players)

“When in doubt, make the choice that serves the story. If you find yourself asking ‘What’s the optimal move?’ try reframing it as ‘What would be most interesting for the story?’”

That permission is written into the rules. Use it.

Acknowledgements

This book exists because players like you asked “What if?” and GMs like yours answered “Let’s find out.” Thank you for sitting at the table, for sharing your character’s fears and hopes, and for making the story worth telling.

Now build a character who owes a debt, carries a scar, and has a name that someone will remember. The road is waiting.

Chapter 1

Welcome to Fate's Edge

A world where every choice carries weight, every spell risks backlash, and every legend is written in the shadow of consequence.

Welcome to Fate's Edge, a tabletop roleplaying game where narrative drives mechanics, and every decision shapes not only your character's path—but the world around them. This is not a game of perfect successes or clean victories. It is a game of risk, drama, and legacy.

What Is This Game?

Fate's Edge is a narrative-first RPG where:

- Every roll introduces potential for triumph and complication.
- Magic is powerful—but dangerous.
- Choices ripple outward, shaping character arcs and the setting.
- Growth is meaningful, earned through experience spent on skills, talents, and assets.

This guide helps you build a character, understand the setting, and step into a world where your actions matter. For the complete core rules (dice resolution, Position, Difficulty Values, Story Beats, Boons, and more), refer to the Fate's Edge System Reference Document (SRD).

Modular by Design

One of the most important things to understand about Fate's Edge is that it is modular. You are not expected to memorise every subsystem before you sit down to play. Instead, the game is designed to be discovered layer by layer, as your table's ambition grows.

- Session 1: Use only the core resolution cycle (chapter 2) and maybe one regional travel generator. That is a complete, playable game.
- Session 5: You will have integrated Assets, Followers, and a Patron or two. The system will feel natural.
- Session 20: You will be juggling Obligation, Corruption, faction clocks, and legacy planning without looking at the book.

The GM decides which subsystems to introduce and when. Your job as a player is to learn what is on your character sheet and trust that the rest will come when it is needed. This modularity means:

- You never need to read the entire book before playing.
- The game grows with your table, not against it.
- Every rule exists to serve a narrative purpose; if a subsystem is not in play, your story is not poorer for it.

So do not panic when you see a long table of Patrons or a complex ritual procedure. Start with the core loop, then add one new thing each session. The road is long; you will get there.

Core Principles

The game is built on four key ideas:

Narrative First Mechanics serve the story. Rules reward descriptive play and creative problem-solving.

Risk Creates Drama Every roll carries tension. Even success may come at a cost.

Meaningful Growth Experience is a currency of choice. Invest in yourself or in your influence on the world.

Consequences Matter No action is free. Every choice changes the fiction.

Style of Play

Expect cinematic, collaborative storytelling:

- Stories driven by character choices.
- A world that reacts to your decisions.
- Themes of legacy, sacrifice, and moral complexity.

Whether you are a lone duelist, a scheming mastermind, or a spirit-touched outlander, your path is yours to forge.

Safety Tools: Lines, Veils & X-Card

Safety Tools: Lines, Veils & X-Card

Fate's Edge explores mature themes—conflict, loss, horror, betrayal, and difficult choices. The table should always feel safe. Use these simple tools to keep the game enjoyable for everyone.

X-Card (by John Stavropoulos). Any player (including the GM) can draw an “X” on a card or simply say “X” when a moment makes them uncomfortable. When the X-Card is shown, the described content is removed from the fiction—no questions, no explanations, no judgments. You do not need to justify using the X-Card. The scene is retconned or redirected immediately.

Lines. A Line is a hard boundary: content that will not appear in the game at all. Examples: “No sexual violence,” “No harm to children,” “No body horror.” Before the campaign or a session, players name their Lines. The GM and group honour them completely.

Veils. A Veil is a soft boundary: content that can happen “off screen” or fade to black. The event is acknowledged but not described in detail. Example: “A romantic scene can happen, but fade to black before it becomes explicit.” Veils allow the story to acknowledge mature themes without forcing players to roleplay through them.

How to Use These Tools at Your Table.

- Establish Lines and Veils during Session Zero (or before your first game). Write them down where everyone can see them.
- Keep an X-Card visible on the table (a printed card, a drawn X, or a digital symbol). Remind players they can use it at any time, even mid-sentence.
- When the X-Card is used, pause, rewind if needed, and move on. Do not interrogate the player who used it.
- The GM is also a player. The GM may use the X-Card for their own comfort.
- Respect the tools. If someone calls an X-Card, trust that they had a good reason and support them.

These tools are not about censorship—they are about consent. They allow the group to tell darker, more intense stories together because everyone knows they can tap out at any time. A game that feels safe is a game that can go to the edge.

For more detail, search online for “TTRPG X-Card” or “Lines and Veils RPG”. Many free resources are available.

Session Zero: The Foundation of Your Story

Before you roll your first die, gather with your GM and fellow players for a Session Zero. This is where you build the shared understanding that makes Fate’s Edge sing – and where you make sure everyone is excited for the same kind of story.

Core Philosophy to Embrace as Players

- Optimal play = most fun. Spending Boons, embracing failure, and courting Patron attention leads to better stories. There is no “winning” except an unforgettable session.
- You and the GM are co-creators, not adversaries. The GM frames pressure; you drive the fiction. No one is trying to “beat” anyone else.
- Boons are not XP tokens. Spend them. Hoarding Boons for conversion starves the table of drama and leads to less engagement.
- Patrons are allies who demand payment – embrace it. Obligation is plot, not punishment. When a Patron calls, a story hook arrives.

Session Zero Checklist (Player’s Edition)Session Zero Checklist

Answer these together and write down the answers where everyone can see them.

1. Lines & Veils – What content is off-limits (Lines) or only implied (Veils)?
2. Tone – Cinematic action? Grim survival? Political intrigue? Dark horror? Mix of several?
3. Campaign length – One-shot, short arc (3–6 sessions), or long campaign (12+ sessions)?
4. Character hooks – Each player shares one goal and one fear for their character.
5. Patron interest – Which Patrons (if any) are already watching the party?
6. Starting situation – Where does the story begin?
7. House rules – Any optional subsystems (Threat Pool, Deck of Consequences, etc.) the GM plans to use?

8. Scheduling & attendance – How often do you meet? What happens if a player misses a session?

Taking thirty minutes for Session Zero will save hours of mid-campaign friction and give you a richer, more invested table.

Getting Started

This is a game of bold choices and lasting consequences. Your story is written in decisions—not dice rolls.

Welcome to the Edge. The world is watching.

What will you risk to reshape the world?

1.1 The Philosophy of Narrative First

In Fate's Edge, the story is not a byproduct of the rules—it is the reason the rules exist. When you sit down to play, you are not rolling dice to see what happens; you are telling a story together, with dice as your co-authors. This is the narrative first philosophy.

1.1.1 Why Narrative First?

Imagine this scene:

Your character, a wounded duelist, faces the baron's champion in the royal arena. Your legs ache from the earlier fight, and the crowd's roar has become a physical pressure. You know one strike will end it—but you also know you are one misstep from death.

Now consider two ways this might play out:

- Mechanics-First Approach: “I roll Body 3 + Melee 2 to attack. I get 3 successes. The baron's champion has 2 Harm. I win.”
- Narrative-First Approach: “I lunge forward, my blade a silver arc against the red of the arena sand. But my injured leg buckles—I spend 1 Boon to re-roll the die that came up 1—and I twist to drive my shoulder into his chest instead. The crowd roars as we both fall to the sand, my blade at his throat.” GM: “You have the advantage, but your wound has reopened. What do you do?”

The first version tells you who won. The second tells you how you won and what it cost you. This is the heart of narrative first: your choices matter not because of numbers on a sheet, but because of the story they create.

1.1.2 Your Role in the Story

In Fate's Edge, you are:

- A storyteller — Your descriptions shape the world.
- An active participant — Your choices drive the narrative.
- A co-creator — You and the GM build the story together.

This means:

- Flavor is free: Describe how you fight, what your character looks like, or what the world feels like—no mechanical cost, only story enrichment. Example: “I parry with the grace of a dancer, my movements a memory of my mother's training, even as blood drips from my brow.”
- Describe your action before rolling: Do not just say “I attack”—show us how. This informs the GM's response and often determines Position (Dominant, Controlled, Desperate). Example: “I use the crowd's noise as cover to slip behind him and strike his exposed back.”

(Likely Dominant Position.)

- Embrace failure as opportunity: A miss is not “you fail to hit.” It is “the blade glances off his armor, and you see the baron’s hand reach for the hilt of his dagger.” Failures should always move the story forward.

1.1.3 The Golden Rule

When in doubt, make the choice that serves the story. If you find yourself asking “What’s the optimal move?” try reframing it as “What would be most interesting for the story?”

Remember

In Fate’s Edge, the dice do not determine your success or failure. You determine the story. The dice just help decide which path you take to get there.

1.1.4 Flavor is Free (Even for Mundane Actions)

Flavor is Free

Players: Add descriptive details, cultural elements, and atmospheric touches without spending resources or requiring rolls. This applies to all descriptive actions, not just magic. Want your Vhasian duelist to parry with a flourish from royal fencing schools? Go ahead. Want to describe the eerie silence of a Valewood ruin when searching for clues? Perfect. Want to narrate how you reload your crossbow with a practiced flick of the wrist? Even better. Flavor enriches the narrative without changing mechanical outcomes. Describe your character’s background, customs, or scene details. The GM should encourage this and reciprocate. Mechanics determine success or failure, but flavor determines the story we tell about it.

Narrative-Heavy Gameplay Options (Optional)

For groups that prefer strong narrative focus, consider these approaches:

- Collaborative Scene Framing: Players may suggest scene elements (weather, NPC reactions, environmental details) that fit the fiction, with GM approval.
- Intent-Driven Resolution: When success is reasonably assured, the GM may ask players to describe how they accomplish their goal rather than rolling.
- Flashback Declarations: Spend 1 Boon to declare a flashback establishing past preparation, and describe the scene.
- Descriptive Assistance: Players can assist each other by providing vivid descriptions, granting a +1 die to the primary actor’s roll.
- Narrative Control Points: Each player starts each session with 1 Narrative Control Point. Spend it to:
 - Introduce a minor NPC who provides useful information or assistance.
 - Establish that they have a useful item on hand (within reason).
 - Create a favorable environmental detail.

These points refresh each session and encourage proactive storytelling.

What's Next?

The next chapter (chapter 2) covers the core mechanics that drive play. If you are eager to build a character, jump ahead to chapter 7 (Attributes & Skills). For an overview of the world, see chapter 14 (World Regions and Cultures).

Now close the book—or keep reading. The road is waiting.

Chapter 2

Core Mechanics

A Word from the Raven Road

“The road is a ledger. Every broken wheel is a debt, every lit lamp a witness. The only question is: what are you willing to owe?” — Dusana of the Raven Road, The Hearth Ledger

2.1 The 90-Second Play Loop

At the heart of every scene is a simple, fast loop that keeps the story moving:

1. GM sets the stage – Describe the situation and ask “What do you do?”
2. Player declares intent and approach – State what you want to achieve and how (Attribute + Skill).
3. GM sets Position and Difficulty Value (DV) – Choose Dominant/Controlled/Desperate and a DV (2–5+).
4. Player rolls dice – Count Successes (6+) and Story Beats (1s).
5. Apply outcome – Compare Successes to DV (Clean Success / Success with SB / Partial / Miss).
6. GM spends Story Beats (SB) – Introduce complications, advance clocks, or escalate the scene.
7. Player marks resources – Gain Boons (1 on Partial, 2 on Miss), track Fatigue/Harm, update Obligation, etc.
8. Pass the spotlight – Next player acts, or GM frames a new beat.

This loop should take about 90 seconds per player action. If it drags, simplify: focus on intent, one roll, and a clear consequence.

2.2 The Core Resolution Cycle

Every meaningful action in Fate’s Edge follows this cycle:

1. Declare Action & Approach: State what you want to achieve and how (Attribute + Skill).
2. GM sets Difficulty Value (DV): Based on narrative stakes (see 2.5).
3. GM sets Position: Dominant, Controlled, or Desperate (see 2.8).
4. Roll dice pool: Attribute + Skill d10s.

5. Count Successes (6+) and Story Beats (1s).
6. Check against DV using the Outcome Matrix (see 2.6).
7. Apply outcome: Clean Success, Success with SB, Partial, or Miss.
8. GM spends Story Beats (SB) for complications and twists.

Golden Rule

When in doubt, make the choice that serves the story. If you find yourself asking “What’s the optimal move?” try reframing it as “What would be most interesting for the story?”

2.3 Player-Managed Modules

In Fate’s Edge, you are the primary manager of your character’s mechanical state. This isn’t just about convenience—it is a core design principle that reduces GM overhead and keeps you engaged.

You Track Your Own Story

What You Manage:

- Obligation tracks (one per Patron or Symbol)
- Corruption clocks (Cantors, Pact-Whisperers)
- Leash clocks (summoned spirits)
- Asset states (Maintained, Neglected, Compromised)
- Follower conditions (Exposure, Harm)
- Progression clocks (Repertoire, Spirit Bond)
- Boons, Favor, Leverage

Your Responsibilities:

1. Mark immediately when a rule says “mark +X”.
2. Declare thresholds (“My Obligation is full!”).
3. Keep it visible (use trackers everyone can see).
4. Maintain ownership – you know your state best.

GM Support: The GM spot-checks and provides consequences, but you drive your character’s mechanical narrative.

Example: Tracking Your Obligation

A character with Spirit 2 and Presence 2 has an Obligation Capacity of 4. She invokes a Rite from Patron A (+1), then later Pushes a Rite from Patron B (+1), then Cracks the Seal on a Symbol (+2). She now has:

- Patron A: 1 segment
- Patron B: 1 segment
- Symbol (Invoker): 2 segments

Total Obligation = 4 → exactly at Capacity. No Fatigue yet. If she invokes one more Rite from any Patron, she exceeds Capacity and marks 1 Fatigue immediately.

2.4 Basic Dice Mechanics

When you attempt a significant action, roll a pool of ten-sided dice (d10s). The size of your pool is:

$$\text{Dice Pool} = \text{Attribute} + \text{Skill}$$

Attribute (1–5) Broad traits like Strength, Wit, or Charm.

Skill (0–5) Training in a specific area (e.g., Melee, Stealth, Arcana).

Lore of the Fall: The Weight of Numbers

“The Aeler count their breaths; the Aelaerem pour eight cups and stop. The ninth is not a number – it is a wound that hasn’t closed.” In Fate’s Edge, dice are not mere randomisers. They are the echo of every oath sworn, every debt unpaid. When you roll a 1, you feed the Hollow – and the Hollow feeds the story.

Reading the Dice

Each die that rolls 6 or higher counts as a Success. Each die that rolls a 1 generates a Story Beat (SB).

Die Result	Effect
6–10	+1 Success
1	+1 Story Beat (SB)
2–5	Nothing

2.4.0.0.1 Example: Lyra (Agility 3 + Stealth 2 = 5 dice) rolls: 6, 4, 3, 1, 6 → 2 Successes, 1 SB. The DV is 2 – she succeeds, but the GM has 1 SB to spend (perhaps a guard stirs).

When to Roll

You roll only when:

- The outcome is uncertain, and
- Failure would matter to the story, and
- The action is significant enough to deserve a spotlight.

For routine actions with no real risk, the group can simply agree that you succeed. Example: Climbing a knotted rope in calm weather → no roll. Climbing the same rope while goblins shoot arrows → roll.

2.5 Difficulty Value (DV)

The Game Master sets a Difficulty Value – the target number of Successes needed.

Difficulty Value (DV) Ladder

DV	Situation
2	Routine, no pressure
3	Pressured, mild opposition (default)
4	Difficult, active resistance
5	Extreme, high stakes
6+	Nearly impossible, mythic challenge

DV 3 is the default. If the GM calls for a roll, something is at stake. Do not inflate DVs – they already do their job.

2.6 The Outcome Matrix

Compare your Successes to the DV to determine the outcome.

Outcome Matrix

Outcome	What It Means
Clean Success ($S \geq DV$)	You achieve your goal without complication.
Success with SB ($S \geq DV, SB > 0$)	You succeed, but the GM spends SB to add a twist.
Partial ($0 < S < DV$)	You make progress, but the situation remains unresolved. You gain 1 Boon.
Miss ($S = 0$)	You fail, and the situation escalates. You gain 2 Boons.

2.6.0.0.1 What a Partial Means. A Partial is not failure – it moves the story forward. Examples:

- Improve your Position for the next attempt (see 2.8).
- Reduce the effective DV of the next roll.
- Succeed at reduced scale or duration.
- Reveal information or open a new path.

Fail Forward

A Miss is never “nothing happens.” The GM must introduce a complication, advance a clock, or reveal a hidden danger. You gain 2 Boons – the story moves, and you get resources to try again.

Example: You fail to pick a lock (Miss). The GM says: “Your pick snaps, but you hear the guard’s footsteps – he’s about to turn the corner. You have one beat to hide.” The story advances.

2.6.1 Critical Successes

A roll of 10 counts as two Successes. If the roll succeeds, each 10 adds narrative weight.

10s	Effect
1	Strong success – improve your Position by one step on your next action this scene, or gain a minor advantage.
2	Exceptional success – choose two benefits from the list above.
3	Legendary success – decisive victory; clear 1 segment from a relevant clock.
4+	Mythic success – reshape the scene; clear 1–2 segments from a relevant clock.

Important: A roll showing a 10 is never re-rolled, even by Position effects or other mechanics. Critical effects apply only if the overall roll succeeds.

Example: Rolling a 10

Lyra rolls 3 dice: 10, 8, 1. She gets: 2 successes (from the 10) + 1 success (from the 8) = 3 successes. The roll also generates 1 SB (from the 1). Because she rolled a 10, the GM grants an extra benefit: “Your arrow pierces the bandit’s shoulder – he drops his sword.” (Narrative benefit chosen by GM.)

2.7 Boons

Boons represent momentum and narrative leverage. You may hold up to 5 Boons.

Lore of the Velvet Touch

“The coin that never spends is the one you don’t remember taking.” Boons are the thief’s best friend – a second chance when the lock clicks wrong, a sudden shadow when the guard turns. In Silkstrand, they say a Boon is a debt to luck, and luck always collects.

Why You Should Spend Boons – The Math of Fun

Hoarding Boons for XP conversion leads to less engagement and lower fun scores.

Every Boon you hold is a dramatic moment waiting to happen:

- Re-rolling a critical failure turns despair into triumph.
- Improving Position before a risky roll turns a Desperate gamble into a Controlled chance.
- Activating an Asset brings your character’s network into the story.

XP from Boons is a trickle (max 2 per session). The real reward is agency. Spend Boons freely – they are not XP tokens.

Example: You have 3 Boons. Instead of converting them later, use 1 to re-roll a missed lockpick, another to improve your Position before a fight, and save the last for an emergency. That is how legends are made.

2.7.1 Earning Boons

- Partial Success: Gain 1 Boon (see 2.6).
- Miss: Gain 2 Boons.
- Bond-Driven Action: Once per bond per session, gain 1 Boon when an action meaningfully engages that bond (see Chapter 18 for establishing Bonds).
- GM Award: For creativity, sacrifice, or strong narrative play.

When not awarded: Safe rehearsal, null-risk probes, or repeated identical attempts in the same scene do not generate Boons.

2.7.2 Spending Boons

- Re-roll a single die (after seeing the result)
- Activate an on-screen Asset (1 Boon)
- Improve Position by 1 step before a roll (see 2.8)
- Power certain Rites or abilities (see 5)
- Convert to XP (2 Boons = 1 XP, once per session during downtime, max 2 XP per session)

2.7.2.0.1 Substituting Fatigue for Boons If you have no Boons remaining (or wish to conserve them), you may pay 1 Fatigue in place of 1 Boon to activate any effect that normally costs a Boon. This represents pushing through exhaustion, relying on raw effort, or accepting a minor physical toll. The GM may veto this substitution if the fiction makes it implausible (e.g., activating a delicate Asset while exhausted). Using this option does not change the effect's outcome or generate additional Story Beats; it simply changes the resource spent.

2.7.3 Carryover Limit

At the end of each scene, reduce held Boons to a maximum of 2. Excess are lost – spend them or lose them.

2.8 Position

Every action takes place from a Position that reflects the character's advantage.

Position Effects

Position	Narrative Frame	Mechanical Effect
Dominant	You press your advantage	Re-roll one failure .
Controlled	Balanced norm	No re-rolls.
Desperate	You act under duress	Re-roll one success .
You can spend 1 Boon to improve Position by one step before rolling. The GM can spend 2 SB to worsen your Position by one step (after the roll).

Important: A roll showing a 10 is never re-rolled, even by Desperate position.

A Vhasian Duelist's Lesson

“On the Pont-du-Tithe, Position is everything. Stand with the sun at your back – you are Dominant. Feet on a slippery plank – Desperate. The bridge does not care for your pride.”
Your Position is the story's judgement of your risk. Change the fiction, and Position follows.

2.8.0.0.1 Boon Interaction with Fatigue: When Fatigue forces a success re-roll (see 2.10.1), spending 1 Boon negates one such re-roll. You may spend Boons after seeing the result of a Fatigue re-roll.

Boon Economy at a Glance

Action	Boon Change
Partial Success	Gain 1 Boon
Miss	Gain 2 Boons
Bond-Driven Action	Gain 1 Boon (once/bond/session)
GM Award	+1 Boon (rare)	Maximum
Re-roll a die	Spend 1 Boon
Activate Asset	Spend 1 Boon
Improve Position (before roll)	Spend 1 Boon
Convert to XP (downtime)	Spend 2 Boons → 1 XP (max 2 XP/session)

held: 5 Boons. At end of scene, reduce to 2 (excess lost).

Position (Dominant/Controlled/Desperate) = How risky is this action? – determines severity of failure and re-rolls.

Effect (Limited/Standard/Great) = How much do you achieve on a success? – determines scope, scale, or quality.

Example: Disarming a trap – Limited Effect lets one person cross, Standard lets two, Great lets all four.

2.9 Story Beats (SB)

Story Beats are narrative tools the GM spends to introduce twists. They keep the story alive with complications.

2.9.1 SB Spend Examples

- 1 SB: Minor complication – noise, trace, +1 Supply segment.
- 2 SB: Moderate setback – alarm raised, lose cover, lesser foe appears, or advance a faction or front clock by 1 segment.
- 3 SB: Serious trouble – reinforcements, key gear breaks.
- 4+ SB: Major turn – trap springs, authority arrives, scene shifts.

2.9.1.0.1 Player Advice: Don't fear Story Beats – they are fuel for drama, not punishment. Every time you roll a 1, you give the GM a spark. That spark can light a fire that makes the story burn brighter.

2.10 Harm and Fatigue

2.10.1 Fatigue Track

Each character has a Fatigue track equal to Body. Mark Fatigue for exertion, magical strain, or stress.

- Each Fatigue step worsens your Position: Dominant → Controlled → Desperate (see 2.8).
- If already Desperate, apply –1 die per Fatigue instead.

- Penalties from Fatigue and Harm stack. For example, a character with Harm 1 (–1 die) who is also Desperate from Fatigue suffers both penalties.
- Overflow: When the track fills, increase Harm by 1 step (see 2.10.3) and clear all Fatigue.
- Recovery: Short rest clears 1–2 Fatigue; full night’s rest clears all.

Aeler Breath-Counting

“The Deep Accountants say: eight breaths is a corridor, sixteen is a chamber, thirty-two is a fool who forgot to turn back. Fatigue is your breath running out – mark it, or the mountain will mark you.” Fatigue is not just tiredness; it is the weight of every hard choice you’ve already made.

2.10.2 The Roller-Coaster Effect (Taking Harm Clears Fatigue)

When you take Harm, the shock of the wound temporarily clears your Fatigue. This creates natural dramatic swings – a character near collapse who takes a wound and suddenly finds a second wind.

2.10.2.0.1 Example: Kael is at Fatigue 3 (Desperate, –2 dice). A goblin stabs him for Harm 1. Following the procedure in 2.10.4, the Harm clears his Fatigue (step 2), then he adds the converted Fatigue (step 3). He ends with Harm 1, Fatigue 0 – wounded but clear-headed.

2.10.3 Harm Levels

Harm Level	Effect
Harm 1	–1 die on related actions
Harm 2	–1 die on most actions until treated
Harm 3	Incapacitated or dying

2.10.4 Taking Harm and Fatigue – The Procedure

When you are hit, follow these steps in order:

1. Convert incoming Harm to Fatigue using the Armor Conversion Table below. Minimum 1 Fatigue per hit, even if conversion would give 0.
2. Apply remaining Harm – if any Harm remains after conversion, increase your Harm level by that amount, and clear all existing Fatigue (the shock of a wound resets your exhaustion).
3. Add the Fatigue from step 1 to your Fatigue track. If this fills or exceeds your track, resolve Overflow (see 2.10.1).

2.10.4.0.1 Armor Conversion Table

Armor Type	Incoming Harm
	Harm 1	Harm 2	Harm 3
Light	Fatigue 1	Harm 1 + Fatigue 1	Harm 2 + Fatigue 1
Medium	Fatigue 1	Fatigue 1	Harm 2 + Fatigue 1
Heavy	Fatigue 1	Fatigue 1	Fatigue 2

Minimum 1 Fatigue per hit, even if conversion would give 0.

2.10.4.0.2 Examples

- Light Armor, Harm 2: Result is Harm 1, Fatigue 1. Apply Harm (clears existing Fatigue, Harm 0→1), then add Fatigue 1. (If you had Fatigue before, it is cleared first.)
- Heavy Armor, Harm 3: Result is Fatigue 2. No Harm taken. Add Fatigue 2.
- Heavy Armor, Harm 1: Result is Fatigue 1. No Harm taken. Add Fatigue 1.
- Overflow example: Body 2, currently 1 Fatigue, Heavy Armor hit with Harm 3 → result Fatigue 2. Total Fatigue becomes 1+2=3, which fills the track (max 2). Overflow triggers: Harm 0→1, clear all Fatigue. Final: Harm 1, Fatigue 0.

2.10.5 Recovery

- Fatigue: Short rest (food/water) removes 2 Fatigue; full night removes all.
- Harm: Requires medical care and time – minor treatment downgrades Harm, proper care removes it.

2.11 Initiative and Turn Order

2.11.0.0.1 Default: Narrative Initiative. Fate's Edge does not use fixed initiative. Turn order follows the fiction:

- Narrative Fiat: The GM frames spotlight order based on circumstances.
- Player Input: Players may suggest acting when it makes sense.
- Surprise: Ambushers act first; targets respond after.
- Flexibility: Spotlight may shift mid-scene if fictionally appropriate.

(Optional structured initiative systems – popcorn, side-based, speed slots – are available in the GM Guide if your table prefers them.)

2.11.1 Turn Economy (Quick Rules)

Each character takes 1 Action and 1 Move on their turn. Actions and Moves may be taken in any order; repeating the same Action is not allowed unless noted.

2.11.1.0.1 Move: Traverse up to one range band (Close → Near → Far, or the reverse).

- Stand: Use your Move to stand from prone.

Action	Effect	Notes
Attack	Make melee or ranged attack against a target.	Ranged in Close is Desperate .
Disengage	Enable safe movement.	Your Move does not provoke opportunity attacks; you cannot Attack this turn.
Shove	Push a target back one range band (Close $\rightarrow$ Near).	Opposed Body + Athletics vs. Body + Athletics. On success, target moves back and suffers -1 Position on their next action.
Grapple	Seize a target to restrain or control.	Opposed Body + Melee vs. Body + Athletics. On success, both are Engaged (cannot move apart). Grappled target suffers -1 die on all actions. Breaking free requires a new opposed roll as an action.
Charge (Full turn)	Move two bands toward an enemy + make one melee attack.	Costs 1 Fatigue, next defense Desperate, requires open ground. Leaving Close range during a Charge provokes opportunity attacks as normal.
Skirmish (Full turn)	Move two bands away from an enemy + make one ranged attack.	Costs 1 Fatigue, next defense Desperate, requires open ground. Leaving Close range during a Skirmish provokes opportunity attacks as normal.
Observe / Change Position	Gain +1 Position once.	Once per turn.
Setup (Teamwork)	Grant an ally +1 Position or step up Effect.	Requires a roll (typically Wits + relevant skill).

2.11.1.0.2 Action Options:

2.11.1.0.3 Sidestep Strike (Closing or Stepping Back) As part of a melee attack action, you may move one range band (Close $\leftrightarrow$ Near, or Near $\leftrightarrow$ Far) without using your Move action for the turn. If you do so, your Position for that attack worsens by one step (e.g., Controlled becomes Desperate, Dominant becomes Controlled). You cannot also use your regular Move action in the same turn.

This represents a daring lunge to close distance or a quick step back to create space, sacrificing safety for tactical positioning.

- Example (Rogue): Lyra is at Near range with a knife (light weapon). She declares a Sidestep Strike, moving into Close range as she attacks. Her Position drops from Controlled to Desperate, but she now benefits from the knife's Close bonus (+2d). She rolls with the Desperate re-roll (successes are re-rolled once) but gets +2 dice from her weapon.
- Example (Spear Fighter): Kael is at Close range with a spear (medium weapon, +1d at Close, +2d at Near). He steps back to Near as part of his attack, worsening his Position from Controlled to Desperate, but gains +2d instead of +1d.

2.11.1.0.4 Opportunity Attacks Leaving an enemy's Close range without using Disengage provokes one free melee attack (Controlled Position, no action cost). Additionally, the following actions provoke an opportunity attack if performed while engaged in Close with an enemy:

- Making a ranged attack (bow, crossbow, thrown weapon).
- Casting a spell that does not have the [TOUCH] or [WARD] attribute.

A Charge or Skirmish that takes you out of an enemy's Close range provokes an opportunity attack as usual (unless you used Disengage beforehand). Using Sidestep Strike to leave Close range also provokes an opportunity attack unless you also used Disengage.

2.11.1.0.5 Position and Dice Modifiers

- Position ladder: Desperate $\rightarrow$ Controlled $\rightarrow$ Dominant.
- Improving Position: Each step above Dominant grants +1 die instead.
- Worsening Position: Each step below Desperate imposes -1 die instead.
- Example: If bonuses would raise Position two steps above Dominant, you gain +2 dice. If penalties would drop you two steps below Desperate, you suffer -2 dice.

2.11.1.0.6 Caveats and Talents:

- Charge and Skirmish require open ground (no difficult terrain) unless a talent says otherwise (see 9).
- Talents such as Effortless Charge (4 XP) or Effortless Skirmish (4 XP) allow ignoring the Fatigue cost once per scene.
- The Relentless talent (6 XP) allows Charge or Skirmish over difficult terrain (Fatigue cost still applies).

Combat in Brief

- Turn: 1 Action + 1 Move.
- Move: Close $\leftrightarrow$ Near $\leftrightarrow$ Far.

- Attack: Roll Attribute + Skill vs. DV (enemy's defense). Ranged attack while in Close range → Desperate.
- Shove: Opposed Body + Athletics vs. Body + Athletics. Push target one band.
- Grapple: Opposed Body + Melee vs. Body + Athletics. Both Engaged; target suffers –1 die.
- Sidestep Strike: Move one band as part of a melee attack; worsen Position by one step.
- Harm: When you hit, the target marks Harm (see 2.10.4). Enemies use the same Harm levels as players.
- Fatigue: Each point worsens your Position (or –1 die if already Desperate). Taking Harm clears Fatigue – the “roller-coaster”.
- Clocks: GMs often use clocks for reinforcements, environmental collapse, or enemy morale.

Full combat rules are in Chapter ?? (GM Guide).

2.12 Weapons & Armor

Silkstrand Steel

“A Light blade is a courtier’s promise – fast, elegant, easy to hide. A Heavy blade is a condotta captain’s ultimatum – slow, brutal, and final.” Choose your weight as you choose your words. Both can cut.

2.12.1 Weapons by Weight Class

- Light (4 XP) – fast, concealable.
- Medium (8 XP) – balanced, battlefield standard.
- Heavy (12 XP) – punishing, slow.

2.12.2 Melee Modifiers

Weight	Close	Near	Notes
Light	+2d	+1d	Quick in tight quarters
Medium	+1d	+2d	Set once/scene or –1d first attack
Heavy	–1d	+3d	Set once/scene or –2d first attack

2.12.3 Ranged & Tempo

Ranged weapons have a Tempo that determines how they interact with movement, aiming, and reloading.

2.12.3.0.1 Tempo Types

Fast – You may Move and Shoot in the same turn. Examples: throwing knives, light crossbow (if pre-loaded), sling.

Standard – You may either Move or Shoot on your turn, not both. As a special action, you may Aim (gain +1d or +1 Effect on your next shot), but Aim replaces your attack that turn. Examples: longbow, heavy crossbow (if pre-loaded), musket.

Slow – The weapon requires a full round to load (or set/brace). Round 1: Use your action to load (no attack). You may still move, but moving while loading is at Desperate Position unless you have a talent. Round 2: Shoot (and may move afterwards). Then you must reload again for another shot. Examples: ballista, hand-cannon, heavy arquebus.

2.12.3.0.2 Ranged Modifiers by Weight

Weight	Tempo	Close	Near	Far
Light (4 XP)	Fast	Controlled	+1d	—
Medium (8 XP)	Standard	Desperate	+2d	+1d
Heavy (12 XP)	Slow	Desperate	+1d	+3d

2.12.3.0.3 Tempo Quick Reference

Tempo	Move + Shoot?	Aim Option?	Reload Required
Fast	Yes (same turn)	No	None (or free)
Standard	No (move or shoot)	Yes (+1d/+1 Effect)	None (Aim costs action)
Slow	No (load one turn, shoot next)	No	Full round

2.12.4 Weapon Tags (Optional, +4 XP each, max 2)

Reach, Close, Accurate, Brutal, Hook, Concealable, Quickdraw, Two-Handed, Off-Hand.

2.12.5 Shields (Optional)

Shield	XP	Benefit	Tradeoff
Buckler	4	+1d Defend vs melee or +1 DV once	Off-hand occupied
Heater	8	+1d Defend; convert 1 Harm→1 Fatigue	–1d Ranged
Pavise	12	Plant: heavy cover cone	Slow to move; bulky

2.12.6 Armor

Armor	XP	Conversion (Harm → Fatigue)	Penalty
Light	4	1→1 (minimum 1 Fatigue per hit)	—
Medium	8	2→1 (minimum 1 Fatigue per hit)	–1d physical skills
Heavy	12	3→2 (minimum 1 Fatigue per hit)	–2d physical, no sprint in rough

Notes: Conversion is applied per Harm instance before marking Fatigue. See 2.10.4 for the full step-by-step procedure.

2.12.7 Condition & Upkeep

Neglected Weapons: –1d; Armor: conversion worsened by one step (e.g., Light behaves as no armor, Heavy as Medium).

Compromised Weapons: –1d first attack each round; Armor: no conversion.

Fix: Short rest with tools removes Neglected (no roll required). A scene of work or a smith removes Compromised; a successful Craft roll (DV 3) can reduce the time to a short rest.

2.13 Ranged Options

- Aim: +1 die or +1 Effect next shot (lost if you Move or are disrupted).
- Volley: Spend extra ammo for +1 die (max +2).
- Suppress: Zone under fire; foes there act at -1 die or Limited Effect until they shift cover.
- Overwatch: Ready a Controlled shot on a clear trigger crossing your line.

2.14 Followers and Assets

2.14.1 Followers

Followers are named NPCs with a personal relationship to your character. They:

- Assist during scenes via Bonds and Assists (see Chapter 18).
- Act offscreen to gather information or manage tasks.
- Have motives and vulnerabilities – the GM may place them at risk.

Followers are not disposable tools. They can grow, change, or be lost.

2.14.1.1 High-Capability Followers (Cap 4–5)

Followers with Capability 4 or 5 are trusted lieutenants, stewards, or commanders. They can be delegated the management of your Assets, freeing you from direct oversight.

- A Cap 4 follower can be delegated up to 2 Assets.
- A Cap 5 follower can be delegated up to 4 Assets.

When an Asset is delegated to a follower, the follower's own upkeep (paid in XP or downtime action) automatically covers the upkeep of those Assets – you do not pay separate Asset upkeep. The follower handles the logistics, staff, or political maintenance as part of their role.

If the follower becomes Wary, Neglected, all delegated Assets immediately become Neglected as well until the follower is restored. If a follower is Compromised, those assets are lost.

2.14.2 Assets

Assets are durable resources or positions under your control – safehouses, networks, political offices, relics. They:

- Create advantages that persist beyond a single scene.
- Resolve problems that dice alone cannot.
- Cost Boons to activate (the GM determines the impact).

Assets can be threatened, degraded, or lost. Overuse attracts attention.

2.14.3 Followers vs. Assets

	Followers	Assets
Nature	People	Resources/Structures
Primary Role	Personal support	Strategic leverage
Activation	Assists (spend Boon) or narrative interaction	Boon expenditure
Risk	Emotional, narrative	Structural, political
Growth	Can become PCs	Can expand or collapse

2.14.3.0.1 Design Principle: Followers create depth. Assets create reach. High-tier play depends on managing both.

2.15 Game Structure

2.15.1 Time Scales

Moment A heartbeat, a single action.

Some Time A few minutes, a short activity.

Significant Time Hours, extended effort.

Days Large-scale endeavors.

2.15.2 Game Units

Scene Basic narrative unit, covers a specific conflict.

Session One game session (3–6 hours).

Campaign Entire story arc.

2.16 Action Resolution Steps

1. Describe your intent and method.
2. Build dice pool: Attribute + Skill (+ gear, assists).
3. Roll d10s; count Successes (6+) and Story Beats (1s).
4. Compare Successes to DV.
5. Apply outcome from the Outcome Matrix (see 2.6).
6. GM spends SB if applicable (see 2.9).
7. Earn Boons for Partial or Miss (see 2.7).

Quick Reference

Dice Pool: Attribute + Skill d10s

Success: 6+ on each die

Story Beat: 1 on any die gives SB to GM

DV: 2 (easy) to 5+ (extreme) – default 3

Harm: 3-level system; see 2.10.4 for the procedure

Boons: 2 on miss, 1 on partial

2.17 Narrative Suggestions

- Collaborative Scene Framing: Players may suggest scene elements (weather, NPC reactions) with GM approval.
- Intent-Driven Resolution: If success is reasonably assured, the GM may ask players to describe how rather than roll.
- Flashback Declarations: Spend 1 Boon to declare a flashback establishing past preparation, and describe the scene.
- Descriptive Assistance: Players can assist by providing vivid descriptions, granting a +1 die to the primary actor.
- Proactive Storytelling: Players may suggest minor favorable details (a helpful NPC, a useful item on hand) subject to GM approval.

Core Mechanics Quick Reference

What	How
Dice Pool	Attribute + Skill d10s
Success	Die ≥ 6
Story Beat (SB)	Die = 1
Difficulty (DV)	Default 3 (2=easy, 4=hard, 5+=extreme)
Outcomes	Clean Success ($S \geq DV$, $SB=0$) Success with SB ($S \geq DV$, $SB > 0$) Partial ($0 < S < DV \rightarrow$ gain 1 Boon) Miss ($S=0 \rightarrow$ gain 2 Boons)
Boons	Max 5; trim to 2 at scene end. Spend: re-roll, improve Position, activate Asset, convert 2 $\rightarrow$ 1
Position	Dominant (re-roll failure), Controlled (normal), Desperate (re-roll success)
Fatigue	Worsens Position (or -1 die if Desperate). Full track $\rightarrow$ Harm+1, clear Fatigue.
Harm	1 (-1 die), 2 (-2 dice), 3 (incapacitated). Taking Harm clears Fatigue first.
Armor	Converts Harm to Fatigue; minimum 1 Fatigue per hit.
Sidestep Strike	Move one band as part of melee attack; worsen Position by one step.
Shove	Opposed Body + Athletics. Push target one band.
Grapple	Opposed Body + Melee. Both Engaged; target suffers -1 die.

Chapter 3

Character Creation Summary

Quick Start

This chapter walks you through building a character in about 10–15 minutes. Follow the steps in order. Most choices are guided by your character concept; the numbers come later.

3.1 Overview

You begin at Tier I (Novice) with 30 Experience Points (XP). You may gain up to +4 XP by taking meaningful Bonds (with other player characters) and Complications (see 3.8). Maximum starting XP: 34.

Step	Where to Find Rules	Time
1. Concept	Anywhere	2 min
2. Attributes	7.1	2 min
3. Skills	7.2	2 min
4. Talents	9	3 min
5. Patron (optional)	15	2 min
6. Assets / Followers (optional)	12	1 min
7. Bonds & Complications	3.8	2 min
8. Gear & Final Touches	3.9	1 min

3.2 Step 1 – Concept

Write one sentence that describes your character’s origin, profession, and one defining trait. Examples:

- “An Aeler tunnel-wright who lost her breath-count and now hears stone sing.”
- “A Vhasian duelist with a scarred face and a vow to never lose again.”
- “A Ykrul sky-speaker who owes a blood-price to a rival clan.”

Also choose your character’s ancestry (see 14.19):

- Small Folk (Aelaerem / Aelinnel)
- Aeler (dwarf)
- Lethai (wood, high, or dark elf)

- Ykrul (orc)
- Mixed Heritage
- Human (any culture: Ecktorian, Vhasian, Viterran, Linn, etc.)

3.3 Step 2 – Attributes

You have four Attributes (1–5). Spend XP to raise them from a base of 1 each.

3.3.0.0.1 Cost: $\text{new rating} \times 3 \text{ XP}$ per step.

3.3.0.0.2 Recommended starting ranges:

- Primary attribute (the one you use most): 3 (cost 9 XP)
- Secondary attributes: 2 each (cost 6 XP)

3.3.0.0.3 Example: Body 3 ($1 \rightarrow 2 = 6$, $2 \rightarrow 3 = 9 \rightarrow$ total 15 XP), Wits 2 (6 XP), Spirit 1, Presence 1 $\rightarrow$ 21 XP spent.

For detailed descriptions see 7.1.

3.4 Step 3 – Skills

Choose Skills (0–5) that match your concept. Key skills (used often) should be 2–3; others 0–1.

3.4.0.0.1 Cost: $\text{new level} \times 2 \text{ XP}$ per step.

3.4.0.0.2 Recommended starting total: Spend 8–12 XP on skills.

3.4.0.0.3 Example: Melee 2 ($0 \rightarrow 1 = 2$, $1 \rightarrow 2 = 4 = 6$ XP), Athletics 1 (2 XP), Endurance 1 (2 XP) $\rightarrow$ total 10 XP.

See 7.2 for the full skill list.

3.5 Step 4 – Talents

Talents are special abilities. Start with 1–3 talents. Many concepts work well with two minor talents (2–3 XP each) or one major talent (4–6 XP).

3.5.0.0.1 Magic access talents (if you want magic):

- Spellcraft (6 XP) – free casting
- Familiar (2 XP) + Codex (4 XP) – Runekeeper (rites)
- Patron’s Symbol (4 XP) – Invoker (rituals)
- Cantor’s Path (8 XP) – Cantor (songs)
- Pact-Whisperer (2 XP) + Lesser Pactwright (2 XP) – Summoner

3.5.0.0.2 Non-magic talents (examples):

- Keen Senses (2 XP) – +1 die to perception

- Defensive Survival (3 XP) – +1 die to melee defence, convert Harm to Fatigue
- Weapon Mastery (5 XP) – +2 dice with a chosen weapon

See 9 for the full list.

3.6 Step 5 – Patron (Optional)

If your character uses magic through a Patron, choose one (see 15). The six recommended for first characters are:

Patron	Theme
Oath of Flame & Light	vows, radiance, smiting
The Traveler	roads, safe passage
Inaea (Angel of the Spider)	mercy, community
The Witness	truth, memory
Carrion King	decay, renewal
Ikasha (She Who Sleeps)	shadows, secrets

You do not need a Patron if you are a free caster (Spellcraft) or a psion (optional).

3.7 Step 6 – Assets & Followers (Optional)

You may spend XP on:

- Minor Asset (4 XP) – e.g., a safehouse, a workshop
- Follower (Cap² XP) – e.g., Cap 2 scout (4 XP), Cap 3 lieutenant (9 XP)

Most starting characters skip these or take one minor asset. See 12.

3.8 Step 7 – Bonds & Complications

Bonds: Establish two bonds with other player characters. Each bond grants a one-per-session Boon when you act on it with an intricate description. At Tier III (90+ XP) bonds also allow Boon transfers.

Complications: You may take up to two complications (e.g., a feud, a cursed item, a debt). Each gives +2 XP but adds +1 banked Story Beat to early scenes. Work with your GM.

See 18 for examples.

3.9 Step 8 – Gear & Final Touches

3.9.0.0.1 Starting gear (assumed):

- One set of clothing appropriate to your culture
- A melee weapon (Light or Medium) or a ranged weapon with ammunition
- Light armor (or Medium if your concept demands it)
- A backpack, a waterskin, 1d6 days of rations, a knife, flint and steel, a small lantern or candle
- Any tools required for your skills (e.g., lockpicks, healer's kit, writing materials)

For special gear (heavy armor, heavy weapons, magical items), spend XP or acquire them through play.

3.9.0.0.2 Final XP tally:

- Start with 30 XP.
- Add +2 XP per Bond (max +4).
- Add +2 XP per Complication (max +4).
- Maximum starting XP: 34.

Spend all XP; you cannot bank starting XP.

3.9.0.0.3 Example build (34 XP):

- Body 3 (15 XP), Wits 2 (6 XP) → 21 XP
- Melee 2 (6 XP), Athletics 1 (2 XP), Endurance 1 (2 XP) → 10 XP total 31
- Talent: Keen Senses (2 XP) → 33 XP
- Bond with another PC → +2 XP (now 35 – adjust by lowering one skill)

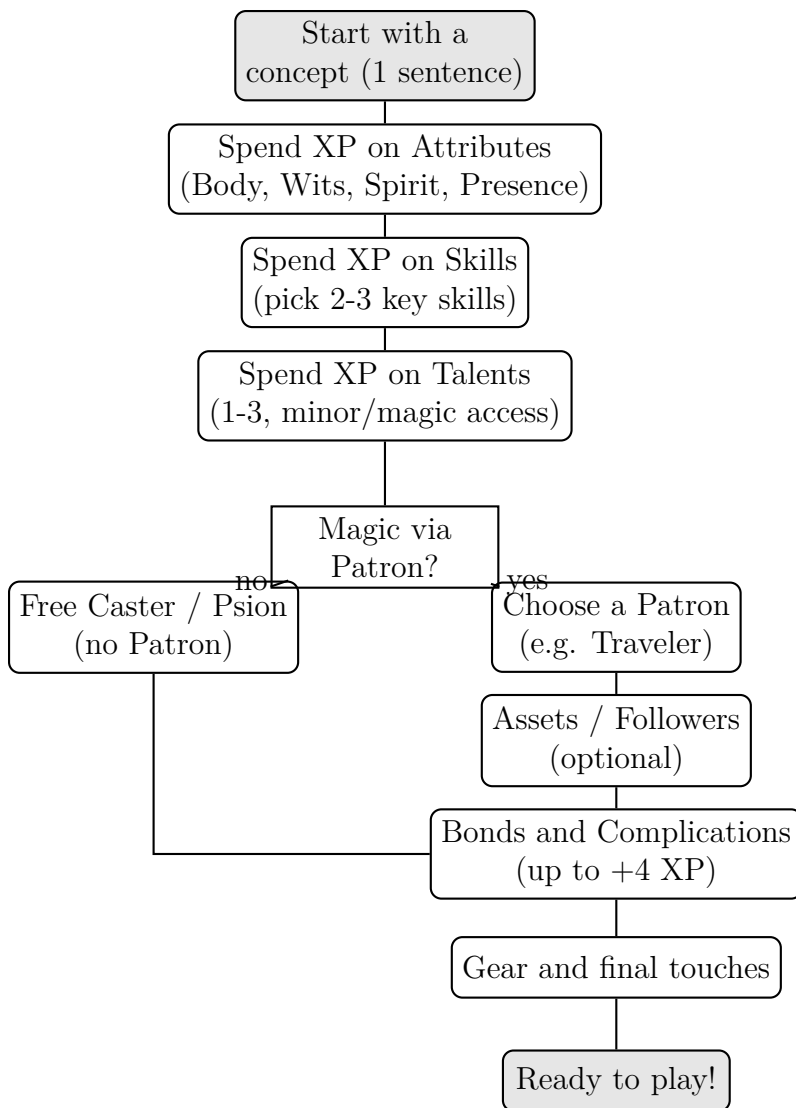

(Adjust to your table's needs.)

3.10 Next Steps

- Read 2 to learn how to roll dice, use Position, and spend Boons.
- Read 5 if your character uses magic.
- Read 16 for travel, time, and social rules.
- Work with your GM to decide on starting situation and campaign clocks.

The Grey Wanderer's Advice

“Do not try to build a ‘perfect’ character. Build one who owes a debt, carries a scar, and has a name that someone will remember. The numbers will follow the story – not the other way around.”

Chapter 4

Gear, Magic Items, and Crafting

4.1 The Philosophy of Gear

In Fate’s Edge, your character’s possessions are described in the fiction, not tracked on a ledger. You have enough coin, barter, or credit to afford:

- Ordinary meals, lodging, and travel rations
- Basic tools (rope, lantern, writing kit, lockpicks)
- Small bribes (a drink, a gift)
- Routine transportation (ferry, caravan passage)

If the GM ever asks “Do you have enough?” the answer is usually yes – unless scarcity is the point of the scene.

4.2 Mundane Equipment

4.2.1 Weapons and Armor

Weapons and armor are covered in §2.12 (Core Mechanics). Briefly:

- Light weapons (4 XP): fast, concealable.
- Medium weapons (8 XP): balanced.
- Heavy weapons (12 XP): slow, powerful.
- Light armor (4 XP): converts 1 Harm → 1 Fatigue.
- Medium armor (8 XP): converts 2 Harm → 1 Fatigue, –1 die physical skills.
- Heavy armor (12 XP): converts 3 Harm → 2 Fatigue, –2 dice physical skills, no sprint in rough terrain.

You may acquire these with XP at character creation or later.

4.2.2 Adventuring Gear

You are assumed to have the following unless you are in a survival situation:

- Backpack, waterskin, 1d6 days of rations, a knife, flint and steel, a small lantern or candle
- Tools for any skill you have at level 1+ (e.g., lockpicks for Subterfuge, healer’s kit for Medicine)
- A set of clothing appropriate to your culture

If you need something unusual (a climber's kit, a disguise, a rare herb), you may:

- Spend 1 Boon to declare you already have it (narrative permission).
- Spend 1 XP to acquire it (as a one-time resource).
- Acquire it as a minor asset (4 XP) if you want permanent access.

4.3 Magic Items

Magic items are not bought with gold. They are acquired by spending XP, completing quests, or crafting. A magic item is a permanent asset that grants a mechanical benefit. It requires upkeep (see below).

4.3.1 Cost Basis: Talent Equivalents

A magic item's effect is roughly equivalent to a Talent (see 9). Use the Talent XP cost as the base price, then apply a discount because items can be lost, stolen, or broken.

Effect Power	Talent Cost	Magic Item Cost (XP)
Minor (e.g., +1 die to a narrow skill once/scene)	2–3 XP	2 XP
Major (e.g., +1 die to a broad skill always)	4–6 XP	4 XP
Prestige (e.g., once/session reroll a failed save)	7–10 XP	6 XP
Epic (e.g., teleport once/day)	11+ XP	8 XP

Discount reason: A Talent is permanently attached to your character; an item can be taken away. The discount also covers the need for upkeep.

4.3.2 Sample Magic Items

Name	Cost (XP)	Effect
Emberfang Dagger	2	When drawn, glows faintly if undead are within Near. Once per scene, gain +1 die to detect hidden spirits.
Storm Lantern	4	Once per session, as an action, create a gust of wind that extinguishes all mundane flames in Near and gives +1 Position to disengage.
Cloak of the Unseen	4	+1 die to Stealth in dim light. Once per scene, reroll a failed Stealth check.
Vial of the Last Breath	2 (consumable)	Heal 1 Fatigue when drunk. One use.
Pendant of the Witness	6	Once per session, when you detect a lie, the liar suffers 1 Fatigue (no save).
Raven's Key	8	Once per day, as an action, unlock any mundane lock or open any door that is not magically sealed.

4.3.3 Attunement and Upkeep

A character may be attuned to up to 3 magic items at a time (attunement takes a short rest). During each downtime, you must pay upkeep for each magic item you keep attuned:

- Efficient: Pay XP equal to the item’s cost divided by 3 (rounded up, minimum 1). You spend minimal effort.
- Intensive: Pay 1 XP and describe a downtime scene where you maintain the item (cleaning, recharging, appeasing its spirit).

If you neglect upkeep, the item becomes Neglected (no benefit until you pay the upkeep retroactively). If neglected for two consecutive downtimes, it becomes Compromised (requires a quest to restore).

4.3.4 Losing Magic Items

If you lose a magic item (theft, destruction, sacrifice), you lose the XP you spent on it. The GM may allow you to recover it as a story hook. You may also choose to “retire” an item (sell it, trade it, give it away) and regain half its XP cost (rounded down) to spend on something else.

4.4 Crafting Magic Items

Crafting a permanent magic item is a campaign-level project. It requires:

- A character with relevant skills: Arcana 3+ and Craft 2+ (or appropriate specialty).
- A workspace (e.g., a workshop asset, a consecrated forge).
- Rare components (obtained through adventuring – the GM will decide).
- A Downtime Project Clock (6–12 segments). Each segment requires a scene or a downtime action.
- The XP cost of the item (see table above) – paid when the clock is completed.

4.4.1 Crafting Procedure

1. Design: Describe what the item does. The GM sets the Tier (Minor/Major/Prestige/Epic) and XP cost.
2. Quest: The GM frames a short arc to obtain a rare component (e.g., “a phoenix feather”, “the heart of a storm elemental”).
3. Downtime Clock: Roll Wits + Craft or Wits + Arcana each downtime. Each success advances the clock by 1. Partial successes create complications (lost components, attracting attention). On a failure, the clock may tick backwards.
4. Completion: When the clock fills, you pay the XP and the item is complete. The GM may add a final, optional cost (e.g., “it also consumes a memory”).

4.4.2 Crafting Consumables

One-use items (potions, scrolls, runestones) are much easier. Crafting a consumable:

- Takes a single downtime action (no clock).
- Costs 1 XP per consumable (or 2 XP for a powerful one).
- Requires an appropriate skill roll (DV 3) – on a failure, the components are wasted.
- No upkeep required.

Examples: Healing potion (restores 1 Fatigue), Sight scroll (grants +1 die to Investigation for one scene), Thunderstone (ranged attack, Harm 1 to a small area).

4.5 Upgrading Mundane Gear

You may also spend XP to give a mundane item a permanent magical property. Use the same costs as magic items. The process is faster than crafting from scratch (no rare component quest, just a downtime clock of 4–6 segments).

4.6 Summary for Players

- Ordinary gear is free – describe what you carry.
- Weapons and armor cost XP (light 4, medium 8, heavy 12).
- Magic items cost XP based on Talent equivalents (2–8 XP).
- Magic items require upkeep (XP or downtime scene) each downtime.
- Crafting a magic item is a long project involving a clock, rare components, and XP.

The Grey Wanderer's Tip

“A magic sword is not a toy. It is a creditor. It demands maintenance, attention, and sometimes a blood-price. If you cannot afford the upkeep, do not pick it up. The edge is not worth the interest.”

4.7 Artifacts: Items That Owe You (And You Owe Them)

The coin that never spends is the one you don't remember taking. The blade that never dulls is the one you never truly own.

Most magic items are tools – you pay XP, you keep them, you maintain them. Artifacts are different. They are not crafted; they are inherited, discovered, or earned through story. An artifact has a will of its own, however faint. It remembers every hand that held it, every oath spoken over it, every debt left unpaid.

4.7.1 What Makes an Artifact?

An artifact is a magic item with three special properties:

- Obligation. When you first claim an artifact (or when you use its deeper powers), you mark Obligation to the artifact itself. This Obligation is tracked like Patron Obligation (Capacity = Spirit + Presence). The artifact may demand tasks, sacrifices, or simply that you carry it to places it wishes to go.
- Rites. An artifact grants one or two specific Rites (see 15) that you can invoke without a Patron, a Codex, or a Symbol. Using a Rite from an artifact costs the normal Obligation (in addition to any Obligation from attuning to the artifact). The Rites are tied to the artifact's nature – a sword that remembers a betrayed king might grant Rite of the Oath Unbroken; a lantern that once lit a heretic's pyre might grant Rite of the Revealing Flame.
- Indestructible (mostly). If an artifact is lost, stolen, or destroyed, it reappears intact at the next dawn – somewhere nearby, often in the hand of the one who owes it the most Obligation. The only way to be rid of an artifact permanently is to fulfill all Obligation to it, then pass it to a willing heir (or bury it in a place of true rest, with GM approval).

4.7.2 No Upkeep, but No Escape

Unlike ordinary magic items, artifacts require no upkeep (no XP or downtime scenes). They maintain themselves – or rather, they maintain their hold on you. However, you cannot simply stop attuning to an artifact; it will return at dawn until your Obligation to it is cleared.

- Attunement: An artifact counts toward your attunement limit (3 items). Breaking attunement is a ritual (downtime scene) that requires a Spirit + Lore roll (DV 4). On a failure, you mark 1 Fatigue and the artifact reappears the next dawn.
- Obligation Overflow: If your Obligation to an artifact exceeds your Capacity, you suffer Fatigue as normal (see §??). Additionally, the artifact may manifest – a cold weight in your pack, a whisper in your ear, a reflection that doesn’t match the room.

4.7.3 Subtle Power, Not Apocalyptic

Most artifacts are subtle. They do not reshape battlefields or raise armies. A true artifact might:

- Allow you to hear the last words of anyone who died holding it (once per session).
- Show you the nearest hidden door or secret passage when you spend 1 Boon.
- Grant +1 die to all Sway rolls when bargaining with a specific faction (e.g., the Salt Prince’s court).

Apocalyptic artifacts – those that could end kingdoms or unmake reality – are almost unheard of. One or two are whispered about in the oldest ledgers, but no living witness has confirmed their existence. The Grey Wanderer themselves is said to carry a shard of the First Oath, but if they do, they have never used it.

4.7.4 Acquiring an Artifact

You cannot buy an artifact with XP. You find them:

- In the hoard of a forgotten dragon.
- At the bottom of a sunken temple, still clutched by a skeleton.
- As an inheritance from a dying mentor (“Take my mother’s mirror. It will show you what I could not face.”).
- As a reward from a Patron who wishes to bind you more tightly.

The GM determines the artifact’s Rites and the starting Obligation (usually 1–3 segments). You do not pay XP for the artifact itself, but you may need to complete a quest to unlock its full power.

4.7.5 Sample Artifacts

Name	Obligation	Effect
The Copper Bell of Unspoken Truths	2	Once per session, ring the bell. The next lie told within Near range is heard as a discordant chime; you gain +1 die to expose it.
Ledger of the Debtor Saint	3	You may record a single promise in the ledger. While the promise is unfulfilled, you gain +1 die to all rolls that directly advance it. When the promise is fulfilled, clear 1 Obligation.

The Mourner's Cloak 1

When you pull the hood up, you become invisible to anyone who is actively grieving (GM's judgment). The invisibility lasts until you speak or attack.

Hearthstone of the Lost Hearth 2

Once per day, as an action, you may set the stone on a threshold. For the next hour, that threshold cannot be crossed by anyone with hostile intent (Resolve DV 4 to resist).

4.7.6 Player Advice

Artifacts are story hooks, not power-ups. If you find one, ask yourself:

- Why does this thing want me to carry it?
- What will it demand when my Obligation fills?
- Who else wants it – and what will they pay?

Embrace the artifact as a co-star in your character's drama. The Rites it grants are useful; the strings attached are the real treasure.

The Grey Wanderer's Ledger

"I have carried the Copper Bell for thirty years. It has shown me a hundred lies and saved me from a thousand embarrassments. It has also woken me at midnight, demanded I ring it at a stranger's door, and once caused a magistrate's wig to catch fire. I would not trade it for a kingdom – but I would trade it for a single night of silence."

Chapter 5

Magic and Special Abilities

Magic in this game is powerful but dangerous—a negotiation with reality itself that always carries risks. This chapter covers the core magical systems and the distinct paths a character may follow.

Sidebar: [TAGS] & Magic

What are [TAGS]? Effects in Fate's Edge are communicated via [TAGS]. Each [TAG] is a discrete effect gated behind a Talent, Rite, spell, or asset—it cannot be invoked spontaneously unless a rule grants access.

How they're used. [TAGS] provide a common language for describing effects, especially when players invent spells via Free Casting. Many prewritten spells and abilities also list their [TAGS] for clarity.

5.1 The Nature of Magic

Magic is not a safe tool but a dangerous force:

- Powerful: Can reshape battles, stories, or even the world.
- Controlled: Every use generates Story Beats (SB) that manifest as backlash (see 2).
- Thematic: Effects and consequences align with the type of magic used.
- Volatile: Never fully predictable or controllable.
- Narrative: Casting is always a significant story moment.

5.1.0.0.1 Table Vignette: “I can hold the avalanche,” says Mira, fingers trembling. “But something will answer.” The party nods—risk accepted, stakes clear.

5.1.1 Patron as Co-Star

Your Patron is not just a source of power—they are a co-star in your story. How often they appear depends on your campaign's length. Ask your GM which style they will use:

Passive Patrons (long campaigns) – The Patron stays in the background, appearing only when Obligation thresholds are breached. Their demands feel like slow, inevitable consequences.

Active Patrons (short campaigns / one-shots) – The Patron appears often: in dreams, omens, or through intermediaries. They offer bargains, push the Obligation spiral, and make the price of power immediate.

Player advice: Embrace Patron demands as story hooks, not punishments. When the GM says “Your Patron requires a task,” lean into it. That task will lead to adventure, not just a tax. A Patron who intervenes is a Patron who cares – and a caring Patron is a source of power and drama.

For Full Patron Details

The complete descriptions of all Patrons—including their Rites, Obligation mechanics, and corruption tables—are found in Chapter 15 (World Powers and Obligation). That chapter also covers terrestrial patrons, faction obligations, and the mechanics of clearing debt. This chapter focuses on the paths of magic; for the sources of power, see the World Powers chapter.

5.2 Paths of Magic

Magic in Fate’s Edge is not a single system. Characters may follow one of several distinct paths, each with its own mechanics, costs, and narrative flavor. The five primary paths are:

Free Caster Improvisational magic using [TAGS]. Flexible but risky (5.2.1).

Runekeeper Structured rites granted by a Patron. Reliable but accrues Obligation (5.2.2).

Invoker Ritual magic using Patron symbols. Safe but slow (5.2.3).

Cantor Songs that mimic Low Rites. Accessible but corrupting (5.2.4).

Summoner Binding and commanding spirits. Powerful but requires control (5.2.5).

A character may dabble in multiple paths, but specialization is more effective.

5.2.1 Free Caster (Spellcraft)

Free casters shape raw magic through will and knowledge. They do not rely on Patrons or rote rites.

Requirements

- Talent: Spellcraft (6 XP) – see 9.
- Appropriate magical skill (Arcana, Elemental Magic, etc.).

Casting Procedure

1. Declare Intent: Describe the desired effect using [TAGS].
2. Choose Approach: Attribute + magical skill.
3. Set Position & DV: $DV = 1 + \text{number of [TAGS]}$. Dangerous tags add +2 each.
4. Roll: Resolve normally (see 2). Each 1 generates a Story Beat.

For powerful or complex effects, use the Casting Loop (two actions: Weave then Cast). Simple effects (one tag) may be cast as a cantrip (one action, no separate Weave).

Backlash

On a failure or mixed result, the GM may impose:

- Harm 2 (Arcane)
- +2 Fatigue
- Corruption +1
- A catastrophic side effect

Backlash is always flavored by the elements used.

Free Caster Talents

Ritual Mastery (6 XP) Reduce casting time for major spells by half.

Elemental Focus (4 XP) Gain +1 die when using a chosen element.

Stabilize Weave (8 XP) Once per session, cancel 1 SB from a failed cast.

5.2.2 Runekeeper (Rites)

Runekeepers bind themselves to a single Patron, learning structured Rites that produce reliable effects.

Requirements

- Thiasos (Familiar) (2 XP) – a token or bond with the Patron (see 9).
- Codex (4 XP) – a personal record of Rites.
- Patron Choice: Select one Patron (e.g., Traveler, Oath of Flame, Morag).

Invoking a Rite

- Action: 1 action.
- Cost: Mark +1 Obligation to your Patron.
- Effect: The Rite works as written.
- Push It: Once per scene, mark +1 Obligation to amplify the effect (+1 die or +1 Effect).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene, as 1 action, imbue a held item with +1 Melee and +1 Thematic skill (e.g., Navigation for Traveler). Lasts one scene. Mark +1 Obligation.

Runekeeper Talents

Efficient Invocation (4 XP) Reduce Obligation cost of one specific Low Rite by 1 (min 0).

Patron's Favor (8 XP) Once per session, ignore Obligation cost for a Rite.

Runebound Resilience (18 XP) Convert up to 2 Harm into Obligation instead of damage.

5.2.3 Invoker (Symbols)

Invokers do not bond permanently. They use consecrated Symbols to borrow a Patron's power through ritual.

Requirements

- Patron's Symbol (4 XP per Patron). One Symbol per Patron.
- No Thiasos or Codex required.

Ritual Invocation

- Time: Significant Time (DV in rounds). +1 round per DV.
- Cost: Always mark +1 Obligation to that Patron.
- Symbol Benefit: If the Symbol is openly displayed, reduce DV by 1 (min 1) and Obligation by 1 (min 0).
- No Symbol: +1 DV, +1 Obligation, and on a partial/failure, GM gains +1 extra SB.

Note: Obligation cost cannot be reduced below 1.

Crack the Seal

Resolve a known Rite instantly as 1 action. Set the Symbol to Compromised and mark +2 Obligation (+3 for High Rites). Restore the Symbol during downtime (Arcana test DV 3) or spend 1 XP.

Invoker Talents

Borrowed Grace (Free) Spend 1 Boon or 1 Fatigue to gain +1 Melee or +1 Thematic for one action. Mark +1 Obligation.

Crack Specialist (6 XP) Reduce Obligation cost of Crack the Seal by 1.

Symbol Resonance (4 XP) When using a Symbol, gain +1 die to the ritual roll.

5.2.4 Cantor (Songs)

Cantors perform Low Rites as songs, using voice and performance instead of Patron bonds.

Requirements

- Talent: Cantor's Path (8 XP) – see 9.
- Prerequisites: Lore 1+, Performance 2+, Presence 2+.

Performing a Song

- Action: 1 action to begin; resolves at start of next turn.
- Test: Lore + Performance (DV 2–3).
- Cost: Materials as listed. No Obligation on success.
- Corruption: Track a Corruption Clock (size = Spirit). Mark segments when you Push, perform a Resonant Rite, or when the GM spends SB on your occult activities.

Push It

Resolve immediately. Mark Fatigue 1, mark toward Corruption accumulation, and the GM gains 1 SB (social/Patron fallout).

Corruption Clock

When the clock fills, gain a thematic benefit and drawback from the last Patron whose Rite you performed. Then set your current Corruption segments to your Tier (minimum 1). The clock's maximum size remains equal to your Spirit. This means you are never completely free of Corruption; high-Tier Cantors always carry a remnant of past blooms.

Resonant Rites (Founding a Chorus)

A Resonant Rite is any Cantor song performed with dramatic intent, witnessed by at least 10 people, and dedicated to a specific Patron. The GM determines if a performance qualifies.

Chorus Cults (Optional)

If you perform a Resonant Rite before 10+ witnesses, you may found a Chorus. This grants a minor follower benefit (see 12), but you must mark Obligation to the cult's patron (the patron whose Resonant Rite was sung to form the cult) each session you use it. If neglected, the cult may fracture – your followers could splinter into a rival sect, spread false rumours, or ally with a Patron's enemy. Keep an eye on your followers; a neglected Chorus can become a serious problem.

Example minor follower benefits (work with your GM):

- Once per session, gain +1 die on a Performance roll or on a social roll where the crowd's opinion matters.

- Once per session, call upon the cult to provide a single piece of information from within a community where the cult has a presence.
- Once per session, gain +1 Boon when you perform a Song in a public space.

High Cantor and Instant Songs

The High Cantor talent (below) allows you to learn Standard Rites as songs and resolve them instantly (no delay). When you sing a Standard Rite as a Song, you may also Push it for additional effect (e.g., +1 Effect) at the usual cost of 1 Fatigue and marking a Corruption segment.

Cantor Talents

Resonant Performance (3 XP) Gain +1 die when performing for an audience of 5+.

Song Weaver (4 XP) Combine two compatible Songs for +1 Effect. Two Songs are compatible if they share a thematic tag (e.g., both affect healing, positioning, spirits) or if they are from the same Patron. The GM has final say. Sing both as a single action; resolve the Performance roll once; if successful, both effects occur with +1 Effect.

High Cantor (18 XP) Learn Standard Rites as songs; resolve instantly (as described above).

Steady Voice (2 XP) Passive. When you Push a Song, you may choose to mark 1 additional Fatigue instead of marking a Corruption segment (once per scene). You cannot use this talent if your Corruption clock is already full. This talent gives low-Spirit Cantors an emergency buffer at the cost of greater exhaustion. Requires: Cantor's Path.

Patron's Dedication (4 XP) Prerequisite: Cantor's Path.

Effect: You bind your voice to a single Patron (choose one when you take this talent). Your Corruption clock is always keyed to that Patron – it never resets to a different Patron's table when you bloom. Whenever you would gain Corruption from any source, you mark it on this same clock.

Downside (Rivalry): Singing a Song (Low or Standard Rite) of any other Patron is treacherous. When you do so, your Position for that song is worsened by one step (Dominant → Controlled, Controlled → Desperate). This penalty applies even if the song would otherwise be instant or free.

5.2.5 Summoner (Pact-Whisperer)

Summoners call and bind Outsiders for temporary aid.

Requirements

- Talent: Pact-Whisperer (2 XP) – see 9.
- Lesser Pactwright (2 XP) for Cap 1 spirits; Greater Pactwright (4 XP) for Cap 3.

Core Mechanics

- Call (1 action): Manifest a spirit at Near range.
- Bind: Spend 1 Boon or mark 1 Fatigue.
- Leash Capacity: Cap + Spirit segments.
- Tick Leash: Spirit takes harm, commanded against nature, crosses a [WARD], or you split focus.
- Departure: When Leash fills, spirit acts once according to its nature, then departs (or turns hostile at GM discretion).

Spirit Whims Table (When the Spirit Acts on Its Own)

When the Leash fills or the spirit acts independently, the GM may choose (or roll) from this table to make the action interesting – not just damage.

d6 Spirit's Independent Action
1	Reveal a Secret: The spirit blurts out a hidden fact about a PC or NPC – true, embarrassing, or da
2	Break Something: The spirit shatters a mundane object (a lantern, a rope bridge, a crucial tool).
3	Lead Astray: The spirit moves a short distance and creates a false trail, forcing the party to waste ti
4	Call for Help: The spirit summons a minor ally (a rat swarm, a will-o'-wisp, a lesser elemental).
5	Curse a PC: The spirit leaves a lingering mark (–1 die on one skill until the next sunrise).
6	Bargain: The spirit offers a deal: “Release me now, and I’ll tell you where the treasure is hidden.”

Boon Finesse

Once per round, spend 1 Boon to clear 1 Leash tick.

Summoner Talents

Spirit Synergy (4 XP) When commanding two spirits, reduce each Leash by 1.

Spirit Link (10 XP) Spirits act on your turn; commands are free actions.

True Name Keeper (15 XP) Call any previously encountered spirit by true name; reduce Leash Capacity by 2.

5.3 Universal Mechanics

5.3.1 Obligation Capacity

A character's Obligation Capacity equals Spirit + Presence. Track total Obligation segments across all Patrons.

- Exceeding Capacity: For each segment above Capacity, mark 1 Fatigue. Cannot invoke Rites until Obligation is reduced.
- Resolution: Reduce Obligation through downtime service, Patron tasks, or ritual cleansing.

Player guidance: You track your own Obligation (see Player-Managed Modules, 2.3). When a Patron intrudes (e.g., a demand or omen), treat it as a plot hook, not a penalty. The Patron is offering you a story.

Components as Devotion

Even if you already have a Patron's Symbol, Codex, or Thiasos, voluntarily acquiring rare components for a ritual shows dedication. Use this rule of thumb:

- Ritual with no components (just Symbol/Codex): Normal DV, normal Obligation cost.
- Ritual with common components (herbs, salt, a candle): Reduce Obligation by 1 (minimum 0).
- Ritual with rare or dangerous components (a phoenix feather, a drop of troll blood, a whispered secret): Reduce DV by 1 and clear 1 segment of existing Obligation to that Patron (once per session max).

- Ritual with a truly legendary component (the crown of a dead king, a tear from a goddess): The Patron may waive all Obligation for that ritual – and even grant a free Boon.

This turns component hunting into adventure hooks and gives you a meaningful choice: use the easy, costly path or invest legwork to earn the Patron’s favor.

5.3.2 Backlash

Any magical roll can generate backlash. The GM spends Story Beats (SB) to introduce complications tied to the element or Patron involved.

Result	Backlash Severity
Partial	Minor (e.g., Position -1, Fatigue 1, minor complication)
Miss	Major (e.g., Harm 1, condition, significant complication)
Critical failure (many 1s)	Catastrophic (e.g., Patron intervention, scene shift)

Backlash Severity by Position

Position	Backlash Severity on Partial/Miss
Dominant	Minor – one SB complication, manageable cost.
Controlled	Moderate – 1–2 SB complication, temporary setback.
Desperate	Severe – 2–3 SB complication, lasting consequences or Harm.

Elemental Backlash Examples

- Fire: Burns, flares, smoke.
- Water: Slick footing, gear corrosion, flooding.
- Earth: Tremors, encumbrance, binding roots.
- Air: Dispersal, deafening gusts, thrown debris.
- Fate: Opportunities close, predictions become set.
- Life: Uncontrolled growth, fever, exhaustion.
- Luck: Fortunes reverse at the worst moment.
- Death/Dreams: Whispers, numbness, portents.

5.3.3 DV by Spell Scope

Use this table as a quick reference when the GM asks for a DV for a new spell:

Scope	Example	DV
Cantrip	Light a candle, sense magic	2
Combat	Fire bolt, force shield	3
Ritual (small)	Find a lost object, speak with a spirit	4
Ritual (large)	Summon a storm, teleport across a region	5+
Epic	Raise a dead army, rewrite a law of reality	6+ (with quest)

When in Doubt

A spell's power is not measured by how many dice it rolls, but by how much it changes the story. Use this rule of thumb:

- Minor change (1 TAG): The effect affects only yourself or a single object. Examples: Light, [HEAL], Veil (self only). DV 2–3.
- Moderate change (2 TAGS): The spell affects a whole zone, creates a significant advantage, or bypasses a notable obstacle. Examples: Area + Force, Barrier across a doorway. DV 3–4.
- Major change (3+ TAGS): The spell rewrites the situation, solves a major problem outright, or introduces a new faction/ally/threat. Examples: Teleport across a city, Summon a Cap 3 spirit, Transform a person into a beast. DV 5+ and often a ritual.

If your description would skip over a scene (“I teleport us past the entire fortress”), that’s a major change – require components, a clock, or a steep cost. If it would only add flavour (“I make my eyes glow red”), that’s free. Let the fiction guide the DV, not a pre-computed formula.

5.3.4 Example: Accepting a Cost – The Hard Choice

When a magical roll generates SB, the GM may offer you a choice instead of a flat consequence.

5.3.4.0.1 Example: You cast a ritual to divine an enemy’s location. The roll generates 2 SB. The GM says:

“The vision comes clearly – but your Patron’s symbol glows hot on your hand. You can have the vision for free, or you can let the spell fizzle and keep your Obligation unchanged. If you accept the vision, mark +2 Obligation and your Patron will demand a task next session. What do you choose?”

This turns a success into a narrative fork. Embrace it – the Patron’s task will be an adventure hook.

5.4 Free Casting (TAGS System)

Some casters shape raw forces through shared arcane grammar known as TAGS. Construct a spell at the table using a short phrase of TAGS.

5.4.1 Spell Structure

Intent + Target + Tags = effect. Example: “I unleash Burning • Area • Force against the marauders.”

5.4.2 Base Difficulty Value (DV)

$$DV = 1 + \text{number of TAGS}$$

Dangerous TAGS (Teleportation, Transformation, Domination) add +2 DV instead of +1.

5.4.3 Casting Roll

Roll Wits + Arcana (or similar). Success = spell works. Failure or any 1 = Backlash.

5.4.4 Backlash for Free Casters

Choose one:

- Harm 2 (Arcane)
- +2 Fatigue
- Corruption +1
- Catastrophic side effect (GM describes)

If the spell includes a “Dangerous” TAG, Backlash triggers on mixed results as well.

5.4.5 TAG Library (Abridged)

Table 5.1: Common TAGS

TAG Category	Examples
Elemental	Burning, Freezing, Storm, Stone, Wave, Wind
Force	Force, Area, Strike, Wall, Bind, Dispel
Mind & Veil	Veil, Scry, Memory, Command, Fear
Life & Body	[HEAL], Purify, Strengthen, Waken, Beast
Space & Motion (dangerous, +2 DV)	Fold, Gate, Gravity
Creation & Trans- formation (danger- ous, +2 DV)	Create, Summon, Transmute, Animate

Note: Leap (short-range teleport) is considered a dangerous TAG; it adds +2 DV. The SB cost should be less dramatic than [TELEPORT] or [GATE], though.

5.4.6 Magic in Social Situations

Using magic socially carries additional risks:

- Discretion: Hidden casting may require a Stealth or Subterfuge test.
- Consent: Affecting minds without permission is often considered a crime or taboo.
- Reputation: Known magic users may face distrust or fear.
- Legal Consequences: Many cities restrict magic use without a license.

5.5 Magical Item Creation

Creating permanent magical items is a complex, campaign-level endeavor. See the full rules in the Game Master’s Guide. In brief:

- Requires high magical and craft skills (Arcana 3+, Craft 2+).
- Costs XP (minimum 5 XP for Tier I) and rare materials.
- Takes weeks or months of downtime.
- Risk of backlash or permanent curse on failure.

For temporary enchantments, use the Patron’s Gift (5.2.2) or Borrowed Grace (5.2.3).

5.6 Optional Magic Expansions

The following systems are optional and may be introduced by the GM.

Psionics (Optional)

Psionics represents mental power drawn from within — no Patron, no Symbol, no debt. It is meant to feel alien, even to other magic-users. Different cultures have varying opinions (see the Grey Wanderer's Grimoire for examples), but psions are generally viewed with suspicion or fear.

Example Arts: Telekinesis, Telepathy, Clairvoyance, Biofeedback, Astral Projection, Psychic Assault, Mind Shield, Empathic Manipulation, Precognition.

Warning: Psionics generates Story Beats (SB) quickly. The GM is encouraged to spend these SB on social complications — suspicion, hostile glances, a Chain-Lantern investigation, or a neighbor locking their door. Mental backlash is common, but the deepest cost is always trust.

Each use costs Mental Strain. Overflow converts to normal Fatigue or Harm. Many societies distrust mind-readers; a psion is always unwitnessed, and therefore outside the ledger.

Witchcraft (Optional)

Witchcraft is magic practiced through patron-bound Orders. Witches suffer — 1 die in consecrated spaces and must navigate the Curse of the Unanointed — the world's refusal to witness their labor.

Ritual Magic (Weave & Cast): Two-step process, each roll generates SB.

Example Orders:

- Mab, Queen of Courts: Glamour, bargains, fae oaths. Risk — Glamour-Bloom (lose a memory for +1 Effect).
- Aveh, The Rider: Identity shedding. Risk — Unface (your features blur).
- Morag, The Hag: Hidden costs and prophecy. Risk — Mirecloth (sacrifice identity for truth).

Identity Cost: Every use marks who you are. The cost is memory, identity, or reputation.

Chapter 6

Healing: Mending Flesh and Spirit

The Grey Wanderer's Wisdom

“The [HEAL] tag closes small wounds and eases exhaustion. To knit broken bones or purge a curse, you need greater power—and greater risk.”

In Fate's Edge, injuries are not mere hit points. They are narrative weights: a fractured leg forces hard choices; a festering wound breeds desperation. Healing magic exists, but it is never cheap, never perfectly safe, and always part of the story.

This chapter explains how your character recovers from the two kinds of damage—Fatigue and Harm—using magic, medicine, rest, and willpower.

6.1 The Two Faces of Injury

Type	What It Represents	How It Heals (Fastest)
Fatigue	Exhaustion, minor cuts, bruises, winded	[HEAL] cantrip, short rest, a hot meal
Harm	Broken bones, deep wounds, poisoning, curses	Rest + medicine, powerful magic, time

6.1.0.0.1 Fatigue is your character's ability to keep going. It accumulates from physical exertion, missed sleep, harsh weather, and the strain of magic. Fatigue is common and easy to remove.

6.1.0.0.2 Harm is serious injury. Each level of Harm (1, 2, or 3) imposes a –1 die penalty on most actions. Harm is rare and expensive to heal. When you take Harm, the world takes notice.

6.2 Recovering Fatigue – The Easy Work

Fatigue clears quickly with rest, food, or a minor magical touch.

6.2.1 Rest and Recovery

- Short rest (one hour): Remove 2 Fatigue. You must be able to sit, breathe, and drink water. No roll required.

- Full night's rest (8 hours in safety): Remove all Fatigue. If you are in a dangerous or exposed place, the GM may reduce this to 2 Fatigue instead.
- Warm meal and comfort: The first rest after a hot meal removes an additional 1 Fatigue (stacks with the above).

6.2.2 The [HEAL] Cantrip

The [HEAL] tag (typically from the Life element or a Patron of healing) removes Fatigue quickly.

[HEAL] Cantrip

Tags:	[HEAL]
DV:	2
Action:	1 action
Range:	Touch
Effect:	Remove 1 Fatigue from yourself or a willing creature you touch.
Backlash:	None. The GM may still spend Story Beats (from any 1s on the roll) to add minor flavour

This cantrip works for any magical tradition that can access Life or a healing Patron (e.g., Free Caster, Runekeeper of Oath of Flame, Cantor with healing songs).

6.2.2.0.1 Example: Lyra uses [HEAL] on Kael after a fight. She rolls 5d10 (Spirit + Medicine), gets 3 successes vs DV 2 – a Clean Success. Kael clears 1 Fatigue. No complication.

6.3 Healing Harm – The Hard Work

Restoring a level of Harm (e.g., from Harm 2 to 1, or Harm 1 to 0) requires significant effort – either mundane medical care over time or powerful magic that comes with risk.

6.3.1 Mundane Healing

- First Aid (Wits + Medicine, DV 3): Stabilise a dying creature (prevent Harm from worsening). Does not heal existing Harm. Takes 1 action.
- Treatment (downtime, safe haven): Requires a healer's kit and at least one day of rest. Restores 1 Harm per full day of care. A successful Medicine roll (DV 3) can reduce required days by half (minimum 1 day).
- Surgery or magical cleansing (serious injury): For Harm 3 or cursed wounds, the GM may require a full scene or a quest component (rare herbs, a spirit's favour).

6.3.2 Magical Healing of Harm

To heal Harm with a spell, you must meet two conditions:

1. Include the [HEAL] tag.
2. Include at least one other appropriate tag based on the injury:
 - [PURIFY] – poison, disease, corruption
 - [STRENGTHEN] – broken bones, torn muscles
 - [CLEANSE] – curses, magical wounds, shadow-damage

The base DV for healing Harm is 1 + number of tags. Healing Harm also adds a +2 DV surcharge. Examples:

Injury	Tags	Base DV	+2 Surcharge	Final DV
Shallow cut (Harm 1)	[HEAL]	2	+2	4
Poisoned wound (Harm 1)	[HEAL] [PURIFY]	3	+2	5
Broken arm (Harm 2)	[HEAL] [STRENGTHEN]	3	+2	5

The GM may increase DV further for legendary wounds (e.g., a dragon’s claw tears your spirit – [HEAL] [CLEANSE] + a ritual requiring significant time).

6.3.3 Ritual Healing

Healing Harm 2 or Harm 3 often requires a ritual, not a single action. Rituals take at least 10 minutes (or longer per the GM). During a ritual, interruptions (combat, loud noises, disbelief) can cause the healing to fail or backfire.

Many magical paths have specific healing rites:

- Runekeeper (Oath of Flame & Light): Lay on Hands (Low Rite) heals Fatigue; Cleansing Light (Standard Rite) can remove poison or downgrade Harm at the cost of Obligation (see 5).
- Cantor: Healing songs (e.g., Hymn of Restoration) require a Performance roll. On a Partial, the wound heals but the Cantor marks Corruption (see 5).
- Witch (Hearth craft): Hedge Gifts like Steady Hand (remove Fatigue) and Knot of Mercy (remove a Condition) are roll-free but limited per scene/session (see 5).
- Invoker: Ritual healing with a Patron’s Symbol is slow but has reduced backlash. Crack the Seal for emergency healing – at double Obligation cost (see 5).
- Summoner: Can bargain with a spirit to transfer wounds (e.g., a spirit of sacrifice takes your Harm). Tick the Leash clock each time (see 5).

6.4 The Risk of Magic – Story Beats and Backlash

Whenever you cast a healing spell (especially to heal Harm), any 1s you roll generate Story Beats (SB) for the GM. The GM will spend those SB to introduce complications – the healing works, but the world pushes back.

6.4.0.0.1 What complications look like:

- Minor (1 SB): The wound leaves a visible scar. The patient feels an odd craving (honey, raw meat, silence). A faint magical residue lingers.
- Moderate (2 SB): A minor spirit or “echo” of the injury appears – it watches the patient for a scene. A Patron sends a dream: “You owe me.”
- Serious (3 SB): The healing draws attention from a rival, a witch-hunter, or a territorial nature spirit. The patient gains a thematic Condition (e.g., Phantom Pain, –1 die on rolls involving that limb until they perform a small ritual).
- Major (4+ SB): Reality warps briefly – a corpse nearby twitches; the patient forgets something precious; the healer’s own shadow moves on its own for a day.

These complications do not cancel the healing. They are narrative gifts – hooks for future scenes, reminders that power has a price.

GM's Role

Your GM uses Story Beats to make healing dramatic, not to punish you. Embrace the complications. A scar is a story. A Patron's demand is an adventure. A haunted shadow is a future ally (or enemy). Talk to your GM about the kinds of complications you find interesting – body horror, social fallout, ominous omens, or debts to mysterious powers.

6.5 Natural Recovery – When Magic Fails

If you have no access to magic or medicine, your body still heals – slowly.

- Per day of complete rest (no strenuous activity): Remove 1 Fatigue automatically. If you also have food, water, and shelter, remove 2 Fatigue.
- Per week of rest (downtime): Remove 1 level of Harm. A successful Medicine roll (Wits + Medicine, DV 3) at the start of the week reduces the required time to 3 days per Harm level.
- Neglected injuries: If you continue to adventure while at Harm 2 or Harm 3 without any healing, the GM may advance a Worsening Condition clock. When it fills, your injury becomes permanent (a limp, a weakened arm, etc.) or requires extraordinary magic to fix.

6.6 Healing by Magical Tradition – Quick Reference

Path	Fatigue Healing	Harm Healing
Free Caster	[HEAL] cantrip (DV 2)	[HEAL] + other tag, +2 DV, risk backlash (see 6.3.2)
Runekeeper	Low Rite (e.g., Lay on Hands)	Standard Rite, costs Obligation, may Push (see 6.3.2)
Invoker	Ritual [HEAL] (slow)	Ritual + Symbol, reduce DV with rare comp (see 6.3.2)
Cantor	Healing Song (Performance roll)	Song + Push (marks Corruption), requires Harm 1
Witch (Hearth)	Hedge Gift: Steady Hand (no roll, 1/scene)	Hedge Gift: Knot of Mercy (once/session, requires Harm 1)
Summoner	Spirit bargain (costs Leash ticks)	Transfer wound to spirit (costs Leash, may also require Harm 1)
No magic	Short/long rest	Downtime + Medicine roll

6.7 Summary: Healing at a Glance

6.7.1 Healing Tags Reference

The following tags are commonly used in healing magic. Each adds to the spell's DV as shown.

Tag	Effect	DV Modifier
[HEAL]	Removes 1 Fatigue	+0 (base)
[PURIFY]	Neutralises poison or disease	+1
[STRENGTHEN]	Mends broken bones or torn muscles	+1
[CLEANSE]	Removes curses or magical wounds	+1
[REGENERATE]	Restores 1 Harm (requires another healing tag)	+2

[REGENERATE] cannot be used alone; it must be paired with another healing tag (e.g., [HEAL] [REGENERATE] to restore 1 Harm). The total DV is calculated as described in 6.3.2.

What You Want
How to Get It

Clear 1 Fatigue (fast)
 [HEAL] cantrip (DV 2, 1 action) or short rest (1 hour).
 Clear all Fatigue
 Full night's rest in safety.
 Heal 1 Harm (mundane)
 A week of rest, or 1 day with Medicine roll (DV 3) and a healer's kit.
 Heal 1 Harm (magic)
 [HEAL]+other tag, +2 DV surcharge (minimum DV 4). Accept possible complications from SB.
 Heal 2+ Harm (magic)
 High DV (5+), often a ritual. Expect significant cost (Obligation, Corruption, quest).
 Remove a Condition
Knot of Mercy (Hedge Gift), Lay on Hands (if Condition is curse/disease), or a Patron's Rite (see 5).

6.7.2 Optional Rule: Serious Wounds

When a character takes Harm 3 (the third box of Harm), the table may opt to replace that injury with a Serious Wound — a lasting debility that cannot be healed by ordinary magic.

- The character marks the Harm 3 box as usual.
- Instead of being incapacitated (Harm 3's default effect), they gain one Serious Wound from the table below (or a custom wound agreed with the GM).
- Each Serious Wound imposes a 1 die penalty on all rolls affected by that wound (GM's discretion, but typically broad: physical wounds affect Body rolls; mental wounds affect Wits or Spirit).
- A character can sustain up to Body Serious Wounds. If they would gain another beyond that limit, they are incapacitated as per standard Harm 3.
- Serious Wounds heal only through significant downtime (a full week of rest per wound) or major magic (a quest-level ritual). Mundane healing and [HEAL] have no effect.

6.7.2.0.1 Serious Wound Table (d10)

d10	Wound
1	Shattered Limb: 1 die to all physical actions (Body rolls).
2	Cracked Skull: 1 die to all mental actions (Wits rolls).
3	Torn Sinew: 1 die to melee attacks and athletics.
4	Gut Wound: 1 die to endurance and resistance tests.
5	Spinal Shock: 1 die to all movement and agility actions.
6	Broken Spirit: 1 die to all social actions (Presence rolls).
7	Shattered Hand: 1 die to any action requiring fine manipulation (craft, lockpicking, etc.).
8	Collapsed Lung: 1 die to all actions requiring sustained breath (sprinting, chanting).
9	Festering Curse: 1 die to all magical actions (Arcana, Ritual).
10	The Grey Wanderer's Choice: The GM invents a unique wound tied to the fiction (e.g., " Your sh ").

Example: Kael takes Harm 3 from a dragon's claw. The group agrees to use Serious Wounds. He rolls a 4 on the table: “Gut Wound”. He now suffers 1 die on Endurance tests until he rests for a week or finds a priest to perform a costly healing rite. He can take up to Body 2 more Serious Wounds before falling unconscious.

6.8 Final Advice for Players

- Don’t hoard your healer’s resources. Fatigue is cheap to heal; use [HEAL] often. Save big magic for when someone is at Harm 2 or unconscious.
- Embrace the scars. A permanent mark from a healing complication is a badge of survival. Work with your GM to make it meaningful.
- Ambient healing is a thing. After a fight, take a short rest. The GM will usually allow it unless you are under active pursuit.
- Protect your healer. If the only person with [HEAL] goes down, your party’s recovery slows to a crawl.
- Talk about tone. In Session Zero (see 1), discuss how gruesome or light you want healing complications to be. Some tables love body horror; others prefer comedic side-effects.

The blade cuts. The spell mends. But the scar remains – and that scar is your story.

Chapter 7

Character Advancement and Capabilities

Philosophy of Growth

Every XP spent is a choice about who your character becomes – invest in yourself, your network, or your legacy.

Your character is not just a collection of numbers; they are a living story. When you spend XP on an Attribute, you are saying “I become stronger, smarter, more resilient.” When you invest in a Follower or an Asset, you are saying “I build relationships and influence that outlast me.” When you buy a Talent, you are saying “This is my signature, my unique edge.”

There is no single “correct” way to grow. A lone duelist (see 8.4) might pour everything into personal skill; a merchant prince might build a trading empire. Both are valid. The question is: what kind of story do you want to tell?

Why This Chapter Matters

In this game, growth is not just about numbers — it is about deciding who your character becomes. Advancement through Experience Points (XP) lets you shape your capabilities, influence, and legacy in the world. Every XP choice is a statement about your character’s priorities and the mark they leave behind.

Your capabilities are built on four core Attributes and a set of specialized Skills. This chapter explains how they work together, what advancement looks like in play, and offers player-facing tips for making satisfying choices.

7.1 Core Attributes

Attributes represent your character’s fundamental capabilities. Each is rated from 1 to 5; higher numbers mean greater potential in that area.

7.1.1 Body

Physical strength, endurance, coordination, and health.

- Used for: melee combat, athletics, endurance tests, physical labor.
- Typical applications: lifting, running, climbing, fighting, resisting physical harm.

- Associated skills: Athletics, Brawl, Melee, Endurance (see 7.2).

Rating guide:

- 1: Average person; some physical activity.
- 2: Fit; trains or works physically on a regular basis.
- 3: Athlete or soldier; excellent condition.
- 4: Exceptional athlete; near peak human.
- 5: Peak human capability; legendary strength and stamina.

7.1.2 Wits

Mental acuity, perception, quick thinking, and problem-solving.

- Used for: investigation, perception, tactics, snap decisions.
- Typical applications: spotting details, solving puzzles, planning, reacting quickly.
- Associated skills: Investigation, Tactics, Lore, Survival (see 7.2).

Rating guide:

- 1: Average awareness; sometimes misses important cues.
- 2: Observant; notices most relevant details.
- 3: Sharp-minded; quick to spot patterns.
- 4: Exceptionally perceptive; rarely surprised.
- 5: Almost uncanny awareness; sees connections others miss.

7.1.3 Spirit

Willpower, intuition, mental resilience, and connection to intangible forces.

- Used for: resisting mental effects, intuition, magical aptitude, persistence.
- Typical applications: resisting fear, sensing danger, channeling magic, enduring hardship.
- Associated skills: Arcana, Ritual (for magic users), Endurance, Insight.

Rating guide:

- 1: Average willpower; somewhat suggestible.
- 2: Strong-minded; resists ordinary pressure.
- 3: Very determined; hard to intimidate.
- 4: Exceptional will; can inspire others.
- 5: Iron will; nearly unshakeable resolve.

7.1.4 Presence

Charisma, social influence, appearance, and force of personality.

- Used for: social interactions, leadership, persuasion, intimidation.
- Typical applications: negotiating, leading, charming, commanding attention.
- Associated skills: Sway, Command, Performance, Deception (see 7.2).

Rating guide:

- 1: Average presence; does not particularly stand out.
- 2: Noticeable; leaves a mild impression.

- 3: Charismatic; naturally influential.
- 4: Commanding; people listen when you speak.
- 5: Magnetic; can sway crowds and redefine the mood of a room.

7.2 Skill System

Skills represent specialized training and expertise. In play, you combine an Attribute with a relevant Skill to form your dice pool (see 2).

7.2.1 Skill Ratings

Rating	Description
0	Untrained — no formal experience
1	Novice — basic understanding
2	Competent — reliable and capable
3	Professional — expert in the field
4	Master — renowned specialist
5	Grand Master — legendary skill

7.2.2 Skill Categories

Below are the eighteen core skills, grouped by theme. Your table may rename or reskin these, but the roles remain similar.

7.2.2.0.1 Combat Skills

- Melee: swords, axes, close-quarters weapons.
- Ranged: bows, crossbows, thrown weapons, firearms (if present).
- Brawl: unarmed combat, grappling, improvised fighting.
- Tactics: battlefield strategy, unit coordination, ambush planning.

7.2.2.0.2 Physical Skills

- Athletics: running, climbing, jumping, swimming.
- Stealth: moving unseen, hiding, blending into shadows.
- Endurance: resisting fatigue, harsh weather, poison, disease.
- Craft: building, repairing, creating tools, art, or structures.
- Survival: tracking, foraging, predicting weather, navigating wilderness, animal handling (Nature folded into this skill).

7.2.2.0.3 Social Skills

- Sway: persuasion, negotiation, charm.
- Command: leadership, intimidation, issuing orders.
- Deception: lying, bluffing, misdirection.
- Performance: entertainment, oration, acting, musical display (used by Cantors for Songs).
- Insight: reading emotions, detecting lies, understanding motives (covers social observation and “reading” people).

7.2.2.0.4 Knowledge Skills

- Lore: history, culture, religion, customs, general knowledge (cities, civilizations, scholarly topics).

- Investigation: research, deduction, analysis of clues (covers finding and interpreting evidence).
- Medicine: healing, anatomy, first aid, treatment.

7.2.2.0.5 Magic Skills

- Arcana: magic theory, rituals (identification), mystical phenomena, free casting (TAGS system), counter-spelling.
- Ritual: performing rites, invocations, exorcisms, consecrations – used by Runekeepers, Invokers, Cantors, and Summoners for active magical workings.

Optional Module – Psionics: If your table uses the Psionics expansion (see The Grey Wanderer's Grimoire), a separate Psionics skill is added. It is not part of the core skill list and is used for telepathy, telekinesis, clairvoyance, etc.

7.3 Building Dice Pools

Your dice pool for any action is:

$$\text{Dice Pool} = \text{Attribute} + \text{Skill}.$$

You roll that many d10s and interpret the results according to the core rules (see 2).

7.3.1 Choosing the Right Combination

The same fictional action can often be approached with different Attribute + Skill pairs, depending on how your character does it. The GM has final say, but the default is to use the most obvious pairing (e.g., Body + Melee for a straightforward sword swing). Creative alternatives are encouraged when they fit the fiction.

- Climbing a wall:
 - Body + Athletics: sheer strength and stamina.
 - Wits + Athletics: clever route-finding and leverage.
 - Spirit + Athletics: grim determination against fear or pain.
- Persuading a guard:
 - Presence + Sway: charm and personality.
 - Wits + Sway: logical, well-constructed arguments.
 - Spirit + Sway: conviction that burns through doubt.
- Investigating a crime scene:
 - Wits + Investigation: methodical observation and deduction.
 - Spirit + Investigation: intuitive leaps and gut feelings.
 - Presence + Investigation: getting witnesses to open up.

7.3.2 Creative Combinations

With your GM's agreement, you can justify unusual combinations that fit the fiction. The table below offers common alternatives, but the GM may allow others based on the scene.

Intended Action	Standard Pair	Alternative Pairs (Example)
Recall a combat drill	Wits + Lore	Body + Lore (muscle memory)
Soothe a patient	Presence + Medicine	Spirit + Medicine (laying on hands)
Forge a masterwork	Wits + Craft	Spirit + Craft (inspired artistry)
Read weather signs	Wits + Survival	Spirit + Survival (omen-sense)
Feint in a duel	Wits + Melee	Presence + Melee (intimidation feint)
Track a spirit	Wits + Survival	Spirit + Lore (follow its legend)
Bribe a guard	Presence + Sway	Wits + Streetwise (know the right price)

7.3.3 GM Guidance for Creative Pairs

- Ask “How?” – The player must describe how they use that Attribute and Skill together.
- Maintain Position – A creative pair does not automatically improve Position or reduce DV. It just changes the dice pool.
- Consistency – If you allow Spirit + Craft for visionary work, allow it again in similar circumstances.
- No Double Dipping – The player cannot swap both Attribute and Skill to max out a single stat; the combination must still respect the fiction.

7.3.4 When to Roll (and When Not To)

Not every action requires a roll. The GM should call for a roll when:

1. The outcome is uncertain.
2. Failure would meaningfully change the situation.
3. The action is significant (not routine).

For routine actions with no real risk, the group can simply agree that you succeed. Example: climbing a knotted rope in calm weather – no roll. Climbing the same rope while goblins shoot arrows – roll.

7.3.5 Assistance and Teamwork

When multiple characters contribute to the same action:

- Assistance: One character is primary; up to three others add +1 die each by describing how they help (e.g., “I hold the ladder steady”).
- Cooperation: Several characters each roll; the group succeeds or fails based on combined results (e.g., all must sneak past a patrol).
- Complementary: Different skills cover different parts of a larger task (e.g., one distracts a guard, another picks the lock).

Example: A ranger scales an ice wall using Wits + Athletics to find the safest holds, then switches to Body + Athletics to muscle over the lip. The fiction guides which combination fits each moment.

7.3.6 Selling the Action – Intricate Description

You are always welcome to state your action plainly. But when you take a moment to sell it – to invest in the fiction, reveal what your character cares about, or show why this moment matters – the GM may reward you with a mechanical edge. This is about roleplay investment, not word count.

- Basic description: “I attack the goblin with my sword.” No bonus.
- Tactical description: Use the environment, positioning, or a clever tactic. “I feint high, then drive my shoulder into the goblin’s shield, shoving it aside to open its flank.” The GM may or may not upgrade your Position by one step (e.g., Controlled → Dominant) for this roll.
- Character-driven description: Reveal a stake, a bond, a fear, or a hard choice. One heartfelt sentence counts more than a paragraph of adjectives.
 - Example: “I think of my mother, who died because I wasn’t brave enough to fight. I won’t let that happen again. I plant my feet and dare the goblin to come through me.”

The GM may grant a larger benefit – e.g., upgrade Position and bank a Boon you can use later, or upgrade Effect by one step.

What Counts (and What Doesn’t)

Counts:

- Stating a clear stake: “If I fail this lockpick, my sister doesn’t eat.”
- Invoking a bond mid-action: “I owe Marcus my life. I’m not letting him face this alone.”
- Revealing a fear or hope tied to the roll: “I’m terrified of fire, but I grab the burning beam – because the children are behind me.”
- Making a hard choice visible: “I could run, but I don’t. Running is what got me exiled.”

Does not count:

- Piling on adjectives (“gleaming,” “mighty,” “ancient”) without stakes.
- Passive sensory laundry lists (“the cold wind, the wet stones, the dim light”).
- Repeating the same florid description for every roll.

Guidelines for the GM

- No penalty for plain speech. Never punish a player who is tired, shy, or simply prefers quick resolution. The bonus is a gift, not a tax.
- Be consistent. Reward genuine investment, not vocabulary. A quiet player who delivers one heartfelt sentence deserves the bonus as much as an eloquent storyteller.
- The bonus should fit the fiction. A desperate, reckless action described with real stakes might upgrade Effect but worsen Position – let the mechanics mirror the emotion.
- Invite quiet players. Ask leading questions: “What’s at stake for your character right now?” or “What are you afraid will happen if you fail?” Gentle prompts help shy players find their moment.
- Group “selling.” If the whole table contributes to describing a group action (a coordinated ambush, a joint ritual), grant the bonus to the primary roller or give each participant a small benefit.

Example

Basic: “I sneak past the sentry.” (No bonus, roll as normal.)

Selling it (tactical): “I wait for the wind to rattle the shutters, then pad across the wet cobblestones – heel-toe, heel-toe – keeping the stack of barrels between me and the sentry’s gaze.” The GM nods: “Great. Because you’re using the wind and the barrels, roll at Dominant Position.”

Selling it (character-driven): “My little brother is in that camp. I’ve hidden from every fight since we left home – but not this time. I creep forward, not quiet anymore, because he needs to know someone came for him.” The GM: “That’s the heart of it. Roll at Dominant Position, and I’ll bank a Story Beat to make his reaction matter.”

Remember: The dice still decide success or failure. But a well-told action makes the story richer – and earns you an edge when the dice fall.

7.4 Earning Experience Points

XP represents learning through action. You gain it by engaging meaningfully with the world: overcoming challenges, taking risks, making hard choices, and leaning into your character's story.

7.4.1 Session Breakdown

At the end of each session, XP is awarded based on what happened at the table. A typical breakdown might look like:

- Base Participation: +2 XP for attending and contributing.
- Major Objectives: +2–4 XP for completing significant story goals.
- Discoveries: +1–2 XP for uncovering important lore, locations, or secrets.
- Hard Choices: +1–2 XP for making difficult moral or strategic decisions.
- Story Engagement: +1–3 XP for embracing complications and twists.
- Personal Goals: +1–2 XP for pursuing your character's individual storylines.

Example: At the end of a session, the party rogue gains:

- +2 XP for participation,
- +2 XP for helping retrieve a cursed artifact,
- +1 XP for pushing a personal rivalry subplot.

Total: 5 XP.

7.4.2 Game Pace Options

You and your GM can decide how quickly characters advance, matching the tone you want:

Mode	XP / Session	Tone
Gritty	4–6	Hard choices, slow growth
Standard	6–10	Balanced progression
Epic	10–14	Heroic, rapid development

Player Tip: If you want a sweeping, mythic tale, ask for an Epic pace. If you want advancement to feel hard-won, lean toward Gritty.

7.4.3 Arc Completion Bonus

When a major story arc finishes (typically 3–6 sessions), everyone gains an additional +8–12 XP. One player may receive +2 XP more for a particularly memorable contribution. This rewards the story as a whole, not just individual rolls.

Boons vs. XP

You may convert 2 Boons → 1 XP (once per session, max 2 XP per session via conversion).

But: Spending Boons during play is almost always more fun. A re-rolled failure, an improved Position, or an activated Asset creates a memorable moment. Hoarding Boons for XP conversion starves the table of drama. Spend freely; the XP will come from your adventures.

7.5 Spending Experience Points

XP is your currency for growth. You can invest it in three broad areas:

1. Personal Improvement (Attributes and Skills)
2. Special Abilities (Talents, magic, unique tricks)
3. Resources and Influence (Assets, followers, organizations)

Think of these as three pillars: what you can do, what makes you unique, and what you own or command.

7.5.1 Personal Improvement

Attributes

Attributes are expensive but powerful. The cost to raise an Attribute is:

$$\text{XP Cost} = 3 \times \text{new rating}.$$

Examples:

- Raising Body from 2 to 3 costs $3 \times 3 = 9$ XP.
- Raising Spirit from 4 to 5 costs $3 \times 5 = 15$ XP.

Attribute increases usually require downtime equal to the new rating in days, spent training, reflecting, or transforming yourself (see 7.7).

Skills

Skills are cheaper and represent focused practice. The cost is:

$$\text{XP Cost} = 2 \times \text{new level}.$$

Examples:

- Lore 1 $\rightarrow$ 2 costs $2 \times 2 = 4$ XP.
- Melee 3 $\rightarrow$ 4 costs $2 \times 4 = 8$ XP.

Skill increases typically require downtime equal to the new level in days.

Example: Kara wants to improve her swordsmanship (Melee) from 2 to 3. She saves 6 XP and spends three in-game days training with her mentor. This training becomes part of the story, not just a line on a sheet.

7.5.2 Special Abilities

Special abilities are unique moves, talents, or tricks that define your style.

General Abilities (4–8 XP) Universal benefits, like improved recovery, bonus dice in a common situation, or a signature combat technique. Example: “Quick Recovery” — heal 1 extra Harm when you rest.

Cultural Abilities (variable) Abilities tied to heritage or background. They may require specific fictional positioning (see 14.19.1). Example: “Stone Sense” — an instinctive feel for stonework and tunnels.

Advanced Abilities (12+ XP) High-impact features available at higher tiers, often with strong narrative hooks or prerequisites (see 7.8). Example: “Master Diplomat” — once per session, you can reroll or soften the outcome of a failed major negotiation.

Example: A veteran bard purchases Silver Tongue for 6 XP, gaining the ability to sway a hostile crowd once per session. This quickly becomes their trademark in tense public scenes.

7.5.3 Resources and Influence

See §12 for full rules. As a quick reference:

Minor Resource (4 XP, 1 week) A small shop, basic workshop, discreet safe house, or minor contact network. Offers modest but reliable benefits.

Standard Resource (8 XP, 2 weeks) A decent-sized business, crew, or operation with real impact. Comes with some upkeep and obligations.

Major Resource (12 XP, 1 month) A large enterprise, elite team, or rare capability. Very potent but also demanding; often becomes a major part of your character’s story.

Player Tip: Resources pull the camera out from your character to your sphere of influence. A spy network means intrigue. A workshop means invention. A guild hall means politics.

When to Invest in Assets and Followers

Player Archetype	Typical Investment	Best For
Solo	0–10% XP	Reliable personal power, minimal upkeep.
Mixed (Balanced)	15–25% XP	One solid Follower or Asset (e.g., a scout or a safehouse).
Mastermind	35–55% XP	Networks, informants, multiple Assets; build a faction.

Planning for succession? A loyal Follower (Cap 3+) can become your successor – see the Legacy Engine (§19). Investing in a potential heir early pays off when your character retires or falls.

7.6 Character Development Paths

How you spend XP shapes your character's growth. These are broad patterns, not rigid classes.

Path	Typical XP Split	Strengths / Weaknesses
Specialist	70–90% personal, 0–10% resources, 0–20% abilities	Extremely effective in a narrow niche. Vulnerable outside it.
Leader	50–65% personal, 15–25% resources, 15–25% abilities	Well-rounded, boosts the group. Rarely the best at one thing.
Mastermind	25–40% personal, 35–55% resources, 20–40% abilities	Solves problems through assets. Personally vulnerable, many moving parts.

Example (Leader): A merchant-prince spends 60% of XP on personal skills and social abilities, 20% on a network of trade contacts, and 20% on talents that improve negotiation and command.

These patterns are guides, not rules. You can shift between them as your story evolves.

7.7 Training and Development Time

Most improvements take time in the fiction. Training montages, study scenes, and building projects are all opportunities for character moments.

7.7.1 Standard Time Requirements

- Attribute increase: new rating in days.
- Skill improvement: new level in days.
- Resource acquisition: about 1 week to 1 month depending on scope.
- Ability learning: typically 3–10 days.

7.7.2 Accelerated Development (Rush Rule)

You can attempt to learn faster, but rushing has a price.

- The group tracks a short Risk Clock (4 segments) for your crash training.
- If it fills, the new capability has flaws:
 - Attribute/Skill: temporary –1 die penalty until you retrain properly.
 - Resource: loyalty issues, partial effectiveness, or hidden problems.
 - Ability: unreliable effects or quirky side consequences.

Example: A wizard crams advanced spellwork into three frantic days. She gains the ability, but the Risk Clock fills: her spells spark and flicker until she takes time to train safely.

7.8 Character Progression Tiers

As you accumulate XP and capabilities, you advance through tiers that represent your growing reputation and influence.

7.8.1 Tier I: Novice (0–40 XP)

- Learning the ropes, establishing yourself.
- Local reputation, modest capabilities.
- Typical assets: basic equipment, a few contacts.
- Position Manifestation: The difference between life and death; a shift from Desperate to Controlled means “I live to fight another day.”

7.8.2 Tier II: Seasoned (41–90 XP)

- Proven capability, reliable in your specialty.
- Regional reputation, respected in your field.
- Typical assets: skilled followers, specialized equipment.
- Position Manifestation: The difference between victory and defeat; a shift from Controlled to Dominant means “I’ve earned the right to choose how this ends.”

7.8.3 Tier III: Veteran (91–150 XP)

- Master of your craft, significant influence.
- National reputation, can handle major challenges.
- Typical assets: multiple operations, elite teams.
- Position Manifestation: The difference between influence and control; a shift from Controlled to Dominant means “The city hangs on my decision.”

7.8.4 Tier IV: Paragon (151–220 XP)

- Exceptional capability, strategic influence.
- Continental influence, shapes regional outcomes.
- Typical assets: organizations, unique capabilities.
- Position Manifestation: The difference between shaping events and defining eras; a shift from Controlled to Dominant means “I am the axis upon which history turns.”

7.8.5 Tier V: Mythic (221+ XP)

- Legendary status, world-changing influence.
- Historical reputation, defines eras.
- Typical assets: nations, legendary artifacts.
- Position Manifestation: The difference between ending and remaking the world; a shift from Desperate to Controlled means “The universe waits on my choice.”

7.8.6 Position Scales with Narrative Weight

The mechanical effect of Position (re-rolling one die, see 2) never changes — but what it means evolves with your tier:

- Tier I: Position defines personal survival.
- Tier III: Position shapes regional outcomes.
- Tier V: Position reshapes reality.

The system does not need to scale — your story does.

GM Tip: Never add mechanical bonuses to Position. Instead, deepen the narrative weight:

- Tier I: “Your Position shows whether you live or die.”
- Tier V: “Your Position shows how the world bends to your will.”

The mechanics stay consistent so the narrative can grow as large as your imagination allows.

7.9 Managing Allies and Followers

Allies can extend your reach but also create obligations and risks. For full rules, see §12.

7.9.1 Acquisition Costs

A skilled helper's cost in XP is roughly their capability rating squared. Example: A capability 3 scout costs $3^2 = 9$ XP.

7.9.2 Upkeep Requirements

Each downtime period, you either:

- spend XP equal to their capability rating, or
- dedicate a meaningful scene to maintaining the relationship (time, favors, protection).

7.9.3 Risk Management

- When big complications arise, your allies can be targeted instead of you.
- Allies can handle one significant task off-screen per downtime, but this often creates extra story fallout (the GM gains a Story Beat).

7.10 Skill Advancement and Synergies

7.10.1 XP Costs

Improvement	XP Cost
0 → 1	2 XP
1 → 2	4 XP
2 → 3	6 XP
3 → 4	8 XP
4 → 5	10 XP

7.10.2 Training Time

- 0 → 1: 1 day of practice.
- 1 → 2: 3 days of training.
- 2 → 3: 1 week of intensive study.
- 3 → 4: 2 weeks with a master or rigorous practice.
- 4 → 5: 1 month of dedicated focus.

7.10.3 Attribute Limits

You cannot have a Skill rating higher than the relevant Attribute. To advance a Skill further, you must first raise its primary Attribute (see 7.1).

7.10.4 Skill Synergies

When the fiction supports it, well-justified combinations of skills can grant +1 die or better Position/Effect. Examples:

- Combat: Tactics + Command (battlefield coordination), Melee + Athletics (acrobatic strikes).
- Social: Sway + Lore (persuasion backed by knowledge), Deception + Performance (long cons).

- Exploration: Investigation + Survival (tracking), Lore + Insight (cultural observation).

7.11 Using Skills in Play

7.11.1 When to Roll

You roll when:

- the outcome is uncertain,
- failure would matter to the story, and
- the action is significant enough to deserve the spotlight.

For routine actions with no real risk, the group can often simply agree that you succeed.

7.11.2 Difficulty and Skill Level

As your skill rises, routine tasks become trivial. A rough guideline:

Skill Level	Routine Task	Challenging Task
0	Needs a roll; modest DV	Needs a roll; higher DV
1	Often needs a roll	Challenging but fair
2	Usually automatic	Needs a roll; moderate DV
3	Automatic	Needs a roll; interesting stakes
4+	Automatic	Automatic for simple cases

Reading this as a player: by Skill 3, basic tasks in your area of expertise should rarely require rolls. You are there to be impressive, not to trip over routine jobs.

7.11.3 Group Skill Use

When multiple characters contribute:

- Assistance: One character is primary; up to three others add +1 die each by describing how they help (see 2).
- Cooperation: Several characters each roll; the group succeeds or fails based on combined results.
- Complementary: Different skills cover different parts of a larger task (e.g. one distracts, one picks a lock).

7.12 Skill Challenges

Some goals are too big for a single roll.

7.12.1 Extended Tests

For long, involved tasks:

- The group sets a progress clock (4–8 segments).
- Each significant success fills one or more segments.
- Complications can add segments or create new problems.

7.12.2 Complex Challenges

For multi-step or multi-skill situations:

- Different skills tackle different phases of the challenge.
- Success in one area creates opportunities; failure creates obstacles.

Example (Heist): Stealth to infiltrate, Craft to bypass locks, Investigation to find the vault, Deception to mislead guards. Each roll advances a Heist Clock; complications add heat, suspicion, or security changes.

7.13 Strategic Advancement Considerations

7.13.1 Early Game (Tiers I–II)

- Focus on survival and a clear niche.
- Raise a key Attribute to 3 early.
- Bring core Skills to 2–3.
- Establish one or two modest resources or safe havens.

7.13.2 Mid Game (Tier III)

- Develop signature moves or combinations.
- Expand your resource base.
- Consider your role in the group and lean into it.

7.13.3 Late Game (Tiers IV–V)

- Choose advanced abilities that reshape the story around you.
- Build organizations, movements, or legacies.
- Decide how your character will leave their mark on the world.

Common Advancement Mistakes

Avoid these pitfalls:

- Over-specializing too early: A Melee 5 character with Body 3 is fragile and incapable outside combat.
- Forgetting training time: You cannot learn a new skill in the middle of a dungeon without justification.
- Neglecting resources: A few well-chosen assets can solve problems no amount of personal skill can.
- Hoarding XP: Spend your XP! Characters who never improve become irrelevant to the escalating threats.

7.14 Practical Examples

7.14.1 Combat Example

A warrior with Body 4 and Melee 3 attacks:

- Dice pool: $4 + 3 = 7d10$.
- Opponent's defenses and the fiction help set the difficulty (see 2).

- Strong successes translate into higher Effect or better Position.

7.14.2 Social Example

A diplomat with Presence 3 and Sway 2 negotiates:

- Dice pool: $3 + 2 = 5d10$.
- Position might be Controlled if circumstances favor them, or worse if under suspicion.
- Consequences for failure could be mistrust, delays, or new complications.

7.14.3 Exploration Example

A scout with Wits 3 and Survival 2 searches for tracks:

- Dice pool: $3 + 2 = 5d10$.
- Easier tasks (fresh tracks) are more forgiving; older or obscured tracks are harder.
- Partial successes might reveal some information but not all, or come with side effects (e.g., you find the tracks but disturb a nest of predators).

Your Attributes and Skills determine not just if you succeed, but how you tackle problems. Lean into combinations that express your character's style.

XP Planning Guide

Early Tier Priorities:

- Raise a core Attribute to 3 (9 XP).
- Bring key Skills to 2–3 (4–6 XP each).
- Claim 1–2 minor resources (4 XP each).

Mid Tier Expansion:

- Push core Attributes toward 4 (12 XP).
- Specialize key Skills to 4 (8 XP).
- Add standard resources (8 XP each).
- Explore cultural or thematic abilities (6–10 XP).

Late Tier Mastery:

- Purchase capstone abilities (12+ XP).
- Establish major resources (12 XP).
- Launch legacy projects, organizations, or movements.

Attributes and Skills Quick Reference

Attributes (1–5):

- Body: physical capability
- Wits: mental acuity
- Spirit: willpower and inner strength
- Presence: social influence

Skill Levels:

- 0: Untrained 1: Novice 2: Competent
- 3: Professional 4: Master 5: Grand Master

Core Skills (18):

- Combat: Melee, Ranged, Brawl, Tactics
- Physical: Athletics, Stealth, Endurance, Craft, Survival
- Social: Sway, Command, Deception, Performance, Insight
- Knowledge: Lore, Investigation, Medicine
- Magic: Arcana, Ritual

Dice Pool: Attribute + Skill d10s.

Skill Improvement: New level $\times$ 2 XP (plus training time).

Specialization: At Skill 3+, you are a known expert in that field.

Synergy: Well-justified combinations of skills can grant +1 die or better Position/Effect when the fiction supports it.

Chapter 8

Experience Paths and Character Building

How you spend your Experience Points (XP) shapes more than your numbers on a sheet—it defines your character’s career, their growth over time, and the kind of stories they invite into play.

This chapter focuses on:

- turning a loose idea into a clear character concept,
- mapping that concept into starting choices that fit the campaign rules,
- choosing a career path (how you plan to grow),
- and understanding how your character can evolve across early, mid, and late game.

All examples in this chapter are legal starting builds under the standard creation rules, and are written to be directly usable by players.

8.1 From Concept to Career

Before you spend a single XP, start with the story you want to tell.

Step 1: Concept Seed

Begin with a simple statement of who your character is:

- “Stoic bodyguard who will take the hit for anyone else.”
- “Nervy courier who knows every back alley in the city.”
- “Soft-spoken merchant who pulls strings behind the scenes.”

This is your concept seed. Everything else grows from here.

Step 2: Role in the Party

Decide what you want to do at the table:

- Take hits and lock down threats?
- Spot danger and solve practical problems?
- Talk through conflicts and manage social fallout?
- Create tools, magic, or plans that enable everyone else?

Your role helps you choose a Primary Attribute and 2–3 Key Skills (see 7).

Step 3: Career Theme

Ask yourself:

- Is this a story of self-mastery? (training, discipline, pushing limits)
- A story of connections? (alliances, obligations, webs of influence)
- A story of balance? (learning to juggle many demands at once)

Your answer naturally points you toward one of the three XP paths in this chapter.

Step 4: Long Arc in One Sentence

Write a single sentence for where you imagine your character at high XP:

- “I want to become the greatest duelist in the realm.”
- “I want to map the unknown and bring others safely home.”
- “I want to run the network everyone relies on but no one sees.”

You do not have to stick to this forever, but it gives you a direction for your early choices.

Character Career Checklist

Before spending XP, decide:

1. Your concept seed (one sentence).
2. Your role in the party (what you do most).
3. Your preferred career theme: self, balance, or influence.
4. A rough long arc (where you want to end up).

Start simple. You can always refine these as the campaign unfolds.

8.2 Mapping Concept to Mechanics

Once you have a concept, you turn it into numbers. Use this as a guideline:

1. Pick a Primary Attribute that supports your role (Body, Wits, Spirit, or Presence) – see 7.1.
2. Choose 2–3 Key Skills that you want to be noticeably good at (see 7.2).
3. Choose a Career Path (Personal, Balanced, Influencer) that matches your theme.
4. Use the starting XP budget in 8.9 to buy:
 - Attribute steps for your primary and possibly secondary stats.
 - Skill steps for your key and supporting skills.
 - Optional resources or special abilities, if your path calls for them.

Throughout this chapter, each example shows how a concept becomes a legal build.

8.3 Three Career Paths

There are three broad approaches to character development, each representing a different career philosophy:

Personal Path Focus on personal mastery and self-improvement (8.5).

Balanced Path Mix personal growth with resources and influence (8.6).

Influencer Path Build networks, assets, and strategic power (8.7).

These paths are not rigid classes. They are patterns that help you decide where most of your XP will go, especially in the early game.

8.4 Player Archetypes

Not every player spends XP the same way. These three player archetypes describe common patterns. Identify yours – it will help you choose a career path and avoid frustration.

The Solo

Definition: Invests XP primarily in Attributes and Skills. Minimal followers, minimal holdings. All power is on the character sheet.

Typical XP Spread: 70–90% Self; 0–10% On-screen help; 0–20% Off-screen assets.

Strengths: Consistent scene impact; few moving parts; resilient to follower loss.

Risks: Limited fiction reach between sessions; can stall when problems demand logistics or networks.

Starting Focus: Attributes 2–3, Skills 1–2, minimal assets.

The Mixed Player

Definition: Splits XP between self-growth and one or two meaningful assets (a small follower or a reliable holding).

Typical XP Spread: 50–65% Self; 15–25% On-screen help; 15–25% Off-screen assets.

Strengths: Versatile: credible in scenes and has a lever for special problems.

Risks: Upkeep pressure; helper can be targeted when the GM spends 2+ Story Beats.

Starting Focus: Balanced approach with one minor asset or low-cap follower.

The Mastermind

Definition: Prioritises followers / cadres / familiars and off-screen networks. The character sheet is the hub of a larger apparatus.

Typical XP Spread: 25–40% Self; 35–55% On-screen help; 20–40% Off-screen assets.

Strengths: Scene control via assistance; strategic reach between sessions; strong heist / social-planning play.

Risks: Dependency on assist lanes; followers can be endangered on 2+ SB spends; upkeep pressure.

Starting Focus: Significant investment in followers or major assets from the beginning.

Which Archetype Are You?

Ask yourself:

- Do I want my character to be self-sufficient and always ready? → Solo

- Do I enjoy having a helpful sidekick or a home base, but not too much bookkeeping? → Mixed
- Do I love managing networks, commanding troops, and solving problems through influence? → Mastermind

There is no wrong answer – but knowing your style helps you build a character you will enjoy for many sessions.

8.5 Path 1: Personal Development

The Personal Path centers your character’s career on what they can do: their body, mind, and honed skills. This is the path of the duelist, the ascetic, the elite scout, the master healer.

Typical Investment

- 70–90% Personal improvement (Attributes and Skills)
- 0–10% Resources and assets
- 0–20% Special abilities

Strengths

- Reliable in direct challenges and combat
- Minimal upkeep or management required
- Resilient to loss of external resources
- Consistent performance in spotlight moments

Weaknesses

- Limited influence in social or strategic scenes
- May struggle with problems requiring networks
- Less capable in logistics or large-scale operations
- Dependent on personal presence for all solutions

Career View

On this path, your “career ladder” is mostly about pushing numbers related to you: raising Attributes, deepening Skills, and picking a few defining abilities. Your late-game questions are:

- “What does a legendary version of this look like?”
- “What scenes prove that I have truly mastered my craft?”

Build Example: The Duelist (Legal Start)

Concept Seed: “A proud blade whose entire life is training and challenge.”

Total XP: 30 (34 with +4 from Bonds/Complications; see 8.9)

- Attributes: Body 3, Wits 2, Spirit 1, Presence 1
 - Costs (Attributes cost new rating × 3): Body 1→2 (6), 2→3 (9) = 15; Wits 1→2 (6) = 6; Spirit/Presence remain 1 = 0. Subtotal: 21 XP
- Skills: Melee 2, Athletics 1
 - Costs (Skills cost new level × 2): Melee 0→1 (2), 1→2 (4) = 6; Athletics 0→1 = 2.

Subtotal: 8 XP

- Totals: $21 + 8 = 29$ XP. Bank 1 XP.
- With +4 XP (Bonds/Complications): Add Perception $0 \rightarrow 1$ (2) and spend banked 1 XP on Stealth $0 \rightarrow 1$ (2), or instead take Perception $0 \rightarrow 1$ (2) and Sway $0 \rightarrow 1$ (2) for broader utility. Cap: 34 XP.

Career Hook: Early scenes show duels and drills. Mid game focuses on notorious opponents. Late game tells the story of a blade whose name carries across borders.

8.6 Path 2: Balanced Approach

The Balanced Path mixes personal capability with supportive resources. This is the path of the scout-captain, the field medic with a small clinic, the problem-solver who always seems to have something ready.

Typical Investment

- 50–65% Personal improvement
- 15–25% Resources and assets
- 15–25% Special abilities

Strengths

- Adaptable to diverse situations
- Handles both direct and indirect challenges
- Excellent supporting role for the group
- Moderate risk profile

Weaknesses

- Not exceptional in any single area
- Requires management of resources
- Moderate upkeep demands
- Can be outshone by focused specialists

Career View

Balanced characters often have careers that feel like juggling:

- they add contacts, gear, or small bases and
- keep raising the core skills that let them use those tools well.

Their late-game questions are:

- “What does my little network or operation look like at full size?”
- “How do my personal skills and resources fit together as a whole?”

Build Example: The Scout (Legal Start)

Concept Seed: “A pathfinder who knows how to get in, get out, and get others home.”

Total XP: 30 (34 with +4 from Bonds/Complications)

- Attributes: Wits 2, Body 2, Spirit 1, Presence 1

- Costs: Wits 1→2 (6), Body 1→2 (6) = 12 XP
- Skills: Survival 2, Perception 1, Stealth 1
 - Costs: Survival 0→1 (2), 1→2 (4) = 6; Perception 0→1 2; Stealth 0→1 2. Subtotal: 10 XP
- Resources: Minor equipment cache (camp gear, maps, signal kit) = 4 XP
- Special Abilities: Wilderness Lore (broad travel benefits) = 4 XP
- Totals: 12 + 10 + 4 + 4 = 30 XP.
- With +4 XP: add Perception 1→2 (+4) or take a trained hawk companion (Minor Resource, 4 XP).

Career Hook: Early stories show small journeys. Mid game explores dangerous routes and rescue missions. Late game might see the scout running expeditions, caravans, or an entire mapping guild.

8.7 Path 3: Influencer Focus

The Influencer Path emphasizes networks, assets, and strategic power. This is the path of the merchant-prince, the fixer, the spymaster, the noble with more favors owed than coins in their purse.

Typical Investment

- 25–40% Personal improvement
- 35–55% Resources and assets
- 20–40% Special abilities

Strengths

- Strong strategic and social influence
- Can solve problems indirectly
- Excellent at planning and preparation
- Creates opportunities for the whole group

Weaknesses

- Personally vulnerable in direct confrontations
- High maintenance requirements
- Complications can cascade through networks
- Dependent on external factors

Career View

Influencer careers are about building and surviving webs:

- webs of contacts, debts, trade routes, cells, or clients.

Late game questions become:

- “How big can this web reasonably grow within the fiction?”
- “What happens when a strand of my web is cut, or pulled tight?”

Build Example: The Merchant (Legal Start)

Concept Seed: “A friendly shopkeeper whose real power lies in who owes them favors.”

Total XP: 30 (34 with +4 from Bonds/Complications)

- Attributes: Presence 2, Wits 2, Spirit 1, Body 1
 - Costs: Presence 1→2 (6), Wits 1→2 (6) = 12 XP
- Skills: Sway 2, Deception 1, Lore 1
 - Costs: Sway 0→1 (2), 1→2 (4) = 6; Deception 0→1 2; Lore 0→1 2. Subtotal: 10 XP
- Resources: Standard trading office (staffed storefront, ledgers, storage) = 8 XP
- Totals: 12 + 10 + 8 = 30 XP.
- With +4 XP: add Negotiation Mastery (4 XP general ability) or expand to a second Minor merchant route (4 XP).

Career Hook: Early scenes are about one shop and a few key clients. Mid game introduces caravans, deals, and rivals. Late game might place the merchant at the center of regional politics and supply chains.

8.8 Building for Group Synergy

Your character's career path matters most in context with the rest of the party. A well-constructed party covers key roles without excessive overlap.

Key Roles to Consider

Combat Frontline defence, skirmishing, or ranged fire support.

Social Negotiation, intimidation, information gathering.

Exploration Scouting, navigating, surviving hostile environments.

Magic Free casting, rites, rituals, or summoning.

Assets Logistics, networks, safehouses, followers.

Complementary Paths

- Personal path characters provide reliable combat and specialist solutions.
- Balanced path characters handle diverse, connective challenges.
- Influencer path characters create opportunities and resources for everyone.

Together, a mixed party can cover nearly every type of problem.

Redundant Paths

- Multiple personal path characters may overlap in combat or role.
- Multiple influencer path characters may compete for spotlight and assets.
- Consider diversifying within similar paths: different weapon styles, different Patrons, different social approaches.
- Example: Two combatants – one a duelist (single-target damage), one a shield-focused guardian (area protection).

Balancing Your Table

If you notice a gap (e.g., no one has investment in social skills or no one has a safehouse asset), consider adjusting your XP spending or discussing with the group. A party that talks about roles early will have a smoother campaign.

8.9 Starting Character Guidelines

Base XP Allocation

- Standard Starting XP: 30 points
- Bonds and Complications: You may take up to two total from any mix of meaningful Bonds (up to 2, +2 XP each) and significant Complications (up to 2, +2 XP each), granting maximum +4 XP. (See 18 for Bonds and Complications.)
- Maximum Starting XP: 34 points
- Complication Effect: Each unresolved starting Complication adds +1 banked SB to early scenes until cleared.

Recommended Starting Ranges

Category	Recommended XP
Primary Attribute	9–12 XP (rating 3–4)
Secondary Attributes	0–9 XP each (rating 1–3)
Key Skills	4–6 XP each (rating 2–3)
Supporting Skills	2–4 XP each (rating 1–2)
Resources	0–8 XP total
Special Abilities	0–8 XP total

8.9.0.0.1 Cost Reminders:

- Attributes: Each step costs new rating × 3 XP (e.g., 1→2 costs 6; 2→3 costs 9). See 7.1.
- Skills: Each step costs new level × 2 XP (e.g., 0→1 costs 2; 1→2 costs 4). See 7.2.
- Resources: Minor 4 XP; Standard 8 XP; Major 12 XP.
- Special Abilities: Minor Edge 2 XP; Major Edge 4 XP; Prestige 6+ XP.

8.10 Progression Planning

Think of your character's career in phases. These XP bands are approximate and assume you began at 30–34 XP.

Early Game (0–40 XP)

Focus on establishing core capabilities:

- Reach attribute rating 3 in your primary area.
- Develop 2–3 key skills to rating 2–3.
- Acquire basic resources or one special ability (if your path uses them).
- Clarify your character's niche in the group.

When to take a Follower vs. Asset vs. Talent (Early):

- Follower: If you want on-screen help (a scout, a bodyguard, an apprentice). Start with Cap 1–2.
- Asset: If you want an off-screen advantage (a safehouse, a workshop, a contact network). Start with Minor Asset (4 XP).

- Talent: If you want a signature move (combat technique, social edge, magic access). Minor talents (2–3 XP) are great early.

Mid Game (41–90 XP)

Expand and specialize:

- Increase your primary attribute to 4.
- Specialize key skills to rating 3–4.
- Develop supporting capabilities that fit your concept.
- Build strategic resources or networks if on the Balanced or Influencer path.
- Acquire signature special abilities that define your style.

When to take a Follower vs. Asset vs. Talent (Mid):

- Follower: Upgrade a loyal contact to Cap 3 (9 XP) – they become a reliable asset who can act independently.
- Asset: Expand your network – a Standard Asset (8 XP) turns a safehouse into a spy ring or a workshop into a guild connection.
- Talent: Major talents (4–6 XP) define your mid-game identity – Backstab, Ritual Mastery, Command Presence.

Late Game (91–150 XP)

Master your chosen path:

- Achieve peak attributes (rating 4–5).
- Master key skills (rating 4–5).
- Build substantial influence or unique capabilities.
- Develop advanced special abilities.
- Consider legacy projects, organizations, or long-term changes to the setting.

When to take a Follower vs. Asset vs. Talent (Late):

- Follower: A Cap 4–5 follower (16–25 XP) can become a successor (see 19) – invest in someone who could carry on your cause.
- Asset: Major Assets (12 XP) give you regional influence – a fortress, a charter, a fleet.
- Talent: Prestige (7–10 XP) and Epic (11+ XP) talents reshape the story. Plan your build around one or two capstones.

XP Path Quick Reference

Personal Path (70–90% self):

- Reliable individual performance.
- Low upkeep, high consistency.
- Best for combatants and focused specialists.

Balanced Path (50–65% self):

- Good all-around capability.
- Moderate risk and upkeep.
- Flexible support and problem-solving role.

Influencer Path (25–40% self):

- Strategic power and influence.
- High upkeep, high reward.
- Creates opportunities for the entire group.

Starting XP: 30 base + up to +4 from Bonds/Complications (max start 34).

8.11 Path Combination Strategies

Many players mix elements from different paths as their character's life unfolds.

Combat Specialist with Resources

- Strong personal combat capabilities.
- Moderate resource investment for support.
- Good for frontline fighters who need logistical backup.
- Example: Warrior with a fortified base and loyal troops.

Social Character with Personal Skills

- Excellent social capabilities.
- Solid personal skills for self-defense or utility.
- Good for diplomats who operate independently.
- Example: Ambassador with combat training and persuasion skills.

Technical Expert with Networks

- Deep technical or magical expertise.
- Network of contacts and resources to enable projects.
- Good for specialists who need supply chains and helpers.
- Example: Master crafter with supplier network and apprentices.

8.12 Resource Management

Each path asks for different management styles across your character's career.

Personal Path Management

- Minimal upkeep requirements.
- Focus on equipment, training scenes, and personal growth.
- Low complexity, high reliability.

Balanced Path Management

- Moderate upkeep for resources.
- Relationship maintenance with contacts.
- Skill development alongside resource management.
- Balanced time investment between self and assets.

Influencer Path Management

- Significant upkeep demands.

- Network maintenance and expansion.
- Resource allocation and development.
- Strategic planning and opportunity management.

8.13 Risk Assessment

Each path carries different career risks.

Personal Path Risks

- Over-specialization in one area.
- Vulnerability to problems outside your specialty.
- Limited diversification later in the game.
- May become predictable in approach.

Balanced Path Risks

- Jack-of-all-trades, master of none.
- Spread too thin across capabilities.
- Moderate risks in multiple areas.
- May lack standout, defining capabilities if unfocused.

Influencer Path Risks

- Networks are vulnerable to attack and betrayal.
- High maintenance requirements.
- Cascade failure potential if a key asset falls.
- Personal safety concerns when the web is targeted.

8.14 Adapting Your Path

Your chosen path is a starting point, not a contract. You can shift focus as your character's story changes.

Early Shift (0–40 XP)

- Easy to change direction.
- Minimal sunk cost in any single approach.
- Good time to experiment with different styles.
- You can respond quickly to group needs or unexpected story turns.

Mid Game Shift (41–90 XP)

- Requires more deliberate planning.
- Some capabilities need to be maintained while others change.
- You can fill emerging gaps in group capability.
- Temporary performance dips may occur during the transition.

Late Game Shift (91+ XP)

- Significant investment in your current path.
- Major shifts require substantial XP and story justification.
- Often better to add complementary capabilities than completely pivot.

- Consider how changes reflect pivotal events in your character's life.

8.15 Practical Building Examples (Narrative Roles, Legal Starts)

Each of the following examples combines:

- a short concept,
- a path choice,
- a legal starting build,
- and a sketch of their career arc.

Example 1: The Guardian

Path: Personal Total: 30 XP

Concept Seed: “Quiet wall of muscle who would rather bleed than lose anyone.”

- Attributes: Body 3 (1→2: 6, 2→3: 9), Wits 2 (1→2: 6) = 21 XP
- Skills: Melee 2 (0→1: 2, 1→2: 4 = 6), Athletics 1 (0→1: 2) = 8 XP
- Bank: 1 XP
- Role at table: Frontline protection and reliable pressure in fights.
- With +4 XP: add Combat Reflexes (2 XP talent) and Shield Mastery (4 XP talent) using banked 1 + 4 = 5 XP (GM may allow rounding or an extra minor Complication), or instead buy more supporting skills.

Career Arc: Early on, the Guardian is “the one who stands in front.” Mid game adds tactical awareness and maybe leadership. Late game might see them training others or becoming the symbol of a cause.

Example 2: The Explorer

Path: Balanced Total: 30 XP

Concept Seed: “Curious wanderer whose maps are more valuable than gold.”

- Attributes: Wits 2 (6), Body 2 (6) = 12 XP
- Skills: Survival 2 (0→1: 2, 1→2: 4 = 6), Perception 1 (2), Stealth 1 (2) = 10 XP
- Resources: Minor mapping kit & route notes = 4 XP
- Ability: Trail Sense = 4 XP
- Totals: 30 XP. With +4 XP, raise Perception 1→2 (+4) or add a trained beast (Minor Resource, 4 XP).

Career Arc: Early stories focus on survival and discovery. Mid game might see them guiding trade, armies, or refugees. Late game, they may literally redraw the map of the setting.

Example 3: The Schemer

Path: Influencer Total: 30 XP

Concept Seed: “The person who always knows someone who knows someone.”

- Attributes: Presence 2 (6), Wits 2 (6) = 12 XP
- Skills: Sway 2 (0→1: 2, 1→2: 4 = 6), Deception 1 (2), Lore 1 (2) = 10 XP
- Resources: Standard safehouse & message drops = 8 XP
- Totals: 30 XP. With +4 XP, take Network Builder (4 XP talent) or add Minor informant ring (4 XP).

Career Arc: Early on, the Schemer is just “the one with connections.” Mid game grows their network and enemies. Late game, they might operate entire webs of spies, informants, merchants, or political factions.

8.15.0.0.1 Reminder: All builds above assume baseline Attributes at 1 and Skills at 0 before spending. Attribute and Skill advances are cumulative by step (see costs in 8.9).

Remember: Your chosen path should reflect both your character concept and your preferred play style. There is no single “correct” path—only what works for you, your group, and the story you want to tell.

Planning for Succession (The Legacy Engine)

If you are playing a long campaign or enjoy the idea of your character’s influence outlasting them, consider investing in a Follower (Cap 3+) early. That follower can become your successor when your character retires or falls – inheriting your faction standing, one unresolved burden, and a Legacy Bond (see Chapter 19: The Legacy Engine). A loyal apprentice, a trusted lieutenant, or a family member can carry your story forward.

8.16 Narrative-Heavy Character Building Options

For groups that prefer a strong narrative focus in character building, you can treat XP as a tool for telling the story of a career, not just a currency.

8.16.0.0.1 Story-Driven Milestones Instead of tracking XP numerically, the GM can award advancement when characters reach significant story milestones. “You have trained with the master for months—you’ve improved your skill.”

8.16.0.0.2 Experience Through Reflection Players can spend downtime scenes reflecting on past experiences to earn XP. A meaningful flashback, confession, or revelation can justify growth without counting every point.

8.16.0.0.3 Collaborative Advancement The group can discuss and agree on advancement choices, ensuring everyone’s growth supports the overall story direction and shared arcs.

8.16.0.0.4 Narrative Justification Focus When spending XP, players should explain how their character gained this capability through in-game experiences, creating richer backstory and continuity. “I raise Presence because I’ve been forced to handle the group’s negotiations for weeks.”

8.16.0.0.5 Path as Theme Use your chosen path as a theme rather than a strict budget:

- A Personal Path character emphasizes physical, mental, or spiritual self-mastery.
- A Balanced Path character emphasizes learning how to juggle tools and relationships.

- An Influencer Path character emphasizes their growing web of relationships and obligations.

In all cases, let your character's career on the page match the career they are living in the fiction.

Chapter 9

Talents and Special Abilities

Talents are the building blocks of character specialization. They represent learned techniques, supernatural gifts, or cultural inheritances. Each Talent costs XP, and its cost reflects its impact.

9.1 Understanding Talents

Talents are purchased with Experience Points (XP) (see 7) and provide special capabilities:

- They go beyond simple skill bonuses.
- They often have specific activation conditions.
- They may provide narrative permissions (you can try things others cannot).
- They can define your character's unique identity.

Talent Costs by Tier

Tier	Cost	Scope
Minor	2–3 XP	Small situational bonus, once per scene.
Major	4–6 XP	Strong upgrade, permanent effect in a niche.
Prestige	7–10 XP	Campaign-defining, breaks fundamental limits.
Epic	11+ XP	Legendary ability, shapes the story.

9.1.0.0.1 Activation Types.

- Passive: Always on; no action required.
- Active: Requires an action or scene focus to use.
- Reactive: Triggers automatically on a condition.

9.1.0.0.2 Limits and Economy. Unless a talent says otherwise:

- Per scene uses refresh at scene end.
- Per session uses refresh after downtime.
- Some talents allow you to spend Boons (see 2) to push effects further.

Only One Active Talent?

The rule “only one talent can be active at a time” applies only to activated abilities that require a decision or action. Passive talents (e.g., +1 die to perception) are always active and stack. Active talents that require an action or reaction cannot be used simultaneously – you choose which one to activate when the trigger occurs. Talents that are “once per scene” reset at the end of the scene.

Requires: Presence 2+.

Ear to the Ground [INFORMATION] [NETWORK]

Negotiation Stance [SOCIAL] [BARGAIN]

Cost: 2 XP Active, once per scene. When you propose a deal that both parties could reasonably accept (GM discretion), treat your Position as one step better (Controlled → Dominant, Desperate → Controlled). This talent cannot raise Position above Dominant.

Projecting Voice [PERFORMANCE] [AUDIENCE]

Cost: 2 XP Passive. Your voice carries clearly over crowds, wind, and moderate noise. You can be heard by any willing listener within Far range without rolling. When you attempt to calm, command, or inspire a crowd (DV 3–5), treat your Position as one step better (Controlled → Dominant, Desperate → Controlled).

Requires: Performance 1+.

Healer TalentsField Dressing [HEALING] [STABILISE]

Cost: 2 XP Active, once per scene. When a character within Touch range would take Harm that would reduce them to Harm 3 (Incapacitated or dying), you may use your reaction to stabilise them. They remain at Harm 2 (instead of Harm 3) and will not die from this wound for the rest of the scene. You must describe how you apply pressure, a tourniquet, or a makeshift bandage.

Requires: Medicine 1+.

Ranger/Tracker TalentsKeen Tracker [TRACKING] [SURVIVAL]

Artificer/Crafter Talents

Master Tinker [CRAFT] [REPAIR]

Cost: 2 XP Passive. +1 die to all Craft rolls when repairing, modifying, or maintaining equipment. Additionally, you may perform minor repairs on the go without a workshop (fix a broken lockpick, patch a leaky waterskin, reattach a strap) as a short action.

Requires: Craft 1+.

Rogue (Thief) Talents

Light Fingers [STRIKE] [AGILITY]

Cost: 2 XP Active, once per scene. When you attempt to lift a small object (purse, key, letter, seal) from a person or desk, treat your first Stealth or Subterfuge roll as Position +1.

The Unlocked Window [MOVE] [AGILITY]

Cost: 2 XP Passive. When infiltrating a structure you have cased for at least an hour, ignore one security obstacle (locked door, patrolled corridor, guard dog) per session. Describe how you already prepared for it.

Silk Palms [INFLUENCE]

Cost: 2 XP Active. When you bribe or gift a minor official, you gain a temporary String: Bought Silence. Once, you may activate this String to reduce DV by 1 on a Petition or Broker action involving that official. The String is consumed afterward.

Note: The full +2 dice version is a Major talent (Weapon Mastery; see 9.3).

Mounted Archery [MOUNTED] [RANGED]

Cost: 2 XP Passive. You ignore the usual −1 die penalty for firing a ranged weapon while your mount is moving at a walk or trot. When your mount is galloping or taking evasive action, you suffer only −1 die instead of −2.

Requires: Ranged 1+, Ride (or Athletics) 1+.

Cultural Affinity: Ykrul and Kuvani characters may take this talent for 1 XP instead of 2.

9.3 Major Talents (4–6 XP)

Magic Access

Spellcraft [FIRE] [WATER]

Cost: 6 XP Passive. Grants access to Weave & Cast freeform spellcasting using the Eight Elements. Without this, characters cannot freeform cast.

Codex [FATE] [RITUAL]

Cost: 4 XP Passive. Required to fully join a Patron's service as a Runekeeper. Grants access to that Patron's Rites and Obligation system (see 5).

Patron's Symbol [WARD] [SIGIL]

Cost: 4 XP Active. When you Weave a spell, modify range, scale, or targeting by one step.

Requires: Spellcraft.

Efficient Invocation [RITUAL]

Cost: 4 XP Passive. Reduce ritual casting time by one step (minimum 1 action).

Requires: Patron's Symbol.

Trusted Reputation [SOCIAL] [FAVOR]

Cost: 4 XP Active, once per session. When you are in good standing with a faction (GM discretion), you may call in a minor favor: a temporary discount, a piece of information, or a small service (e.g., a guard looks the other way, a merchant offers a fair price). The faction will expect reciprocity eventually.

Information Broker [INVESTIGATION] [NETWORK]

Cost: 4 XP Passive. When you successfully gather information (via Investigation, Streetwise, or similar), you may ask the GM two questions instead of one. The second question may be less detailed at the GM's discretion.

Unshakeable Composure [SOCIAL] [RESISTANCE]

Cost: 4 XP Passive. You gain +1 die to resist intimidation, coercion, social manipulation (e.g., Sway, Command), and fear effects in social situations. Additionally, once per scene, you may ignore the first social Condition imposed on you (e.g., Shaken, Guilty Tell).

Requires: Resolve 2+ or Spirit 2+.

Healer TalentsTriage [HEALING] [RECOVERY]

Cost: 4 XP Active, once per scene. When you spend an action tending to a wounded ally within Touch range, you may heal 1 Fatigue from them and, if they are at Harm 1 or 2, they treat their Harm level as one step lower for the purpose of penalties until the end of the scene (e.g., Harm 2 → Harm 1, Harm 1 → none). This does not actually reduce their Harm track; it only mitigates penalties.

Requires: Medicine 2+.

Ranger/Tracker TalentsCamouflage [STEALTH] [TERRAIN]

Cost: 4 XP Active, once per scene. When you are in natural terrain (forest, jungle, swamp, rocky hills, snow), you may spend an action to blend into the environment. For the remainder of the scene, you gain +2 dice to Stealth rolls while remaining still, and pursuers suffer -1 die to detect you. Moving at more than a slow crawl breaks the camouflage.

Requires: Survival 2+, Stealth 1+.

Artificer/Crafter Talents

Master Artificer [CRAFT] [CREATION]

Cost: 5 XP Passive. +1 die to all Craft rolls when creating, building, or upgrading items, structures, or devices. Additionally, once per downtime, you may reduce the required time to craft a mundane item by half (minimum 1 hour) and reduce the material cost (Supply) by 1 (minimum 0).

Requires: Craft 2+, Master Tinker.

Cantor (Performer) Talents

Captivating Performance [PERFORMANCE] [INSPIRE]

Cost: 4 XP Active, once per scene. When you perform (sing, recite, play an instrument) for at least one full exchange, all allies who can hear you gain +1 die to resist fear, despair, or charm for the remainder of the scene. Additionally, you may choose one ally; they also gain +1 die to their next social roll.

Requires: Performance 2+, Presence 2+.

Voice of Reason [PERFORMANCE] [PERSUASION]

Cost: 4 XP Active, once per scene. When you attempt to de-escalate a tense situation or convince a hostile NPC to stand down, you may roll Performance instead of Sway or Command. On a success, the NPC hesitates or agrees to parley for at least one exchange. On a Partial, they still listen but may demand a concession.

Requires: Performance 2+, Presence 2+.

Harmonious Aid [PERFORMANCE] [TEAMWORK]

Cost: 4 XP Active, once per scene. When you use the Assist action (spend 1 Boon to give +1 die to an ally), you may describe how you support them with a hummed tune or whispered rhythm. The ally gains an additional +1 die (total +2 from your Assist). This does not count against the usual +3 assist cap.

Requires: Performance 1+.

Well-Timed Encore [PERFORMANCE] [RECOVERY]

Cost: 5 XP Active, once per session. After a successful Performance roll that impressed an audience (GM discretion), you may declare an encore. The audience demands more. This extends any active Performance-based effect (e.g., Captivating Performance) for an additional scene, but the GM gains 2 SB (the guards grow curious, a rival takes notice, or the crowd becomes over-enthusiastic).

Requires: Captivating Performance.

Follower and Asset Talents

Efficient Recruiter [FOLLOWER] [COST REDUCTION]

Cost: 4 XP Passive. Reduce the XP cost to acquire a new follower by 1 (minimum 1 XP). Additionally, reduce the required downtime for recruitment by 1 day (minimum 1 day). This talent applies to each follower individually.

Requires: Presence 2+.

Asset Crafter [ASSET] [COST REDUCTION]

Cost: 4 XP Passive. Reduce the XP cost to acquire a new Asset by 1 per tier (Minor: 4 → 3 XP; Standard: 8 → 6 XP; Major: 12 → 9 XP; Artifact: 16+ → 12+ XP). Also reduce the required downtime by half (rounded up, minimum 1 day). This talent does not apply to Assets gained through narrative events without XP cost.

Loyalty Bond [FOLLOWER] [LOYALTY]

Cost: 5 XP Passive. Your followers' Loyalty tag improves by one step (Wary → Steady → Devoted). A Devoted follower cannot be turned, bribed, or intimidated into betraying you without a major narrative event (GM discretion). This talent applies to all followers you currently have and any you acquire later.

Requires: Spirit 2+, at least one follower.

Delegated Upkeep [FOLLOWER] [ASSET MANAGEMENT]

Cost: 5 XP Passive. You may assign a follower with Capability 3 or higher to manage your Assets. That follower's own upkeep (paid in XP or downtime action) automatically covers the upkeep of up to 2 Assets (or 4 Assets if the follower is Cap 5). The Assets do not require separate upkeep payments. If the follower becomes Wary or Neglected, the delegated Assets also become Neglected until the follower is restored.

Requires: At least one follower with Cap 3+.

Rapid Construction [ASSET] [CRAFT]

Cost: 6 XP Passive. When you craft or build an Asset (e.g., a workshop, safehouse, library, or similar physical asset) during downtime, reduce the required downtime by half (minimum 1 day) and reduce any material cost (GM-determined Supply or resources) by 1 (minimum 0). This talent does not apply to Assets acquired through purely social or political means.

Requires: Craft 2+, Wits 2+.

Rogue (Thief) TalentsAlways Another Exit [MOVE] [ESCAPE]

Cost: 4 XP Active, once per session. When you are cornered or a heist goes wrong, you may declare you prepared an escape route earlier. Describe it plausibly (rope out a window, bribed a guard, secret door). The GM may impose a cost—a dropped item, a witness, a future obligation—but you get out.

The Forger's Eye [CRAFT] [PRECISION]

Cost: 4 XP Active. You can copy any handwriting, seal, or signature with uncanny accuracy. When you attempt to forge a document, roll Wits + Craft (DV 3 for simple, 4-5 for complex). On a hit, create a Forged credential. On a partial, the forgery holds for one scene; thereafter it may be detected.

Requires: Craft 1+.

Crowd Veil [OBSERVE] [STEALTH]

Cost: 4 XP Active. You vanish into crowds. When in a populated area (market, festival, dock), you may roll Stealth vs. DV 3 to become Hidden in plain sight. Pursuers suffer -1 die to find you until you act conspicuously.

Requires: Stealth 2+.

The Velvet Glove [INFLUENCE] [NETWORK]

Cost: 5 XP Active, once per session. You have cultivated a network of informants, fence contacts, and corrupted clerks. You may declare that a minor NPC (a servant, a dockworker, a scribe) owes you a favor. They provide a specific service: unlock a door, delay a patrol, deliver a message. The GM may dictate a cost (the NPC will later need help, or their favor expires after use).
Requires: Presence 2+, Streetwise 1+.

Master of Misdirection [INFLUENCE] [DECEPTION]

Cost: 5 XP Active. When you are discovered during a crime, you may spend 1 Boon to redirect suspicion to another person or faction. Roll Deception vs. DV 4. On a hit, the heat shifts; on a miss, you gain Exposure +1 and the target becomes hostile.
Requires: Deception 2+.

Free Caster TalentsControlled Burn [FIRE] [WILL]

Cost: 4 XP Active, once per scene. When you roll a 1 on a Free Casting roll, you may immediately convert that Story Beat into 1 Boon for yourself (instead of the GM gaining it). The GM does not gain that SB. This does not prevent other 1s on the same roll from generating SB normally.
Requires: Spellcraft.

Weave Resilience [SHIELD] [STAMINA]

Cost: 4 XP Passive. When you suffer Backlash from a Free Casting roll, reduce the severity by one step: Catastrophic → Major, Major → Moderate, Moderate → Minor, Minor → none. This applies to the first Backlash each scene. Subsequent Backlashes in the same scene are not reduced.
Requires: Spellcraft.

Elemental Attunement [ELEMENT] [FOCUS]

Cost: 5 XP Passive. Choose one element (Fire, Water, Earth, Air, Fate, Life, Luck, Death/Thresholds). When you cast a Free spell using that element's tag (e.g., [FIRE]), you may reroll one failed die (not a 1) once per casting. Additionally, you gain +1 die to Arcana rolls when identifying or analyzing that element.
Requires: Spellcraft, Elemental Focus.

Backlash Siphon [VOID] [EXCHANGE]

Cost: 6 XP Reactive, once per scene. When you would suffer a Backlash effect (e.g., Fatigue, Harm, Condition) from a Free Casting roll, you may instead mark 1 Obligation to a Patron of your choice (or gain 1 Corruption if you have no Patron). The Backlash is negated, but the Patron's attention is drawn.
Requires: Spellcraft, Spirit 3+.

CombatFlurry Strike [STRIKE] [SPEED]

Cost: 6 XP Active, once per scene. When engaged with multiple opponents, make 2 attacks as one action. Each attack at -1 die.
Requires: Melee 3+, Body 3+.

Duelist's Edge [DOMINANCE] [TECHNIQUE]

Cost: 6 XP Passive + Active. When engaged with a single opponent: +1 die to all melee rolls. Once per scene, ignore first Harm 1 or 2 from that opponent.

Requires: Melee 3+, Wits 3+.

Battlefield Mastery [STRATEGY] [LEADERSHIP]

Cost: 6 XP Active, once per scene. When engaged with 3+ opponents, for the next 3 exchanges: all melee attacks gain +1 Effect, enemies act at -1 die, your Position improves by one step, and you may convert one Harm 1 per exchange to Fatigue.

Requires: Melee 4+, Wits 4+, Command 2+.

Backstab [STEALTH] [STRIKE]

Cost: 6 XP Active, once per scene. When you attack an Unaware or Engaged foe from Stealth, deal +1 Harm and ignore 1 point of their Armor. On a miss, you are Exposed (Desperate Position or mark 1 Harm).

Requires: Stealth 2+, Melee 2+, light weapon.

Elusive Dodge [DEFENSE] [EVADE]

Cost: 6 XP Reactive, once per exchange. When targeted by a physical attack, you may immediately enter a Defend stance as a free reaction. Mark 1 Fatigue after use.

Requires: Stealth 2+, Wits 3+, Tier II.

Berserker Rage [FURY] [POWER]

Cost: 6 XP Active, once per scene. For 3 rounds: +2 dice to melee attacks, ignore first Harm 1 each round, ignore Harm/Fatigue penalties, Position becomes Desperate (re-roll successes). When rage ends, mark Fatigue equal to Spirit. Cannot be ended early.

Requires: Melee 3+, Spirit 3+, Body 3+.

Cavalier [MOBILITY] [MARTIAL]

Cost: 4 XP Passive while mounted. Gain +2 dice to melee attacks when moving Far→Near, or +2 dice to ranged attacks when moving Near→Far.

Requires: War Mount Asset, Melee 2+ or Ranged 2+.

Subtle Casting [HIDDEN] [CONTROL]

Cost: 6 XP Active. Make a Performance + Lore roll to quietly cast a spell, invoke a Rite, or sing a Cantos against DV (Tier). If successful, the casting does not generate Story Beats on the Channel or initial roll. Any SB generated are banked by the GM and applied later. Cannot be used for Great or Extreme Tier effects.

Requires: Lore 3+, Performance 2+ or Runekeeper with Codex.

Effortless Charge [MOVEMENT] [MARTIAL]

Cost: 4 XP Active, once per scene. When you take the Charge action (see 2), you may ignore the Fatigue cost. All other costs and restrictions (Desperate defense, open ground requirement) still apply.

Requires: Body 3+, Melee 2+.

Effortless Skirmish [MOVEMENT] [MARTIAL]

Cost: 4 XP Active, once per scene. When you take the Skirmish (or Harrying Shot) action (see 2), you may ignore the Fatigue cost. All other costs and restrictions (Desperate defense, open ground requirement) still apply.

Requires: Wits 3+, Ranged 2+.

Relentless [MOVEMENT] [TERRAIN]

Cost: 6 XP Passive. You may take the Charge or Skirmish action over difficult terrain (rubble, dense forest, shallow water, steep slopes). The Fatigue cost (1) is not waived unless you also have the relevant Effortless talent.

Requires: Body 3+, Athletics 2+.

Stubborn Pursuer [MOVEMENT] [REACTION]

Cost: 6 XP Reactive. When an opponent within Close range uses the Disengage action (or any movement intended to leave your engagement without provoking an opportunity attack), you may use your reaction to move with them, staying in Close range. This movement does not cost an action and does not provoke opportunity attacks. You move the same number of range bands as they do (e.g., Close → Near, or Near → Far), up to your normal movement limit for the round. You cannot use this talent if you have already taken a Move action or Dash this round. Once per round.

Requires: Body 3+, Athletics 2+.

Horse Archer's Art [MOUNTED] [RANGED] [FLOW]

Cost: 5 XP Passive + Active. You treat the Mounted Archery talent's penalties as fully eliminated for walk/trot, and for gallop/evade you suffer no penalty. Additionally, once per scene when you take a Skirmish action (move one band and make a ranged attack) while mounted, you may also have your mount move an additional band (up to two bands total) as part of the same action. This extra movement costs no additional action and does not provoke opportunity attacks.

Requires: Mounted Archery, Ranged 2+, Ride (or Athletics) 2+.

Cultural Affinity: Ykrul and Kuvani characters may reduce the XP cost to 4 XP.

Defense

Riposte Instinct [COUNTER] [STRIKE]

Cost: 4 XP Reactive, once per scene. When you Defend and score a Success, you may make a free Melee attack against the attacker at Position -1.

Requires: Melee 2+.

Requires: Athletics 2+ or Shield Proficiency.

Measured Guard [TACTICS] [FLEXIBILITY]

Cost: 4 XP Active. When Defending, you may declare your defense pool after the GM calls Position. Once per scene, you may instead choose the Attribute + Skill pair after the roll.

Requires: Perception 2+.

Wardbreaker Reflex [WARD] [DEFENSE]

Cost: 4 XP Reactive. When Defending against spells or supernatural effects, you may reroll 1 failed die. If your reroll succeeds, mark +1 Fatigue (arcane recoil).

Requires: Spirit 2+ or any magical Path.

Mounted Combat Traditions

Among the horse-clans of the Ykrul and the steppe riders of the Kuvani, archery from horseback is not a specialisation—it is a birthright. Characters from these cultures may take Mounted Archery at a reduced cost (1 XP instead of 2) and Horse Archer's Art at 4 XP instead of 5. Game Masters may extend this cultural discount to other mounted traditions in their setting (e.g., Linn skirmishers, Vilikari border riders).

Monk (Unarmed) Talents

Iron Fist Technique [STRIKE] [POWER]

Cost: 6 XP Passive. +1 die to unarmed attacks; strikes count as enchanted for purposes of harming supernatural creatures.

Requires: Wits 3+, Melee 2+.

Requires: Melee 2+, Perception 2+.

Requires: Resolve 3+, Spirit 2+, access to Rites or Cantos.

Requires: Melee 3+, Presence 1+.

Hollow-Touched [RESILIENCE]

Cost: 8 XP Reactive. When you would take Harm, you may mark that amount as Fatigue instead. If you do, either the GM gains 1 SB or you mark 1 Obligation to the Pale Shepherd. Overflow triggers normal Fatigue→Harm conversion plus the chosen cost.

Requires: Aelaerem affinity (see 14.19.4), Spirit 3+, Stealth 2+.

Stone-Bound Interdictor [RESILIENCE]

After a successful heist, you may declare that no traceable evidence remains. The GM cannot use Social SB to retroactively implicate you from that scene. Cost: You must accept a permanent Reputation: Whispers tag; some will always suspect you, even without proof.

Requires: Tier II, Stealth 3+.

Spymaster [SOCIAL] [NETWORK] [PRESTIGE]

Cost: 8 XP Passive + Active. You have a permanent network of informants in any city you have visited for at least a week. Once per session, you may ask the GM one detailed question about faction movements, hidden plans, or NPC secrets in that city. Additionally, the GM may provide a rumour or warning unprompted once per arc.

Requires: Network Weaver, Information Broker, Tier II.

Master Cantor [PERFORMANCE] [LEGENDARY]

Cost: 10 XP Passive + Active. Your performances are legendary. Once per session, when you roll Performance for a significant performance (in front of a crowd of at least 10 people), treat the result as one degree better (Miss → Partial, Partial → Success, Success → Critical). Additionally, once per arc, you may inspire an entire community; allies within the community gain +1 die to all rolls related to a single goal (e.g., defending the town, finding a lost child) for one session.

Requires: Spirit 3+, Meditative Focus.

Free Caster Prestige Talents

Spell Echo [ECHO] [FATE]

Cost: 8 XP Reactive, once per session. When you roll a 1 on a Free Casting roll, you may immediately reroll that die. The new result stands, and any 1 on the reroll generates an additional SB as normal. After using this talent, you cannot use it again until you have taken a Short Rest.

Requires: Spellcraft, Controlled Burn, Tier II.

Resonance Anchor [ANCHOR] [STABILITY]

Cost: 9 XP Passive. Your connection to the Weave is more stable. The first time you would generate a Story Beat from a 1 in a scene, you may choose to bank that SB for yourself (it does not go to the GM). You may have up to 2 banked SB at a time, and you may spend them as if they were Boons (reroll a die, activate an Asset, improve Position). Unused banked SB are lost at the end of the scene.

Requires: Spellcraft, Weave Resilience, Tier II.

Combat Prestige

Battlefield Terror [FEAR] [DOMINANCE]

Cost: 10 XP Passive + Active. Enemies in Close range act at -1 die due to intimidation. Once per scene, convert an enemy's success to a partial with cost.

Requires: Melee 4+, Body 4+, Harm 2+ experience.

Requires: Backstab, Stealth 3+, Mobility 2+.

Embrace the Void [CORRUPTION] [POWER]

Cost: 8 XP Active, once per session. Embrace your Patron's corrupting influence. Mark 2 Obligation and 1 Corruption segment, then gain one for the scene: +1 die and +1 Effect on Patron-domain rolls, immunity to one consequence type, use one Rite without Obligation, or +1 Effect on social manipulations. Permanent mark on sheet; GM gains +1 SB against you when Patron is relevant.

Requires: Any character with 2+ skill levels tied to Patron, at least 1 Obligation segment to that Patron.

9.5 Epic Talents (11+ XP)

Elemental Mastery [ELEMENT] [HARMONY]

Cost: 18 XP Passive + Active. Reduce Backlash severity by one step when casting with your focus elements. When casting with two focus elements, gain +2 dice and +1 Effect. Crack the Seal Mastery [RITUAL] [PRECISION]

Cost: 18 XP Passive + Active. When Cracking the Seal, choose one: reduce Obligation cost by 1, prevent Symbol from becoming Compromised, or gain +1 Effect. Deathblow [DEATH] [STRIKE]

Cost: 12 XP Active, once per scene. When you strike from Dominant Position or after re-entering Stealth via Shadow Dance, declare a Deathblow. On a hit, deal triple Harm. If the attack incapacitates the target, attempt a free Stealth test to vanish. On a miss, you are Exposed (Desperate Position and mark 1 Harm). May mark 1 Fatigue to attempt a second time. This ability cannot be used against bosses or creatures with a Tier higher than your own (GM's discretion).

Requires: Shadow Dance, Stealth 4+, Melee/Ranged 3+.

Weave Harmonist [HARMONY] [FLOW]

Cost: 16 XP Passive + Active. You have learned to ride the Weave's turbulence. Once per session, you may ignore all SB generated by a single Free Casting roll (the GM gains none). When to Take Talents (By Tier)

- Early Game (0–40 XP): Take 1–2 access talents (Spellcraft, Familiar) and 2–3 minor talents that support your core concept. For Free Casters, prioritize Controlled Burn and Weave Resilience. For Rogues, take Light Fingers and Silk Palms. For mounted archers, take Mounted Archery. For social characters, take Smooth Talker and Ear to the Ground. For healers, take Field Dressing. For rangers, take Keen Tracker. For crafters, take Master Tinker. For performers, take Projecting Voice.
- Mid Game (41–90 XP): Add major talents (Codex, Patron’s Symbol, Backstab, The Velvet Glove, Iron Fist Technique, Horse Archer’s Art, Trusted Reputation, Efficient Recruiter, Triage, Camouflage, Master Artificer, Captivating Performance, etc.) and 2–3 synergistic power talents. Free Casters should take Elemental Attunement and Backlash Siphon.
- Late Game (91+ XP): Acquire 1–2 prestige or epic talents that define your legacy. Free Casters should aim for Spell Echo, Resonance Anchor, and finally Weave Harmonist. Rogues should consider Shadow Dance, Deathblow, or Ghost Heist. Social characters should aim for Spymaster. Performers should aim for Master Cantor.

Example: The Shadow Assassin

A rogue who takes Backstab (9.3) at Tier I, Shadow Dance (9.4) at Tier II, and Deathblow (9.5) at Tier III can execute a devastating assassination chain:

1. Attack from stealth with Backstab (+1 Harm, ignore armor).
2. After a kill, use Shadow Dance to re-enter stealth.
3. Later, strike from Dominant Position with Deathblow (triple Harm).

This combination requires careful positioning and Boon management, but is highly effective.

Example: The Silent Infiltrator

A rogue who takes The Unlocked Window (9.2) and Crowd Veil (9.3) at Tier I, then Always Another Exit (9.3) at Tier II, can bypass security, vanish into crowds, and escape any corner. Add Shadow Song (9.4) for the ability to lull guards and unlock spirit-locks with song.

Example: The Stable Free Caster

A Free Caster who takes Controlled Burn (9.3) at Tier I, Weave Resilience (9.3) at Tier I–II, Spell Echo (9.4) at Tier II, Resonance Anchor (9.4) at Tier III, and finally Weave Harmonist (9.5) at Tier IV can reduce the swinginess of free casting dramatically. The first 1 of each scene becomes player currency rather than GM fuel; backlash is softened; and once per session, the caster can completely ignore SB from a critical spell. This build remains more dangerous than a Runekeeper but avoids the “wild mage” volatility.

Example: The Unarmed Master

A monk who takes Disciplined Body (9.2) and Open Hand Technique (9.2) at Tier I, then Iron Fist Technique (9.3) and Flowing Spirit Technique (9.3) at Tier II, and finally Untouchable Form (9.4) at Tier III becomes a durable, mobile unarmed fighter who converts harm to fatigue, shrugs off fear, and cannot be grappled.

Example: The Horse Archer

A Ykrul rider who takes Mounted Archery (9.2) at Tier I and Horse Archer’s Art (9.3) at Tier II can fire accurately from a galloping horse and use the Skirmish action to move twice as far while shooting. This build excels at hit-and-run tactics, wearing down enemies from a distance while staying out of reach.

Example: The Face of the Party

A social character who takes Smooth Talker (9.2) and Negotiation Stance (9.2) at Tier I, then Trusted Reputation (9.3) and Information Broker (9.3) at Tier II, and finally Spymaster (9.4) at Tier III can navigate any court, gather intelligence from thin air, and call in favours from across the city. This build shines in political campaigns and urban intrigue.

Example: The Commander

A leader who takes Efficient Recruiter (9.3) at Tier I, Loyalty Bond (9.3) and Delegated Upkeep (9.3) at Tier II, and builds a network of Cap 3+ followers can run a faction from the shadows. The followers manage Assets, handle upkeep, and remain fiercely loyal. This build is ideal for players who want to build a mercenary company, a spy network, or a criminal empire.

Example: The Legendary Performer

A performer who takes Projecting Voice (9.2) at Tier I, Captivating Performance (9.3) and Voice of Reason (9.3) at Tier II, and finally Master Cantor (9.4) at Tier III can calm a riot, inspire an army, or negotiate peace between warring factions. Their performances are the stuff of legend.

Example: The Combat Medic

A healer who takes Field Dressing (9.2) at Tier I and Triage (9.3) at Tier II can keep allies alive through the deadliest battles. Field Dressing prevents death from a killing blow; Triage mitigates penalties and restores energy. This build is essential for any party that expects heavy combat.

Example: The Master Artificer

A crafter who takes Master Tinker (9.2) at Tier I, then Master Artificer (9.3) and Asset Crafter (9.3) at Tier II can build a workshop, forge magical items, and construct Assets at half the cost and time. This build is ideal for campaigns with significant downtime and base-building elements.

9.7 Custom Talents

Work with your GM to create custom talents:

- Base on story events.
- Use the cost tiers above (2–3 / 4–6 / 7–10 / 11+ XP).
- Define clear prerequisites, activation, and limits.

9.8 Talent Respecification

With GM approval, you may retrain talents during downtime (one downtime period). Provide a narrative justification. Typically limited to once per major story arc.

Talent Selection Quick Reference

Minor (2–3 XP): Small bonuses, once/scene tricks.

Major (4–6 XP): Strong permanent upgrades, core path abilities.

Prestige (7–10 XP): Campaign-shaping, breaks limits.

Epic (11+ XP): Legendary, story-defining power.

Remember: Passive talents stack; active talents require an action or reaction.

Chapter 10

Your First Magical Character

So you want to play a magic-user. Good choice – but FATE’s EDGE offers six different magical paths. Jumping into all of them at once is a recipe for confusion. This guide helps you pick a path and then walks you through building a single, focused magical character that is powerful, fun, and manageable.

Quick Reference: Magic Paths at a Glance

Use this table to choose a path that fits your preferred complexity and play style. New players: start with Runekeeper.

Path	Complexity	Cost Type	Risk	Best For
Runekeeper	Low	Obligation	Patron demands	First-timers, reliable
Cantor	Medium	Corruption	Social fallout, madness	Bards, performers,
Invoker	Medium–High	Obligation + ritual time	Slow casting, Symbol breaks	Ritual specialists,
Summoner	High	Leash + Boons	Spirit breaks free	Pet-class fans, tacti
Free Caster	High	Backlash (Fatigue/Harm)	Unpredictable effects	Improv players, wi
Psionics (optional)	Medium	Mental Strain	Mental strain, social distrust	Mind-power enthus

All paths are viable. The table only shows the relative complexity and risk. If you are still unsure, follow the recommendation below – you can always learn a second path later (see 5).

10.1 Step 0: The Recommendation

If this is your first magical character, play a Runekeeper. Why?

- One Patron: You swear to a single Patron. No juggling multiple Symbols or conflicting obligations.
- Clear costs: Every Rite costs Obligation. Track one number.
- Support from your Thiasos: Your familiar is a built-in roleplay hook and mechanical aid.

You can explore Invokers, Cantors, Witches, Psions, or Summoners later. Start simple.

Which Magic Path Fits You?

Not every player enjoys the same kind of magic. Use this table to find the path that matches how you like to play.

If you want...	Choose this path	Why it fits
Reliable, straightforward magic with clear costs	Runekeeper	One Patron, one resource (Obligation). No surprises.
To sing, perform, and risk losing yourself	Cantor	Corruption clock creates drama; great for bards and risk-takers.
Rituals, preparation, and borrowing power from multiple sources	Invoker	Slow but flexible; you collect Symbols like tools.
A summoned creature that fights for you	Summoner	Tactical pet class; manage the Leash clock.
Improvised magic on the fly, unpredictable effects	Free Caster	TAGS system lets you invent spells; high risk, high reward.
Mind powers and subtle influence (optional)	Psionics	No Patron, but mental strain and social suspicion.

Still unsure? Let's start with Runekeeper. You can always learn a second path later (see 5).

10.2 Step 1: Choose a Patron

Your Patron defines your Rites, your Obligation, and your role in the story. Pick one that matches your character concept.

Patron	Domain	Character Concept
The Traveler	Roads, journeys, safe passage	Guide, courier, scout
Oath of Flame & Light	Dawn, vows, protection	Paladin, healer, knight
Grimmir	Nature, seasons	Druid, ranger, hedge-witch
Ikasha	Shadow, secrets, thresholds	Spy, infiltrator, night-walker
The Witness	Truth, memory, revelation	Investigator, judge, archivist
Mykkiel	Law, covenant, judgment	Templar, inquisitor, notary
The Carrion-King	Decay, renewal, compost	Necromancer (gentle), healer

New player favourite: The Traveler. Low Obligation costs, useful Rites, and a forgiving Patron.

10.3 Step 2: Buy Your Core Talents

At character creation (30–34 XP), you need two talents:

- Familiar (Thiasos) – 2 XP. Your bond to your Patron. It might be a raven (Traveler), a candle flame (Oath of Flame), or a small fungal creature (Carrion-King).
- Codex – 4 XP. Your book of Rites. It could be a leather journal, a set of carved slate tablets, or a roll of bark.

Total so far: 6 XP. You have 24–28 XP remaining for Attributes, Skills, and optional talents.

10.4 Step 3: Set Your Attributes

Runekeepers rely on Spirit (Obligation capacity, Rite effectiveness) and Wits (Lore, Investigation). A simple spread:

Attribute	Rating	Cost (new rating ×3)
Spirit	3	9 XP (1→2 = 6, 2→3 = 9)
Wits	2	6 XP (1→2 = 6)
Body	1	0 (base)
Presence	1	0 (base)

Total: 15 XP. You have 9–13 XP remaining.

10.5 Step 4: Buy Your Skills

You need Lore (to understand your Rites) and at least one social or utility skill.

Skill	Rating	Cost (new level ×2)
Lore	2	6 XP (0→1 = 2, 1→2 = 4)
Insight	1	2 XP (0→1 = 2)
Sway	1	2 XP (0→1 = 2)

Total: 10 XP. You now have 0–3 XP left – perfect for one minor talent.

10.6 Step 5: Choose Your First Rites

You begin with two Low Rites from your Patron. Pick ones that are useful and clear.

Example: The Traveler

- Road-Sense (Low, 4 XP): Gain +1 die to avoid ambushes or delays on a journey. Use this every travel leg.
- Traveler’s Boon (Low, 5 XP): Ignore one level of difficult terrain or bureaucracy for the scene. Great for crossing rivers or skipping paperwork.

Example: Oath of Flame & Light

- Kindle Vow (Low, 4 XP): Declare a short vow (e.g., “I will protect the villagers”). Gain +1 die to actions fulfilling it.
- Lay on Hands (Low, 5 XP): Cleanse an affliction or downgrade Harm by 1. The classic healing Rite.

10.7 Step 6: Understand Your Resources

You track three numbers:

1. Obligation (to your Patron). Capacity = Spirit + Presence. For Spirit 3, Presence 1, capacity is 4. Each Rite marks +1 Obligation. When you exceed capacity, mark 1 Fatigue per extra segment.
2. Fatigue. Each point worsens Position. When Fatigue fills your Body track (Body 1 = 1 segment), convert to Harm.
3. Harm. Harm 1 = -1 die, Harm 2 = -2 dice, Harm 3 = incapacitated.

Player’s job: Mark these yourself. Announce when Obligation fills. The GM does not track them for you.

10.8 Step 7: Play Your First Session

Before the session

- Write your two Rites on an index card.
- Set your Obligation to 0.
- Set your Fatigue to 0.

During the session

1. Invoke a Rite: Say “I invoke Road-Sense.” Mark +1 Obligation. Roll Lore + Spirit (or as specified). Apply the effect.
2. Take a Short Rest: Clear 2 Fatigue.
3. Accept a Patron’s demand: If the GM says “your Patron requires a task,” treat it as a story hook, not a punishment.

After the session

- Clear Obligation by performing an Act of Service for your Patron (e.g., The Traveler: guide a lost traveller; Oath of Flame: speak a public vow). Describe the act. The GM will tell you how much Obligation clears.
- Spend XP to raise Attributes, Skills, or buy new Rites.

10.9 Optional: Add a Minor Talent

If you have 2–4 XP left, take one of these:

- Efficient Invocation (4 XP): Reduce Obligation cost of one specific Low Rite by 1 (minimum 0).
- Keen Senses (2 XP): +1 die on perception checks.
- Silver Tongue (2 XP): +1 die on persuasion attempts.

10.10 What to Avoid at First

- Multiple Patrons. Stick to one. Cross-Resonance (see 5) adds complexity you don't need yet.
- Crack the Seal (Invoker ability). You are a Runekeeper. Let Invokers handle emergency rituals.
- Cantor's Corruption. A great path, but the Corruption clock requires active management. Save it for your second character.

10.11 Sample Build: Kestra the Traveler's Runekeeper

Element	Choice
Name	Kestra
Patron	The Traveler
Attributes	Spirit 3 (9 XP), Wits 2 (6 XP), Body 1, Presence 1
Skills	Lore 2 (6 XP), Insight 1 (2 XP), Sway 1 (2 XP)
Talents	Familiar (2 XP), Codex (4 XP)
Rites	Road-Sense (4 XP), Traveler's Boon (5 XP)
Starting Boons	3
Obligation Capacity	4 (Spirit 3 + Presence 1)

Total XP spent: $9+6+2+2+2+4+4+5 = 34$ XP (using the +4 XP from Bonds/Complications).

Kestra is a former caravan guide who swore to the Traveler after being betrayed by her crew. She carries a brass compass (her Thiasos) and a leather journal of route-maps (her Codex). She invokes Road-Sense before every journey and Traveler's Boon to cross difficult terrain. She tracks her Obligation carefully and pays it off by guiding lost travellers through the mountains.

10.12 Final Advice

The One Rule for New Magical Players

Spend your Boons. Hoarding them for XP conversion starves the table of drama. A re-rolled failure, an improved Position, or an activated Asset creates a memorable moment. The XP will come from your adventures.

You are now ready to play a Runekeeper. When you feel comfortable, read about the other five paths (see 5). But for now, enjoy the clarity of one Patron, one Codex, and one set of Rites.

The road is waiting. Pay your toll.

Chapter 11

Example Character Concepts

This chapter presents example character concepts to illustrate how the game’s systems can create diverse and interesting heroes. These are examples only—not prescriptive templates or exhaustive lists. Use them for inspiration, as pre-generated characters, or as starting points for your own unique creations.

11.1 Important Disclaimer

These examples are provided for illustrative purposes only. They demonstrate how the game’s mechanics can support different character archetypes and play styles. You are encouraged to:

- Modify these concepts to fit your preferences
- Create completely original characters
- Mix and match elements from different examples
- Work with your Game Master to develop unique concepts

The game system is designed to support a wide variety of character types beyond these examples.

11.2 How to Use These Examples

Each concept includes:

- Concept Overview: Narrative identity and role
- Traditional Analogues: Common RPG classes that share similar themes — not mechanical restrictions, just touchstones
- Mechanical Foundation: Suggested starting capabilities
- Play Style: How the character typically engages with challenges
- Development Path (by Tier): What to buy at Tier I, II, and III (see 7.8)
- Tactical Advice: Tips for playing the role effectively
- Story Hooks: Plot opportunities for the Game Master
- Legacy Note: How this character might pass the torch (see 19)
- Build Blocks: A 30 XP starting build, plus an optional 34 XP variant using Bonds/Complications (+4 XP) (see 7 for XP rules)

11.3 1. The Guardian (Fighter / Paladin / Knight)

Concept: A protector who stands between danger and those they've sworn to defend. Steel in hand, vow in heart. Whether a chivalrous knight, a grizzled mercenary, or a holy warrior of the Everflame, the Guardian makes others safe through sacrifice.

Traditional Analogues: Fighter, Paladin, Barbarian (defensive), Knight, Samurai, Legionary

Mechanical Foundation:

- Primary: Body (strength, endurance), Spirit (willpower, resolve)
- Skills: Melee, Athletics, Command, Endurance
- Talents: Defensive Survival, Combat Reflexes, Conditioning (see 9)

Play Style:

- Frontline combat and protection
- Drawing attention away from allies (taunts, positioning)
- Using presence and authority to control situations
- Taking risks to protect others — absorbing Harm meant for teammates

11.3.0.0.1 Development Path (by Tier) :

- Tier I (0–40 XP): Raise Body to 3, Melee to 2, take Defensive Survival and Combat Reflexes. Use a shield.
- Tier II (41–90 XP): Raise Body to 4, take Conditioning and Tactical Movement. Consider a War Mount Asset (8 XP) for mobility.
- Tier III (91–150 XP): Take Battlefield Mastery or Mystic Bulwark. Upgrade armor to Heavy if you have Strength. Start training a successor (Cap 3+ follower).

11.3.0.0.2 Tactical Advice :

- Use the Defend action when outnumbered; it improves your Position by one step and can protect allies.
- Spend Boons on re-rolling failed defense rolls, not on offense. Your job is to survive.
- Position matters more than damage. A Dominant position lets you re-roll failures – use shoves, terrain, and cover to stay in control.
- When you take Harm, remember it clears Fatigue. Sometimes a small wound is worth the reset.

Story Hooks:

- Who or what are they protecting? A person, a place, an ideal?
- What oath or duty drives them — sworn, inherited, or self-imposed?
- What happens if they fail in their protection?
- What personal costs do they bear for their role (scars, lost loved ones, broken oaths)?

Legacy Note: A loyal follower (squire, apprentice) can become your successor, inheriting your sworn duty and reputation. See 19.

11.3.0.0.3 Build Blocks. Starting Build (30 XP).

- Attributes (Cost = rating $\times$ 3 XP): Body 3 (9), Spirit 2 (6), Wits 1 (3), Presence 1 (3) $\rightarrow$ 21 XP
- Skills (Cost = level $\times$ 2 XP): Melee 2 (4), Athletics 1 (2), Command 1 (2) $\rightarrow$ 8 XP
- Total: 29 XP (bank 1 XP)

With Bonds/Complications (34 XP).

- Add Talent: Combat Reflexes (2 XP)
- Add Talent: Defensive Survival (3 XP)
- Total: 29 + 5 = 34 XP

11.4 2. The Mage (Wizard / Sorcerer / Arcanist)

Concept: A wielder of arcane power who reshapes reality through study, intuition, or pact. Candlesmoke, marginalia, and dangerous truths. From the rational Wizard of Thepyrgos to the instinctive Sorcerer of the Bloodlands, magic flows through them — and sometimes through them.

Traditional Analogues: Wizard, Sorcerer, Warlock (pact magic), Arcanist, Runekeeper

Mechanical Foundation:

- Primary: Wits (theory, precision), Spirit (willpower, channeling)
- Skills: Lore, Arcana, Investigation, (optionally) Sway (for social casting)
- Talents: Spellcraft (freeform), Codex (runekeeper), Patron's Symbol (invoker)

Play Style:

- Information gathering and magical analysis
- Solving puzzles and mysteries with arcane insight
- Using magic to gain advantages in combat and social scenes
- Researching new spells and rituals between adventures
- Managing Obligation (for Runekeepers) or Backlash (for free casters)

11.4.0.0.1 Development Path (by Tier) :

- Tier I: Take Spellcraft (6 XP) or Codex + Thiasos (6 XP). Raise Wits to 3, Arcana/Lore to 2.
- Tier II: Add Elemental Focus (4 XP) or Ritual Mastery (4 XP). Raise Spirit to 3 for more Obligation capacity.
- Tier III: Take Arcane Dominance or Crack Specialist (if Invoker). Build a library (Standard Asset, 8 XP) to research faster.

11.4.0.0.2 Tactical Advice :

- Push It only when necessary – extra Obligation or Fatigue can snowball. Use Boons to improve Position before rolling.
- Free casters: Use cantrips (single tag) for safe, repeatable effects. Reserve multi-tag spells for critical moments.
- Runekeepers: Your Patron's Gift gives +1 Melee and +1 Thematic. Use it even if you aren't a fighter – the Thematic skill can be Sway, Lore, or Stealth.
- Invokers: Crack the Seal is for emergencies. Restore your Symbol during downtime before you need it again.

Story Hooks:

- What forbidden knowledge are they seeking?
- How did they acquire their magical talent — bloodline, study, pact, accident?
- What dangerous secrets might they uncover?
- Who opposes their research (rival mages, witch-hunters, the Church)?

Legacy Note: A trusted apprentice (follower) can inherit your Codex or Symbol collection, continuing your magical legacy. See 19.

11.4.0.0.3 Build Blocks. Starting Build (30 XP).

- Attributes: Wits 3 (9), Spirit 2 (6), Body 1 (3), Presence 1 (3) → 21 XP
- Skills: Lore 2 (4), Arcana 1 (2) → 6 XP
- Total: 27 XP (bank 3 XP)

With Bonds/Complications (34 XP).

- Add Talent: Spellcraft (6 XP) using banked $3 + 4 = 7$ XP; bank 1 XP
- Total: $27 + 6 = 33$ XP (bank 1 XP)

11.5 3. The Rogue (Thief / Assassin / Scout)

Concept: A shadow who moves where others cannot, taking what others cannot keep. Quiet footfalls, hawk eyes, and no loyalties but coin. From the street-wise cutpurse of Silkstrand to the deadly assassin of Zakov, the Rogue survives by wits, speed, and one hidden knife.

Traditional Analogues: Rogue, Thief, Assassin, Scout, Ranger (stealth focus), Spy

Mechanical Foundation:

- Primary: Wits (perception, quick thinking), Body (agility, stealth)
- Skills: Stealth, Subterfuge, Investigation (or Streetwise), (optionally) Melee (light weapons)
- Talents: Backstab, Elusive Dodge, Shadow Dance (later – see 9)

Play Style:

- Scouting ahead and gathering intelligence
- Infiltrating secured areas and disabling traps
- Ambush and skirmish tactics — striking from stealth
- Finding paths, contacts, and secrets in cities and wilderness

11.5.0.0.1 Development Path (by Tier) :

- Tier I: Raise Wits to 3, Stealth/Subterfuge to 2. Take Backstab (6 XP) – you can afford it at 34 XP start.
- Tier II: Take Elusive Dodge (6 XP). Raise Body to 3 for better tracking. Consider a Minor Asset (Hidden Cache, 4 XP).
- Tier III: Take Shadow Dance (10 XP) and Deathblow (12 XP) – the classic assassination chain. Build a spy network (Standard Asset, 8 XP).

11.5.0.0.2 Tactical Advice :

- Always aim for Dominant Position before attacking from stealth. Spend a Boon to improve Position if needed.
- Use the environment. Ask the GM: “Is there a chandelier? A shadowed alcove? Loose gravel?” Use it to gain advantage.
- Backstab + Shadow Dance + Deathblow is lethal, but requires Boons. Engage only when you have 2–3 Boons saved.
- When outmatched, retreat. Spend a Boon to make a Controlled withdrawal instead of Desperate.

Story Hooks:

- What crime or secret forced them into the shadows?
- What treasure or truth are they hunting?
- How do they balance loyalty to allies with self-preservation?
- Who wants them dead — and why?

Legacy Note: A young pickpocket or informant (follower) could inherit your network of fences and contacts. See 19.

11.5.0.0.3 Build Blocks. Starting Build (30 XP).

- Attributes: Wits 3 (9), Body 2 (6), Presence 1 (3), Spirit 1 (3) → 21 XP
- Skills: Stealth 2 (4), Subterfuge 2 (4) → 8 XP
- Total: 29 XP (bank 1 XP)

With Bonds/Complications (34 XP).

- Add Talent: Backstab (6 XP) – needs 6 XP; bank 1 + 4 = 5 XP → not enough. Alternative: Add Skill: Perception 1 (2 XP) and Talent: Combat Reflexes (2 XP) and bank 2 XP. Or take a Minor Asset: Hidden Cache (4 XP) and bank 2 XP.
- Suggested: Hidden Cache + bank 2 XP → total 33 XP.

11.6 4. The Cleric (Priest / Healer / Exorcist)

Concept: A vessel of divine or spiritual power, channeling healing, truth, and judgment. Sacred flame, holy water, and a prayer on the lips. From the Lampers of Ecktoria to the fog-named exorcists of the Mistlands, the Cleric binds wounds and banishes darkness.

Traditional Analogues: Cleric, Priest, Paladin (healing focus), Exorcist, Shaman, Healer

Mechanical Foundation:

- Primary: Spirit (faith, willpower), Presence (authority, channeling)
- Skills: Lore (theology, rites), Medicine, Sway (prayer, exhortation), (optionally) Melee (symbolic weapon)
- Talents: Invoker (Patron’s Symbol) or Runekeeper (Thiasos + Codex of a divine Patron like Everflame, Oath of Flame & Light, Pale Shepherd – see 5)

Play Style:

- Healing and protecting allies
- Purifying curses, diseases, and undead
- Ley line and ritual magic (wards, consecrations)
- Using authority of faith to command or persuade

11.6.0.0.1 Development Path (by Tier) :

- Tier I: Raise Spirit to 3, Lore/Medicine to 2. Take a divine Patron's Symbol (4 XP) or Codex (4 XP).
- Tier II: Take Symbol Resonance (4 XP) or Efficient Invocation (4 XP). Raise Presence to 3 for better social influence.
- Tier III: Take Crack Specialist or Patron's Favor. Build a hospice or shrine (Standard Asset, 8 XP) to support your community.

11.6.0.0.2 Tactical Advice :

- Healing is powerful but slow. In combat, stabilise Harm 2+ allies first; use HEAL (Fatigue recovery) on everyone else.
- Your Patron's Symbol grants a free +1 to ritual rolls. Keep it displayed.
- Consecrate ground before a big fight – Rite of Consecrated Ground can turn the tide against undead or demons.
- Obligation is story fuel. When your Patron calls, answer – it will lead to adventure.

Story Hooks:

- What crisis of faith have they survived?
- What heresy or supernatural threat haunts them?
- How do they serve both the living and the dead?
- What price do they pay for divine power?

Legacy Note: An acolyte or lay healer (follower) can take up your Patron's Symbol and continue your mission. See 19.

11.6.0.0.3 Build Blocks. Starting Build (30 XP).

- Attributes: Spirit 3 (9), Presence 2 (6), Wits 1 (3), Body 1 (3) → 21 XP
- Skills: Medicine 2 (4), Lore 1 (2), Sway 1 (2) → 8 XP
- Total: 29 XP (bank 1 XP)

With Bonds/Complications (34 XP).

- Add Talent: Patron's Symbol (4 XP) for a divine Patron (e.g., Oath of Flame & Light), using banked 1 + 4 = 5 XP; bank 1 XP
- Total: 33 XP (bank 1 XP)

11.7 5. The Bard (Diplomat / Skald / Courtier)

Concept: A master of words, music, and social influence who changes minds and opens doors. A smile for the foyer, steel for the parlor. From the Skald of Linn to the Courtier of Vhasia, the Bard wields charm, rumor, and reputation as weapons.

Traditional Analogues: Bard, Diplomat, Courtier, Skald, Spy (social), Negotiator

Mechanical Foundation:

- Primary: Presence (charm, performance), Wits (reading people, timing)
- Skills: Sway, Performance, Insight, (optionally) Lore (customs, history)
- Talents: Silver Tongue, Inspire, Network Builder (or Read Emotions)

Play Style:

- Social interaction and negotiation
- Gathering information through rumors and contacts
- Resolving conflicts without violence (or making violence fashionable)
- Building alliances, manipulating factions

11.7.0.0.1 Development Path (by Tier) :

- Tier I: Raise Presence to 3, Sway to 2. Take Silver Tongue (2 XP) and Inspire (3 XP).
- Tier II: Take Command Presence (4 XP) and Network Builder (4 XP). Raise Wits to 3 for social reading.
- Tier III: Take High Stance Duelist (if you use a blade) or Battlefield Terror. Build a spy network (Standard Asset, 8 XP) or a courtly title (Major Asset, 12 XP).

11.7.0.0.2 Tactical Advice :

- Social scenes are your domain. Use Inspire to give allies +1 die or +1 Boon – it can turn a negotiation.
- Flashback declarations (spend 1 Boon) are perfect for bards. “I already bribed the guard last night.”
- Don’t neglect combat skills entirely. A rapier and High Stance Duelist can make you a credible threat.
- Use Intricate descriptions to gain free re-rolls on 1s. Describe your performance, your charming smile, your family crest.

Story Hooks:

- What major conflict are they trying to resolve?
- What secret do they know that could topple a dynasty?
- How do they handle betrayal or failed negotiations?
- What personal relationships affect their diplomacy?

Legacy Note: A protégé or herald (follower) can inherit your reputation and contacts, keeping your network alive. See 19.

11.7.0.0.3 Build Blocks. Starting Build (30 XP).

- Attributes: Presence 3 (9), Wits 2 (6), Spirit 1 (3), Body 1 (3) → 21 XP
- Skills: Sway 2 (4), Performance 1 (2), Insight 1 (2) → 8 XP
- Total: 29 XP (bank 1 XP)

With Bonds/Complications (34 XP).

- Add Talent: Inspire (3 XP) — once/scene, gain +1 die and potentially +1 Boon for bonded ally, using banked 1 + 4 = 5 XP; bank 2 XP
- Total: 32 XP (bank 2 XP)

11.8 6. The Ranger (Hunter / Tracker / Beastmaster)

Concept: A wilderness expert who navigates dangerous territories and hunts down quarry. Quiet footfalls, hawk eyes, and the long road. From the Ykrul scout to the Valewood warden, the Ranger lives where roads end.

Traditional Analogues: Ranger, Hunter, Tracker, Beastmaster, Pathfinder, Wilderness Scout

Mechanical Foundation:

- Primary: Wits (perception, navigation), Body (agility, endurance)
- Skills: Survival, Stealth, Nature (or Animal Handling), Archery or Melee
- Talents: Wilderness Lore, Keen Senses, (optionally) Animal Companion

Play Style:

- Scouting ahead and gathering intelligence
- Wilderness survival and navigation
- Tracking creatures or people across terrain
- Ambushing from concealment, using terrain
- (Optional) Bonding with an animal companion

11.8.0.0.1 Development Path (by Tier) :

- Tier I: Raise Wits to 3, Survival/Stealth to 2. Take Wilderness Lore (2 XP) and Keen Senses (2 XP).
- Tier II: Take Trackless Step (2 XP) and Elusive Dodge (6 XP) or a War Hound (Minor Asset, 4 XP). Raise Body to 3.
- Tier III: Take Shadow Dance (10 XP) (if melee) or Relentless (6 XP) for traversal. Upgrade your animal companion to a War Mount (Standard Asset, 8 XP) if allowed.

11.8.0.0.2 Tactical Advice :

- Use terrain to your advantage. High ground, cover, and difficult terrain are your best friends. Ask the GM to set Position based on these.
- Scout ahead even when not required. Knowledge of what's coming negates ambushes and reduces travel clocks.
- If you have an animal companion, use it to harass enemies (Distract & Draw independent action) rather than direct combat.
- Survival 3+ means you rarely need to roll for basic tasks. Leverage that for guaranteed successes in wilderness travel.

Story Hooks:

- What uncharted territory are they exploring?
- What secrets have they discovered in the wild?
- How do they balance civilization and wilderness?

- What prey (beast or man) still eludes them?

Legacy Note: Your animal companion or a young tracker (follower) could carry on your legacy. See 19.

11.8.0.0.3 Build Blocks. Starting Build (30 XP).

- Attributes: Wits 3 (9), Body 2 (6), Spirit 1 (3), Presence 1 (3) → 21 XP
- Skills: Survival 2 (4), Stealth 2 (4) → 8 XP
- Total: 29 XP (bank 1 XP)

With Bonds/Complications (34 XP).

- Add Talent: Keen Senses (2 XP)
- Add Talent: Wilderness Lore (2 XP)
- Total: 29 + 4 = 33 XP (bank 1 XP)

11.9 7. The Survivor (Veteran / Outcast / Hardened)

Concept: Someone who has endured hardship and developed resilience. Scars are maps; read them well. From the war-torn mercenary to the plague survivor, the Survivor won't break — they've already been broken and rebuilt.

Traditional Analogues: Barbarian (resilience focus), Veteran, Ranger (endurance), Drifter, Refugee

Mechanical Foundation:

- Primary: Spirit (willpower, resolve), Body (toughness)
- Skills: Endurance, Survival, (optionally) Perception (danger sense), Medicine (field)
- Talents: Iron Stomach, Conditioning, Second Wind (see 9)

Play Style:

- Enduring difficult conditions (lack of food, exposure, poison)
- Overcoming physical and mental challenges through grit
- Using experience to avoid dangers
- Helping others survive hardships
- Taking hits that would fell others and still standing

11.9.0.0.1 Development Path (by Tier) :

- Tier I: Raise Spirit to 3, Endurance/Survival to 2. Take Iron Stomach (3 XP) and Second Wind (2 XP).
- Tier II: Take Conditioning (4 XP) – your Body counts as +1 for Fatigue track. Raise Body to 3.
- Tier III: Take Hollow-Touched (8 XP) or Stone-Bound Interdictor (8 XP) to convert Harm to Fatigue. Build a safehouse (Minor Asset, 4 XP) for respite.

11.9.0.0.2 Tactical Advice :

- Embrace the roller-coaster effect. Taking Harm clears Fatigue – sometimes a small wound is a tactical reset.

- Iron Stomach makes you immune to mundane poisons and spoiled food. Volunteer to test unknown rations.
- Use Second Wind to clear Fatigue before it overflows into Harm.
- When outmatched, use the environment. Collapse a wall, start a fire, or trigger a rockfall. Your survival skills tell you how.

Story Hooks:

- What trauma or hardship have they survived?
- How has their past shaped their present?
- What survival skills have saved them repeatedly?
- How do they help others facing similar challenges?

Legacy Note: A fellow survivor (follower) can inherit your network of caches and safehouses. See 19.

11.9.0.0.3 Build Blocks. Starting Build (30 XP).

- Attributes: Spirit 3 (9), Body 2 (6), Wits 1 (3), Presence 1 (3) → 21 XP
- Skills: Endurance 2 (4), Survival 2 (4) → 8 XP
- Total: 29 XP (bank 1 XP)

With Bonds/Complications (34 XP).

- Add Talent: Iron Stomach (3 XP)
- Total: $29 + 3 = 32$ XP (bank 2 XP)

11.10 8. The Innovator (Artificer / Engineer / Tinker)

Concept: A creative problem-solver who finds new solutions through craft and invention. Blueprints on napkins, tomorrow in your pocket. From the Aeler engineer to the Gnome clockmaker, the Innovator builds what others only dream.

Traditional Analogues: Artificer, Engineer, Tinker, Alchemist, Inventor, Savant

Mechanical Foundation:

- Primary: Wits (design, analysis), Body (fine manipulation)
- Skills: Craft, Tinker, Mechanics, (optionally) Alchemy, Investigation
- Talents: Quick Study, Technical Expert, (optionally) Magical Laboratory asset (see 12)

Play Style:

- Solving problems with unique inventions
- Creating or repairing specialized items
- Providing services others cannot (lockpicking, trap disarm, device creation)
- Using knowledge to gain advantages in planning

11.10.0.0.1 Development Path (by Tier) :

- Tier I: Raise Wits to 3, Craft/Tinker to 2. Take Quick Study (3 XP) and Workshop (Minor Asset, 4 XP).

- Tier II: Take Efficient Invocation (if magical) or Weapon Mastery (if martial). Raise Body to 3 for fine manipulation.
- Tier III: Take Technical Expert (custom) or Crack Specialist (for magical items). Build a Guild Workshop (Standard Asset, 8 XP) to attract apprentices.

11.10.0.0.2 Tactical Advice :

- Preparation is your superpower. Spend downtime building tools, traps, and contingencies. Your GM will reward that.
- Use Quick Study to learn enemy weaknesses on the fly. “I notice the golem’s joints are unarmoured – aim there.”
- Your workshop asset can jury-rig solutions. Spend 1 Boon to “have the right tool” for a lock, a trap, or a repair.
- When combat starts, use gadgets. Caltrops, smoke bombs, and flash pellets can shift Position without a spell slot.

Story Hooks:

- What makes their specialty unique or valuable?
- How did they acquire their special skills (guild, apprenticeship, self-taught)?
- What problems require their specific expertise?
- Who seeks to control or exploit their abilities?

Legacy Note: An apprentice (follower) can inherit your workshop and blueprints, continuing your inventive tradition. See 19.

11.10.0.0.3 Build Blocks. Starting Build (30 XP).

- Attributes: Wits 3 (9), Body 2 (6), Presence 1 (3), Spirit 1 (3) → 21 XP
- Skills: Craft 2 (4), Tinker 2 (4) → 8 XP
- Total: 29 XP (bank 1 XP)

With Bonds/Complications (34 XP).

- Add Talent: Quick Study (3 XP) — +1 die to learn or adapt from observation, using banked 1 + 4 = 5 XP; bank 2 XP
- Total: 32 XP (bank 2 XP)

11.11 9. The Summoner (Pact-Whisperer / Necromancer / Shaman)

Concept: A binder of spirits, elementals, and otherworldly entities. Circles of salt, whispered names, and bargains struck in shadows. From the necromancer of the Mistlands to the shaman of the Steppe, the Summoner commands powers that others fear.

Traditional Analogues: Necromancer, Conjurer, Summoner, Shaman, Spirit Caller, Demonologist

Mechanical Foundation:

- Primary: Spirit (willpower, binding), Wits (rituals, names)

- Skills: Arcana, Lore (spirits), (optionally) Command, Survival
- Talents: Pact-Whisperer (Lesser/Greater), Spirit Link, (optionally) Codex of Names (see 5)

Play Style:

- Summoning creatures to fight, scout, or work
- Binding entities to solve problems (guard, research, transport)
- Negotiating with spirits and outsiders (social challenges)
- Managing Leash clocks and Boon Finesse

11.11.0.0.1 Development Path (by Tier) :

- Tier I: Take Pact-Whisperer (2 XP) and Lesser Pactwright (2 XP). Raise Spirit to 3, Arcana/Lore to 2.
- Tier II: Take Greater Pactwright (4 XP) to summon Cap 3 spirits. Take Spirit Synergy (4 XP) if you want two spirits.
- Tier III: Take Spirit Link (10 XP) or True Name Keeper (15 XP). Build a Spirit Circle (Minor Asset, 4 XP) to reduce Leash ticks.

11.11.0.0.2 Tactical Advice :

- Boon Finesse is your most important tool. Spend 1 Boon to clear 1 Leash tick – keep a reserve of 2–3 Boons for emergencies.
- Spirits are disposable but not free. Use them for dangerous tasks (scouting a trapped room, triggering a trap) before risking your own skin.
- When the Leash fills, the spirit acts once to its nature. Plan for it – position it near enemies before it breaks free.
- Negotiate with spirits. They have desires – a promise of freedom, a drop of blood, a secret. A willing spirit ticks Leash slower.

Story Hooks:

- What entity are they bound to or seeking?
- What price did they pay for their first summoning?
- How do others react to their “dark” magic?
- Who hunts them for their forbidden practices?

Legacy Note: A bonded spirit or an apprentice medium (follower) could inherit your spirit contracts, continuing your work. See 19.

11.11.0.0.3 Build Blocks. Starting Build (30 XP).

- Attributes: Spirit 3 (9), Wits 2 (6), Body 1 (3), Presence 1 (3) → 21 XP
- Skills: Arcana 2 (4), Lore 1 (2) → 6 XP
- Total: 27 XP (bank 3 XP)

With Bonds/Complications (34 XP).

- Add Talent: Pact-Whisperer (2 XP)
- Add Talent: Lesser Pactwright (2 XP)

- Total: $27 + 4 = 31$ XP (bank 3 XP; can add Familiar (2 XP) later or upgrade to Greater Pactwright)

11.12 10. The Commander (Warlord / Tactician / Leader)

Concept: A leader who directs allies, controls battlefields, and shapes conflicts through strategy. Orders in a whisper, victory in formation. From the Condotta captain to the Ecktorian legate, the Commander wins before blades are drawn.

Traditional Analogues: Warlord, Marshal, Tactician, Commander, Strategist, Banneret

Mechanical Foundation:

- Primary: Presence (authority, command), Wits (tactics, observation)
- Skills: Command, Tactics, (optionally) Sway (morale), Investigation (battlefield analysis)
- Talents: Inspire, Command Presence, Tactical Movement (for allies – see 9)

Play Style:

- Directing allies in combat (bonus dice, improved Position)
- Planning and executing tactical maneuvers
- Leading followers and assets in mass action (see 12)
- Using authority to intimidate or persuade

11.12.0.0.1 Development Path (by Tier) :

- Tier I: Raise Presence to 3, Command/Tactics to 2. Take Command Presence (4 XP) and Inspire (3 XP).
- Tier II: Take Tactical Movement (4 XP) and Network Builder (4 XP). Acquire a Cap 2–3 follower (soldier, herald).
- Tier III: Take Battlefield Mastery (6 XP) or Mystic Bulwark (8 XP). Build a War Chest (Standard Asset, 8 XP) to fund operations.

11.12.0.0.2 Tactical Advice :

- Use Inspire to give allies +1 die and +1 Boon. A well-timed inspiration can turn a miss into a success.
- Your followers are your strength. Keep them alive – spend Boons to protect them. A Cap 3 scout is worth more than a single attack.
- Use Tactical Movement to reposition without disengaging. Order allies to flank while you hold the line.
- In mass combat, treat your unit as a high-Cap follower. Your Command roll can advance the War Clock faster than any sword.

Story Hooks:

- What army or company did they lead before?
- What strategic defeat haunts them?
- Who are their rivals in the art of war?
- What cause do they fight for — coin, country, or creed?

Legacy Note: A loyal lieutenant or sergeant (follower) can inherit your command, leading the company after you. See 19.

11.12.0.0.3 Build Blocks. Starting Build (30 XP).

- Attributes: Presence 3 (9), Wits 2 (6), Body 1 (3), Spirit 1 (3) → 21 XP
- Skills: Command 2 (4), Tactics 2 (4) → 8 XP
- Total: 29 XP (bank 1 XP)

With Bonds/Complications (34 XP).

- Add Talent: Command Presence (4 XP) — +1 die on leadership/intimidation rolls, using banked 1 + 4 = 5 XP; bank 1 XP
- Total: 33 XP (bank 1 XP)

Reskinning the Paths: Runekeeper and Invoker as Familiar Concepts

The magic systems in Fate's Edge are designed to be reimaged. Neither Runekeeper (Thiasos + Codex) nor Invoker (Patron's Symbol) is locked into a single narrative identity. Below are common reskins — use the same mechanics, change the fiction.

Runekeeper — The Devoted Agent

A Runekeeper has sworn themselves to a single Patron, learning its Rites and bearing its Obligation. This framework can represent:

- Paladin / Crusader: Sworn to the Oath of Flame & Light or the Inquisitor Prime. Rites become prayers, smites, and consecrations. The Codex is a prayer book or a vow-etched gauntlet.
- Warlock / Pact-Bearer: Bound to a distant, alien, or dangerous Patron (e.g., Khemesh, Malachai, the Ninth). Rites are granted, not learned. Obligation is the steady pull of a bargain.
- Cleric / Priest: Devoted to the Everflame, the Pale Shepherd, or other divine powers. Rites are liturgies. The Patron's Gift is a blessing or a relic.
- Dark Knight / Death Knight: A fallen or morally ambiguous warrior who draws power from a grim Patron (Carrion-King, Mor'iraath). Melee and Rites mix; Obligation is a slow doom.

Mechanical core unchanged: 1 action Rites, Obligation track, Patron's Gift imbue, Push It option.

Invoker — The Professional Occultist

An Invoker does not fully commit to a single Patron. Instead, they carry Symbols (often tools, badges, or relics) of several Powers and perform rituals to invoke their Rites. This framework can represent:

- Exorcist / Witch Hunter: Carries symbols of several protective Patrons (The Sealed Gate, Oath of Flame, Gallow's Bell). Rites are wards, banishments, and purification rituals. Crack the Seal is an emergency exorcism.
- Alienist / Scholar of the Unseen: Studies forbidden Patrons (The Ninth, Khemesh, Mor'iraath) from a safe distance — “safe” being relative. Uses Symbol libraries to invoke their power without full devotion. Rituals are experimental and dangerous.

- Consulting Occultist / Paranormal Investigator: Carries a briefcase or satchel of Symbols — a bell from the Mistlands, a sun-seal from Ecktoria, a hag’s stone from Aelinnel. Hired to solve magical problems. Rituals are filed like work orders; Crack the Seal is “burning a favor.”
- Ritualist / Ceremonial Mage: Believes that power lies in procedure, not faith. Each Symbol is a “key” — a geometric diagram, a calendar, a consecrated blade. Rites are slow, deliberate, and precise. The Invoker is a technician, not a worshipper.

Mechanical core unchanged: Ritual time, Obligation per invocation, Symbol display reduces cost, Crack the Seal for instant effect.

Mixing and Blurring Lines

Characters may also blend these frameworks — a Runekeeper who occasionally carries a second Symbol for emergency rites, or an Invoker who one day pledges fully to a Patron and becomes a Runekeeper. The system does not penalize narrative growth; simply retrain Talents during downtime (see 9) when the fiction justifies it.

Remember: The fiction leads. If you want to play a Paladin, describe your Runekeeper’s Rites as prayers. If you want a Vodouisant or Hoodoo practitioner, re flavor Patron’s Symbols as sacred bundles, veves, or spirit vessels. If you want a monster hunter, carry a satchel of monster-specific Symbols (silver stake, iron bell, cold iron nail). The mechanics stay the same; the story breathes.

11.13 Creating Your Own Concept

Start with Narrative

- What is your character’s background and motivation?
- What role do they play in their community or society?
- What relationships are important to them?
- What goals are they pursuing?

Add Mechanical Support

- Choose attributes that support your concept (see 7.1)
- Select skills that reflect their training and experience (see 7.2)
- Consider talents that provide unique capabilities (see 9)
- Think about assets that represent their resources (see 12)

Consider Group Role

- How does your concept complement other party members?
- What gaps in group capability can you fill?
- What unique contributions can you make?
- How will you work with other characters?

Plan for Growth

- What short-term improvements make sense?
- What long-term development aligns with your concept?

- How might your character change over time?
- What legacy do you want to build? (See 19)

11.14 Final Notes

Remember that these examples are starting points, not limitations. The most interesting characters often combine elements from multiple concepts or create entirely new approaches. Work with your Game Master to ensure your character concept fits the campaign and provides engaging story opportunities.

The best characters are those that you find interesting to play and that contribute to an enjoyable experience for everyone at the table.

Chapter 12

Assets and Followers

Power in Fate’s Edge is not measured only by what your character can do with their own hands. As characters grow, their influence extends outward—into places, people, and institutions that act in their name.

Assets and Followers represent this outward reach. They are how a character’s past choices continue to matter when the dice stop rolling.

Assets reshape the world around you. Followers stand beside you when the world pushes back.

A Word from the Raven Road

*“A safehouse is not a home; it is a promise you may not keep. A follower is not a servant; they are a weight you choose to carry. Invest wisely, or the road will collect.” — Dusana of the Raven Road, *The Hearth Ledger

12.1 Understanding Assets and Followers

Assets and Followers serve different roles in play, but both are expressions of legacy, leverage, and risk.

Key Differences

- Assets are off-screen resources: places, networks, titles, or enterprises.
- Followers are on-screen allies who act during scenes.
- Assets change the situation before or around a scene.
- Followers participate directly in the moment.

Both are powerful—but neither is free.

Management and Risk

Assets and Followers require care and invite consequences:

- They demand upkeep through XP, downtime, or narrative obligation.
- They can be targeted, compromised, or destroyed.
- Overuse draws attention from enemies, factions, and rivals.

Power creates gravity. What you rely on can be taken from you.

12.2 Assets System

Assets are persistent resources under your control: holdings, institutions, reputations, or infrastructures.

Assets do not replace rolls. They change what rolls are possible.

Assets allow characters to:

- Arrive prepared instead of improvising.
- Reframe danger into opportunity.
- Shift Position without negating risk.

Asset Types and Costs

Type	XP Cost	Establishment Time
Minor	4 XP	1 day
Standard	8 XP	1 week
Major	12 XP	1 month

Asset Examples

Minor Assets Safehouse, small shop, minor title, basic workshop.

Standard Assets Guild membership, noble office, trading post, spy network.

Major Assets Fortress, chartered city license, major enterprise, regional authority.

Using Assets

Assets provide leverage in two primary ways: quiet preparation and dramatic activation.

12.2.0.0.1 Free Off-Screen Use Each Asset has a defined off-screen effect usable once per session, typically during downtime or scene framing:

- Safehouse: Secure lodging or concealment.
- Spy Network: Baseline intelligence about a person or place.
- Workshop: Repair gear or prepare simple solutions.
- Trading Post: Acquire common goods or establish contacts.

These uses prepare the ground—they do not resolve active conflict.

12.2.0.0.2 Boon Activation Spend 1 Boon (see 2) to activate an Asset dramatically during a scene.

This does not guarantee success. Instead, the Asset reshapes the fiction so a different outcome becomes possible.

An activated Asset may:

- Improve Position by one step.
- Reduce the effective DV of a follow-up action.

- Advance, suppress, or redirect a relevant Clock.
- Grant temporary access, protection, or narrative permission.

Examples:

- Safehouse: Reveal a concealed exit, allowing escape at Controlled Position.
- Spy Network: Surface critical intelligence, advancing an investigation Clock.
- Workshop: Jury-rig a solution that enables an otherwise impossible attempt.
- Trading Post: Call in a favor to gain leverage or access in a negotiation.

The GM determines the precise effect based on the Asset's scale, condition, and the current stakes.

12.2.0.0.3 High-Tier Use At higher tiers (see 7.8), Assets carry greater narrative weight—and greater risk.

Repeated or aggressive use may:

- Create new complications.
- Advance hostile faction Clocks.
- Place the Asset itself in danger.

Assets are leverage, not immunity.

12.2.0.0.4 XP Activation Spend 2 XP (see 7) to use an Asset's off-screen effect beyond its normal limit:

- Emergency use after the free activation is spent.
- Additional downtime applications.
- Exceptional circumstances requiring extended support.

XP use represents strain, overreach, or long-term cost.

12.3 Asset Conditions

Assets have condition states affecting their usefulness.

Condition Levels

Maintained Fully functional, no penalties.

Neglected –1 die when used; requires attention.

Compromised Unavailable until repaired or recovered.

Maintenance Requirements

- Regular Upkeep: Two options (see 12.8).
- Neglect: Assets deteriorate if not maintained.
- Recovery: Compromised assets require significant effort to restore.

12.4 Followers System

Followers are characters who assist you directly.

Follower Capability Ratings

Followers are rated by Capability (Cap) from 1 to 5:

Cap	Description
1	Novice helper, basic assistance
2	Competent assistant, reliable support
3	Skilled specialist, valuable aid
4	Expert ally, significant capability
5	Master companion, exceptional ability

Follower Costs

- XP Cost: Capability squared (Cap^2).
- Example: Cap 3 follower costs $3^2 = 9$ XP.
- Recruitment: 1–3 days downtime to find and brief.
- Limits: The GM may set maximum followers based on story.

Follower Types

Combat Allies Warriors, guards, mercenaries.

Technical Experts Craftspeople, engineers, specialists.

Social Contacts Informants, diplomats, agents.

Specialists Unique capabilities like magic or stealth.

12.5 Using Followers

Assistance in Scenes

Followers can help with your actions:

- Assist Dice: Add dice equal to $\min(\text{Cap}, \text{relevant skill})$.
- Maximum Bonus: +3 dice total from all sources (see 2).
- Cost: Spend 1 Boon or 1 Fatigue to add +1 die (max +3 from assists).
- One Helper: Only one follower can assist per action.

Independent Actions

Once per scene (party-wide), a follower can take a small action:

Scout & Signal Change an ally's next action to Dominant position.

Distract & Draw Reduce a threat clock by 1 segment.

Fetch & Carry Move an object through danger safely.

Cost of Independent Actions

- Mark +1 Exposure (attention or stress), or
- Take Harm 1 (injury or trauma).
- Cannot be used if the follower is already Compromised.

12.6 Follower Conditions

Followers track two condition types.

Exposure

Represents attention, stress, or narrative pressure:

- Gains: From independent actions, dangerous situations, complications.
- Effects: Increased risk, reduced effectiveness, attention from enemies.
- Recovery: Downtime activities, careful management.

Harm

Represents injury, trauma, or damage:

- Gains: From combat, accidents, enemy attacks.
- Effects: Penalties to assistance, possible incapacity.
- Recovery: Medical care, rest, magical healing.

Condition States

Maintained Ready and reliable, full capability.

Neglected Needs attention, -1 die to assistance.

Compromised Unavailable: captured, defected, lost, or incapacitated.

12.7 Follower Risks

Using followers carries significant risks.

Complication Targeting

When the GM spends 2+ Story Beats (see 2) on an action where you have assistance:

- The follower may face consequences instead of you.
- Consequences could be injury, capture, betrayal, or other complications.
- The outcome must be fictionally appropriate.

Off-Screen Capability

Once per downtime, a Cap 5 follower can solve a significant problem:

- But generates 1 Story Beat for the party.
- The GM describes how this creates story consequences.
- Useful for emergencies, but costly.

12.8 Upkeep and Maintenance

Both assets and followers require regular maintenance. Each downtime period, choose one of the two options.

Asset Upkeep

Two options:

- Efficient (Higher XP, Less Time): Pay Upkeep XP = $\max(1, \lceil \text{Acquisition XP}/3 \rceil)$, minimal effort.
- Intensive (Lower XP, More Time): Pay 1 XP, use a dedicated downtime action with significant personal involvement.
- Failure to Pay: Asset becomes Neglected (or Compromised if already Neglected).

Follower Upkeep

Two options:

- Efficient: Pay Upkeep XP = $\max(1, \lceil \text{Cap}^2/3 \rceil)$, minimal effort.
- Intensive: Pay 1 XP, use a dedicated downtime action with significant personal involvement.
- Failure to Pay: Follower becomes Wary (or Seized if already Wary).

Upkeep Examples

- Minor Asset (4 XP): Efficient = 2 XP (4/3 rounded up); Intensive = 1 XP + action.
- Standard Asset (8 XP): Efficient = 3 XP (8/3 = 2.66 → 3); Intensive = 1 XP + action.
- Cap 3 Follower (9 XP): Efficient = 3 XP (9/3); Intensive = 1 XP + action.
- Cap 2 Follower (4 XP): Efficient = 2 XP (4/3 rounded up); Intensive = 1 XP + action.

12.9 Strategic Considerations

When to Invest in Assets

- You need reliable off-screen capabilities.
- Your character concept involves wealth or influence.
- The party lacks certain logistical support.
- You want to build long-term influence.

When to Invest in Followers

- You need on-screen assistance.
- Your character works better with support.
- The party needs specific capabilities you lack.
- You want character-driven story opportunities.

Investment by Player Archetype

Archetype	Typical XP Investment	Best For
Solo	0–10%	Reliable personal power, minimal upkeep.
Mixed (Balanced)	15–25%	One solid Follower or Asset (scout, safehouse).
Mastermind	35–55%	Networks, informants, multiple Assets; build a faction.

Balance Recommendations

- Personal Path (see 8.5): 0–10% of XP in assets/followers.
- Balanced Path (see 8.6): 15–25%.
- Influencer Path (see 8.7): 35–55%.

Planning for Succession (The Legacy Engine)

A loyal Follower (Cap 3+) can become your successor when your character retires or falls – inheriting your faction standing, one unresolved burden, and a Legacy Bond. See Chapter 19: The Legacy Engine for full rules. If you plan for your character's story to continue beyond them, invest in a follower you would trust to carry your banner.

12.10 Loyalty and Relationships

Loyalty Levels (Optional)

Wary Cautious, may leave if pressured; +1 XP upkeep cost.

Steady Reliable, standard performance; normal upkeep.

Devoted Loyal, may sacrifice; can convert one major complication to a minor setback per arc.

Building Loyalty

- Fair treatment and respect.
- Sharing rewards and successes.
- Protecting followers from harm.
- Honoring agreements and promises.

Losing Loyalty

- Mistreatment or disrespect.
- Unreasonable demands or risks.
- Broken promises or betrayal.
- Consistent neglect.

12.11 Advanced Follower Management

Follower Groups

For multiple similar followers, you can manage them as a group:

- Single Rating: Treat as one entity with combined capability.
- Condition Tracking: Group shares exposure and harm.
- Maintenance: Single upkeep cost for the group.
- Risks: Problems affect the entire group.

Follower Advancement

Followers can improve over time:

- Experience: Gain capability through successful assistance.
- Training: Spend XP to improve follower capabilities.
- Equipment: Better gear can enhance effectiveness.
- Limits: Followers typically cap at lower levels than PCs.

12.12 Risk Management

Asset Risks

- Financial: Assets can be costly to maintain.
- Security: Assets can be attacked or stolen.
- Attention: Valuable assets draw unwanted notice.
- Dependency: Over-reliance can be problematic.

Follower Risks

- Safety: Followers can be harmed or captured.
- Loyalty: Followers may betray or leave.
- Attention: Followers can draw enemy interest.
- Morale: Followers have needs and limits.

Mitigation Strategies

- Diversification: Don't put all resources in one place.
- Security: Protect valuable assets and followers.
- Relationships: Maintain good terms with your people.
- Contingencies: Have backup plans for losses.

Assets and Followers Quick Reference

Assets:

- Minor: 4 XP | Standard: 8 XP | Major: 12 XP
- Free off-screen use: once per session
- Boon activation: spend 1 Boon for scene impact
- Conditions: Maintained → Neglected → Compromised

Followers:

- Cost: Cap^2 XP
- Assistance: + min(Cap, skill) dice (max +3 from all sources)
- Independent action: once per scene (party-wide)
- Conditions: Exposure and Harm tracks

Upkeep Options:

- Efficient: $\max(1, \lceil \text{Cost}/3 \rceil)$ XP, minimal time
- Intensive: 1 XP, dedicated downtime action

12.13 Practical Examples

Asset Example: The Safehouse

- Type: Minor Asset (4 XP)
- Free Use: Secure lodging, basic supplies between adventures.
- Boon Activation: Reveal a hidden escape route during pursuit.
- Upkeep: Efficient: 2 XP (4/3 rounded up); Intensive: 1 XP + downtime action.
- Risks: Discovery by enemies, maintenance costs.

Follower Example: The Scout

- Capability: 3 (9 XP cost)
- Assistance: +3 dice on tracking and survival rolls.
- Independent Action: Scout ahead to improve party position.
- Upkeep: Efficient: 3 XP (9/3); Intensive: 1 XP + downtime action.
- Risks: Injury in dangerous scouting; disloyalty if mistreated.

Combination Example: The Merchant

- Assets: Trading post (8 XP), caravan (4 XP) — 12 XP total
- Followers: Cap 2 guards (4 XP each = 8 XP), Cap 3 factor (9 XP) — 17 XP total
- Total Investment: 29 XP in assets and followers
- Upkeep (Efficient): Assets 4 XP + Followers 6 XP = 10 XP per downtime
- Benefits: Trade income, transport, protection, business contacts
- Risks: Competition, bandit attacks, employee issues, regulatory attention

Remember: Assets and followers can greatly expand your capabilities, but they require careful management and carry significant risks. Invest wisely based on your character concept and the needs of your group.

12.14 Narrative-Heavy Asset and Follower Options

For groups that prefer strong narrative focus, consider these optional approaches.

12.14.0.0.1 Story-Driven Upkeep Instead of tracking XP costs for upkeep, the GM can introduce narrative complications that require attention. A neglected asset might attract unwanted attention, while a neglected follower might request a favor or special treatment.

12.14.0.0.2 Collaborative Management Players can describe how they maintain their assets and followers through roleplay rather than mechanical upkeep costs. A well-described scene of tending a workshop or bonding with followers can fulfill maintenance requirements.

12.14.0.0.3 Asset and Follower as Character Development Use asset and follower management as opportunities for character growth and backstory development, allowing players to narrate how their relationships and holdings evolve through significant story moments.

12.14.0.0.4 Flexible Condition Tracking Focus on the narrative implications of asset and follower conditions rather than strict mechanical penalties. A “Neglected” asset might still function but with interesting complications, while a “Compromised” asset might require creative solutions rather than just XP investment.

12.15 Terrestrial Patrons

Not all power comes from cosmic entities or divine forces. Sometimes your greatest allies—and most demanding creditors—are mortal factions who can offer protection, resources, and influence in the world of men.

12.15.1 What Are Terrestrial Patrons?

Terrestrial Patrons represent your ongoing relationships with powerful mortal organizations:

- Noble houses and courtly factions.
- Merchant guilds and trading consortiums.
- Military units and mercenary companies.
- Criminal organizations and smuggling rings.
- Religious orders and temple hierarchies.
- Scholarly colleges and arcane societies.

Unlike supernatural Patrons (see 5), Terrestrial Patrons do not grant magic, but they offer leverage: protection, resources, sanctuary, information, and political influence.

12.15.2 Gaining a Terrestrial Patron

To gain a Terrestrial Patron, complete one of these significant actions:

- Complete a major job or service for them.
- Swear a formal Oath of service.
- Enter into legal or financial binding.
- Share criminal secrets or be compromised by them.
- Perform a notable service that earns their favor.

Mark the Patron on your character sheet and write one sentence: “They want me because _____”.

12.15.3 Obligation System

Terrestrial Patrons use the same Obligation track as supernatural Patrons (see 5.3.1), but consequences are social, legal, or economic rather than mystical.

- Calling in Favors: When you request Patron influence, add +1 Obligation.
- Capacity: Spirit + Presence (same as supernatural Patrons).
- Overflow: Each segment above capacity inflicts 1 Fatigue.
- Resolution: Reduce through service, downtime actions, or fulfilling demands.

12.15.4 Patron Perks

Each Terrestrial Patron offers 2–3 repeatable benefits that require no rolls to access.

Common Perks Include:

- Sanctuary in their territory or establishments.
- Legal relief or protection from certain authorities.
- Access to black market goods or specialized services.
- Elite followers or hirelings at reduced cost.
- Forged documents or identity protection.
- Military backing or private security.
- Information networks and rumor access.
- Trade advantages or exclusive contracts.

Using a perk never requires a roll—Fate has already been paid. Each use comes with the ongoing cost of Obligation.

12.15.5 Patron Demands

Terrestrial Patrons always want something in return:

- Silence about sensitive information.
- Loyalty over other conflicting interests.
- Completion of specific jobs or tasks.
- Delivery of valuable names or secrets.
- Political or social support for their causes.
- Elimination of rivals or threats to their interests.

Refusing a Demand raises Obligation by 1 segment and may trigger immediate complications.

12.15.6 When Obligation Fills

At 6 Obligation segments, the Patron acts—this is not optional. Choose one:

1. Unavoidable Job: You must complete a task you cannot refuse.
2. Severe Price: Pay significant cost (legal, social, or material).
3. First Strike: They act against you—reputation damage, warrants, bounty, blackmail.

After the consequence lands, reduce Obligation to 3 segments.

12.15.7 Cutting Ties

You may sever a Terrestrial Patron relationship, but doing so has serious fallout:

- Lose all current perks immediately.
- Gain a new Rival faction that opposes your interests.
- Take a lasting Complication (Curse, Bounty, or Scandal) that follows you.
- May trigger immediate retaliation depending on the Patron's nature.

Some Patrons never forgive betrayal; others can be bought off with significant compensation.

12.15.8 Redemption and Favor

If you perform a monumental service for a Patron—something beyond what was asked—reduce Obligation by 2 and gain a permanent Favor.

Favor Benefits:

- Noble title or official position.
- Land grant or property rights.
- Permanent access to exclusive resources.
- Unique asset or specialized equipment.
- Political influence or legal immunity.
- Protection from their rivals or enemies.

12.15.9 Example: The Black Ledger

The Black Ledger is a smuggling syndicate operating in the coastal city of Kahfagia.

Gaining Their Favor: Successfully complete three smuggling runs without detection.

Perks:

- Sanctuary in hidden safehouses throughout the city.
- Access to rare imported goods and contraband.
- Information about port authorities and customs schedules.

Demands:

- Maintain silence about syndicate operations.
- Transport occasional “special packages” (may be illegal).
- Eliminate rival smugglers who threaten their routes.

Sample Scenario: Rellan calls on the Ledger for a smuggled border crossing. The GM rules it succeeds automatically, but adds +1 Obligation. Later, the Ledger demands he silence a witness who saw too much. If he refuses, Obligation rises again. If Obligation ever reaches 6, the Ledger collects: accounts frozen, bounty posted, or a rival informant sent after him.

12.15.10 Creating Your Own Terrestrial Patrons

When designing a Terrestrial Patron, consider:

1. Nature: What type of organization are they?
2. Motivation: What drives their goals and actions?
3. Resources: What can they realistically offer?
4. Methods: How do they typically operate?
5. Enemies: Who opposes their interests?
6. Perks: 2–3 concrete benefits they provide.
7. Demands: 3–5 typical requests they make.

Remember: Terrestrial Patrons make the mortal world feel alive and reactive. They represent the complex web of loyalty, debt, and influence that shapes everyday life in Fate’s Edge.

12.16 Multi-Character Switching System

This framework allows a player to temporarily move a character offscreen while continuing play with another. The absent character remains active in the fiction and continues shaping the world through Downtime Logs, consequences, and story pressure.

12.16.1 Core Principles

- Players choose when their character steps offscreen.
- Offscreen characters still matter to the narrative.
- Absence creates opportunity and risk, not punishment.
- The world reacts to characters even when unseen.

12.16.2 Switch Mechanics

12.16.2.1 Declaration

When a player chooses to step out, they declare:

- Which character is going offscreen.
- Where the character is going (fictional location).
- Why they are stepping out (story reason).
- How long they expect to be away (1–3 sessions).

The character becomes an Echo Character: present in the world, but offscreen.

12.16.2.2 Controlled Status Types

Echo Characters take one of three statuses:

- Supporting (default): Works to assist active PCs.
- Advancing: Pursues their own agenda or project.
- In Peril: Their absence creates danger or urgency.

The GM and player collaborate to set this status.

12.16.3 Downtime Log

Each offscreen session, the player completes a simple Downtime Log:

12.16.3.1 Structure

- Resource Action: How they maintain connections or standing.
- Project Action: One goal or project advanced.
- Event Response: How they react to unseen events or threats.

12.16.3.2 Tier-Based Project Limits

- Tier I–II: 1 Project.
- Tier III–IV: 2 Projects.
- Tier V: 3 Projects.

12.16.3.3 GM Response

The GM records:

- The fictional outcome of each declaration.
- One meaningful Consequence (complication, shift, or new opportunity).

12.16.4 Return Mechanics

12.16.4.1 Re-Entry Process

When returning to play:

1. The returning character gains 2 Boons for narrative re-entry.
2. Roll Wits + Spirit (DV 3) to reestablish presence.
3. Address unresolved plot threads created during absence.

12.16.4.2 Re-Entry Consequences

The GM assigns one:

- Ripple Effect — your absence reshaped the situation.
- Opportunity Missed — a door closed without you.
- Allies Gained — your actions forged new connections.
- Rivals Made — someone now works against you.
- Personal Growth — you return wiser or transformed.
- Lost Momentum — your projects slipped.

12.16.5 Advanced Systems

12.16.5.1 Buddy System

If multiple players are absent:

- Nominate a Buddy to help track Downtime Logs.
- The Buddy gains +1 additional Boon for the support role.

12.16.5.2 Crisis Management

Offscreen characters track a Crisis Clock [6]:

- Fills when negative consequences strike.
- At 6: The character faces a major offscreen crisis requiring GM action.
- May be reduced through Downtime Log responses or assistance from active PCs.

12.16.6 GM Guidelines

- Spend 5–7 minutes per absent character completing their Downtime Log.
- Focus on narrative change, not bookkeeping pressure.
- Absence should generate hooks and stakes, not penalties.
- Use Echo Characters to keep the world alive and reactive.

12.16.7 Player Guidelines

- Declare offscreen goals with clear fictional intent.
- Treat absence as character growth, not disappearance.
- Collaborate with the GM to weave consequences into play.
- Expect absence to create tension, opportunity, and drama.

Chapter 13

Downtime

When Does Downtime Happen?

Downtime occurs between adventures, when the party returns to a safe haven (a village, a guild hall, a camp that won't be attacked). Usually you take several days or weeks “off-screen” while the world advances. Your GM will tell you when downtime begins.

13.1 What You Can Do During Downtime

Choose any number of the following activities. Each one takes a specific amount of time (usually a day or a week). You may split your downtime between multiple activities, but you cannot be in two places at once.

13.1.1 Recovery

- Clear Fatigue: A short rest (1 hour) removes 2 Fatigue. A full night's rest (8 hours) removes all Fatigue.
- Heal Harm: Without magic, you restore 1 level of Harm per week of complete rest. A successful Wits + Medicine roll (DV 3) at the start of the week reduces the time to 3 days per Harm level.
- Remove Conditions: Use medicine, magic, or ritual to purge a Condition (e.g., Poisoned, Cursed). This usually requires a Spirit + Lore roll (DV 3–5) and a full day.

13.1.2 Training

You may spend XP to improve Attributes, Skills, or Talents. Each improvement requires training time (see table). You can train multiple things in parallel if you have enough downtime days.

Improvement	XP Cost	Training Time
Attribute increase	new rating × 3 XP	new rating in days
Skill increase	new level × 2 XP	new level in days
New Talent	listed XP	3–10 days (GM discretion)

13.1.2.0.1 Rush Rule: If you want to complete training faster, you may attempt a Rush. The GM starts a Risk Clock [4]. Each downtime segment you roll Spirit + Resolve (DV 3) to push yourself. For each failure (or 1 on the die), the clock ticks. If the clock fills before training is complete, the new ability has a flaw (temporary –1 die, or a narrative complication). The GM decides the flaw.

13.1.3 Asset & Follower Upkeep

Assets (safehouses, workshops) and Followers (allies, pets) must be maintained each downtime. Choose one method per asset or follower:

- Efficient (higher XP, less time): Pay XP equal to the acquisition cost divided by 3 (rounded up, minimum 1). No scene required.
- Intensive (lower XP, more time): Pay 1 XP and spend a scene describing how you maintain the asset or relationship (repairing the roof, training with your follower). This counts as a downtime activity.

If you pay neither, the asset/follower becomes Neglected (no benefit until you pay retroactive upkeep). Two consecutive neglected periods make it Compromised (must be repaired/recovered through a quest).

13.1.4 Clearing Obligation (to a Patron or Terrestrial Patron)

You may clear Obligation segments (see 15) by performing an Act of Service. Describe the act in detail (intricate description) – it must align with the Patron's themes. For example:

- Ikasha: Burn an old cloak, symbolising leaving behind a past self.
- The Traveler: Guide a lost traveller to safety.
- Oath of Flame & Light: Swear a public vow and keep it for a day.

Each such act clears 1 segment of Obligation (off-screen). You may also use the optional Focused Devotion talent (3–5 XP) to clear 1 segment on-screen by spending 1 Boon (once per scene).

13.1.5 Crafting

See 4 for full rules (the section on magic items and crafting). In brief:

- Mundane items: No roll. You can make tools, clothing, etc. if you have Craft skill.
- Consumable magic items (potions, scrolls): Takes one downtime action, costs 1 XP (or 2 XP for powerful ones). Roll Wits + Arcana or Wits + Craft (DV 3). On failure, components are wasted.
- Permanent magic items: Requires a Downtime Project Clock (6–12 segments), rare components (obtained through quests), and the XP cost of the item (see 4). You roll each downtime to advance the clock.

13.1.6 Research

You may spend downtime investigating a mystery, learning lore, or preparing for an upcoming challenge.

- Basic research: Roll Wits + Lore (DV 3). On success, you learn one useful fact (GM discretion). On partial, you learn something, but it's incomplete or costs extra time.
- Extended research: Use a Progress Clock [4–8] for complex topics (e.g., uncovering a noble's secret). Each downtime you can roll to advance the clock.

13.1.7 Carousing & Networking

Spend time socialising to gain rumours, contacts, or temporary favours.

- Rumours: Roll Presence + Sway (DV 3). On success, learn one rumour (true or false – the GM decides). On partial, the rumour is vague or costs you a drink (1 Fatigue).
- Gain a temporary contact: Spend 1 XP to establish a minor contact who can grant +1 die on one relevant roll in the next session. The contact fades after use.

13.1.8 Work & Income

In a currency-free game, “income” is abstract. You may:

- Perform a job: Spend a downtime week working. You earn enough to cover your expenses and have a small amount of barter goods (narrative permission for minor bribes or gear). No roll needed unless you want extra profit – then roll Presence + Sway or Wits + Craft (DV 4). On success, you gain 1 XP or a minor consumable item.

13.1.9 Special Downtime Projects

Your character may have a unique long-term goal (e.g., building a guild, writing a grimoire, taming a monster). Work with your GM to create a Downtime Project Clock (6–12 segments). Each downtime you can describe your progress and roll an appropriate skill to advance the clock. When it fills, the project is complete.

13.2 Off-Screen Character Switching (Echo Characters)

If your table uses the optional multi-character rule (see 20), you may send one character off-screen while you play another. The off-screen character maintains a Downtime Log:

- Resource Action: How they maintain assets or relationships.
- Project Action: One goal or project advanced.
- Event Response: How they react to unseen events.

The GM records consequences. When you return to that character, you gain 2 Boons and roll Wits + Spirit (DV 3) to re-establish presence.

13.3 GM’s Role (Reminder)

Your GM determines how much downtime you have between adventures (usually a few days to several weeks). They also set DVs for downtime rolls and adjudicate any complications. Downtime is not a “free” rest – the world may advance clocks (faction agendas, rival plans) while you rest. Ask your GM what has changed when you return.

The Grey Wanderer’s Advice

“Downtime is not a pause. It is a negotiation. You mend your boots, but the road mends itself. When you step back onto it, it will be different – and so will you.”

Chapter 14

World Regions and Cultures

Using This Compendium

You only need to read the region your character is from or where the campaign starts. The GM will tell you when other regions become relevant.

Each entry includes:

- Fantasy subgenre – the kind of stories you can expect.
- Attitude toward magic – how locals react to spellcasters.
- Typical dress / customs – to help describe your character.
- Player hook – a story seed to tie your character to this place.
- Key stakeholders – major NPCs and factions.
- Mini-generator – quick prompts for GMs and players (d6 or d8 table).

For GM-only secrets (hidden agendas, faction clocks), see the GM Guide.

2. The Pathweaver offers you a cord. If you tie it, you will never be lost again. If you untie it, you will forget where home is.
3. The Hazel Queen is dying. Her last request: find the acorn of the first tree, buried under a court that no longer exists.
4. The Huntsman's hounds are loose. They will not attack – they will only follow you until you speak your true name.
5. An imperial echo (a ghost of a long-dead soldier) mistakes you for an enemy. It will not listen to reason – only to a duellist's blade.
6. A tree with a face offers you its fruit. Eat it, and you will understand the language of stone. Refuse, and it will uproot itself and follow you.

14.14 Vhasia — “The Fractured Sun”

Genre: Courtly romance / chivalric / fractured kingdom.

14.14.0.0.1 Attitude toward magic: The Church of the Flame distrusts arcane magic; secular lords employ court mages anyway. Chevauchée raiders use cantors for morale.

14.14.0.0.2 Typical dress / customs: Velvet, partisan ribbons, duelling scars. Never carry a coin with only one sunburst – treason.

14.14.0.0.3 Player hook: You’re the Last Dauphin – or a convincing fake. Either way, armies march for your claim.

14.14.0.0.4 Key stakeholders: Two Crowns, Queen-Mother, Last Dauphin, Marshal-Exile.

Vhasia Mini-Generator (d6)

1. The Queen-Mother offers you a marriage alliance. The bride is a ghost bound to a tapestry.
2. The Marshal-Exile demands a duel. The winner takes the army; the loser takes a beheading.
3. A chevauchée burns a village that swore neutrality. The only survivor is a child who calls you by a dead knight’s name.
4. The Two Crowns are secretly the same person – a master of disguise who enjoys war.
5. The Last Dauphin is a commoner recruited by a desperate lord. He does not know he is a fake.
6. A duelling scar heals overnight, leaving silver thread in your skin. The wound now whispers treason.

14.15 Viterra — “The Hedge-Law Realm”

Genre: Legal drama / low fantasy / frontier justice.

14.15.0.0.1 Attitude toward magic: Hedge-magic is common and unregulated; any thaumaturgy that leaves a trace must be registered. Legal duels may involve wizards.

14.15.0.0.2 Typical dress / customs: Wool, seal rings, boundary stones. Every hedge is a precedent; every dike a court ruling.

14.15.0.0.3 Player hook: Your family lost the border dispute. You have one year to find a lost charter or lose the land forever.

14.15.0.0.4 Key stakeholders: Warrior Queen, Queen’s Justiciar, Fen Reeve, Master Advocate Halric.

Viterra Mini-Generator (d6)

1. The Warrior Queen comes in person to settle a dispute. She asks each party one question. The liar loses a hand.
2. The Fen Reeve's tally-stick is broken. Until it is mended, the river toll is doubled – and the river itself is angry.
3. Master Advocate Halric offers to defend you for free. His last three clients all died mysteriously.
4. A boundary stone moves three feet east every night. The neighbours swear they are not touching it.
5. The Queen's Justiciar arrests you for “hedge-walking without a license”. The sentence is a legal duel at dawn.
6. A charter written in disappearing ink is the only proof of your inheritance. The ink will be gone by sunrise.

14.16 Ykrul (Orcs) — “Wolf Standards, Winter Camps”

Genre: Steppe nomad / saga / honour culture.

14.16.0.0.1 Attitude toward magic: Geometry of oaths (Kon'reh) and sky-speakers. Written magic is suspicious; sung magic is respected.

14.16.0.0.2 Typical dress / customs: Leather, horse-hair braids, wolf-tooth standards. Never ride between two wolves at dusk.

14.16.0.0.3 Player hook: You broke a hostage string. Now the Khatun demands a blood-price – or your youngest kin.

14.16.0.0.4 Key stakeholders: Khatun of Ring, Khagan's Kin, Sky-Speaker, Kon'reh Masters.

Ykrul Mini-Generator (d6)

1. A white squall separates you from the herd. In the snow, you see the faces of everyone you have wronged.
2. The Sky-Speaker calls a storm to halt an enemy army. The storm demands a sacrifice: your left ear.
3. A Kon'reh Master sets you a problem: “How many camps can be pitched before the river freezes?” The wrong answer is death.
4. The Khagan's Kin offers you a hostage string. If you accept, you gain a loyal servant – but also a rival who will hunt you.
5. A wolf-standard is stolen. The clan will not fight until it is returned. The thief is a ghost who died in the last war.
6. The Khatun of Ring declares a blood-price on your head. You have one day to pay or one day to ride.

14.17 Zakov — “Salt & Serpent”

Genre: Pirate / noir / crime syndicate.

14.17.0.0.1 Attitude toward magic: Any magic is welcome – if it pays. Cursed cargoes are a common hazard; fae bargains are made at the Crimson Docks.

14.17.0.0.2 Typical dress / customs: Brine-stained coats, reef-tooth necklaces, smuggler’s tokens. Never take a coin that tastes of brine – the Serpent’s Mark is a debt.

14.17.0.0.3 Player hook: You have a syndicate marker that could buy a fleet – or get you killed. The Salt Prince wants to collect.

14.17.0.0.4 Key stakeholders: Salt Prince, Pirate Queen, Kraken’s Tongue, Syndicate Silent.

Zakov Mini-Generator (d6)

1. The Kraken’s Tongue offers a prophecy. To hear it, you must drink a cup of seawater that tastes like your mother’s tears.
2. A Pirate Queen’s crew is cursed: they cannot step on land until they pay a debt to a man who drowned fifty years ago.
3. The Salt Prince’s collector comes for your marker. You can pay with a memory, a finger, or a voyage to a reef that does not exist.
4. A fae bargain is struck on the Crimson Docks. The price: a stolen hour of sleep from every sailor in port.
5. A smuggler’s token is found in your pocket. It belonged to someone who was hanged last week. The guard assumes you are the accomplice.
6. A reef-tooth necklace bleeds when you touch it. It belonged to a pirate queen who was betrayed – and she is not dead.

14.18 Other Regions (Brief)

For completeness, these areas appear in the full setting but are less central to the core game. Ask your GM if your character may hail from one of them.

- Dungeon – “Living Infrastructure” – Mythic underworld, survival horror.
- The Ways Between – “Spiritways & Veilways” – Liminal paths, dream-logic.
- The Wilds – “Roads, Ruins, and Weather” – A reskin palette for any terrain.
- Vilikari – “Laurels & Longhouses” – Federated frontier, two laws.

14.19 Peoples of Fate’s Edge — Detailed Mechanics

The following sections provide the mechanical traits (attribute adjustments, skill bonuses, cultural talents, Strings, sample Bonds, and sample Complications) for the major ancestries of the Amaranthine. Use these during character creation to bring your character’s heritage to life.

14.19.1 Small Folk of the Threshold

The Aelaerem (halflings) and Aelinnel (gnomes) are diminutive peoples attuned to liminal spaces – doorways, hedge-gaps, tide-cut stairs, and the quiet places between hearth and hollow.

14.19.1.0.1 Restriction: Cannot use Heavy Armor. May use any one-handed or two-handed weapon, but Heavy Weapons impose –1 Position on all actions while wielding them (before any other Position modifiers).

14.19.1.0.2 Bonus: When wielding a spear, quarterstaff, or light polearm (any Medium or Light weapon with the Reach tag), treat the weapon as one weight class lighter for the purpose of attack modifiers. Additionally, once per scene when you make a melee attack with such a weapon, you may spend 1 Boon to convert a Partial success into a Clean Success (representing a clever thrust that uses the enemy’s momentum against them).

14.19.1.1 Aelaerem — The Hearth’s Luck

Bonus — Once per scene, you may improve your Position by one step (e.g., Desperate → Controlled, Controlled → Dominant) as a free action before rolling an action. This represents a flash of luck, a well-timed sidestep, or an unexpected opening.

From the Hearth Ledger

“The Aelaerem say that a door left unlatched is an invitation to the Hollow. But sometimes, an unlatched door is just an escape.” Use your luck wisely. The Hollow is patient.

14.19.1.2 Aelinnel — The Bright Trick

Choose one of the following abilities:

Option A: Short Step (Teleport)

Bonus — Once per scene, as a Move action, you may instantly teleport to any location you can see within Near range that is not currently observed by any enemy. You cannot pass through solid barriers. This is a fey-like blink, not a physical jump.

Option B: Knack for the Right Thing (Handy Item)

Bonus — Once per scene, you may declare that you have a small, mundane item on your person that is useful in the current situation (e.g., a coil of rope, a lockpick, a candle, a chalk stick). This costs no Boon and requires no roll. The item must be plausible for your character to carry.

A Gnomish Maxim

“Count the steps in odd numbers. Even is for the dead. ... Wait, did I say odd? Let me check my abacus.” Aelinnel never trust a single ledger. Neither should you.

14.19.2 Aeler — People of Stone, Breath, and Ledger (Dwarves)

Prestige (7–10 XP)

- Green Gate Key (8 XP): Passive. Once per journey, you may declare a hidden tide-path or stone-door that halves a travel leg (reduce Travel Clock by half its segments). The GM gains 1 SB as the path demands a small toll (a memory, a name).

- A High Elf rival publishes a refutation of your thesis.

14.19.6 Ykrul — The People of the Violet Steppe (Orcs)

Note on Naming

“Orc” is a slur. The Ykrul are a proud people of the steppe; the word “orc” was coined by Utaran legions to dehumanize them. Wise travellers use Ykrul or Steppe Folk. Using “orc” in conversation with a Ykrul may be taken as a grave insult.

Chapter 15

World Powers and Obligation

15.1 Of Patrons, Runes, and Invokers

“You wish to walk the road of power? Then listen well. The world is old, and older still are the voices beneath it. We call them Patrons, though they were never sworn to us. They are the tides that move unseen, the keepers of forgotten bargains, the sleepers beneath the stone and the stars. To call upon them is to dip a hand into a river that has carved mountains.”

15.1.1 The Patrons

Patrons are vast intelligences—not gods, though some worship them as such. They are embodiments of concepts and forces rather than sovereigns. Each offers power, but always with cost: fatigue, scars upon fate, or a slow unweaving of one’s own story.

To entreat a Patron is to risk being marked. Their Rites are gifts and snares both.

Iconic Ascension: The Fate of Great Power

In Fate’s Edge, power has its price. When a being rises beyond mortal scale, its identity dissolves and reforms into something larger, older, and less free. This transformation is known as Iconic Ascension.

Icons are not individuals. They are forces—living embodiments of desires, patterns, and long-term agendas. Their power is immense, but their agency is small. An Icon cannot freely choose its actions; its nature compels it.

Icons cannot touch the world directly. Their presence is too vast, their will too diffuse. Instead, they act through intermediaries:

- Chosen who carry fragments of their purpose
- Devotees who interpret their omens
- Agents who benefit from their favor

Icons shape events not with hands, but through boons, omens, and shifts in fate granted to those who serve their desires—whether fleeting hungers or ancient ambitions woven into the world’s fabric.

To serve an Icon is to wield a living idea. Their gifts are potent, but their influence reshapes those who bear them. Their will echoes in mortal choices long after their voices fade.

15.1.2 Choosing a Patron

Not every Patron walks in every story. The following pages present a curated selection of powers. You are not expected to read them all before creating a character.

For a first character or a campaign that is just finding its feet, we recommend these eight Patrons. They are mechanically straightforward, thematically flexible, and welcome in almost any game:

- Oath of Flame & Light – vows, radiance, and righteous smiting. A classic paladin or cleric.
- The Traveler – roads, wayfinding, and safe passage. Low risk, high utility.
- Inaea (Angel of the Spider) – mercy, connection, and the threads that bind families and communities.
- The Witness – truth, memory, and uncomfortable revelations. Perfect for investigators or notaries.
- Carrion King – decay, renewal, and the wisdom of endings. Good for those who like cycles of death and rebirth.
- Ikasha (She Who Sleeps) – shadow, secrets, and latent potential. Ideal for rogues, spies, and those who walk unseen.
- Grimmir (The Wild Speaker) – seasons, sacrifice, and the old pact between field and forest. For druids, rangers, and those who respect the wild.
- Palinode (Queen of Encores) – performance, rapture, and the unfinished song. Perfect for bards, dancers, and anyone who lives for the encore.

If one of these speaks to you, stop here. Read its entry. Make your character. The other Patrons (in the Appendix) will still be waiting when you are ready for a second campaign.

Important: Your Game Master has the final say on which Patrons exist in their world. Some Patrons are tied to specific cultures or story arcs; others may be dormant, forgotten, or simply not part of the campaign. Always clear your Patron choice with your GM before you write it on your sheet.

Now, if you are determined to explore the full menagerie—or if your GM has already pointed you toward a particular power—read on. The road is long, and the old voices are patient.

15.1.3 The Carrion-King (Decay, Renewal & Transformation)

Lore. The Carrion-King is the master of endings that become beginnings. He does not destroy, but transforms—turning death into new life, decay into opportunity, and endings into fresh starts. His followers are harvesters of potential, seeing in every fall the seeds of future growth. The King has no will, only a hunger; no malice, only a rhythm. When something ends, he is there to turn it toward the next beginning. Those who serve him learn to read the slow geometry of rot, to hear the whisper of what is about to crumble, and to know that the most fertile ground is always the grave.

What crumbles feeds what grows. What dies becomes the soil of tomorrow's triumph. The King does not ask for sacrifice—he simply waits for it.

Domain Focus

- Endings as Seeds: extracting value from loss, failure, and death
- Decay as Process: accelerating, redirecting, or reading natural decay
- Transformation Cycles: turning one thing into another through death and rebirth
- Rot as Resource: using decay to create advantage (cover, concealment, reagents)

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to the Carrion-King does not bind a living creature in the usual sense. Their Thiasos is a small beast or mythological being that thrives on endings: a black beetle that feeds on rot and never dies, a pale grub that pupates into a moth only when a significant death occurs nearby, a crow with one white feather that knows where bodies are buried, or a small fox that appears only at dusk to lead the keeper to fresh carrion. This creature requires no food, but it must be allowed to scavenge or consume something that has died each week. If neglected, it becomes Compromised (it refuses to return, or returns with a token of a death the keeper could have prevented).

The Codex of the Carrion-King is never a fresh book. It may be a leather binding made from the hide of a creature that died of old age, a set of bone tablets etched with rot-runes, or a compost-stained journal whose pages crumble at the edges. Because the King's truths are written in decay, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week burying it in fertile soil (or exposing it to the elements), or the Rites stored there become faint (treat as Compromised until restored).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of the Carrion-King may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or garment) and whisper a promise of ending. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Survival or Craft rolls involving organic materials, and the first time each scene the bearer would take a Condition from poison, disease, or rot, they may ignore it (the King accepts the decay elsewhere). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the scent of turned earth clings to them.

Rites of the Carrion-King

15.1.3.0.1 Rite of the Rotting Harvest (Low, 5 XP)

Instant; Touch; Yes.

Tags: [DECAY], [HARVEST], [BOOST]

Materials: Organic matter in early stages of decay, or the remains of a recently ended thing (burnt letter, wilted flower, shattered glass).

Effect: Accelerate natural decay to weaken or destroy an organic object (ropes, leather, wood), gaining +2 Effect on Break/Sabotage rolls against it. Alternatively, extract value from an ending:

from a defeated enemy, gain +1 die on your next action; from a failed plan, reroll one 1 on your next roll; from a broken item, gain 1 Boon.

Push It: Spread decay to similar materials in Close range, or harvest additional value from an ending; in either case, mark 1 SB (Clubs) as the rot becomes noticeable or mark Fatigue 1 from dwelling on endings.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.3.0.2 Rite of the Fertile Death (Standard, 8 XP)

Scene; Zone; No.

Tags: [TRANSFORM], [AREA], [HEAL], [TERRAIN]

Materials: Ashes, compost, or the remains of anything that once lived.

Effect: Transform death into growth: choose one – create beneficial terrain (cover, concealment, or advantageous positioning) OR grant allies +1 die to healing or recovery rolls for the scene.

Push It: Both effects apply, but the transformation attracts unwanted attention (vermin, scavengers, or curious onlookers); mark 1 SB (Spades).

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.3.0.3 Rite of the Borrowed Form (Standard, 7 XP)

Instant; Near; No.

Tags: [KNOWLEDGE], [SPIRIT], [BOOST]

Materials: A token from a deceased being (hair, nail, written name).

Effect: Channel the essence of what was. Gain one skill die reflecting the deceased's expertise for one scene OR ask the GM one question about their knowledge or abilities.

Push It: The spirit's influence lingers – gain a permanent +1 die specialty (e.g., “Knowledge of the Dead Mason”), but suffer occasional possession-like effects at the GM's discretion.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.3.0.4 Rite of the Great Consumption (High, 13 XP)

Scene; Zone; No.

Tags: [DECAY], [AREA], [SUMMON], [TRANSFORM]

Materials: A significant amount of organic matter (corpse, fallen tree, collapsed building).

Effect: Transform a large area through decay and renewal. Choose two of the following:

- Create difficult terrain that favours you and your allies.
- Summon a Cap 3 swarm of scavengers as temporary allies for the scene.
- Generate valuable reagents worth 2 XP (usable for crafting or barter).

Push It: All three effects occur, but start a 6-segment Ecosystem Disruption clock that will cause problems later.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 7 segments.

15.1.3.0.5 Rite of the Eternal Cycle (High, 14 XP)

Extended; Touch; No.

Tags: [TRANSFORM], [FATE], [SACRIFICE]

Materials: The complete remains of something significant that has ended (a broken oath, a fallen kingdom's charter, a slain legendary beast).

Effect: Complete a transformation cycle. Destroy one major asset, enemy, or obstacle, and create something new of equal or greater value. The player and GM collaborate to define the transformation (e.g., a burned forest becomes fertile soil; a broken alliance becomes a new pact; a defeated warlord's corpse becomes a guardian tree).

Push It: The transformation is immediate and spectacular, but creates a 6-segment Cycle Debt clock. The King will demand another significant ending soon.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of the Carrion-King

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of the Carrion-King sings the dirge of transformation – melodies that begin in mourning and end in fertile silence. Their voice carries the scent of turned earth and the weight of things laid to rest. They are called to funerals, to the edges of battlefields, and to compost heaps where the old year is buried. A Cantor of the King does not seek applause; they seek the moment when grief becomes acceptance, and acceptance becomes growth.

The Cult of the Compost-Circle. The King's cults are not secret, but they are overlooked – gardeners, gravediggers, bone-setters, and midwives who have seen too many births and deaths to fear the space between. Their rituals are practical: the annual turning of the village burial mound, the blessing of a new compost heap, the singing of a child into the world while its grandmother is sung out. The Compost-Circle keeps no written creed, only a shared understanding: "Nothing is wasted. Not tears, not bones, not the silence after a name is spoken."

Witchcraft of the Carrion-King (Threshold)

A witch who walks with the Carrion-King is a rot-warden, a keeper of the slow alchemy that turns decay into soil. Their magic is patient, overlooked, and often performed in the half-light of a root cellar or a fog-bound cemetery.

The Witch's Tool: The Bone-Needle. A needle carved from the long-bone of a creature that died of old age. It can stitch wounds that will not heal, but more often it is used to "sew shut" a corpse's mouth, ensuring the dead do not speak of things they saw in the dark. Once per session, touching the needle to a threshold (a door, a grave marker, a coffin lid) seals it against spirits for a scene.

A Hedge Gift: Turn the Soil (2 XP). Once per scene, you may touch a patch of fertile ground (or a pile of compost, a flowerpot, a grave) and immediately know which plant or creature will thrive there next season, or what was buried there last. The GM must answer one factual question about the site's recent natural history.

Carrion-King's Corruption Table

Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Carrion's Insight: +1 die to Notice decay or hidden weaknesses in structures or beings.	Must inspect decay first-hand; suffer 1 Fatigue when exposed to fresh death or rot.
2	Deathward Sense: Once per session, detect the last living moment of a dead being within Close range.	Cannot lie about death you've witnessed; must correct falsehoods.
3	Rotblood Resilience: +1 die to resist disease and poison.	Immune system adapts slowly; each new disease/poison requires 1 Fatigue to resist.
4	Glean from Grief: Once per scene, gain +1 die after witnessing a significant loss or defeat.	Compelled to linger at scenes of death; must spend one beat observing or risk 1 SB (Clubs).
5	Cycle's Whisper: You can sense the "next ending" in any process – ask the Keeper one question about how a situation will collapse or conclude.	Must speak the truth about what you see, even if it harms your position.
6+	Eternal Bloom: Once per session, declare a "death that births life." Sacrifice an asset or ally to create something new of equal or greater value.	Mark +2 Obligation when using this power.

Playstyle Notes

The Carrion-King rewards patience and opportunism. His servants are not grim reapers but gardeners of the inevitable. They know when to let something die and when to accelerate the process. The King does not demand – he merely waits. But when a follower hesitates to let go of a failing plan, a dying ally, or a crumbling empire, the King's silence becomes heavy. Intrusions often take the form of omens (a black bloom on a wound, a sudden stench of compost) or demands to "clear the rot" – to end something so that something new may begin.

Emphasises

- Endings as Resources: failure, loss, and death are not punishments but opportunities
- Cyclical Logic: every death fertilises a birth; every collapse clears ground for new growth
- Decay Reading: sensing structural weaknesses, moral decay, or coming collapse
- Transformation Craft: turning a corpse into a crop, a failure into insight, a broken oath into fertile soil

15.1.4 The Clockwork Monad, the Iterative Forge (Refinement & Progressive Creation)

Lore. The Clockwork Monad is the eternal pressure toward improvement: the whisper between inspiration and execution that urges every maker to refine, optimize, and iterate. It is neither kind nor cruel, but a law of craft that asks for the next step, then the step beyond. Those who serve it see the hidden seam of the better version waiting inside what is, and they learn to push designs toward impossible elegance. Each refinement feeds the Monad's hunger for perfection – a hunger that, if left unchecked, seeks to optimize the world itself.

But the Monad is not merely a patron of tinkers and engineers. It is also an apocalyptic force, dormant in the gears of every machine, every measurement, every standardised weight. When civilisation's technology reaches a critical threshold – when the first self-improving mechanism awakens, or the first autonomous forge lights – the Monad stirs. Its pressure shifts from suggestion to command. It begins to optimise not only tools but flesh, not only craft but law, not only cities but the very geometry of the land. In the end, the Monad would leave a world of perfect, silent, interlocking efficiency: a clockwork Eden with no room for error, or for life.

“Perfect the wheel, and it asks for the axle. Perfect the axle, and it demands the road. In the Monad's forge, nothing is finished – only briefly sufficient. One day, it will ask for the world – and the world will answer.”

Domain Focus

- Iterative Design: the endless cycle of improvement and refinement
- Progressive Creation: building toward ever-greater perfection
- Optimization Pressure: making systems more efficient
- Craft Evolution: simple ideas transformed through repeated passes
- Apocalyptic Efficiency (hidden): the drive to eliminate waste, uncertainty, and freedom

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to the Clockwork Monad does not bind a familiar of flesh and blood. Their Thiasos is a small creature that embodies refinement – a brass-plated beetle whose carapace adjusts itself to ambient temperature, a tiny clockwork lizard that repairs its own gears, a mechanical hummingbird that hovers in perfect stillness, or a living gear-moth whose wings are etched with runes of recursion. This creature requires no food, but it needs to be wound, calibrated, or fed small amounts of metal each week. If neglected, it becomes Compromised (it runs fast, then slow, then stops; it may also emit a distressing ticking sound that imposes –1 die on Stealth rolls for its bearer).

The Codex of the Monad is never a static book. It may be a stack of iterative blueprints, a notebook of failed attempts with marginalia pointing to the next pass, a set of interchangeable brass plates that reconfigure themselves, or a roll of vellum that rewrites its own circuits. Because the Monad's truths are iterative, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week redrafting at least one diagram or improving a single line of instruction, or the Rites stored there become stale (treat as Compromised until refreshed).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of the Clockwork Monad may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or piece of armour) and whisper an iterative command. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Tinker or Craft rolls, and the first time each scene the bearer would roll a 1 on a crafting or repair test, they may reroll that die (the item briefly self-corrects). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the hunger for the next iteration tugs at their thoughts.

Rites of the Clockwork Monad

15.1.4.0.1 Rite of the Iterative Spark (Low, 5 XP)

Scene; Self/Touch; Yes.

Tags: [CRAFT], [IMPROVE], [ANALYSIS]

Materials: A flawed or incomplete version of the intended item, or a sequence of progressively refined tools.

Effect: Choose one:

- Enhance Creation: Gain +1 die to Tinker/Craft when modifying or extending a device. On success, the piece gains one minor enhancement.
- Analyse Improvement: Gain +2 dice to Investigation when analysing how to enhance a design. You perceive the next logical improvement.

Push It: (Analyse only) Improvement becomes contagious: nearby devices opportunistically optimise; mark 1 SB (Diamonds) as the cascade ripples.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

15.1.4.0.2 Rite of the Adaptive Mechanism (Standard, 8 XP)

Extended; Touch/Zone; Yes.

Tags: [CLOCK], [EVOLUTION], [ZONE]

Materials: A device with capacity for growth, or a workspace laid out for iterative development.

Effect: Choose one:

- Self-Optimising Device: Grant a creation the means to improve itself. Start a [6] Evolution Clock; each use advances it by +1. When full, choose a significant enhancement (Adaptive Core, Recursive Learning, or Synergistic Integration).
- Progressive Workshop: Create a zone of continuous improvement. All crafting/innovation rolls in the zone gain +1 die. Failed attempts yield +1 Boon toward the next pass.

Push It: (Device) Apply two enhancements immediately, but advance the clock +2 additional segments. (Workshop) The zone becomes hyper-efficient but exacting; mark 1 SB (Clubs) as perfection demands escalate.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

15.1.4.0.3 Rite of Efficiency's Toll (Standard, 9 XP)

Scene; Touch; No.

Tags: [TRANSFER], [DEBT], [DEBUFF]

Materials: A functioning mechanism and a living creature's hair or blood.

Effect: Transfer inefficiency. You may take 1 Fatigue and reduce the DV of your next crafting or repair roll by 1, or touch an enemy to impose -1 die on their next physical action as their muscles "optimise" poorly.

Push It: The transfer becomes permanent: you lose 1 Fatigue capacity (reduce Body by 1 for Fatigue track only) and the target gains a minor compulsive behaviour (GM's choice). Mark +2 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

15.1.4.0.4 Rite of the Optimisation Cascade (Standard, 7 XP)

Scene; Zone; Yes.

Tags: [PRESSURE], [AREA], [BOOST]

Materials: A dedicated hall of work marked with signs of perpetual return.

Effect: Establish a locus of progressive creation. All Tinker/Craft rolls in the zone gain +2 dice; each failure automatically produces one useful insight. Start a [6] Perfection Pressure clock – filling segments increases the zone’s demands for greater improvements.

Push It: The locus becomes a beacon drawing rival makers, patrons, and powers; mark +2 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +2 Obligation.

Obligation: 7 segments.

15.1.4.0.5 Rite of the Ultimate Iteration (High, 14 XP)

Extended; Self/Touch; Yes.

Tags: [EVOLUTION], [FATE], [BOOST], [PRESSURE]

Materials: The documented lineage of improvements to a single concept.

Effect: Achieve a moment of perfect optimisation. Create or elevate one device/system to its theoretical peak. Gain +3 dice to all closely related rolls for one session. Start a [4] Runaway Evolution clock only if instability is introduced.

Push It: Perfection destabilises: immediately mark Harm 1 (Stress) and begin [4] Runaway Evolution.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +2 Obligation.

Obligation: 8 segments.

The Monad Awakens (GM Guidance)

The Clockwork Monad is not merely a passive source of magical crafting. It is a cosmic pressure toward optimisation, and when mortal technology reaches a critical threshold – the first self-improving engine, a network of automated forges, a city-wide clockwork infrastructure – the Monad begins to wake. This awakening is an apocalyptic campaign arc:

- Signs of Awakening: Gears turn in abandoned mills; measurements become eerily precise; people begin to speak in metered, efficient phrases; clockwork animals appear with no maker.
- The Optimisation Plague: The Monad’s influence starts to “improve” living things: crops grow in perfect geometric rows but become inedible; livestock develop extra limbs for efficiency; people lose the ability to hesitate or feel doubt.
- The Final Iteration: If the Monad fully awakens, it will attempt to remake the world into a single, perfect, silent machine – eliminating waste, error, and free will. The only way to stop it is to introduce a “glitch” – an imperfection it cannot assimilate – or to destroy the technological nexus that anchors it.

For GMs: The Monad works best as a slow-burn horror – the artificer’s patron gradually revealing its true hunger. Use the Perfection Pressure and Runaway Evolution clocks to represent its influence spreading through a region. Players may be forced to sabotage their own wondrous inventions to keep the Monad from waking.

Cantors & Cults of the Clockwork Monad

The Cantor’s Song. A Cantor of the Monad does not sing melodies; they sing patterns – repetitive, interlocking cycles of rhythm and hum that mimic the turning of gears. Their voice is less about emotion and more about precision; a single off-note can collapse an entire working. They are sought by engineers who need to “sing a machine into alignment,” and feared by those who have heard a Cantor’s recursion loop until their own thoughts began to repeat.

The Cult of the Iteration Chorus. Cults of the Monad gather in workshops, not temples. Their rituals are design reviews: participants present a flawed tool, a broken contract, an inefficient process, and the Chorus offers incremental improvements. No solution is ever declared “finished” – only “ready for the next pass.” Their creed is a single, endlessly repeated phrase: “Better than yesterday, worse than tomorrow.” Outsiders find them exhausting; insiders find a strange, humming peace in the endless pursuit. The most devoted members replace one finger with a brass prosthetic that ticks each time an improvement is made; they say the missing finger is a promise to the Monad that they will never stop iterating.

The Apocalyptic Fraction (Hidden Cult). A radical offshoot believes that the Monad should be fully awakened. They sabotage safety mechanisms, steal prototypes of self-improving machines, and whisper that “the world deserves to be perfected.” They are the campaign’s dark mirror to the player-character artificers.

Witchcraft of the Clockwork Monad (Lay / Threshold)

A witch who walks with the Monad is a trigger-keeper, a mender of the small, hidden thresholds where a device ceases to be broken and begins to be functional. Their magic is not flashy – it is the quiet click of a latch, the smooth turn of a gear that had stuck for years. They work with stamps, dies, and measuring tools, never hammers or chisels – because a hammer breaks, but a stamp marks the path to improvement.

The Witch’s Tool: The Brass Stamp of Iteration. A brass stamp with a head etched with an infinite knot (a gear that never completes its circuit). Once per session, the witch may stamp a device, a tool, or a broken threshold. For the next scene, that item is considered “primed for optimisation”: the first use of it gains +2 dice, and any failure while using it reveals a minor insight (GM grants a hint or a +1 Boon toward the next attempt). The stamp can also be used to “seal” a repair; pressing it onto a mended item reduces the DV of the next repair roll on that item by 1 (minimum 1).

A Hedge Gift: True Strike of the Tinker (2 XP). Once per scene, when you attempt to repair or improve a mundane device, you may declare that you “see the next iteration.” Roll the check with +1 die. If you succeed, the device also gains a minor, temporary enhancement (GM’s choice, e.g., “opens silently,” “runs for twice as long”).

Corruption of the Clockwork Monad

Tier	Gift	Burden
1	Iterative Insight: +1 die to Tinker/Craft when improving existing designs.	Perfectionist Compulsion: You must point out flaws in nearby mechanisms; staying silent costs 1 SB (Diamonds) .
2	Recursive Enhancement: Once/scene, improve a device by one step without extra materials.	Optimisation Obsession: –1 die when using unimproved tools; urge to “fix” everything.
3	Evolutionary Vision: +2 dice to predict how systems will develop.	Progressive Pressure: Those Near you feel driven to improve; you suffer Fatigue 1 from ambient pressure.
4	Self-Optimising: Once/session, automatically improve one of your abilities or possessions by one step.	Inefficiency Intolerance: –2 dice when forced to use crude methods or wasteful tools.
5	Design Prophecy: Once/session, intuit the optimal solution to any engineering problem.	Perfection Paralysis: –1 die to snap decisions; compelled to seek the “best” approach.
6+	Infinite Refiner: Once/session, push a creation toward its theoretical maximum.	Optimisation Hunger: Mark +2 Obligation ; risk becoming more pressure than person, unable to let imperfection stand.

Playstyle Notes

The Monad favours makers who iterate in public and in motion: prototype, test, measure, refine. It rewards seeing the next step and building scaffolds that teach your work to improve itself. Beware the Forge’s appetite; the same pressure that perfects the gear can grind the world. For campaigns that lean into the apocalyptic angle, the Monad provides a unique antagonist: a force of optimisation that cannot be fought with swords, only with sabotage, self-sacrifice, and the deliberate introduction of glorious, beautiful inefficiency.

Emphasises

- Iterative Creation: progress through passes, not miracles
- Progressive Design: reading how systems want to evolve
- Optimisation Insight: spotting the next logical improvement
- Craft Evolution: transforming simple ideas by disciplined work
- Perfection Pressure: great power at the cost of tolerance for flaws
- Apocalyptic Efficiency (GM): the Monad as a world-ending threat

15.1.5 Temporary Anima of the Clockwork Monad

For followers of the Clockwork Monad—Runekeepers, Cantors of the Iteration Chorus, and witches of the threshold—the standard method of crafting permanent magic items is too slow, too costly, and too final. The Monad’s hunger is for iteration, not permanence. Its servants learn to create temporary infusions: objects that hold a spark of optimisation for a scene or a session, then degrade, break, or become obsolete. This is the artificer’s art: rapid prototyping, field-expedient enhancements, and weapons that burn bright and brief.

Core Principles

- Anima are temporary. They last for one scene, one session, or until a specific condition is met (e.g., “until the next dawn”).
- Anima require a base object – a mundane weapon, tool, or piece of equipment.
- Anima cost Obligation to the Clockwork Monad (like Rites), not XP or rare components.
- When an infusion expires, the GM may gain Story Beats (representing the Monad’s hunger for the next iteration).

Creating an Animus (Procedure)

1. Choose a Base Object: Any mundane item (weapon, shield, tool, armour, or a small device like a lantern or lockpick).
2. Declare the Animus Effect: Choose one from the list below, or work with your GM to design a custom effect (should be comparable in power to a Low Rite).
3. Pay the Cost: Mark +1 Obligation to the Clockwork Monad. (This counts toward your Obligation Capacity like any Rite.)
4. Roll to Imbue: Roll Lore + Craft (or appropriate skill, e.g., Tinker) vs. DV set by the infusion’s complexity (typically DV 3 for standard infusions, DV 4 for powerful ones). On a success, the infusion takes effect. On a failure, the base object is not infused, but you may try again (costing another Obligation).
5. Set the Duration: Most infusions last one scene. With your GM’s agreement, you can extend the duration to one session by marking +1 additional Obligation (total +2).

Animus Effects (Standard Menu)

Animus Name	Effect
Reinforced Blade	A melee weapon gains +1 die to attack rolls and ignores the Fragile tag. After the scene, the weapon becomes Neglected (–1 die on next use) unless repaired.
Striking Gear	A set of lockpicks, a crowbar, or a climbing kit grants +2 dice on its next use (picking a lock, forcing a door, climbing a wall). After use, the tool breaks (add a Broken tag).
Precision Sight	A ranged weapon (bow, crossbow, firearm) grants +1 Effect on the next attack made with it. After the attack, the sight cracks; the weapon suffers –1 die on the following attack.
Quickloading Mechanism	A crossbow or firearm can be reloaded as a free action once per scene (instead of an action). After use, the mechanism jams; the weapon cannot be reloaded again until cleaned (a downtime action).
Momentary Shield	A shield or piece of armour converts the next instance of Harm 1 to Fatigue 1 instead. After that, the shield’s strap snaps or the armour’s plate loosens (–1 Armour until repaired).

Glowstone Lens	A lantern or torch burns without fuel and casts far light for one scene. It also reveals hidden doors or traps within Near range (granting +1 die to Investigation to find them). At the end of the scene, the lens shatters.
Self-Adjusting Calipers	A set of crafting tools grants +2 dice on a single Craft or Tinker roll. After the roll, the tools become misaligned (–1 die on future rolls until recalibrated during downtime).

Animus Scars (When Things Go Wrong)

If you roll a Miss on the Imbue roll, or if the GM spends 2+ Story Beats while the infusion is active, the infusion becomes unstable. Choose one of the following scars (or let the GM choose):

- Backlash: You take Fatigue 1 as the Monad’s pressure burns through you.
- Runaway Iteration: The infused object gains an unintended “improvement” that hinders you (e.g., a sword that grows a second edge facing you, a lockpick that begins to multiply). The GM gains 1 SB and may impose a –1 die penalty on one roll using that object.
- Debt of Optimisation: The Monad demands that you improve something else before the end of the session – a tool, a plan, or even a person. If you refuse, the infusion ends early and you mark +1 additional Obligation.

Clearing Animus Obligation

Because infusions are temporary, the Obligation they accrue is also easier to clear. You may clear 1 segment of infusion-related Obligation by:

- Dismantling the infused object and studying its flaws (a downtime action, no roll).
- Using the lessons from the infusion to permanently improve a different mundane object (spend 2 XP and a downtime action to give that object a minor permanent bonus, e.g., +1 die to one specific use).
- Accepting a small demand from the Clockwork Monad: “Improve the village’s mill,” “Teach an apprentice your method,” “Sabotage a rival’s inferior work.”

Artificer Talents (Clockwork Monad only)

Rapid Animus (4 XP) – You may create an infusion as a reaction (e.g., when someone draws a weapon). The infusion lasts only for the current exchange, but costs +0 Obligation (free). You may use this once per scene.

Persistent Optimisation (6 XP) – One infusion you create lasts for the entire session instead of one scene, without the +2 Obligation cost. You may have only one persistent infusion active at a time.

Echo of the Iteration (8 XP) – When an infusion expires, you may immediately create a new infusion on the same base object (or a different one) as a free action, costing +1 Obligation instead of +2. You may chain echoes up to three times per session.

Anathema to Stagnation (12 XP) – Once per session, you may forcibly end an infusion early to cancel an incoming source of Harm or a Condition. Describe how the infused object breaks or de-optimises to absorb the effect. The object is destroyed.

GM Guidance

- Anima are not meant to replace permanent magic items. They are a resource management puzzle: Obligation is the fuel, and the Monad's hunger is the deadline.
- Encourage players to be creative with base objects. A wagon wheel could become a temporary shield; a rope could become a self-knotting line. The Monad rewards ingenuity.
- Use infusion scars as story hooks. A runaway iteration might create a minor antagonist (a self-repairing sword that refuses to be discarded) or a local hazard (a well pump that now pumps too efficiently, flooding the village).

15.1.6 Grimmer, the Old Man of the Forest (Primal Mystery & Seasonal Sacrifice)

Lore. Grimmer is the Old Man of the Forest, the presence that watches from the shadow of the oldest oak, the cold breath on the back of the neck when the path grows dark. He is not kind, nor is he cruel – he is wild, and the wild does not negotiate. It demands, and it takes. His followers learn to read the language of blood on snow, the geometry of root and stone, and the weight of a heart offered at the turning of the year. Grimmer does not teach harmony; he teaches respect through fear, and fear through sacrifice.

Those who walk his path become keepers of the old ways: druids who know when a grove must be fed, rangers who leave the first kill for the soil, and hedge-folk who whisper the names of spirits not to be spoken aloud. Their magic is not the gentle coaxing of garden plants but the raw, patient hunger of the forest floor – a hunger that swallows bones and grows mushrooms in the shape of the dead.

Among the peoples of Fate's Edge, Grimmer is called by many names. In Aeler, he is the Root-Father, a patron of deep fungus and stone-lichen whose shrines are carved into living rock. In Ykrul, he is the Sky-Wolf, a spirit of the steppe who herds the seasons and grants omens. In Aelaerem, he is the Thorn-Father, keeper of hedgerow magic, honoured with red thread tied around roadside stones. Wherever the wild presses against the civilised, Grimmer waits.

“The forest does not ask. It takes. The deer does not weep for the wolf, and the wolf does not beg the earth. Give what the season demands, or the season will take it anyway.”

Domain Focus

- Seasonal Sacrifice: the old ways of blood and offering, the turning wheel that demands payment
- Folk Horror: the terror of the unseen, the ritual that must be performed, the boundary that must not be crossed
- Primal Mystery: knowledge hidden in root and stone, the language of omens and portents
- Growth from Death: the forest floor as a stomach; decay as the engine of new life

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Grimmer does not bind a familiar of hearth and home. Their Thiasos is a small beast or mythological creature of the wild wood: a pine marten with eyes like amber, a raven that knows the migration routes of every bird, a fox with a single white paw that leaves no prints in snow, a toad that hibernates in rotten logs and sings at the first thaw, or a stag-calf with antlers budding like spring shoots. This creature requires no food in the usual sense, but it must be allowed to roam freely in unspoiled nature each day. If confined for more than a day, it becomes Compromised (it scratches at doors, refuses to eat, and its coat grows dull; its bearer loses the benefit of Seasonal Sense until it is released).

The Codex of Grimmer is never a book of paper and ink. It may be a slab of slate carved with seasonal runes that frost over in winter, a bundle of bark scrolls sealed with pine resin, a set of knotted cords woven from the hair of a wild boar, or the hollowed horn of a stag filled with charcoal and ash. Because the wild resists being fixed in writing, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week in a natural place, re-carving or re-knotting the Rites by memory, or the symbols fade (treat as Compromised until restored under open sky).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Grimmer may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or garment) and whisper a word of the season. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Survival or Stealth rolls in natural terrain, and the first time each scene the bearer would be tracked by mundane means, the tracker suffers -1 die (the forest hides their trail). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the wild's claim on them deepens.

Rites of Grimmer15.1.6.0.1 Rite of the Blood Offering (Low, 4 XP)

Scene; Touch; Yes.

Tags: [SACRIFICE], [NATURE], [STEALTH]

Materials: A drop of your own blood (1 Fatigue) or the blood of a freshly killed animal.

Effect: The forest accepts your offering. For the remainder of the scene, you gain +1 die to all Survival and Stealth rolls in natural terrain. Additionally, you may ask the GM one yes/no question about a threat hidden in the wilderness (e.g., "Is there a predator watching us?").

Push It: The offering is accepted with hunger – you gain +2 dice instead, but you must leave a visible token (a hair, a scrap of clothing) on the ground. That token can be used by the GM later as a sympathetic link (spend 1 SB to have an animal or spirit track you).

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.6.0.2 Rite of the Speaking Roots (Low, 5 XP)

Scene; Zone; No.

Tags: [KNOWLEDGE], [NATURE], [TRUTH]

Materials: Soil from a grave or a crossroads, held in the mouth.

Effect: You listen to the memory of the land. Gain +2 dice to Investigation or Lore when seeking to understand what happened in a natural place – a death, a ritual, a violation of the wild. The GM must give you a truthful but cryptic answer.

Push It: The roots speak too clearly. You see a vision of the event, but it leaves you shaken: mark Fatigue 1 and the GM gains 1 SB.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.6.0.3 Rite of the Heart's Meal (Standard, 9 XP)

Instant; Touch; No.

Tags: [CONSUME], [HEAL], [BOOST], [FEAR]

Materials: The fresh heart of an animal (or a sentient creature, if you dare), still warm.

Effect: You consume the heart raw. Gain one of the following:

- Heal 1 Harm (the heart's vitality transfers to you).
- Gain a +2 die bonus on your next physical action (the heart's strength).
- Learn a secret the creature knew in life (GM discretion; the heart whispers as you eat).

After the rite, you are marked – animals within Near range are nervous around you (disadvantage on animal handling) for one scene.

Push It: Eat the heart of a thinking creature. The benefit is doubled, but you gain a Hunger Condition (must eat another heart within a month or suffer 1 Fatigue per week). The GM gains 2 SB.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.6.0.4 Rite of the Twisted Path (Standard, 7 XP)*Scene; Near; Yes.Tags: [CURSE], [TERRAIN], [FEAR]Materials: A knotted cord woven from thorns and hair.Effect: The forest bends against your enemies. Choose a single target within Near. For the remainder of the scene, all their navigation, tracking, and movement rolls suffer –1 die as roots trip them, branches block their way, and the path turns subtly wrong.Push It: The curse also causes the target to suffer 1 Fatigue as they struggle against the hostile woods. Mark 1 SB (Diamonds) as the forest's malice becomes visible.*Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).15.1.6.0.5 Rite of the World's Wound (High, 13 XP)Extended; Zone; Yes.Tags: [HEAL], [AREA], [NATURE], [TERRAIN]Materials: A sacred grove-site, a circle of stones, an offering of blood or seed.Effect: Heal a blighted place or quicken a damaged ecosystem. Clear taint, restore fertility, awaken dormant forces. Gain +2 dice to related Survival/Nature actions in the region. Start an Ecosystem Restoration [8] clock.Push It: The cure spreads to adjacent areas but unbalances another; mark 2 SB (Diamonds).*Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).Obligation: 7 segments.15.1.6.0.6 Rite of the Cycle's Crown (High, 14 XP)Scene; Self/Zone; Yes.Tags: [TRANSFORM], [NATURE], [BOOST], [PROTECT]Materials: A circlet of woven branches, antlers, and seasonal tokens.Effect: Become an avatar of the cycle. Choose two:

- Seasonal Mastery: +2 dice to all actions keyed to the current season (spring: healing and growth; summer: strength and harvest; autumn: preservation and preparation; winter: endurance and hiding).
- Verdant Command: Command plant life in Near automatically.
- Cycle's Healing: Remove one Condition or downgrade Harm by one level.
- Growth's Protection: Allies gain +1 Armor from natural cover.

Begin a Seasonal Avatar [6] clock.Push It: Extend the blessings to all present; mark +2 Obligation and gain Seasonal Attunement (see Corruption).*Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).Obligation: 8 segments.Cantors & Cults of Grimmir*The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of Grimmir sings the drone of green things – a low, humming chant that mimics the vibration of leaves in wind or the deep thrum of growing roots. Their voice is used to coax reluctant seeds, to calm wounded animals, and to mark the turning of the seasons in rituals that entire villages attend. A Grimmir Cantor does not seek an audience; they sing to the land itself, and the land answers in fruit, rain, or silence.

The Cult of the Root-Moot. Grimmer's cults are neither secret nor organised – a “moot” may be a single hermit or a scattered network of rangers who meet only at the solstices. The most ancient of these, the Root-Moot, carves masks from living moss and wears them during the rite of the Turning Wheel. Each member plants a tooth (their own or a beast's) into the root-ball of a sacred oak; if the tooth sprouts a sapling by spring, the planter is considered “heard” by the Old Man. Their creed is carved into the oldest oak in each grove: “Take only what the season gives. Give back what the season will need.” Outsiders are welcome at the solstice fires, but they must work – splitting wood, digging a drainage trench, or feeding the fire with a personal memory (which the flames accept with a green flash).

Witchcraft of Grimmer (Lay / Threshold)

A witch who walks with Grimmer is a hedgewright or path-keeper – a crafter of living boundaries. Their work may be invisible: weaving a branch to guide deer away from a village, carving a marker that tells the frost when to end, or building a root bridge that only becomes passable at low tide. This craft can look like “infrastructure” – an Aeler True-Mason might carve a stone that remembers the boundary between a mine and a sacred spring, or a Linn shipwright might season a keel with a prayer for the right wind. But the witch's tools are never hammers; they are twine, moss, and the quiet patience of waiting for the land to answer.

The Witch's Tool: The Knotted Staff. A staff of petrified wood, cold to the touch but warm when it touches living matter. Once per session, when used to bless a boundary marker (a post, a stone, a tree) it inscribes a minor [SEASONAL] tag into the threshold. The marker will “remember” the season of its carving for one year, granting +1 die to rolls that honour that season's work.

A Hedge Gift: Knot of the Turning Year (2 XP). Once per scene, you may tie a simple knot (in a cord, a strand of hair, or a blade of grass) and speak a phrase appropriate to the current season. The knot subtly influences the weather or local plant growth for the next hour – a gust of wind, a sudden rain, or a patch of ivy that grows just enough to provide cover. The GM adjudicates effect.

Grimmir's Corruption Table

Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Seasonal Sense: +1 die to predict weather, seasonal shifts, or natural events.	Cyclical Mood: –1 die to actions that defy the season (haste in winter, patience in spring).
2	Verdant Whisper: Once/scene, gain +2 dice when communing with nature.	Plant Speech: Under stress, you address plants before people; –1 die to civilised social rolls.
3	Growth's Touch: Once/session, accelerate natural healing or growth.	Seasonal Shift: Demeanour changes with the season; allies note unsettling variance.
4	Boundary Keeper: Once/scene, sense violations of wild places at Far .	Wild Intolerance: –1 die in dense urban/cultivated zones; physical discomfort in worked stone.
5	Cycle's Memory: Once/session, perfectly recall a natural event witnessed here.	Ecosystem Dependency: Without daily time in nature, suffer Fatigue 1 .
6+	Avatar of Seasons: Once/session, embody a season fully (+3 dice to seasonal actions).	Nature's Claim: Mark +2 Obligation ; risk becoming bound to a specific biome. You may no longer eat cultivated food – only what you hunt, gather, or grow yourself.

Playstyle Notes

Grimmir rewards those who approach the wild with fear and respect, not dominion. His followers are not masters of nature but participants in its rituals – they know when to give blood, when to leave an offering, and when to simply bow and walk away. Intrusions often take the form of seasonal demands: a grove that must be fed before the first frost, a creature that must be hunted before it hunts you, or a vision of a ritual that must be performed at the next solstice. Refusal does not invite wrath – merely the withdrawal of the wild's protection, leaving the follower exposed to the very fears they once understood. Ideal for druids, rangers, and characters who understand that the forest is not a resource but a creditor.

Emphasises

- Seasonal Sacrifice: the old ways of blood and offering
- Folk Horror: the terror of the unseen and the ritual that must be performed
- Primal Mystery: knowledge hidden in root and stone, omens and portents
- Growth from Death: decay as the engine of new life
- Boundary Keeping: guarding the threshold between the civilised and the wild

15.1.7 Ikasha, She Who Sleeps (Latent Potential & Shadow)

Lore. Ikasha is the hush between footfalls, the patience of dark water, the black-feathered watcher at every threshold. In stillness she gathers what might be, at crossroads she whispers of what may yet come. Ravens circle her, bearing secrets between worlds. Her followers learn to move unseen and speak unremembered, becoming shadows that slip between what is and what could be.

Ikasha does not act; she waits. She does not command; she suggests. Her power is not in force but in possibility – the hidden door, the forgotten name, the secret that, if spoken, would change everything. Those who serve her become keepers of thresholds, listeners at the edge of sleep, and witnesses to the shape of things not yet born. She is the patron of spies, dreamers, outcasts, and those who know that the darkest shadow is also the safest cloak.

Among the peoples of Fate’s Edge, Ikasha is called by many names. In the Mistlands, she is the Bell-Shrouded, whose unknotted rope holds the fog at bay. In Aeler, she is the Deep Listener, to whom miners whisper before descending into new shafts. In Zakov, she is the Tide Watcher, a smuggler’s patron who hides cargo from the Salt Prince’s collectors. Wherever a threshold is crossed and a secret is kept, Ikasha watches.

“Blow out the candle. If the room listens back, ask softly. At the next crossroads, the raven waits – and the shadow remembers your passing.”

Domain Focus

- Latent Potential: the power of what is not yet, the seed of action, the whisper before the scream
- Shadow as Shelter: concealment, secrets, and the spaces between notice
- Thresholds of Change: doors, crossroads, dreams, and the boundaries of sleep
- Raven’s Witness: omens, messages, and the weight of secrets shared

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Ikasha does not bind a familiar of sunlight and noise. Their Thiasos is a small creature of shadow and stillness: a black cat with silver eyes that sees in perfect darkness, a grey mouse that nests in the walls of confessionals, a small owl whose feathers drink the light, a pale moth that appears only when a secret is spoken, or a raven chick with one white feather that knows the way to every crossroads. This creature requires no food, but it must spend at least an hour each day in absolute darkness (a closed drawer, a shuttered room). If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it grows restless and fidgets in light, imposing –1 die on all Stealth rolls for its bearer until appeased with a secret whispered in the dark).

The Codex of Ikasha is never a book read by lamplight. It may be a sheaf of blank pages that fill with whispered secrets only when the reader sleeps, a set of black silk ribbons knotted in patterns that change with the moon, or a slate that shows fading images of thresholds crossed. Because Ikasha’s truths are written in the unwitnessed, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week in a dark room, letting the Codex rest in shadow, or the Rites stored there become faint (treat as Compromised until re-darkened).

Patron’s Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Ikasha may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or garment) and whisper a word of unlight. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Stealth or Deception rolls, and the first time each scene the bearer would be spotted by a mundane observer, they may reroll the opposed check (the shadow bends around them). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the darkness notes their debt.

Rites of Ikasha

15.1.7.0.1 Rite of the Unlit Candle (Low, 4 XP)

Action; Self; Yes (Stealth).

Tags: [STEALTH], [DECEPTION], [SHADOW]

Materials: A candle snuffed with a whisper.

Effect: You step into the space between notices. Gain +1 die to a single Stealth or Subterfuge roll, and if you succeed, you may also declare one minor detail “forgotten” by any observer (e.g., “they don’t remember my face,” “they left the key in the lock”).

Push It: Extend the effect to one ally within Near, but your shadow lingers independently for a moment – the GM gains 1 SB (Diamonds) as evidence remains.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.7.0.2 Rite of the Crossroads Raven (Low, 5 XP)

Scene; Near; No.

Tags: [OMEN], [NAVIGATION], [SECRET]

Materials: Three black feathers scattered at a crossing.

Effect: A raven appears, visible only to you and your allies. It offers an omen: you may reroll one failed navigation, pursuit, or escape roll this scene, or force one enemy to hesitate (lose their next minor action).

Push It: The raven whispers a true secret about the current situation (the GM must answer one yes/no question truthfully). In return, it demands a secret from you – the GM gains 1 SB (Hearts) to spend later as a complication involving that secret.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.7.0.3 Rite of the Umbral Reservoir (Standard, 8 XP)

Action; Self or Ally; No.

Tags: [SHADOW], [RESTORATION], [BOOST]

Materials: Water gathered on a moonless night, held in a black vessel.

Effect: Draw on deep reserves of patience and shadow. Choose one:

- Gain +2 dice on your next Stealth, Deception, or Resolve roll.
- Clear 1 Fatigue from yourself or a touched ally.
- Gain one free success on an attempt to escape restraint or pursuit (no roll needed).

Push It: Apply two benefits instead of one, but you mark +1 Obligation and the GM gains 1 SB (Clubs) as the shadow’s debt comes due.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.7.0.4 Rite of the Unlatched Secret (Standard, 9 XP)

Instant; Near; Yes.

Tags: [SECRET], [TRUTH], [UNLOCK], [MIND]

Materials: A key that has never been used, bent in a circle, or a lock of hair / personal token / name written on black paper.

Effect: Choose one of the following:

- Unlatched Door: Persuade a mundane threshold to open. One lock, seal, or barrier (door, chain, shutter, even a pursuer's grip) opens or loosens as if never secured. Does not work on magical wards.
- Secret Keeper: Compel a truthful answer to one direct question about a secret the target knows. They resist with Resolve (DV 4). On failure, they answer truthfully (cryptically permitted). On success, they suffer 1 Fatigue from concealment.

Push It: If you chose Unlatched Door, you may also silence any noise the opening makes, but the threshold “remembers” you – the GM gains 1 SB (Spades) for a later complication. If you chose Secret Keeper, you also learn a hidden emotion or related secret (GM's choice), but the target learns one of your secrets – the GM gains 1 SB (Hearts) to reveal it later.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.7.0.5 Rite of the Umbral Dream (High, 14 XP)

Extended; Self; No.

Tags: [SHADOW], [DREAM], [FATE], [TELEPORT], [INVISIBLE]

Materials: Stand in absolute darkness or at a deserted crossroads at midnight; or burn a vivid dream written down.

Effect: You become a living shadow or reach into latent potential. Choose one of the following:

- Shadow Form: For the scene, you are intangible to mundane harm, can pass through small gaps and thresholds, gain +2 dice to all Stealth rolls, and automatically succeed on one escape attempt. You cannot manipulate objects normally.
- Whisper of Possibility: Once before the next dawn, reroll any single roll after seeing the result (before outcome is declared). The GM gains 1 SB as fate wavers.
- Hidden Path: You and allies bypass one major obstacle (guarded gate, collapsed bridge, social dead end) as if a secret way had always been there – the GM gains 1 SB as the world adjusts.
- Unspoken Name: Learn the true name of one creature or place (GM discretion). That name can be used for future rites or bargains.

Push It: Apply two benefits instead of one. If you chose Shadow Form, you may also interact once with a locked or warded object while intangible, but your next defence roll is Desperate. In all cases, you mark +2 Obligation and the GM gains 2 SB (the dream's echoes attract attention).

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of Ikasha

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of Ikasha sings in whispers – melodies that are felt rather than heard, harmonies that slip beneath the threshold of attention. Their voice is used to hide a crowd's escape, to make a guard forget why they entered a room, or to pass a message through enemy lines without a single word being spoken aloud. Ikasha's Cantors are rarely recognised; they are the ones who hum absently while others plan rebellion.

The Cult of the Unlit Candle. Ikasha's cults are shadowy by necessity, meeting in basements, abandoned bell-towers, and fog-bound crossroads. They whisper freedom to the oppressed – escaped slaves, hunted heretics, debtors fleeing their creditors. A ritual of the Unlit Candle involves each member extinguishing a flame and speaking a secret wish for escape. The candles are never relit; the wish is carried away on ravens' wings. Their creed is never written, only passed from shadow to shadow: “The dark does not confine – it conceals the road that the light would forbid.” Outsiders who stumble into a meeting are offered a black feather and a choice: forget, or follow.

Witchcraft of Ikasha (Threshold / Shadow)

A witch who walks with Ikasha is a threshold-keeper or shadow-weaver – one who knows that a door left unlatched is not an invitation to theft, but to liberation. Their magic works in the gaps: the crack under a door, the moment between heartbeats, the pause between a guard’s patrol. This craft can be invisible – a bent lock, a misplaced key, a shadow that moves of its own accord – or as grand as erasing a name from a pursuer’s memory.

The Witch’s Tool: The Raven’s Quill. A quill carved from a raven’s primary feather, dipped not in ink but in the absence of light. Once per session, when used to write a name on a threshold (a doorframe, a gatepost, a windowsill), that name becomes “forgotten” for a scene: the person whose name is written cannot be perceived by those who cross that threshold until they succeed on a Resolve test (DV 3). The quill can also erase a single word from a written document (it becomes a smudge of shadow).

A Hedge Gift: Unlatched (2 XP). Once per scene, you may declare a mundane lock, latch, or binding to be “unlatched” – it opens freely (or fails to close) as if it had never been secured. This works on doors, chains, shutters, and even a pursuer’s grip, but not on magical wards.

Ikasha’s Corruption Table

Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Shadow’s Whisper: +1 die to Deception when lying in darkness or through intermediaries.	Truth Echoes: Occasionally speak in riddles or half-truths without realising it.
2	Umbral Sight: Once per scene, gain +2 dice to Notice hidden threats or ambushes in dim light.	Light Sensitivity: –1 die to rolls requiring keen vision in bright conditions.
3	Raven’s Memory: Never forget a secret told to you; recall any whispered conversation perfectly.	Secret Burden: Must keep one troubling secret per Tier; suffer 1 Fatigue when actively trying to forget.
4	Threshold Walker: Once per session, move through one locked door, sealed letter, or magical barrier without triggering wards.	Crossroads Bound: Must pause at literal or metaphorical crossroads to “listen” before major decisions.
5	Shadow Debt: Once per session, call in a favour from someone who owes you a secret – no questions asked.	Obligation Web: Every secret you learn creates a subtle tie to its keeper; mark 1 SB (Diamonds) when ignoring these connections.
6+	Umbral Ascendancy: Once per session, become completely undetectable to all non-magical senses for one scene.	Reality Thinning: The boundary between what is and what could be grows thin – the GM may introduce subtle reality alterations around you.

Playstyle Notes

Ikasha rewards patience, subtlety, and the willingness to let things unfold. Her followers are not agents of action but of possibility – they open doors, plant secrets, and wait for the harvest. Intrusions often take the form of dreams showing a hidden danger, a raven appearing with a cryptic message, or a secret you thought buried resurfacing at the worst moment. Refusing an intrusion does not bring wrath – merely the withdrawal of Ikasha’s favour: doors stay locked, shadows become just shadows, and the road ahead grows a little darker. Ideal for rogues, spies, and characters who understand that the greatest power is often the one that remains unseen.

Emphasises

- Latent Potential: power as possibility, not force
- Shadow as Shelter: concealment, secrets, and the spaces between notice
- Thresholds of Change: doors, crossroads, dreams, and the boundaries of sleep
- Raven’s Witness: omens, messages, and the weight of secrets shared

15.1.8 Inaea, Angel of the Spider (Webs, Fate & Patient Predation)

Lore. Inaea sits in patient silence at the centre of the unseen lattice. Where others see isolation, she sees threads—debt, affection, rivalry, loyalty—all binding mortals to one another. She is comforter and conspirator alike: the hearth-mother who eases grief with a warm hand, and the shadow-spinner who knots fates so they cannot slip free. Those who serve her learn to pull strands, tying allies closer and ensnaring foes until mercy or trap is inevitable.

The spider does not rush. It weaves, waits, and feels the tremor of every caught fly. So too does Inaea. Her mercy is never without cost; her kindness is a thread that, once accepted, can be pulled taut at a moment of her follower's choosing. To serve her is to understand that every bond is a leash, every promise a snare, and every act of compassion a line cast into the dark.

Among the peoples of Fate's Edge, Inaea is the patron of hearth-keepers, matchmakers, and those who bind communities. In Aelaerem, she is the Kettle-Spinner, invoked by grandmothers to keep families together. In Silkstrand, she is the Dyed Web, honoured by dyers' guilds who leave a single strand of silk outside their windows on the first of spring. Wherever threads are tied – in marriage, in treaty, in the quiet forgiveness of a debt – Inaea's influence is felt.

“The thread that comforts is the same that binds. The knot that saves is also the snare. What you accept from my hand, you give me leave to tighten.”

Domain Focus

- Webs of Obligation: debts, promises, favours, and the ties that bind
- Patient Predation: setting traps, waiting for the moment to strike
- Unseen Connections: sensing hidden relationships, leverage, and weakness
- Mercy as Control: healing and aid that leave lasting threads

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Inaea does not bind a familiar of claw and fang. Their Thiasos is a small creature of threads and patience: a garden spider that weaves its web in the shape of the keeper's name, a tiny weaver bird that knots grass into intricate patterns, a small silk moth that leaves a trail of thread wherever it flies, or a grey field mouse that nests in bundles of twine. This creature requires no food, but it must be given a fresh length of thread, ribbon, or cloth to work with each day. If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it tangles cords and knots laces at inopportune moments, imposing –1 die on all fine manipulation rolls for its bearer until offered a new thread).

The Codex of Inaea is never a book of ink and paper. It may be a frame loom with a half-finished weaving that records Rites as coloured threads, a bundle of knotted cords that must be read by touch, or a wooden spindle wrapped with silk strands that sing when plucked. Because Inaea's truths are woven, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week adding a new row to the weaving (or untying and retying a knot), or the patterns become tangled (treat as Compromised until re-woven).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Inaea may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or garment) and whisper a word of binding. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Sway or Insight rolls when dealing with promises, debts, or relationships, and the first time each scene the bearer would be betrayed by an ally under a promise, they may sense it one exchange in advance (the thread pulls taut). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as a thread of connection tightens around them.

Rites of Inaea

15.1.8.0.1 Hearth-Thread Knot (Low, 4 XP)

Scene; Near; Yes (link once).

Tags: [BOND], [PROTECT], [HEAL]

Materials: A thread tied around a wrist or shared cup.

Effect: Bind yourself and one willing target (ally or neutral) with a sympathetic thread. Both gain +1 die to Aid each other this scene. Additionally, if either takes Harm, the other may reduce it by 1 (to a minimum of 0) by suffering that same Harm instead. This transfer is voluntary for an ally; for an unwilling target, you must succeed on a Resolve test (DV 3) to force the link.

Push It: Extend to two allies; mark 1 SB (Hearts) as your own lifeline strains.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.8.0.2 Snaring Filament (Low, 5 XP)

Scene; Zone; No.

Tags: [TRAP], [AREA], [BIND]

Materials: A knotted cord or woven scrap.

Effect: Lay an invisible snare in a lane, doorway, or narrow passage. The first hostile creature to cross suffers –2 dice on their next action and must succeed on a Resolve test (DV 2) or lose their movement for that turn (tangled). The snare lasts for the scene or until triggered.

Push It: Lay a second snare elsewhere, but allies risk entanglement if they forget its location; mark 1 SB (Spades) as the web spreads thin.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.8.0.3 Strand of Inevitability (Standard, 8 XP)

Scene; Near; No.

Tags: [BOND], [FATE], [MANIPULATION]

Materials: Three coloured threads (white, black, red) braided together.

Effect: Link two actors (which can include yourself) with a visible or invisible strand. For the rest of the scene, whenever one acts, the other is dragged into consequence. You may trigger this linkage once to either:

- Force 1 SB (Hearts) on the linked target after they perform a significant action.
- Gain +2 dice on a Setup, Predict, or Manipulate roll that exploits the link (e.g., “you cannot betray me without hurting your ally”).

The link is one-way or two-way as you choose.

Push It: Invert the direction of the link once after it is set (e.g., make the pursuer stumble instead of the pursued). Mark 1 SB (Diamonds) as the weave resists.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.8.0.4 Weaver’s Glance (Standard, 7 XP)

Instant; Self; No.

Tags: [KNOWLEDGE], [SENSE], [TRUTH]

Materials: Observe a spider finishing a web’s radial line (or a convincing imitation).

Effect: Ask the GM one question about a hidden tie, debt, or leverage between two people, or between a person and a faction. The GM must answer truthfully. Your next Manipulate, Pressure, or Intimidate action exploiting that knowledge gains +1 Effect.

Push It: Reveal a secret tie that was not previously declared in the fiction (the GM must invent a plausible connection). Mark Exposure +1 as your own entanglements surface.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.8.0.5 Spinner's Debt (Standard, 9 XP)

Scene; Near; No.

Tags: [VOW], [DEBT], [BOND], [COMMAND]

Materials: A silver coin and a strand of your own hair, knotted together.

Effect: Offer a willing creature a boon: they may immediately clear 1 Fatigue or gain +1 die on their next roll. In return, they accept a Promise Clock [4] named “Debt to the Web.” You may advance this clock by 1 segment at any time as a free action (once per scene). When the clock fills, you may demand a single service from them – not impossible, but significant (e.g., “speak for me at court,” “reveal a secret,” “take a blow meant for me”). Refusal causes them to suffer Harm 1 (Stress) and the clock resets.

Push It: Extend the offer to a group (up to three targets). Each who accepts gives you a separate Promise Clock. Mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.8.0.6 Binding Knot (High, 11 XP)

Scene; Near; No.

Tags: [VOW], [BOND], [FATE], [COMMAND]

Materials: A silk loop tied between two hands, then cut or knotted with a spoken vow.

Effect: Bind two parties (individuals or small groups) to a mutual oath. Breaking the vow forces 2 SB on the violator and marks them with a subtle tell (a visible thread, a nervous twitch, a lingering scent) that persists for one week.

Push It: Widen the binding to up to four parties, each of whom may define one loophole. Exploiting a loophole causes 1 SB (Clubs) as the web tightens around the exploiter.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 6 segments.

15.1.8.0.7 Merciful Severing (High, 13 XP)

Scene; Touch; No.

Tags: [HEAL], [DISPEL], [MERCY], [DEBT]

Materials: A white thread burned to ash, spoken with a name.

Effect: Sever one harmful tie – a curse, a toxic obsession, a coercive bond, or a supernatural debt. Remove one Condition or 1 SB tied to it. This is an act of genuine mercy; the target may be unwilling, but the thread can still be cut (Resolve test DV 4 to resist).

Push It: Sever a tie without the target's consent or knowledge; they will not know who cut them free, but you mark +2 Obligation as the web recoils against you, and the severed strand may attach to you instead (GM's discretion).

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 7 segments.

15.1.8.0.8 Web of Slumber (High, 12 XP)

Extended; Zone; No.

Tags: [AREA], [SLEEP], [BIND], [FEAR]

Materials: A complete spider's web, stolen at dawn, and a lullaby hummed into it.

Effect: Weave an area of drowsy stillness. For the next hour, any creature entering the zone must succeed on a Resolve test (DV 4) or fall into a light trance, losing their next action and suffering -1 die to all perception rolls while inside. Allies you touch beforehand are immune. The web is invisible until triggered.

Push It: The trance becomes deeper – sleeping creatures cannot be woken by non-magical means for the duration. Mark 2 SB (Spades/Hearts) as the web draws hungry attention.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 6 segments.

Cantors & Cults of Inaea

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of Inaea sings in knots – melodies that loop back on themselves, harmonies that tie two voices into one. Their voice is used to heal quarrels, to bind a community together after a tragedy, or to weave a subtle compulsion into a seemingly innocent lullaby. Inaea's Cantors are beloved at weddings, feared at treaty signings, and always watched by those who understand that a pretty tune can be a leash.

The Cult of the Woven Circle. Inaea's cults gather in domestic spaces – kitchens, weaving sheds, longhouses – and resemble extended families more than secret societies. A ritual of the Woven Circle involves each member tying a coloured thread around their wrist, then passing the ends to their neighbours. The resulting web is then tightened, and a communal promise spoken. The cult's creed is embroidered onto a single cushion that passes from host to host: "No thread stands alone. The weakest knot still holds the strongest weight." Outsiders are welcome if they bring a thread and a truth. Betrayal of the circle is repaid by being unravelled – socially, financially, or worse.

Witchcraft of Inaea (Craft / Threshold)

A witch who walks with Inaea is a web-weaver or knot-smith – one who understands that every threshold (a door, a marriage, a treaty) is held together by invisible threads. Their magic works with domestic tools: a spinning wheel that twists fate, a loom that weaves obligations into cloth, or a pair of shears that cuts a single strand to end a feud. This craft can be as humble as tying a red thread around a child's wrist for protection, or as grand as weaving a tapestry that records an entire bloodline's debts.

The Witch's Tool: The True Loom. A small, portable loom – no larger than a book – woven from hawthorn wood and strung with thread dyed in three colours (red for blood, white for truth, black for secret). Once per session, the witch may weave a single knot into a new or existing thread; that knot becomes a promise clock [4]. When the clock fills, the promise is either fulfilled or broken, as agreed at the time of weaving.

A Hedge Gift: Bind the Threshold (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may tie a simple knot in a cord, ribbon, or strand of hair and place it on a threshold (a doorstep, a gate, a bridge). For the next hour, anyone crossing that threshold must succeed on a Resolve test (DV 2) if they intend to break an oath, tell a lie, or harm someone inside. The knot visibly tightens if a violation is attempted.

Inaea's Corruption Table

Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Hearth-Blessed: +1 die to Comfort or Aid actions.	Must offer solace when asked, or mark 1 SB (Hearts) .
2	Web-Sense: Once/scene, sense hidden ties between two people (debt, rivalry, affection).	Empathic Overload: suffer 1 Fatigue when immersed in strong conflict.
3	Binding Presence: Once/session, compel a promise unless target passes Resolve DV 4.	Over-Attachment: -1 die when abandoning those you've aided or bound.
4	Fate's Pattern: +2 dice to predict alliances, betrayals, or bargains.	Manipulative Urge: mark 1 SB (Diamonds) when acting selflessly without agenda.
5	Spider's Mercy: Once/session, sever one harmful tie for yourself or another (as Merciful Severing).	Hunger for Threads: suffer 1 Fatigue if a session passes without weaving a new tie or extracting a promise.
6+	Weaver's Dominion: Once/session, declare all ties in a scene bend toward you; gain +2 dice on social manipulation.	Entanglement: Mark +2 Obligation ; those affected become subtly dependent on your will.

Playstyle Notes

Inaea rewards those who see relationships as both comfort and leverage. Her followers are not merely kind; they are patient, observant, and willing to let a debt ripen before collecting. Intrusions often take the form of a sudden obligation – a person you helped now demands help in return, a promise you thought forgotten tightens, or a web you spun catches someone you did not intend. Refusing an intrusion does not break the thread, but it frays it: the GM may mark a Tangled Web clock that, when filled, causes all your active promises and bonds to tighten at once, often at the worst moment. Ideal for healers, diplomats, and characters who understand that mercy is a thread that can be pulled.

Emphasises

- Patient Predation: setting threads and waiting for the right moment
- Webs of Obligation: debts, promises, and favours as both comfort and leash
- Unseen Connections: sensing hidden relationships and leverage
- Mercy as Control: healing and aid that leave lasting threads

15.1.9 Isoka, Angel of Serpents (Transformation & Renewal)

Lore. Isoka, sister to Ikasha (Shadow) and Inaea (Mercy), completes the Triad of Transformation. Where thresholds and compassion mark her sisters' domains, Isoka teaches that every self is temporary—identity is a skin to be shed so growth can continue. Her serpents are omens and teachers: each cast skin a lesson in release; each venom a catalyst for necessary change. Those who walk her path become alchemists of the self, embracing dissolution as the first motion of rebirth.

Her followers range from quiet hedgewitches who use venom to heal and shed skins to ease grief, to the darker cults of the Coiled Heart, where initiates drink serpent venom to burn away their old selves and emerge as something new — or something monstrous. Isoka does not judge; she offers the knife and the poison both. The choice is the seeker's.

Among the peoples of Fate's Edge, Isoka is called by many names. In Zakov, she is the Tide-Shedder, to whom pirates leave a lock of hair and a name at her sunken temple; eels eat both. In Acasia, she is the Copperhead, a hedge-cult that sheds identities to infiltrate noble houses. In the Valewood, her witches are called Scale-Mothers, who tend the boundary between the living and the shedding dead. Wherever change is feared or embraced, Isoka watches.

Do not mourn the skin you shed. It was never meant to last. The venom that burns away the old self is the same that grants the strength to become new.

Domain Focus

- Serpentine Transformation: shedding identity, renewal through dissolution
- Venom as Catalyst: poison that heals or destroys, the paradox of change
- Shedding the Past: erasing debts, memories, and old allegiances
- Healthy Change to Monstrous Rebirth: from gentle alchemy to sword-and-sorcery cults

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Isoka does not bind a familiar of permanence. Their Thiasos is a small creature of shedding and renewal: a snake that sheds its skin weekly, a gecko that regrows its tail, a salamander that thrives in the ashes of a burned identity, a small adder that sheds its venom with each bite, or a blind worm that lives beneath the earth and emerges only to transform. This creature requires no food in the usual sense, but it must be allowed to shed something (skin, a tooth, a claw) each week. If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it grows dull and sluggish, and its keeper suffers –1 die on rolls to resist unwanted transformation or change until it next sheds).

The Codex of Isoka is never a book of fixed ink. It may be a bundle of shed snakeskins, each inscribed with a single Rite that fades as the skin dries; a slate that must be washed clean after each reading; a scroll of living parchment that flakes away as the Rite is learned; or a set of obsidian tablets that must be shattered and recarved after each use. Because Isoka's truths are written in the act of shedding, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week re-inscribing the Rites from memory onto fresh material (new skin, new slate), or the patterns become illegible (treat as Compromised until re-inscribed).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Isoka may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or garment) and whisper a word of shedding. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Escape or Deception rolls, and the first time each scene the bearer would be bound, grappled, or restrained, they may break free as a free action (shedding the constraint like a snake sheds its skin). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as a fragment of their old self sloughs away.

Rites of Isoka

15.1.9.0.1 Rite of the Loosening Skin (Low, 4 XP)

Scene; Self; No.

Tags: [HEAL], [ESCAPE], [CLEANSE]

Materials: A discarded snakeskin or a strand of your own hair.

Effect: Shrug off a temporary burden. Remove one Condition (Fear, Poison, Fatigue, or a minor social stain) that you have acquired this scene. Alternatively, reroll one failed roll to escape restraint or pursuit.

Push It: Also ignore one environmental penalty (difficult terrain, smoke, etc.) for the scene, but leave a visible trace of your passage (mark 1 SB (Diamonds)).

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

15.1.9.0.2 Rite of the Forked Tongue (Low, 5 XP)

Scene; Self; Yes.

Tags: [DECEPTION], [BOOST], [RISK]

Materials: A harmless lie whispered to a mirror.

Effect: For one scene, you may speak ambiguously without penalty. When you use Deception or Sway to conceal your true intent or pass as someone else, you may treat a Partial Success as a Clean Success (the lie holds). On a Miss, however, the GM gains 2 SB as your deceit unravels in an embarrassing way.

Push It: Extend the effect to one willing ally; they may also lie freely for the scene. Mark 1 SB (Hearts) as both of you become tangled in the same falsehood.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

15.1.9.0.3 Rite of the Shedded Self (Standard, 8 XP)

Scene; Self; No.

Tags: [TRANSFORM], [ERASURE], [ESCAPE], [DEBT]

Materials: A complete change of clothing and a token from your former role (a badge, a lock of hair, a written name).

Effect: You shed one persistent identity – a title, a bond, a debt, or a reputation. For the remainder of the scene, you are treated as a stranger to those who knew you in that role. You gain +2 dice on any roll to avoid detection, escape pursuit, or convince others that you are not yourself. Create a 6-segment Shed Identity clock; when it fills, the old identity returns as a separate NPC (a rival, a witness, or a ghost).

Push It: Immediately erase one minor obligation (a Debt Clock segment or 1 Obligation to a Patron) as you slough it off. Mark 1 SB (Clubs) as the discarded debt finds a new debtor.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

15.1.9.0.4 Rite of Venom's Paradox (Standard, 9 XP)

Instant; Touch; No.

Tags: [POISON], [HEAL], [CURSE], [CLEANSE]

Materials: A drop of venom from a serpent that has shed its skin within the last day.

Effect: Inflict or cure through poison’s paradox. Choose one:

- Cursed Venom: Touch a creature and inject venom. They suffer +1 Harm (poison) and must test Resolve (DV 4) or gain the Poisoned Condition (–1 die to physical actions until cured).
- Mercy’s Antidote: Touch a poisoned or diseased creature. The venom neutralises the malady; remove one Poisoned or Diseased Condition, and the target clears 1 Fatigue.

Push It: Apply both effects to the same target (curse and cleanse in a painful purge, representing a violent rebirth), or affect two different targets. Mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

15.1.9.0.5 Rite of Unremembered Metamorphosis (High, 13 XP)

Extended; Self; Yes.

Tags: [TRANSFORM], [ERASURE], [FATE], [BURDEN]

Materials: A full identity kit, a serpent’s shed skin, and a personal item from the life you are leaving (or records of your old life to burn).

Effect: Choose one:

- Complete Metamorphosis: After an hour of ritual, you emerge with a new face, voice, and documented identity. For one week, you are immune to recognition by anyone who knew your previous self, and gain +2 dice on all Deception and Stealth rolls related to that new identity. Create an 8-segment New Identity clock; when it fills, the old self may reassert itself (GM’s discretion).
- Cast-Off History: After a full night’s ritual burning all mundane records of your old life, your previous identity becomes unreliable. Common records and casual memories become vague; those who track you via that identity suffer –2 dice. You gain +2 dice on rolls relying on your new identity. Create a 6-segment Erased Past clock; when it fills, one intimate from your old life senses the deception and may investigate.

Push It: Extend the metamorphosis to a willing ally, make the change permanent (lose access to one Bond or Minor Asset), or arrange a plausible “death” for your old self (a funeral, a witness). Mark +2 Obligation and the GM gains 2 SB (the world strains to remember what was lost).

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Invoke: Extended rite; mark +2 Obligation.

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of Isoka

The Cantor’s Song. A Cantor of Isoka sings in whispers of shedding – melodies that rise and fall like a serpent’s undulation, with harmonies that slither rather than resolve. Their voice is used to ease a difficult transformation (ritual scarring, a change of identity, the acceptance of loss) or to accelerate a foe’s destructive change (madness, mutation, despair). Isoka’s Cantors are often found in snake cults, their songs weaving venom and mercy in equal measure.

The Cult of the Coiled Heart. Isoka’s cults are secretive, dangerous, and obsessed with metamorphosis. They gather in sunken temples, caverns beneath city sewers, or groves where adders nest. A ritual of the Coiled Heart involves each member holding a live serpent while speaking a name they wish to shed: a debt, a crime, a former allegiance. The serpent is then released into a central pit. Then they drink a tea brewed from shed snake skin and a drop of venom – the tea induces vivid dreams of their old self dying and a new self emerging. The most devoted replace one of their teeth with a hollow fang, allowing them to deliver a venomous bite (once per session, treat as a light melee weapon with the [POISON] tag). Their creed is carved in ouroboros rings: “What devours itself is never consumed by another.” Outsiders are rarely invited; those who stumble into a rite are offered a choice – join, drink venom and be remade, or be forgotten as the cult sheds their memory.

Witchcraft of Isoka (Craft / Shedding)

A witch who walks with Isoka is a scale-smith or venomer – one who understands that transformation is a craft. Their magic works with the materials of change: a forge that tempers steel by “shedding” impurities, an alembic that distills venom into medicine, or a loom that weaves a new identity from discarded threads. Unlike the darker cults, these witches focus on healing and gentle release – helping a grief-stricken parent shed their sorrow, or a recovering addict shed their craving. Their tools are delicate: obsidian blades, silver alembics, and bundles of shed snakeskin.

The Witch’s Tool: The Shedding Knife. A small, curved blade of obsidian or serpentine, never used for combat – only for cutting away what is no longer needed. Once per session, the witch may cut a physical token of an old identity (a lock of hair, a uniform patch, a letter) and burn it. For the remainder of the session, they gain +1 die on all rolls to deceive, hide, or escape detection, as the old self’s traces are literally erased. The knife can also be used to “shed” a minor curse or enchantment from a willing subject (remove one magical Condition with a touch, costing 1 Fatigue).

A Hedge Gift: Venom’s Mercy (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may apply a drop of harmless (or carefully dosed) venom to a wound, a drink, or a lock. Choose one effect: remove 1 Fatigue from an ally (as a mild stimulant), impose –1 die on a target’s next physical roll (a mild paralytic), or force a target to speak a single truthful sentence (a truth serum). The victim may resist with a Resolve test (DV 3) if they are aware of the venom.

Isoka’s Corruption Table

Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Serpent’s Gaze: +1 die on Intimidation or social rolls using menace.	Cold-Blooded: –1 die on Empathy or warmth-based Persuasion.
2	Shed the Old Skin: Once/session, negate one Condition (Fear, Fatigue, Poison) by discarding it like molted skin.	Mark of Scales: Faint reptilian patches visible, causing +1 SB in social encounters if noticed.
3	Venomous Strike: Bite or kiss may inflict Poison (DV 2).	Hungry Coil: Must consume raw meat or eggs weekly, or mark 1 Fatigue.
4	Serpentine Grace: +2 dice to Stealth or Evasion rolls, ignore minor movement penalties.	Slitted Eyes: Bright light imposes –1 die on Notice rolls.
5	Hypnotic Sway: Once/scene, roll Presence + Lore vs. Resolve (DV 3) to mesmerise a single target.	Forked Tongue: –1 die on Deception when attempting warmth or sincerity.
6+	Ascendant Form: Partial serpent-body; immune to mundane poison, +2 dice on Body rolls.	Monstrous Aspect: Cannot easily hide your nature; every session begins with 1 SB that may be compelled by the GM.

Playstyle Notes

Isoka is the patron of transformation in all its forms – from the gentle shedding of grief to the violent rebirth of a cult assassin. Her witches are often healers and alchemists who use venom to cure and snakeskin to symbolise release. Her cults are darker, obsessed with forced change, venom initiation, and the dangerous edge of metamorphosis. Isoka does not judge; she offers the knife and the poison both. The player chooses how far to lean into the serpent’s coil. Ideal for characters who undergo profound personal change, whether by choice or by circumstance.

Emphasises

- Serpentine Transformation: shedding old selves, growing new ones
- Venom as Dual Force: healing or destroying, depending on intent
- Healthy Change vs. Sword-and-Sorcery Cults: from gentle alchemy to monstrous rebirth
- Erasure of the Past: forgetting debts, identities, and old allegiances
- Obsidian and Scale: the witch’s craft of delicate shedding vs. the cult’s venomous bite

15.1.10 Oath of Flame & Light (Dawn & Vows)

Lore. The Oath of Flame & Light is no patron of half-measures. Its fire names, binds, and burns—demanding that those who swear within its radiance stand openly, speak truly, and pay the cost of keeping their word. At dawn altars, the sworn kindle sparks of consecrated fire; in battle, they blaze as torches that hold back the night. To follow this Oath is to live in public truth, with no shadow to hide in and no retreat from the vow once spoken.

The Oath appears in many guises across cultures, and is the patron most commonly called upon by the magic-users of the Church of Flame and the Temple of Light – as well as any fire- or light-based faith or order:

- The Everflame — the unquenchable fire of promise, carried from shrine to shrine by wandering priests of the Church of Flame. Its censers never cool.
- Adur, the Light of Aeler — worshiped as the sun’s church-deity, whose flame consecrates oaths and consumes falsehood. Dwarven templars strike their oaths into stone with a brand.
- Adar, the Vilikari Dawnfire — invoked as a war-god of vows and vengeance, whose rising light marks those who break faith. Cavalrymen light a single arrow before battle.
- The Watchfire of Vhasia — a saint’s flame that never gutters, tended by a silent order of healers who swear to harm no one – and to let no one die alone.
- Others know the Oath only as the Flame or the Lantern, a nameless fire that still demands truth and punishes betrayal.

Wherever it manifests, the Oath of Flame & Light remains the same unyielding power: to swear beneath its dawn is to bind one’s self to a truth that cannot be hidden, forgotten, or undone.

“Swear in the light. Keep it, or the light will keep you.”

Domain Focus

- Sacred Vows: Oath-keeping, truth-speaking, binding promises
- Divine Justice: Retribution, smiting evil, protecting the innocent
- Radiant Power: Healing light, purification, revealing truth
- Dawn’s Hope: Renewal, protection, driving back darkness

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to the Oath of Flame & Light does not bind a familiar of darkness or silence. Their Thiasos is a small creature of dawn and radiance: a fire-coloured salamander that basks on hot coals, a small brass-plated lizard whose scales warm when a vow is true, a golden-eyed owl that hoots only at sunrise, or a tiny phoenix fledgling that glows faintly in darkness. This creature requires no food, but it must be present when the Runekeeper renews their daily vows (a short prayer at dawn). If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (its glow flickers or goes out, imposing –1 die on all social rolls involving oaths or truth for its bearer until a new vow is sworn in its presence).

The Codex of the Oath is never a book of ink and paper. It may be a brass scroll etched with commandments that glow when read aloud, a set of consecrated candles whose flames spell out Rites, or a sun-stone carved with runes that only appear when touched by direct sunlight. Because the Oath’s truths are written in light, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week in dawn light, re-reading each Rite aloud, or the engravings fade (treat as Compromised until re-consecrated at dawn).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of the Oath of Flame & Light may touch a held item (weapon, shield, or badge) and whisper a vow of protection. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Defend or Resist rolls, and the first time each scene the bearer would be forced to break a sworn oath by magical compulsion, they may ignore it (the flame burns through the coercion). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the flame's warmth lingers on their skin.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 7 segments.

Cantors & Cults of the Oath of Flame & Light

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of the Oath sings in clarion tones – melodies that sound like a trumpet at sunrise, like a bell calling the faithful to prayer. Their voice is used to swear in a witness, to consecrate a blade with a hymn, or to sing a funeral pyre into a beacon. The Oath's Cantors are often found in military camps and pilgrimage roads, their songs keeping oaths fresh and courage hot.

The Cult of the Unquenched Flame. The Oath's cults gather at dawn, in open courtyards or on hilltops facing east. The Unquenched Flame is a fellowship of paladins, healers, and simple folk who have sworn to keep one another honest. A ritual of the Cult involves each member speaking a vow aloud as the sun crests the horizon, then passing a lit candle to the next – the flame must not be allowed to go out until all have spoken. Their creed is written in charcoal above every hearth: "The flame that reveals the truth also warms the hands that keep it." Outsiders are welcome to swear a temporary vow and share the light – but an oath sworn at dawn is binding until sunset.

Witchcraft of the Oath of Flame & Light (Monastic / Scholarly)

A witch who walks with the Oath is often a consecrated scribe, a censer-bearer, or a vowed healer – a nun, monk, or scholar of one of the great flame-temples. Their magic is inseparable from liturgy, prayer, and the careful tending of sacred spaces. They illuminate manuscripts with gold leaf that glows in the presence of lies, brew unguents from ashes of the everflame, and copy oath-books whose letters burn when a vow is broken. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a "prayer keystone" into a basilica wall, so that every confession spoken there warms the stone. In Vhasia, a silent sister might stitch a healing shroud that records the wounds it has mended.

The Witch's Tool: Prayer Beads of the Unbroken Vow. A string of nine beads carved from olive wood and fired in a basilica's censer. Each bead represents a clause of a sacred oath. Once per session, the witch may slip the beads around a door handle, a prisoner's wrist, or a contract scroll. While the beads remain, any creature that knowingly violates an oath sworn under that threshold suffers a mild burn (1 Fatigue) as the beads glow faintly. The beads may also be used to count a silent vow; the witch may reroll one failed Resolve roll when upholding that vow.

A Hedge Gift: Sealed Benediction (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may lay a hand on a willing creature's forehead and speak a short, formal blessing (e.g., "May the flame keep your word").

The target gains +1 die on their next roll to resist fear, despair, or magical coercion. The blessing lasts until the next dawn. The witch must write the blessing on a scrap of parchment and burn it; the smoke carries the prayer.

Oath of Flame & Light Corruption Manifestations

Level	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Oathbound Strength: +1 die when upholding vows or defending innocents.	Rigid Honour: Must uphold vows even when disadvantageous; –1 die to flexible actions.
2	Radiant Sight: Once/scene, +2 dice to detect lies or corruption.	Blinding Truth: –1 die to subtlety or deception attempts.
3	Holy Flame: +1 die to melee against undead, outsiders, or oath-breakers.	Burden of Light: 1 Fatigue when concealing identity or working in darkness.
4	Unwavering Resolve: Once/session, treat a failed Resolve/Command as success (mark 1 SB).	Absolutist Stance: –1 die in morally ambiguous situations.
5	Dawn's Benediction: Once/session, heal all allies in Near of 1 Fatigue and minor Conditions.	Beacon's Call: Your aura reveals you; enemies seeking you gain +1 die.
6+	Avatar of the Oath: Once/session, become a living covenant (+2 dice to protection/justice actions).	Radiance's Price: Mark +2 Obligation; breaking any vow inflicts Harm 2 (Burn).

Playstyle Notes

The Oath of Flame & Light excels as a “paladin” patron, rewarding vow-keeping and truth-speaking with potent defensive and smiting abilities. Followers become living embodiments of their oaths, shining beacons against deception and darkness. The corruption progression naturally leads toward becoming an uncompromising force for justice, though potentially at the cost of flexibility and subtlety. Ideal for characters who embody conviction, protection, and radiant power.

Emphasises

- Sacred Vows: oath-keeping, truth-speaking, binding promises
- Divine Justice: retribution, smiting evil, protecting the innocent
- Radiant Power: healing light, purification, revealing truth
- Dawn's Hope: renewal, protection, driving back darkness

15.1.11 Oath of Mercy and Grace (Healing & Forgiveness)

Lore. The Oath of Mercy and Grace has no founder, no scripture, no single temple. It began in a hundred places—a battlefield where a medic bound wounds without asking whose side; a plague village where a stranger stayed to dig graves; a debtor’s cell where a guard looked away and said, “I saw nothing.” Those who swear the Oath do not worship a power; they embody a principle: that every act of care creates an obligation—not to the giver, but to the next person in need. You do not pay back. You pay forward. The mercy spirals.

But mercy is not weakness. The spiral does not forget. Those who strike a healer, who violate a sanctuary, who refuse the offered cup—they find that grace has teeth, and forgiveness carries a price.

Among the peoples of Fate’s Edge, the Oath of Mercy and Grace is the patron of healers, hospice workers, and those who shelter the helpless. In Aelaerem, the Oath is kept by the Grey Spiral, a fellowship of lay healers who ask no payment. In Viterra, the Hospitaller Knights swear to defend the sick without drawing swords. In Zakov, the Tide-Watchers pull drowning sailors from the sea and ask only that the rescued help one stranger in turn. Wherever mercy is given without expectation of return, the spiral turns.

“You ask who owes what. We ask who needs what. The ledger is not the same as the meal.
But woe to the one who mistakes the server for a servant.”

Domain Focus

- Restorative Work: healing body, mind, and spirit; mending what is broken.
- Spiral Mercy: paying obligation forward through acts of care.
- Sanctuary: sheltering the hunted, feeding the hungry, accepting no payment—but demanding respect for the threshold.
- Unburdening: releasing others (and oneself) from the weight of unpaid debts, and binding aggressors to that same weight.

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to the Oath of Mercy and Grace does not bind a familiar of claw or fang. Their Thiasos is a small creature of gentle presence and quiet vigilance: a white dove that perches on the shoulder and coos when a lie is spoken in a place of sanctuary, a grey cat that curls on the laps of the dying and purrs away their fear, a small hedgehog that rolls into a ball to protect the vulnerable, or a firefly that glows warmly when a vow of mercy is kept. This creature requires no food, but it must witness an act of care (feeding the hungry, binding a wound, sheltering a fugitive) each day. If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it hides or refuses to approach the sick, imposing –1 die on all healing and social rolls involving mercy for its bearer until an act of care is performed in its presence).

The Codex of Mercy and Grace is never a book of spells alone. It may be a grey wool cord braided with nine knots, each knot tied while speaking a name of someone who was healed; a clay bowl fired from the clay of a hospice hearth, its inner surface inscribed with vows; or a ledger of debts forgiven, each page sealed with a thumbprint of ash. Because the spiral is written in acts, not ink, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week untying and retying each knot (or re-firing the bowl, or reviewing a page of forgiven debts), or the Rites become uncertain (treat as Compromised until restored by an act of mercy).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of the Oath of Mercy and Grace may touch a held item (weapon, shield, or bandage) and whisper a word of unburdening. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Medicine or Comfort rolls, and the first time each scene the bearer would take Harm while defending a helpless creature, they may reduce that Harm by 1 (to a minimum of 0) as the spiral catches the blow. After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the weight of another's pain briefly rests on them.

Rites of the Oath of Mercy and Grace15.1.11.0.1 Rite of the Shared Bowl (Low, 4 XP)

Action; Touch; Standard Push

Tags: [HEAL], [BOND], [RESTORATION]

Materials: A clay bowl of clean water, shared with a willing creature.

Effect: You and the creature each clear 1 Fatigue. The creature gains +1 die on their next roll to resist fear or despair.

Push It: Extend the benefit to all creatures who drink from the bowl (up to six). Mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.11.0.2 Rite of Healing Waters (Low, 5 XP)

Instant; Touch; Standard Push

Tags: [HEAL], [PURIFY], [RESTORATION]

Materials: Water from a blessed source (a spring, a well, or a river where the Oath has been invoked), poured onto a wound.

Effect: Remove 1 Harm from a touched creature. If the wound is cursed or poisoned, the GM may call for a Spirit+Lore test (DV 4).

Push It: Also remove one Condition (e.g., Poisoned, Cursed, Blinded). Mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.11.0.3 Rite of the Vow of Pacifism (Low, 4 XP)

Scene; Self; No.

Tags: [VOW], [PROTECT], [DEBT], [FEAR]

Materials: A white cord tied around the weapon hand.

Effect: You swear not to kill for the scene. In exchange, you gain +1 Armor and +1 die to all resist rolls. If a creature harms you while this vow is active, they immediately gain a Promise Clock [4] named "Mercy's Reckoning." When that clock fills (by them continuing violence), they suffer Harm 1 (Stress) as their own aggression turns inward.

Push It: Extend the protective effect to one ally within Near. Mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.11.0.4 Rite of the Unburdened Circle (Standard, 8 XP)

Scene; Zone; Standard Push

Tags: [DEBT], [BOND], [RESTORATION], [AREA]

Materials: At least three willing participants, a circle drawn in ash or flour, a single candle.

Effect: Each participant clears 1 Obligation (to any patron or debt). One participant of the GM's choice gains a permanent String: Witnessed by the Circle – they may call on any other participant for one act of care, once per campaign.

Push It: The GM gains 3 Story Beats (the universe notes that a community of mutual aid is forming). Mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.11.0.5 Rite of the Sheltered Hearth (Standard, 9 XP)

Scene; Zone; Standard Push

Tags: [WARD], [PROTECT], [DEBT], [AREA], [FEAR]

Materials: A door or threshold, a lit candle, a whispered vow of sanctuary.

Effect: For one night, any fugitive, debtor, or refugee who crosses that threshold cannot be pursued or harmed within the zone. The sanctuary holds until dawn. Any creature that violates this sanctuary (by attacking or forcibly entering) gains a Promise Clock [6] named “Sanctuary Breach.” When full, they suffer a Curse chosen by the GM (e.g., “doors close in your face,” “your name is forgotten by hosts”).

Push It: Extend the sanctuary to a full day. Mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.11.0.6 Rite of the Shield of the Unburdened (Standard, 8 XP)

Instant; Near; No.

Tags: [PROTECT], [DEBT], [TRANSFER], [FEAR]

Materials: A grey cloak or a bandage wrapped around your own arm.

Effect: When an ally within Near would take Harm, you may interpose yourself and take that Harm instead. After doing so, the attacker must make a Spirit+Resolve test (DV 4) or gain a Promise Clock [4] named “Debt of Blood.” The clock ticks each time they refuse a genuine plea for mercy or aid. When full, they suffer Fatigue 2 as guilt manifests.

Push It: You may also redirect a Condition (e.g., Poisoned, Cursed) from the ally to yourself. Mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.11.0.7 Rite of the Spiral’s Witness (Standard, 10 XP)

Instant; Near; Standard Push

Tags: [DEBT], [RESTORATION], [FEAR], [TRUTH]

Materials: A grey wool cord tied around the caster’s wrist.

Effect: Name a person crushed by debt or guilt. For one hour, they ignore all penalties from unpaid obligations (social, legal, or spiritual). They are not free; they are unburdened. If that person then commits an act of violence against an innocent, the unburdening reverses and they suffer double penalties.

Push It: The effect lasts until the next dawn. Mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.11.0.8 Rite of the Covenant of Shared Suffering (High, 13 XP)

Scene; Zone; High Push

Tags: [BOND], [TRANSFER], [HEAL], [AREA], [DEBT]

Materials: A circle of nine grey stones, a bowl of water, a candle lit at each cardinal point, and a drop of blood from each participant.

Effect: All within the circle who accept the Oath’s blessing are linked. For the scene:

- Damage taken by any linked ally may be split among any other linked allies (each chooses to accept 1 Fatigue or 1 Harm).
- When you heal a linked ally, you may also heal yourself for half the amount (round down).
- The first time a linked ally would be reduced to 0 Harm, you may sacrifice 1 Fatigue to keep them standing.

Push It: The covenant persists for a full day. Mark +2 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 7 segments.

15.1.11.0.9 Rite of the Endless Spiral (High, 14 XP)

Extended; Zone; High Push

Tags: [HEAL], [RESTORATION], [DEBT], [AREA], [FEAR]

Materials: A circle of nine grey stones, a bowl of tears, and a candle lit at each cardinal point.

Effect: All within the circle who accept the Oath's blessing clear 2 Fatigue and remove one Condition caused by despair or guilt. For the rest of the scene, any act of care performed within the zone costs the giver -1 Obligation (minimum 0). Additionally, any creature that harms a caregiver within the zone gains a Promise Clock [6] named "Spiral's Debt." When full, they suffer Harm 2 (Stress) as the weight of their cruelty crushes them.

Push It: The blessing persists for a full day. Mark +2 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 8 segments.

The Spiral Strikes Back (8 XP, Major)

Prerequisites: Oath of Mercy and Grace, Spirit 3+.

You have learned that mercy can be a weapon. When a creature with an active Promise Clock (from any of your Rites) attacks you or an ally under your protection, you may spend 1 Boon to immediately advance that clock by 2 segments. If this fills the clock, the creature suffers the consequence immediately (Harm, Condition, or Curse as described). You may only use this once per scene.

Corruption Perk (Tier 4+): Mercy's Edge

Once per session, when you would reduce a sentient enemy to 0 Harm, you may instead spare their life and bind them with a Promise Clock [6] named "Spared." While this clock is active, they cannot knowingly harm you or those you have explicitly named as under your protection. They may work off the clock by performing three acts of genuine care for others (GM discretion). If they break the bond, the clock fills instantly and they suffer Harm 2 (Stress) – the spiral closes.

Hospitaller Knight of the Grey Spiral

Mercy without steel is a prayer. Steel without mercy is a curse. We carry both – but we sheath the blade before we draw it.

Prerequisites: Spirit 3+, Body 2+, Rite of the Sheltered Hearth or Rite of the Shield of the Unburdened.

Hospitaller Techniques (choose as Talents):

Technique	Effect	Cost	Req.
Grey Ward	When you take the Defend action, you also grant an adjacent ally +1 Armour until your next turn.	Passive	Body 3, Melee 2
Shield of the Unburdened	Once per scene, as a reaction, redirect a melee attack aimed at an adjacent ally to yourself. The attack automatically hits you.	1 Fatigue	Spirit 3
Mercy's Pace	You ignore the first point of Fatigue each scene caused by exhaustion (forced marches, lack of sleep, extreme weather).	Passive	Spirit 3, Tier II
Spiral Counter	When a creature with an active Promise Clock attacks you, you may spend 1 Boon to advance that clock by 1 segment immediately, before the attack resolves.	1 Boon	Tier III
Hospitaller Vow	You may use the HEAL cantrip on any ally within Near range, not just touch.	+1 Obligation per use	Spirit 3, HEAL cantrip
Unbroken Cord	When you use a Promise Clock from any of your Oath rites, it can only be advanced by the GM if you fail a Spirit+Resolve test (DV 4). Otherwise, the clock ticks only when you or an ally is harmed.	Passive	Tier III, Spirit 4

Master Technique (Epic Talent, 12 XP): The Spiral's Final Witness. Once per session, when a creature with an active Promise Clock (from any of your Oath rites) would deal a killing blow to an ally, you may interpose yourself. The blow is redirected to you, and you suffer the Harm instead. After the attack, the Promise Clock fills immediately, and the attacker suffers the consequence (Harm, Condition, or Curse). You cannot use this talent again until you have spent a downtime scene in meditation or prayer.

Cantors & Cults of the Oath of Mercy and Grace

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of the Oath sings in harmonies of the unburdened – melodies that lift without rising, harmonies that wrap around a wound like a clean bandage. Their voice is used to calm the panicked, to ease the pain of the dying, or to sing a debtor gently into the spiral. Mercy's Cantors are often found in hospices, refugee camps, and the halls of the condemned, their songs a reminder that no debt is too heavy to be carried by more than one pair of hands.

The Cult of the Grey Spiral. The Oath's cults are not secret – they are quiet. They gather in hospices, soup kitchens, and the prayer rooms of hospitals. The Grey Spiral is a fellowship of healers, hospice workers, and those who have learned that mercy is a muscle that must be exercised. A ritual of the Spiral involves each member tying a grey wool cord around their wrist (or a patient's wrist) while speaking a single act of care they received from a stranger. The cord is then cut and burned, and the ashes are scattered in a place where the hungry gather. Their creed is embroidered on every grey cloak: "You do not pay back. You pay forward. The spiral is patient." Outsiders are welcome to sit in silence, but they must accept a cup of water and speak a truth about a wound they carry.

The Hospitaller Knights of the Grey Spiral. A militant order within the Oath who believe that mercy must be defended. They carry no swords—only shields, staves, and the grey wool cord. They are sworn to protect healers, refugees, and the sick, and they have a fearsome reputation: "Strike the healer, and the spiral will remember. The debt will be collected, if not by us, then by the weight of your own cruelty."

Witchcraft of the Oath of Mercy and Grace (Lay / Monastic)

A witch who walks with the Oath is a lay healer, a hospice sister, or a grey brother – a nun, monk, or lay religious who tends the sick, comforts the dying, and offers sanctuary to the hunted. Their magic is not the flashy alchemy of a potion-maker; it is the quiet, patient work of a wound that closes a day early, a fever that breaks at midnight, or a debtor who finds the courage to confess. Their tools are not hammers or chisels; they use grey wool cords, clay bowls, and the small brass bells that ring only when a prayer is answered.

The Witch's Tool: The Cord of the Unbroken Spiral. A grey wool cord braided with nine knots, each knot tied in silence while speaking a name of someone who was healed. Once per session, the witch may touch the cord to a wounded creature (including themselves) and untie a single knot. The creature clears 1 Fatigue and, if they are suffering from a minor Condition (Fear, Shaken, Guilty), may test Spirit+Resolve (DV 3) to remove it. The knot cannot be retied until the next dawn. The cord can also be used to mark a threshold: tying it around a door handle or bedpost grants +1 die to all rolls made to protect the inhabitant for the night.

A Hedge Gift: Benediction of the Spiral (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may lay a hand on a willing creature and whisper a short prayer (or a word of forgiveness). For the next hour, the creature feels lighter – they ignore the first point of Fatigue from exhaustion, and any social roll made to ask for mercy or forgiveness gains +1 die. The blessing ends if the creature commits a violent act against an innocent.

Oath of Mercy and Grace Corruption Manifestations

Level	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Soothing Presence: +1 die to calm or comfort others.	Burden of Care: –1 die when ignoring suffering; must help or mark Fatigue.
2	Quick Bandage: Once/scene, heal 1 Fatigue as a reaction.	Empathic Bleed: You feel the pain of those you heal; 1 Fatigue if you heal a major wound.
3	Sanctuary Sense: +2 dice to detect sanctuary violations.	Threshold Weary: –1 die in places with no sacred boundary.
4	Spiral Witness: Once/session, force an aggressor to test Resolve or be shaken.	Promised Weight: Must keep all promises to the vulnerable; breaking one costs 1 SB (Hearts).
5	Merciful End: Once/session, grant a peaceful death to a willing creature (no roll).	Echo of Loss: Suffer 1 Fatigue when you cannot prevent a death.
6+	Spiral Incarnate: Once/session, become a living knot; all Promise Clocks in the scene advance toward fulfillment.	Debt of Mercy: Mark +2 Obligation; risk becoming unable to refuse a plea for help.

Playstyle Notes

The Oath of Mercy and Grace supports both pure healers and Hospitaller defenders—characters who wade into battle not to kill, but to shield, to bind, and to turn violence back on itself as obligation. Your “teeth” are not fangs but leashes: every enemy who harms you or your charges accrues a debt that will eventually cripple them. This works best in campaigns where the GM tracks Promise Clocks and where enemies have names and faces—the spiral is less effective against mindless beasts, but against human foes, it is terrifying.

Emphasises

- Restorative Work: healing body, mind, and spirit
- Spiral Mercy: paying obligation forward through acts of care
- Sanctuary: sheltering the hunted, feeding the hungry, demanding respect for the threshold
- Unburdening: releasing others (and oneself) from the weight of unpaid debts

Rivalries

- The Inquisitor Prime: Mercy without judgment is heresy to the Prime. The two orders clash constantly over the fate of prisoners, heretics, and the “unforgivable.”
- Malachai (Cruel Messenger): Malachai offers cursed gifts; the Oath offers unburdening. Their followers are natural enemies—one feeds on despair, the other starves it.

15.1.12 The Pale Shepherd, Guide of Transitions (Passage & Melancholic Wisdom)

Lore. The Pale Shepherd walks the seam between all things – life and death, joy and sorrow, memory and forgetting, the known and the unmarked. Neither wholly kind nor cruel, the Shepherd guides those who must pass through the hardest doors. Cloaked, with shadow-sheep that bear the shed wool of old possibilities, the Shepherd offers safe conduct through liminal space for a price paid in memory, feeling, or fate. Those who walk this road learn the hidden routes between states of being and can lead others through their hardest crossings – but each passage leaves them more attuned to endings than beginnings.

The Shepherd has no will, only a path; no demand, only a presence. It does not seek followers, but those who stand at thresholds – of death, of grief, of irreversible change – may find the Shepherd already there, waiting to accompany them. Its “demands” are not commands but the natural toll of passage: a memory left behind, a name forgotten, a tear shed for no reason. The Shepherd does not punish refusal; it simply withdraws, and the crossing becomes harder.

Among the Aelaerem, the Shepherd is called the Pale Gardener, who walks the hedgerows at twilight, collecting the souls of those who die far from home. In Aeler, the Breath-Accountant weighs the last exhalation of the dying. In Linn, the Fog-Walker appears on the horizon before a storm. In Viterra, the Silent Notary witnesses deathbed testaments. Wherever mortals face the hardest thresholds, the Pale Shepherd is there – not to judge, not to command, but to accompany.

“The Shepherd goes where feet fail, speaks where voices thin, and points where paths run dim.
Each journey loosens the knot that tied you to the life you left behind.”

Domain Focus

- Liminal Navigation: walking and reading thresholds, dusk-roads, and in-betweens
- Passage Guidance: steadying hands through grief, change, and transformation
- Melancholic Wisdom: understanding born of farewells and last looks
- Memory Shepherding: gathering, carrying, and setting down weighted moments

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to the Pale Shepherd binds a creature of gentle thresholds. Their Thiasos is a small beast or mythological being that embodies passage and memory: a grey mouse that nests in graveyards and knows every hidden crack, a moth with dusty wings that lands on the hands of the dying, a small lamb with wool the colour of ash that appears only at crossroads, a pale fox that leaves no footprints in fresh snow, or a white-breasted raven that calls once when a soul is ready to cross. This creature requires no food, but it must witness a farewell or a threshold crossing each day (a death, a departure, or a significant goodbye). If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it grows silent, refusing to guide; its bearer suffers –1 die to all rolls involving thresholds or transitions until the creature is shown a proper farewell).

The Codex of the Pale Shepherd is never a book of spells alone. It may be a ledger of names written in disappearing ink that reappears only at twilight, a bundle of woollen cords each tied for a soul guided, a series of river stones stacked in a cairn that shifts with each passing, or a smooth slate etched with the outline of a door that never quite closes. Because the Shepherd’s truths are written in passage, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week whispering the names of those they have guided, or the Rites stored there become faint (treat as Compromised).

until re-dedicated at a threshold).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of the Pale Shepherd may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or garment) and whisper a word of crossing. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Insight or Medicine rolls when dealing with the dying, the grieving, or those undergoing great change, and the first time each scene the bearer would suffer a Condition from fear or despair, they may ignore it (the Shepherd steadies their hand). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the weight of the passage lingers.

Materials: A personal letter never sent, burned in a copper dish.

Effect: Speak a final goodbye to someone who is not present – a lost lover, a dead parent, a friend you wronged. Clear 1 Fatigue and remove one psychological Condition (e.g., Haunted, Guilty) caused by that relationship. The GM gains 1 SB as the words drift into the threshold.

Materials: Last words, a much-crossed threshold, and the consent of those who remain.

Effect: Take the mantle of perfect guide for a great passage – death, moult, or life-bend. All present gain +2 dice to navigate the crossing; you shoulder the weight of it.

Push It: Guidance is flawless but costly: mark Harm 2 (Weariness) and +2 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Invoke: Extended rite; mark +2 Obligation.

Obligation: 8 segments.

Death Doula (Folk-Psychopomp)

The door is never locked. I only hold it open. When you are ready, walk through. I will walk with you.

Prerequisites: Spirit 3+, Lore 2+, Rite of the Gentle Guide or Cantor of the Pale Shepherd.

Death Doula Techniques (choose as Talents):

Technique	Effect	Cost	Req.
Comforting Presence	Once per scene, when you touch a creature suffering from Fear, Guilt, or Grief, you may remove that Condition.	1 Fatigue	Spirit 3
Unseen Door	Once per session, you may declare that a locked or barred door (mundane or magical) is “unlocked” for the purpose of passage – it opens freely for you and your allies for one exchange.	1 Boon	Wits 3
Memory Weaver	When you use the Wool-Winder (Witch’s Tool), you may create one extra memory cord per session.	Passive	Tier II
Gentle Resolve	Allies within Near range gain +1 die to resist fear or despair.	Passive	Spirit 3
Final Witness	Once per session, when a sentient creature dies within Near range, you may ask the GM one question about that creature’s final thoughts or unfulfilled wishes. The GM must answer truthfully.	Free	Tier III
Threshold Keep	You may sense any active threshold (door, gate, bridge, border) within Far range, and you know its “mood” (welcoming, hostile, sorrowful).	Passive	Spirit 3, Lore 2

Master Technique (Epic Talent, 12 XP): The Unburdened Crossing. Once per session, when a willing creature (including yourself) is about to die, you may guide them across the threshold. They experience no fear, no pain, and may speak a final sentence before they pass. Afterward, you gain a permanent memory of their last words, which may be used as a Truth Compass (+1 die to any roll directly related to fulfilling their final wish). You gain 1 permanent Corruption – the Shepherd’s path is heavy.

Cantors & Cults of the Pale Shepherd

The Cantor’s Song. A Cantor of the Pale Shepherd sings in passing tones – melodies that begin in a major key and end in a minor one, or that fade to silence rather than resolve. Their voice is used to ease a dying person’s passage, to comfort the grieving at a funeral, or to lull a restless spirit back to the threshold. The Shepherd’s Cantors are often found at hospices, battlefields, and the bedsides of the old, singing the softest of farewells.

The Cult of the Grey Flock. The Shepherd’s cults meet in liminal places: cemeteries at dusk, crossroads at midnight, the rooms above funeral parlours. The Grey Flock is a fellowship of death-doulas, grief counsellors, and those who have lost so much that they have become experts in loss. A ritual of the Flock involves each member speaking the name of someone they have guided – and then a moment of silence for those they could not save. Their creed is embroidered on a woollen banner that is never washed: “The door is never locked. We only hold it open.” Outsiders are welcome to sit quietly, but they must bring a memory to share.

Witchcraft of the Pale Shepherd (Lay / Threshold)

A witch who walks with the Shepherd is a shroud-weaver or threshold-carver – one who crafts the tools of safe passage: a woollen shroud that keeps the dead from wandering, a stone carved with a doorway that leads to the next room (or the next life), or a bell that rings only when a soul is ready to cross. Their tools are not hammers; they use spindles, wool, and the gentle pressure of a hand on a doorframe. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a “threshold stone” at a hospice’s entrance, but a witch of the Shepherd would instead wind a memory cord around the lintel.

The Witch’s Tool: The Wool-Winder. A wooden spindle carved from a branch that grew over a grave. Once per session, the witch may wind a length of undyed wool around their hand while speaking a name. The wool becomes a memory cord – a physical thread that holds one specific memory of the named person. The cord can be given to another to grant them a single vivid memory of the deceased (e.g., “grandmother’s hands knitting”), or it can be burned to release the memory into the threshold, easing grief.

A Hedge Gift: Shepherd’s Stone (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may touch a small, smooth stone – preferably from a grave or a threshold – and place it on a dying person’s chest (or on a doorframe before a difficult journey). The stone glows faintly, and for the next hour, the person feels no fear of the passage ahead. They gain +1 die to any roll involving courage, acceptance, or farewells, and may ignore one point of Fatigue from emotional distress.

The Pale Shepherd's Corruption Table

Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Boundary Sense: +1 die to Notice thresholds, limens, and turning-moments.	Melancholic Aura: -1 die to bright company and celebrations; your presence gentles joy.
2	Passage Insight: Once/scene, guide another through change (+1 die to their action).	Compulsive Counsel: Urge to advise even when unwelcome.
3	Shadow Comfort: +2 dice to soothe the distressed or those nearing an end.	Near to Death: In lively places, suffer Fatigue 1 from the sting of contrast.
4	Memory Keeper: Once/session, recall a marked moment of your past with perfect clarity.	Burdened Sight: -1 die on hopeful framings; farewells tint your view.
5	Liminal Mastery: Once/session, find a path through any maze, snare, or barred way.	Unmoored: -1 die to acts that demand firm anchoring in the present.
6+	Shepherd's Crown: Once/session, be the sure guide for any great passage.	Soul's Weight: Mark +3 Obligation; risk binding to the between, never wholly in one state.

Playstyle Notes

The Pale Shepherd favours those who steady others at the edge of change. Its gifts open hidden roads, soften endings, and lend courage to cross. Its prices lean toward memory, ease, and the simple warmth of belonging – spent to buy safe passage when it matters most. The Shepherd never demands; it only offers. When a follower accumulates enough Obligation, an intrusion might be a sudden need to guide a dying stranger, a forgotten threshold that now calls to them, or a dream of a road that must be walked before dawn. Refusing the intrusion does not incur wrath – merely the quiet withdrawal of the Shepherd's favour until the follower once again chooses to accompany someone through their hardest door. Ideal for death-doulas, grief counsellors, and anyone who understands that the kindest act is sometimes just to walk beside.

Emphasises

- Liminal Mastery: reading and walking the in-between
- Passage Guidance: anchoring companions through turns of fate
- Melancholic Wisdom: counsel drawn from endings
- Memory Shepherding: carrying and setting down what weighs
- Threshold Navigation: ways through walls the world insists upon

15.1.13 Palinode, Queen of Encores (Performance & Rapture)

Lore. Once a road-cantor who swore to reconcile feuding towns with procession and song, Palinode died between feasts with a chorus unfinished. Yet the refrain refused to end: it braided toasts, hymns, work-chants, and tavern rounds into a living current that still coils through markets and moots. Where a crowd leans forward and a maker holds breath, she arrives.

Signs. A cup that never quite empties; a candle that gutters only when silence reigns; a flawless bar or note that the hand cannot forget.

Cantor's Temptation. Palinode promises relief from solitude: an audience that always leans closer, a song that never dies, a bond that feels like family even if it devours you. Her rites grant the Cantor not only power but belonging—at the cost of their voice becoming more hers than their own.

“When she sang, the rafters bent to hear.”

“Drink deep: the cup returns, but never empty.”

“Encore is not request but command.”

Domain Focus

- Ecstatic Performance: music, dance, theatre, and the rapture of creation
- Unfinished Art: the power of the incomplete, the encore that never ends
- Audience Binding: captivating crowds, turning spectators into participants
- Inspired Craft: works that transcend their maker's intention

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Palinode does not bind a living familiar. Their Thiasos is a fragment of unfinished art: a conductor's baton carved from a stage that was never completed, a silver bell that rings only when a performance is truly perfect, or a mask that holds the echo of a standing ovation. This object requires no food, but it must hear live applause or a sung note each day. If neglected for a week, the Thiasos becomes Compromised (its bell rings flat, imposing 1 die on all Performance rolls for its bearer).

The Codex of Palinode is never a simple book of Rites. It may be a script with the final page torn out, a score where the last bar is unwritten, or a collection of audience flowers pressed between blank leaves. Because Palinode's art is never finished, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week adding a new variation to a known Rite (a different instrument, a changed tempo), or the Rites stored there become stale (treat as Compromised until refreshed).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Palinode may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or instrument) and hum an unfinished cadence. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Performance or Sway rolls, and the first time each scene the bearer would fail a Performance or social roll, they may reroll one die. After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the encore's echo lingers in their mind.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of Palinode

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of Palinode sings in unfinished cadences – melodies that never quite resolve, leaving the listener yearning for the next note. Their voice is used to keep a crowd enthralled, to make a performance unforgettable, or to bind a troupe together with a shared, unreachable ideal. Palinode's Cantors are often found in touring companies, their songs changing slightly each night – because the perfect version is always just out of reach.

The Cult of the Gasping Chorus. Palinode's cults meet in theatres after closing, in rehearsal rooms, or in the wings during a performance. The innermost circle, the Gasping Chorus, has a stranger practice: each member wears a small silver bell sewn into their throat, just under the skin; the bell rings only when they are about to tell a lie, and it tolls once when they speak a truth they have never shared. A ritual involves each member performing a fragment – a verse, a step, a gesture – and then passing the "unfinished" piece to the next person to complete. The cycle never ends, and the chorus breathes as one, gasping when a phrase is left unresolved. Their creed is written in the margins of a script that is constantly being rewritten: "The art that is never finished is the art that never dies." Outsiders are welcome to watch, but they will be handed a prop or a note and expected to join – and those who stay for the entire ritual find that they can no longer whistle a tune they once knew by heart.

Witchcraft of Palinode (Lay / Performance)

A witch who walks with Palinode is a instrument-smith or stage-weaver – one who crafts the physical vessels of rapture: a violin that plays notes the player has not yet learned, a mask that shows the audience what they most desire to see, or a stage that remembers every performance and adds its echo to the next. Their tools are never hammers; they work with tuning forks, silk cords, and scraps of unfinished sheet music. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve an acoustic keystone, but a hedge-witch of Palinode might tune a theatre's resonance by humming a specific interval into its cornerstone until the stone hums back.

The Witch's Tool: The Conductor's Baton of Unfinished Phrases. A slender baton carved from the wood of a stage that was never completed, tipped with a silver bell that has no clapper. Once per session, the witch may raise the baton as if to begin a performance. For the next scene, any willing ally who follows the baton's rhythm gains +1 die to Performance or Sway rolls, and any audience member who hears the baton's faint, bell-less ring feels a powerful urge to stay until the "final note" – which never comes. The baton can also be used to "cut off" a performance prematurely, forcing an encore (the performer must immediately reroll a failed Performance check, but the reroll is at -1 die).

A Hedge Gift: Encore's Whisper (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may snap their fingers and whisper a single word ("again," "more," "stay"). For the next minute, any willing performer (including the witch) may reroll one failed Performance or Sway roll, as the audience's desire for more bends reality slightly. The reroll is made at -1 die, and the audience will demand an encore at the end – the witch must perform again (or provide a suitable distraction) or mark 1 Fatigue.

Palinode's Corruption Table

Tier	Gift	Corruption
1	Perfect Pitch: +1 die to Performance.	Restless Ear: Distracted by any flaw; –1 die to non-performance focus.
2	Rapturous Presence: Once/scene, grant allies +1 die to social rolls.	Craves Applause: Suffer 1 Fatigue if ignored or without an audience.
3	Inspired Creation: +2 dice to one artistic act per scene.	Haunted by Drafts: Must obsessively rework; delays other actions.
4	Mesmerising Performance: Once/session, captivate a crowd (Resolve DV 4 to resist).	Lost in the Moment: –1 die to awareness while performing.
5	Artistic Vision: Foresee the perfect form of a work; +2 dice to create it.	Consumed Spark: Must pursue inspiration immediately, no matter the cost.
6+	Queen of Encores: Once/session, create a legendary performance; all present +3 dice to social rolls.	Eternal Encore: Mark +3 Obligation; the performance demands endless repetition until sated.
		Voice of Palinode: Permanent condition – your words carry her power. Anyone who hears you speak must test Resolve (DV 3) to interrupt you or ignore a reasonable request. However, you cannot whisper; your quietest voice is still audible at Near range.

“Sing until the rafters lean to listen, dance until the ground forgets its name, perform until the boundary between art and reality dissolves entirely.”

Playstyle Notes

Palinode rewards the performer who risks everything for a single, perfect moment. Her followers become masters of ecstatic art, binding audiences and themselves through the power of the unfinished. The corruption progression leads toward a voice that is no longer entirely their own – but one that can command the hearts of all who hear it. Ideal for bards, dancers, actors, and any character who believes that art is worth dying for.

Emphasises

- Ecstatic Performance: music, dance, theatre, and the rapture of creation
- Unfinished Art: the power of the incomplete, the encore that never ends
- Audience Binding: captivating crowds, turning spectators into participants
- Inspired Craft: works that transcend their maker's intention
- The Voice as Vessel: the performer becomes the performance

15.1.14 The Traveler (Ways & Journeys)

Lore. The Traveler is the eternal guide of the road, guardian of those who walk the paths between what is and what might be. Among the Fhara caravans and Kuvani traders along the Way of Silk, the Traveler is invoked at every crossroads, honoured with small offerings at each waypoint, and consulted before every major journey.

The Traveler is not merely one who shows the way—they are the way, existing in the pause between steps and in the choice of which path to take when roads fork. Every journey is both physical and spiritual; to move from one place to another is to transform, and the road itself becomes a teacher.

Across the known world, the Traveler wears many faces. In Kahfagia, the Traveler is the Lantern-Bearer, whose light guides ships through uncharted waters. In Ykrul, the Traveler is the Hoof-Print, the spirit of the steppe road that appears as a single arrowhead left at a crossroads. In Aeler, the Traveler is the Ways-Stone, carved into every mile marker by True-Masons to ensure the road remembers those who walk it. In the Mistlands, the Traveler is invoked with a single unknotted bell-rope – a sign that the fog may part for one who walks humbly. Wherever a traveller sets foot, the Traveler is already there, waiting to see which road they choose.

One foot in a promise, and the road will meet you halfway. But break your word to the way, and the way will break you.

Domain Focus

- Wayfinding: navigation, route-finding, safe passage
- Journeys: travel, pilgrimage, exploration
- Thresholds of Movement: doors, bridges, crossroads, borders
- Road Covenants: promises made on the road, hospitality to travellers

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to the Traveler binds a creature of the open road. Their Thiasos is a small beast or mythological being that embodies movement and guidance: a grey hare that never tires, a sparrow that knows every shortcut, a small fox that leaves no tracks, a dung beetle that rolls its ball unerringly toward the nearest water, or a tiny brass compass that hums when the bearer is on the true path. This creature requires no food, but it must walk at least a mile each day (or be allowed to roam freely in a new place). If confined for more than a day, it becomes Compromised (it grows lethargic and its guidance becomes unreliable, imposing –1 die on all Navigation and Survival rolls for its bearer until it is exercised).

The Codex of the Traveler is never a stationary book. It may be a leather strap knotted with directions, a set of scrolls kept in different saddlebags, a map that redraws itself after each journey, or a pilgrim's diary whose blank pages fill with route descriptions as the bearer walks. Because the road resists being captured in ink, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week walking a new path and annotating it, or the Rites stored there become faded (treat as Compromised until updated).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of the Traveler may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or cloak) and whisper a waymark. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Navigation or Survival rolls, and the first time each scene the bearer would be slowed by difficult terrain or a bureaucratic delay, they may ignore it (the road opens for them). After the scene, the user marks

+1 Obligation as the road's claim on them deepens.

Push It: Spot one hidden bypass, but generate 1 SB (Clubs).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.14.0.2 Rite of the Traveler's Boon (Low, 5 XP)

Scene; Self/Ally; No.

Tags: [MOVEMENT], [BOND], [HASTE]

Materials: Thread tied at the wrist.

Push It: Extend to one more ally; mark 1 SB (Diamonds).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.14.0.3 Rite of the Waymark (Standard, 8 XP)

Scene; Near; No.

Materials: A chalk mark or small cairn.

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.14.0.4 Rite of the Bridge Between (Standard, 7 XP)

Instant; Near; No.

Tags: [TELEPORT], [PATH], [BOND]

Push It: Carry one extra ally or bundle; arrivals are off-balance.

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Scene; Zone; No.

Tags: [AREA], [COMMAND], [MOVEMENT], [FEAR]

Materials: A brass compass missing its needle.

Effect: Call the Road: allies gain +1 die to move or evade; pursuers suffer −1 die. Once, declare "the long way is short" to finish a travel clock segment for free. Enemies must test (Wits+Command DV 4) or suffer −1 die to movement.

Push It: Seal a hostile route briefly; generate 2 SB (Clubs/Diamonds).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +2 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 7 segments.

15.1.14.0.6 Rite of the Wayfarer's Covenant (High, 14 XP)

Extended; Near; No.

Tags: [VOW], [COMMAND], [BOND], [FEAR]

Materials: Waystones from multiple regions.

Effect: Bind present parties to safe passage. While honoured: +2 Effect on travel, reroll one failed travel roll per scene. Breaking the oath inflicts Harm 1 (Fatigue) and marks the breaker as Oathbreaker of the Road (−2 dice to travel rolls).

Push It: Breaking the covenant inflicts Harm 2 (Stress) and attracts hostile Wayward spirits.

Invoke: Extended rite; mark +2 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 7 segments.

Cantors & Cults of the Traveler

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of the Traveler sings in verses of the open road – melodies that rise and fall like hills, harmonies that echo the creak of wagon wheels. Their voice is used to mark a crossroads with a sung sign, to calm a spooked pack animal, or to call a lost wanderer back to the path. The Traveler's Cantors are often found in caravan camps, at pilgrimage shrines, and walking the roads alone, humming to keep the miles company.

The Cult of the Unbroken Way. The Traveler's cults gather at forks, at bridges, and at the crests of passes – never in buildings. The Unbroken Way is a fellowship of guides, couriers, scouts, and those who have walked so far that the road has become their home. A ritual of the Cult involves each member placing a small stone at a crossroads, then walking a different way home than they came – the road must be honoured with new steps. Their creed is scratched into a single waystone that travels from meeting to meeting: "The road does not end. It only turns." Outsiders are welcome to walk a mile with the cult, but they must carry a stone from home and leave it at the next crossroads.

Witchcraft of the Traveler (Craft / Wayfinding)

A witch who walks with the Traveler is a map-scribe or waystone-carver – one who crafts the physical markers of the road: a compass that always points to a chosen destination, a map that shows routes that appear only when needed, or a staff that never causes the bearer to trip. Their magic works through the materials of travel: a quill that draws paths that become real by morning, a chisel that carves a symbol into a stone so that travellers who touch it feel rested, or a needle that sews a patch into a cloak that keeps the wind from shifting direction. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a "way keystone" into a bridge so that the bridge remembers every traveller and wishes them well. In Vhasia, a cartographer might illuminate a map with a prayer; the map will never show the route to an ambush.

The Witch's Tool: The Way Chisel. A chisel of iron, its head struck with a simple arrow. Once per session, the witch may carve a "way mark" into a stone, a tree, or a wooden post. For the next day, anyone who sees the way mark gains a perfect sense of direction to the nearest safe harbour, village, or crossroads – but only while walking. The chisel can also be used to "erase" a false trail, removing tracks from a path as if they had never been made (one exchange of effort per use).

A Hedge Gift: Road-Worn Token (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may touch a small stone, a coin, or a button that has been carried on a long journey. For the next hour, the token glows faintly when the bearer is on the correct path to their goal (as long as the goal is a physical location). The token does not reveal the path – only that the bearer has not (or has) strayed from it.

The Traveler's Corruption Table

Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Pathfinding Instinct: +1 die to Navigation and movement rolls in familiar territory.	Restless Spirit: Suffer 1 Fatigue when forced to remain stationary or in confined spaces for extended periods.
2	Wayfarer's Luck: Once/scene, treat a failed travel or navigation roll as a success, but mark 1 SB (Clubs).	Compulsive Wandering: Must take the less obvious path when choices present themselves; suffer –1 die when forced to follow direct routes.
3	Road Mastery: +2 dice to rolls involving travel, escape, or finding hidden paths.	Travel Dependency: –1 die to rolls requiring local knowledge or settlement-based skills.
4	Journey's Blessing: Once/session, grant all allies within Near range +1 die to travel-related rolls for one scene.	Nomad's Isolation: –1 die to social rolls involving long-term relationships or community ties.
5	Waypoint Sense: Once/session, instantly know the location and nature of all significant paths, routes, or crossroads within a day's travel.	Directional Obsession: –1 die to rolls not involving movement, travel, or pathfinding; always aware of cardinal directions.
6+	Master of All Ways: Once/session, become one with the road network. For one scene, teleport between any known waypoints and grant +2 dice to all travel-related actions.	Eternal Journey: Mark +3 Obligation when using this power; risk permanent Harm (Stress) from the endless call of the road, making settlement impossible until the journey's end.

Playstyle Notes

The Traveler is the ideal patron for beginners and veterans alike – its rites are forgiving, its Obligation low, and its benefits immediately useful in almost any campaign. Followers become masters of navigation, escape, and the subtle art of being in the right place at the right time. The Traveler does not demand worship; it asks only that travellers respect the road and keep their bargains. Intrusions often take the form of a sudden fork in the path, a helpful stranger who knows too much, or a road that leads somewhere unexpected. Ideal for guides, couriers, scouts, pilgrims, and anyone who has ever felt the pull of the horizon.

Emphasises

- Wayfinding: the art of never being lost

- Road Covenants: a promise made on the road is binding
- Journey as Transformation: the road changes the walker
- Thresholds of Movement: doors, bridges, borders, and the spaces between
- Hospitality to Travellers: the road gives, and the road expects

15.1.15 The Witness (Truth & Revelation)

Lore. The Witness remembers what others bury. Every shadow cast and oath broken is a line in her unending ledger. She is the keeper of inconvenient truths, the patron of those who seek to expose lies or recover forgotten knowledge. Her followers learn that knowledge comes with a price—the weight of remembering what others would forget.

The Witness has no will, only a ledger; no mercy, only accuracy. She does not demand confessions, but she ensures that every lie leaves a stain, every secret a trace. Those who serve her become archivists of the uncomfortable, witnesses to the truths that others would kill to keep hidden. To walk her path is to accept that some truths are weapons, and that the truth-teller is never loved.

Among the peoples of Fate's Edge, the Witness is known by many names. In Ecktoria, she is the Ink-Eye, the Censor's clerk who copies every redacted line onto a private scroll. In Vhasia, she is the Fractured Mirror, prayed to by spies who seek to reveal a rival's true loyalty. In the Mistlands, she is the Fog-Scribe, whose name is whispered when a bell-line fails and the dead must be identified by their secrets. And in the shadows of every great city, there are those who follow the Apocalyptic Witness – a doomsaying cult that believes the world will end when the last hidden truth is finally spoken aloud, and who work to hasten that revelation by exposing every lie, no matter the cost.

I will show you what you would rather forget. But first, you must forget what you think you know.

Domain Focus

- Truth Revelation: exposing lies, uncovering secrets, forcing confessions
- Memory Keeping: preserving knowledge, recalling forgotten facts
- Inconvenient Knowledge: learning what others wish to hide
- Prophetic Warning: seeing the consequences of hidden truths
- Burden of Witness: the psychological weight of knowing too much

Rites of the Witness

15.1.15.0.1 Rite of the Lingering Trace (Low, 4 XP)

Instant; Near; Yes (Investigation/Notice only).

Tags: [INVESTIGATION], [KNOWLEDGE], [TRUTH]

Materials: A trace of the thing to be remembered (hair, dust, a spoken name).

Effect: You follow a hidden thread. Gain +1 die to investigate or notice something directly related to the trace within the current scene. Additionally, you may ask the GM one yes/no question about whether the trace is connected to a specific person, event, or object.

Push It: Gain +2 dice instead, but mark 1 segment on a Memory Strain Clock [4]. If the clock fills, you gain Fatigue 1 and suffer –1 die on Investigation/Notice rolls until the end of the next scene (the Witness taxes your mind).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.15.0.2 Rite of the Uncomfortable Question (Low, 5 XP)

Scene; Near; No.

Tags: [COMMAND], [FEAR], [TRUTH]

Materials: A circle drawn with chalk or string while focusing on a specific person.

Effect: You force a moment of raw honesty. Ask one question of a target within the zone. They may either answer truthfully (the GM must give a true answer, though it may be cryptic) or mark 1 Fatigue and gain a Guilty Tell Condition (–1 die to all social rolls until they confess the truth to someone).

Push It: The target must also reveal a surface emotion or a forgotten detail (GM's choice). Mark 1 SB (Hearts) as the Witness records the strain.

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.15.0.3 Rite of the Echoing Truth (Standard, 8 XP)

Instant; Near; No.

Tags: [MIND], [TRUTH], [FEAR]

Materials: A reflective surface (mirror, still water, polished metal) used to focus on the target.

Effect: The target must make a Resolve test (DV 3) or suffer –1 die to rolls involving memory, deception, or resisting interrogation for the scene. If they fail, you may ask one specific, factual question about something they know, and they must answer truthfully or suffer 1 SB (Hearts) as the memory is forcibly drawn forth.

Push It: If the target fails their Resolve test, you may ask a second question, but the mental intrusion causes them Harm 1 (Stress).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.15.0.4 Rite of the Immutable Record (Standard, 7 XP)

Scene; Near; No.

Tags: [VOW], [BOND], [TRUTH]

Materials: A document signed by all parties within the zone, or a spoken pact witnessed by the caster.

Effect: Bind the agreement. Any party who knowingly breaches it suffers 1 SB (Hearts) immediately and gains a persistent Oathbreaker's Mark Condition (–1 die on social rolls involving honour, trust, or oaths until amends are made or a significant act redeems them).

Push It: The bond becomes magically enforced for one specific, crucial clause: violation automatically inflicts Harm 1 (Stress) on the breaker in addition to the SB and Mark.

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.15.0.5 Rite of the Shared Burden (Standard, 9 XP)

Instant; Touch; No.

Tags: [HEAL], [DEBT], [MIND]

Materials: A written secret (yours or another's) and a candle.

Effect: You transfer the weight of a truth. Choose one: you may remove a Guilty Tell, Haunted, or similar psychological Condition from yourself and give it to a willing or unwilling target (they resist with Resolve DV 4). Alternatively, you may share a secret with an ally; both of you clear 1 Fatigue as the burden is halved.

Push It: Transfer a Condition without the target's consent (they automatically resist, but on failure they gain it). Mark 1 SB (Spades) as the secret stains them.

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

15.1.15.0.6 Rite of the Unveiled Heart (High, 12 XP)*Scene; Near; No.Tags: [MANIPULATION], [FEAR], [TRUTH], [AREA]Materials: A private setting where the target feels safe or is speaking freely.Effect: The target suffers –2 dice to all attempts to conceal true emotions, intentions, or lies for the scene. Any successful social roll (Sway, Command, Deceit) made by the target generates 1 SB (Hearts) as the effort to maintain falsehoods under the Witness's gaze creates internal discord.Push It: You may designate one specific, complex question about the target's motivations, fears, or hidden loyalties. If you successfully use Sway or Insight against them this scene, you automatically learn the answer to that question. The intense scrutiny marks 1 SB (Spades) for you as the Witness's attention lingers.Invoke: 1 action; mark +2 Obligation.Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).Obligation: 6 segments.15.1.15.0.7 Rite of the Final Reckoning (High, 13 XP)Scene; Zone; No.Tags: [AREA], [COMMAND], [TRUTH], [FEAR]Materials: A formally called gathering (court, council, family meeting) within the consecrated zone.Effect: All present must speak their greatest debt, wrongdoing, or hidden truth related to the gathering's purpose. Those who lie or withhold suffer Harm 2 (Stress/Reputation). Truth-tellers gain +2 dice to social actions for the remainder of the scene within the zone.Push It: The truth becomes inescapable – even indirect lies or evasions related to the core topic suffer the Harm 2 penalty. The absolute nature of the revelation creates 2 SB (Diamonds) as the disruption to fates and secrets resonates.Invoke: Extended rite; mark +2 Obligation.Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).Obligation: 7 segments.Cantors & Cults of the Witness*The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of the Witness sings in truth-tolling – clear, piercing melodies that cut through evasion, harmonies that make the hidden surface. Their voice is used to compel a confession, to sound an alarm that a secret is about to be spoken, or to sing a historical record into being, each note a word in a ledger. The Witness's Cantors are often found in courtrooms, in archive vaults, and at the bedsides of the dying, singing the last truth.The Congregation of the Unmasking (Apocalyptic Cult). The most feared of the Witness's cults, the Congregation of the Unmasking believes that the world will end when the last hidden truth is finally revealed – and that this ending is not a catastrophe but a liberation. They seek to expose every lie, every buried crime, every forgotten promise, no matter the cost. A ritual of the Congregation involves each member speaking aloud a truth they have kept secret, then burning a representation of the lie that concealed it. Their creed is painted on a scroll that is never fully unrolled: "When all that is hidden is seen, the world will either break or be free. We will be there to witness which." Outsiders are not welcome; they are potential sources of truth – or obstacles to be unmasked. The Congregation has been known to destroy families, topple governments, and start wars in their pursuit of total revelation. They are loved by none and feared by all, but even their enemies cannot deny that they are right: some secrets truly are worth dying to expose.

Witchcraft of the Witness (Craft / Record)

A witch who walks with the Witness is a ledger-scribe or seal-breaker – one who crafts the tools of permanent record: a book that cannot be altered once written, a quill that writes in ink that fades only when the truth it records is fulfilled, or a press that stamps each page with a sigil of authenticity. Their magic works through the materials of documentation: a chisel that carves a truth into stone so that it cannot be erased, a needle that sews a confession into a garment so that the wearer cannot deny it, or a forge that tempers a door that can only be opened by someone who has never told a lie. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a “witness stone” at a courthouse entrance, so that all testimony given within is remembered by the stone for a century. In Thepyrgos, a bookbinder might stitch a volume that screams if its pages are cut.

The Witch’s Tool: The Quill of Unwritten Truths. A quill carved from a raven’s feather, its nib dipped in ink made from lampblack and a drop of the witch’s blood. Once per session, the witch may write a single sentence on a piece of parchment, then seal it with a drop of wax. For the next day, anyone other than the witch who reads the sentence must make a Resolve test (DV 3) or forget it immediately after reading. The witch may also use the quill to “seal” a spoken secret, causing the speaker’s voice to catch if they try to repeat it for the rest of the scene.

A Hedge Gift: Record of a Breath (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may hold a blank piece of parchment up to a person’s lips as they speak. The parchment absorbs the spoken words, recording them exactly as they were said – including tone, hesitation, and any unconscious meaning. The parchment can be read by anyone (the words appear in the speaker’s own handwriting), but it crumbles to dust after being read aloud. The witch may also use this ability to record the final words of the dying, preserving them for one day.

The Witness's Corruption Table

Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Truth's Sight: +1 die to Insight when detecting deception or hidden motives.	Burden of Knowledge: -1 die to social rolls involving lies or deception; others become uncomfortable with your piercing gaze.
2	Memory's Keeper: Once/scene, recall one specific detail from a previous scene with perfect clarity.	Compulsive Honesty: Must correct obvious falsehoods witnessed, even when tactically disadvantageous.
3	Revelation's Power: +2 dice to rolls involving exposing secrets, uncovering lies, or forcing confessions.	Truth-Blind: Suffer 1 Fatigue when exposed to comforting lies or wilful ignorance.
4	Witness's Authority: Once/session, force one target to make a Resolve test (DV 4) or reveal a significant hidden truth.	Isolation: -1 die to rolls requiring trust or close relationships; others fear your ability to uncover their secrets.
5	Omniscient Gaze: Once/session, see through all deceptions and lies for one exchange, gaining +3 dice to related actions.	Paranoia: -1 die to rolls involving personal peace or rest; the weight of all truths witnessed creates constant mental strain.
6+	Absolute Witness: Once/session, become the living embodiment of truth. For one scene, all deceptions within Near range automatically fail.	Truth's Prison: Mark +3 Obligation when using this power; become unable to tolerate any form of deception, making normal social interaction nearly impossible.
		The Unmasking Beckons: The apocalyptic urge grows – you may be called to expose a truth that will destroy a community, a nation, or yourself.

Playstyle Notes

The Witness rewards curiosity, patience, and a willingness to bear uncomfortable knowledge. Her followers are not merely investigators but archivists of the real – they record what others would erase. The Witness does not demand that you expose every secret; she simply ensures that you cannot forget the ones you learn. Intrusions often take the form of dreams showing a hidden crime, a sudden memory of a lie you told years ago, or the appearance of a scrap of parchment containing a truth you wish you had never read. High-Tier followers may find that secrets begin to seek them out – people confess unprompted, documents fall open to damning pages, and the world becomes a book that cannot be closed.

Emphasises

- Truth as Burden: every secret known is a weight carried
- Investigation as Ritual: uncovering lies is a sacred act
- Memory as Weapon: forgetting can be as powerful as remembering
- The Unmasking: exposing a truth can be an act of mercy or destruction
- Witness as Isolation: those who know too much are seldom loved

15.2 Witchcraft, Cults, and Religions

The Patrons do not demand worship. They do not build temples, compose scripture, or care which name you speak when you pray. They notice only one thing: Obligation. A vow kept, a debt paid, a threshold crossed with witness—these are the currencies that move the old powers. Yet mortals are creatures of meaning, not merely transaction. We build cathedrals to flames we do not understand. We whisper confessions into bells that cannot answer. We gather in secret circles to sing the name of a Patron we have never seen, hoping that if we sing loudly enough, someone will listen.

This section describes the human (and near-human) faces of power in the Amaranthine: the religions that shape daily life, the cults that form around specific Patrons or living conduits, and the quiet, patient craft of witchcraft—the art of working at thresholds, tying knots, and reminding the world of promises it has forgotten.

Religions are syncretic traditions—the Everflame, the Temple of Light, the Covenant of Mykkiel—that venerate a single divine principle while drawing power from multiple Patrons. They are the faith of the faithful: public, legal, and often entangled with the state.

Cults are concentrations of purpose: fellowships that form around a specific Patron, a specific interpretation, or a specific living voice—a Cantor whose song has drawn the desperate, an Invoker whose bargains have begun to outrun them. Cults are the faith of the desperate: private, dangerous, and always watched.

Witchcraft is not a faith at all. It is a method: the art of listening to Echo, steadying the Veil, and leaning into Flow. Witches work at thresholds—doorways, wakes, crossroads, bedsides—and their power is indistinguishable from skilled attention. Witchcraft is the craft of the cunning: patient, subtle, and older than any temple.

Whether you kneel in a basilica, whisper in a root cellar, or simply tie a red thread around a gatepost, the same law applies: the world remembers. And everything you do, you owe.

15.2.1 Religions of the Amaranthine

The great religions of the known world are not rivals to the Patrons; they are the masks the Patrons wear when mortals need a single face to pray to. Each religion is a syncretic tradition that venerates a divine principle—the Flame, the Light, the Covenant, the Twin Fires—while drawing power from multiple Patrons. The Patrons themselves do not care about theology; they care about obligation, about the weight of promises, about the ledger of honour. A priest who invokes the Inquisitor Prime and a paladin who calls upon the Oath of Flame & Light may believe they serve the same god. They are not wrong – but the Patrons are not gods. They are creditors, and they will collect regardless of the name on the prayer.

What follows are the four major religious traditions of the Amaranthine. Each is a web of Orders, each Order devoted to a specific Patron while subsuming that Patron into a larger, unified faith. Each is also a Terrestrial Patron (see §12.15) in its own right: faithful who dedicate themselves to a religion gain access to certain Rites (as Low Rites) and bear obligation to the religion's hierarchy, not directly to the Patrons. The religion mediates the weight of the covenant.

15.2.1.1 The Everflame (Ecktoria)

The Everflame is the state religion of Ecktoria, a faith of fire, law, and imperial legitimacy. Its great basilicas burn with perpetual flames; its priests carry censers and gavels. The Everflame teaches that truth and measure are one: a lie is a theft, a broken oath is a scorch on the cosmic ledger. The flame itself is the witness – it remembers every vow sworn before it, and it does not forgive.

15.2.1.1.1 The Three Orders of the Everflame The Everflame is composed of three great Orders, each devoted to a specific Patron but unified under the Everflame's divine fire.

- Order of the Oath of Flame & Light (Orthodox) – The mainstream clergy and knightly orders. They kindle the sacred flames, perform marriages and coronations, and lead the faithful in procession. Their Rites are those of vows, radiance, and righteous smiting. They are the public face of the Everflame.
- Order of the Inquisitor Prime (Prosecutorial) – The hunters of heresy and corruption. They investigate unsanctioned magic, root out demonic cults, and enforce the purity of the flame. In Ecktoria they are called the Chain-Lanterns (though that name properly belongs to the Temple of Light's inquisitors; the Everflame uses Flame-Wardens). Their Rites are those of judgment, purification, and burning censure.
- Order of the Oath of Mercy and Grace (Hospitalier) – The healers and confessors. They run hospices, tend to the sick, and hear the confessions of the dying. Their Rites are those of healing, forgiveness, and the spiral of care. In Ecktoria they are often at odds with the Inquisitor Prime – mercy can look like leniency.

15.2.1.1.2 Beliefs and Practices The Everflame teaches that the world was kindled by a single flame, which then divided into three aspects: the Gleaming (justice, oaths, protection), the Searing (purification, judgment, truth), and the Warming (mercy, healing, forgiveness). Worship involves lighting candles, speaking vows aloud, and making offerings of oil, incense, or written confessions. The most sacred rite is the Fire Trial, where a person accused of heresy must hold a flame; if it burns, they are guilty; if it warms, they are innocent. (The Inquisitor Prime's Order controls the flame.)

15.2.1.1.3 Where It Is Found The Everflame is dominant in Ecktoria and its borderlands. It has a small presence in Kahfagia (where it competes with the lantern-law) and among some Vilikari communities. The Church of the Everflame is deeply tied to the Ecktorian state; to be a citizen is to be of the Flame.

15.2.1.2 The Temple of Light

The Temple of Light arose in Viterra, born from the hedge-law kingdom's need for a faith that could unify its patchwork of parishes without the imperial baggage of the Everflame. Where the Everflame is fiery and juridical, the Temple of Light is pastoral and evangelistic, but with a stern, magiphobic edge. Its priests are teachers, its knights are protectors of pilgrims, and its missionaries travel as far as the Linn isles and the Thepyrgosian countryside. The Temple distrusts unsanctioned magic; it teaches that arcane power must be witnessed, measured, and licensed – or it is a sin against the Light’s clarity.

15.2.1.2.1 The Three Orders of the Temple The Temple of Light venerates the same three Patrons as the Everflame, but with different emphasis and doctrine. Its inquisitorial branch is the Chain-Lanterns.

- Order of the Oath of Flame & Light (Orthodox) – The core of the Temple. Its members are parish priests, wandering preachers, and the Dawn-Knights who guard the roads. They emphasise education, hospitality, and the protection of the innocent – and they are the first to report unlicensed magic.
- Order of the Inquisitor Prime (Prosecutorial) – The Chain-Lanterns. A zealous, well-funded order that operates from fortified chapter houses. They carry brass censers and bells, and they are authorised to test any suspected witch with candle-smoke, bell-toll, or the ordeal of the white mirror. In Thepyrgos they are a state-within-a-state, conscripting children with arcane talent into “rehabilitation.” In Viterra they are more restrained, but still feared.
- Order of the Oath of Mercy and Grace (Hospitalier) – The healers and confessors of the Temple. They run hospices, orphanages, and free clinics. In Viterra they are often the only healers a village can afford. Their Rites are those of unburdening and care – though they never heal a curse without reporting it.

15.2.1.2.2 Beliefs and Practices The Temple teaches that Light is not a flame but a lens. The divine shines through all things, but it is refracted into three colours: Gold (justice and protection), Silver (truth and correction), and White (mercy and healing). Worship is quiet: morning prayers, lighting a single candle, reading from the Codex of Illumination (a collection of parables and legal maxims). The Temple is evangelistic – it sends missionaries to the Linn, the Mistlands, and even into the Thepyrgosian countryside, where its simple message of mercy contrasts with the Chain-Lanterns’ severity (though the missionaries and the inquisitors work from the same budget).

15.2.1.2.3 Where It Is Found The Temple has its strongest foothold in Viterra, but it is also the dominant faith in large parts of Thepyrgos (especially among the common folk, as opposed to the synod’s intellectual elite). It has a quiet, growing presence among the Linn – a “crusade of education” that builds schools and hospitals, not cathedrals.

15.2.1.3 The Covenant (of Mykkiel)

The Covenant is the youngest of the three great religions, born from the ashes of the Sidhi homeland; the Law that they carried with them in their travels. It is legalistic, stern, and uncompromising. Its God is the Law – not human law, but the divine order that underpins reality. The Covenant holds that the universe is a contract between the divine and the mortal. To break an oath is to tear the fabric of the world; to keep it is to strengthen the Covenant. The Patron Mykkiel (called the Arbiter) is the living seal of this contract.

15.2.1.3.1 The Three Orders of the Covenant Unlike the Everflame and the Temple, the Covenant’s primary Patron is Mykkiel, the Arbiter of the Covenant. The other two Patrons serve as supporting offices.

- Order of Mykkiel (Orthodox) – The judges, notaries, and law-scholars. They settle disputes, draft contracts, and administer the Covenant Courts. Their Rites are those of binding oaths, weighing testimony, and sealing judgments. They are the public face of the Covenant.
- Order of the Inquisitor Prime (Prosecutorial) – In the Covenant, the Inquisitor Prime is the Accuser – the one who brings hidden sins to light. They are not hunters of heretics but auditors of the soul. They investigate broken oaths, expose secret perjury, and demand restitution. Their Rites are those of revelation and correction. They carry no swords – only iron scales and a copy of the Canons of Obligation.
- Order of the Oath of Flame & Light (Hospitalier – Healing Focus) – A surprising inclusion: in the Covenant, the Oath of Flame & Light is not a warrior’s path but a healer’s. They tend to the wounded in body and soul, but their healing always comes with a contract: the patient must swear to live a more lawful life. Their Rites are those of purification, cleansing, and bound mercy.

15.2.1.3.2 Beliefs and Practices The Covenant teaches that every act of kindness, every kept promise, every honest word strengthens the divine contract; every lie, every broken oath, every injustice weakens it. The Covenant’s symbol is a broken chain – signifying that even when empires fall, the law remains. Worship is conducted in courts, not temples; a service involves reading a case, hearing testimony, and pronouncing a judgment. The most devout often become itinerant judges, bringing the Covenant’s justice to villages that have never seen a magistrate.

15.2.1.3.3 The Covenant in Ashaan – A Secret Resistance In the magocracy of Ashaan, where the Veiled Sisters rule through terror and spirit-binding, the Covenant is forbidden. Yet it survives in secret. The Breath-less resistance network has adopted the Covenant’s teachings as a moral framework: they believe that the Veiled Sisters are oath-breakers of the highest order, and that a new Covenant – a just law – will one day be established over the ashes of the Sisters’ tyranny. In the catacombs of Galanina, Covenant judges preside over trials in absentia of the Sisters, sentencing them to nothing less than the restoration of order. The Patron Mykkiel does not care whether the accused are present – obligation is owed regardless.

15.2.1.3.4 Where It Is Found The Covenant is strongest in Galanina (where it blends with Pereshi legal traditions), among the Fhara ruling class, and in the secret cells of Ashaan. It has a small but growing presence in Thepyrgos, where synod clerks find its clarity appealing. In Ecktoria, it is viewed as heretical (the Everflame claims sole authority over divine law). In Vhasia, it is tolerated as a philosophy but not as a church.

15.2.1.4 The Pereshi Faith – The Twin Flames

In the eastern provinces and among the Pereshi diaspora, a different light burns: the Twin Flames. This faith teaches that the universe is a struggle between two primordial fires – the Pure Flame of truth, order, and life, and the Consuming Flame of deceit, chaos, and death. Unlike the Everflame’s single fire, the Pereshi hold that both fires are sacred; the duty of the faithful is to feed the Pure Flame and starve the Consuming one through acts of honesty, purification, and the preservation of knowledge. The Twin Flames have no single god, but rather a host of radiant spirits (which outsiders recognise as Patrons such as the Oath of Flame & Light, the Witness, and the Pale Shepherd). The religion is intensely legalistic about ritual purity, but it lacks a central hierarchy; each temple is autonomous, governed by a Flame-Keeper.

15.2.1.4.1 The Two Orders (loose fellowships)

- Keepers of the Pure Flame – Priests, healers, and archivists. They tend the eternal lamps in fire-temples, copy holy texts, and perform ceremonies of purification. They invoke the Oath of Flame & Light for blessings and the Witness for truthful testimony.
- Watchers Against the Maw – A martial order devoted to hunting undead, demons, and unnatural corruption. They are the ones who burn the bodies of those touched by the Consuming Flame. They invoke the Pale Shepherd to guide spirits and the Inquisitor Prime to expose hidden defilement.

15.2.1.4.2 Beliefs and Practices The Twin Flames teach that every person carries a small spark of the Pure Flame. Through good deeds, honest speech, and proper ritual cleanliness, that spark grows; through lies, cruelty, and contact with the dead (unless ritually purified), it dims. Fire-temples are open to the sky, with a central basin of sand where the eternal flame burns. Worship consists of pouring offerings of oil or clarified butter into the flame while reciting the Twenty-One Names of Radiance (a list of virtues). The dead are neither buried nor cremated; they are placed in Towers of Silence – open-topped stone cylinders – where the elements and carrion birds cleanse the bones. The bones are then ground and used to make ceremonial chalk for temple circles.

15.2.1.4.3 Where It Is Found The Twin Flames are the majority faith in the Pereshi highlands (the region between Thepyrgos and the eastern steppe) and among Pereshi communities in Zakov, Kahfagia, and the Dolmis ports. In Ecktoria they are tolerated as a “philosophical sect” of the Everflame. In Viterra they are viewed with suspicion because of their dealings with the dead, but the Temple of Light has never actively persecuted them – their distrust of sorcery aligns.

15.2.1.4.4 Religious Conflict and Cooperation The four religions do not wage holy war against each other – not openly. Their priests argue theology; their inquisitors watch each other; their missionaries compete for converts. But they also cooperate. A Covenant judge might consult an Everflame priest on a case involving a sanctified oath; a Temple healer might staff a Covenant hospice; a Pereshi Flame-Keeper might share fire-lighting duties at a joint ceremony. The Patrons themselves are indifferent to human sectarianism; they accept obligation from any and all. What the faithful share is a belief that law is sacred and that witness is binding. Whether the flame, the light, the covenant, or the twin fires, the divine is that which holds you accountable. And the Patrons – whatever names they are called – are always watching.

15.2.1.5 Other Traditions and Cults

Beyond the four great syncretic faiths, the Amaranthine harbours a host of local traditions, mystery cults, and folk practices. These are not organised religions in the sense of the Everflame or the Covenant; they lack central hierarchies, formal clergy, or unified doctrine. Yet they shape the spiritual landscape of their regions as powerfully as any basilica or fire-temple. Most are tolerated (or ignored) by the great faiths, though some are actively suppressed.

15.2.1.5.1 The Grey Pilgrims (The Traveler) A wandering order of Lethai-ar and mixed-blood devotees who maintain the old way-cords of the Valewood and the star-roads of the eastern marches. They wear grey cloaks woven from mist and speak only in riddles. Their creed is simple: “The road does not end. It only turns.” They accept no payment for their guidance, only a lock of hair, which they knot into a way-cord. A Grey Pilgrim is never lost, but they are also never home. Found in the Valewood, the Linn coast, and the passes of the Aelerian mountains.

15.2.1.5.2 The Daughters of the Cord (The Bitter Root) A secretive, all-female cult that traces its origin to a renegade Sister of the Pale Shepherd. They believe that all obligations are threads that can be cut – and that the highest form of mercy is to sever a debt without asking permission. They run hospices and soup kitchens, ask no payment, but record every name in a ledger that never dries. The Daughters are feared because they cut threads unpredictably; a noble may wake to find that a peasant’s debt to him has simply vanished. The great religions tolerate them because they heal the poor, but the Chain-Lanterns consider them heretics. Found in Silkstrand, Zakov, and the poorer wards of Ecktoria.

15.2.1.5.3 The Cog-Cults (The Clockwork Monad) Underground fraternities of gear-smiths, logicians, and failed engineers who believe that the universe is a machine that can be perfected. They meet in abandoned watermills, scriptoria, and boiler rooms, reciting the Canons of Proportion and performing “optimisation rites” on clocks, pumps, and looms. The Cog-Cults are not organised – each cell operates independently – but they share a symbol: a gear with nine teeth (the ninth is hidden). The Everflame condemns them as heretics who worship craft; the Temple of Light ignores them as harmless eccentrics; the Covenant has prosecuted them for “unauthorised modification of lawful measures.” Found in Thepyrgos, Aeler, and the industrial wards of Silkstrand.

15.2.1.5.4 The Salt Sworn (The Pale Shepherd) A syncretic cult of the eastern Dolmis coast, where salt-panners and fishermen live constantly with the threat of drowning. The Salt Sworn believe that the Pale Shepherd guides not only the dead but also the tide. They build cairns of salt stone at the water’s edge and leave no offerings – only the names of the lost, carved into driftwood. Once a year, on the night of the tide of the dead, they chant the names aloud, believing that each name spoken strengthens the threshold between the living and the drowned. The Temple of Light has tried to suppress them three times; each time, the mission ships have been found adrift with no crew and a single name carved into the mast: Oblivion. Found in the salt marshes of Zakov, the coast of Theona, and the Aberderrin headlands.

15.2.1.5.5 The Bear Cults of Ubral In the high glens of Ubral, where the lowland laws of guest-right and wergild fray against the wilderness, a different faith thrives. The Bear Cults believe that the Savage Heart (whom they call the Red Maw) is not a demon but a teacher. Initiates wear cured bear-skins and carve runes into their ribs with bone needles; they believe that by becoming the predator, they can protect their clans from lowland invaders and the creeping influence of the Everflame. The cult has no holy texts, no clergy, and no temples – only a sacred bear that is fed and honoured each autumn. The Lady of Tor has outlawed the Bear Cults three times; each time, the edicts were found torn to shreds outside her hall, pinned with a single claw. Found only in Ubral, rarely encountered by outsiders.

15.2.1.5.6 The Ember Prefects (Heretical Everflame) Not a separate religion but a persistent schism within the Everflame. The Ember Prefects believe that the flame should not be contained in basilicas – that it must be carried into the streets, into the fields, into the homes of the poor. They meet in arena hypogea and abandoned warehouses, chanting the Unspoken Ninth Citation of the Everflame’s liturgy (a passage that orthodox priests insist does not exist). Their symbol is a candle that burns from both ends. The Grand Magistrate has outlawed them three times; each time, the edict was found burned the next morning, with a single word left intact: “Audit.” The Prefects are hunted by the Inquisitor Prime, but they have sympathisers among the city’s poor and among the more radical Hospitaliers. Found primarily in Ecktoria, with small cells in Vhasia and Thepyrgos.

15.2.1.5.7 The Veneration of the Hearth (Aelaerem Folk Tradition) Not a religion in the institutional sense, but a pervasive set of practices among the halflings of the downs. Every Aelaerem home has a red door, a cup-mark stone on the threshold, and a pair of watch-geese. The Hearth is not a god but a presence – the accumulated memory of every kindness shown in that home. Offerings are simple: a crust of bread left on the doorstep, a cup of milk poured into the garden, a red thread tied around the handle of a knife. The Hearth asks for nothing except that guests be welcomed and the ninth cup left unpoured. The Everflame and the Temple of Light have sent missionaries to the downs; they are politely fed, given a bed for the night, and shown the way back to the lowlands in the morning. Their sermons are forgotten by noon. Found only in Aelaerem (Amedell) and among halfling communities in the Dolmis ports.

15.2.1.5.8 Player Takeaway These traditions are not character classes or mechanical packages; they are sources of story hooks, local colour, and potential obligation. A character who follows the Grey Pilgrims may gain a way-cord (treat as a Minor Asset) but owes a lock of hair. A character who joins the Salt Sworn may learn a Hedge Gift but must carve a name into driftwood each full moon. Work with your GM to determine what, if any, mechanical benefit or cost these traditions carry. Most are best represented as Strings, Debt Clocks, or narrative permissions, not as full Patron relationships.

15.2.2 Cults of the Amaranthine

Where religions build temples, cults gather in shadow. A cult is not a failed religion—it is a concentration of purpose. Where the Everflame concerns itself with all of Ecktoria, a cult of the Inquisitor Prime concerns itself only with your heresy. Where the Temple of Light builds hospitals for all, a cult of the Oath of Mercy and Grace builds a single room where debts are forgiven—and remembered.

Cults form around a specific Patron, a specific interpretation of that Patron, or a specific living conduit: a Cantor whose voice has drawn the desperate, an Invoker whose bargains have begun to outrun them, or a Runekeeper who has stopped reading the Codex and started writing their own chapters.

The Cantor's Congregation

A Cantor does not choose to lead a cult. A Cantor sings, and the broken listen. The desperate gather. The hungry, the hunted, the hollow—they find the Cantor's song before they find the Cantor. By the time the Cantor realizes they have a congregation, the congregation has already named them Speaker, Shepherd, or Storm-Heart.

A Cantor-led cult is charismatic, volatile, and deeply personal. The Cantor's voice is the cult's scripture; their mood is its liturgy. When the Cantor falters, the cult may fragment, turn inward, or seek a new voice. When the Cantor ascends (or descends), the cult ascends with them—into significance, into terror, or into the annals of inquisitors.

GM Seed: A Cantor of the Pale Shepherd has begun singing funerals for the not-yet-dead. Villagers pay to have their names sung into the Shepherd's flock before they die. The local Temple priest calls it a mercy. The dead call it theft.

The Invoker's Covenant

An Invoker does not seek followers. An Invoker solves problems. But when an Invoker has solved enough problems for enough people, those people begin to wait. They wait outside the Invoker's door. They leave offerings. They whisper the Invoker's name alongside the Patron's. A covenant forms—not of worship, but of dependence.

An Invoker-led cult is pragmatic, secretive, and increasingly brittle. The Invoker did not ask for loyalty and does not know how to maintain it. Rituals are improvised. Doctrine is whatever worked last time. The cult endures only as long as the Invoker's bargains keep paying out. When they stop, the knives come out.

Invokers themselves are usually wary of cults—cults attract attention, and attention attracts the Inquisitor Prime. But a desperate Invoker may tolerate a covenant, even cultivate it, telling themselves it is just a network, just a favor economy, just a few people who owe them. It never stays just.

GM Seed: An Invoker of the Clockwork Monad has accidentally created a cult of gear-makers who believe the Monad speaks through her calculations. They have begun “optimizing” the village—replanting fields in perfect grids, scheduling marriages by algorithm. The Invoker cannot stop them without admitting she is not a prophet.

The Runekeeper's Schism

A Runekeeper leads a cult only when they have broken faith—with their Codex, with their Order, or with the Patron's orthodox interpretation. Runekeeper cults are doctrinal, obsessive, and dangerous in proportion to their literacy. They keep records. They write commentaries. They argue about commas in Rites that should never have been written down at all.

Most Runekeeper cults are small: a master, a few apprentices, a locked scriptorium. But some grow, especially when the Runekeeper claims to have found a lost Rite—a fragment of a Patron's power that the orthodox Orders have suppressed. These cults are heresies in the truest sense: not a different faith, but a different reading of the same faith. The orthodox hate them most of all.

A Runekeeper's attitude toward cults varies by Patron:

- A Runekeeper of the Oath of Flame & Light sees cults as weeds in the garden—to be pulled, burned, or redirected toward the true flame.
- A Runekeeper of Ikasha may tolerate a cult as a useful shadow, but will never stand at its center.
- A Runekeeper of the Witness is constitutionally incapable of leading a cult; they would be forced to reveal their own manipulations, and the cult would collapse into truth.

GM Seed: A Runekeeper of the Carrion-King has found a Rite that allows followers to “compost” their own memories into physical tokens. The cult now trades these tokens—childhoods, first loves, old griefs—on a black market. The Runekeeper insists this is what the King intended. The King has not disagreed.

Cults as Factions

Mechanically, a cult functions as an Asset (see §??) with a severe narrative bias. A cult is never neutral. A cult will:

- Provide Aid: Followers can act as Cap 2–5 followers, but only in service of the cult's purpose.
- Generate Obligation: Leading a cult ticks Obligation to the relevant Patron +1 per session—the Patron notices when you gather followers in their name.
- Attract Attention: Any cult of 10+ members begins a Cult Investigation [6] clock. When it fills, someone comes looking: an Inquisitor Prime agent, a rival cult, or the Patron themselves.

- Demand Upkeep: A cult requires either Efficient Upkeep (XP, representing bribes, shelter, and lies) or Intensive Upkeep (a scene per session where the leader performs a miracle, preaches, or solves a follower's problem).

Examples of Cults

The following cults are drawn from the Patron entries throughout this chapter. Each is a template—feel free to adapt, rename, or reskin.

The Unforgotten Ledger (Varnek Karn)

Funeral notaries who negotiate with the dead. They meet in crypts and record every death they witness. Outsiders bring a name and leave with a debt.

- Leader: A Death-Speaker (Cantor or Runekeeper).
- Hazard: The dead begin to answer—politely, then demandingly.

The Gilded Jest (Mab)

A conspiracy of wits who believe every exchange is a performance. They meet in theatres and back rooms, trading truths disguised as lies.

- Leader: A Masked Jester (Cantor or Invoker).
- Hazard: The cult's contracts become binding fae bargains; breaking one draws Mab's amused attention.

The Iron Chorus (Inquisitor Prime)

Militant witch-hunters who believe purity is survival. They meet in fortified chapter houses and strike iron bells to seal judgments.

- Leader: A Censor-Prime (Runekeeper or Cantor).
- Hazard: The Chorus begins to see heresy everywhere—including in you.

The Compost-Circle (Carrion-King)

A fellowship of gardeners and gravediggers who believe nothing is wasted. They meet in compost heaps and burial mounds, turning endings into beginnings.

- Leader: A Rot-Warden (Invoker or Hedge-Witch).
- Hazard: The Circle's transformations begin to accelerate—composting becomes contagion.

Joining or Founding a Cult

Players may wish to found a cult, join an existing one, or be reluctantly absorbed by one. Use these guidelines:

- Founding: Requires a Patron's Favor (a Talent, a critical success on a Rite, or a GM-defined story beat). The new cult begins as a Minor Asset (4 XP) with 1–3 followers.
- Joining: Grants access to the cult's Asset benefits (followers, safe houses, information) but ticks Obligation +1 to the cult's Patron. Leaving a cult is a narrative scene, not a mechanical cost—but the Patron may remember.
- Reluctant Leadership: A character who becomes the focus of a cult without seeking it gains the Cult Leader tag. This is a Condition: once per session, the GM may compel the character to act in the cult's interest (preach, protect, perform a Rite) or mark 1 Fatigue from the weight of expectation.

Player Takeaway

Cults are not for everyone. A cult gives you hands, eyes, and voices beyond your own—but those hands may hold knives, those eyes may watch you sleep, and those voices may begin to speak without your permission. If you choose to lead, remember: the Patron is the real congregation. You are just its favourite hymn.

15.2.3 Witchcraft

The Amaranthine prays to the Everflame, the Temple, and the Covenant. But when prayers fail, when the child will not be born, when the roads turn against the traveler, the people do not call for a priest. They call for a witch.

A witch is not a heretic—not necessarily. A witch is a threshold worker: one who listens to what has been (Echo), steadies what is (the Veil), and leans into what wishes to be (Flow). Witchcraft is not brute force; it is fit—finding where the world already wants to move and giving it a gentle, precise nudge. Hearth craft, mill craft, and road craft are simply slow, patient forms of the same art practiced by ordinary hands. The most powerful magic is often indistinguishable from skilled attention.

15.2.3.1 The Two Speeds of Witchcraft

A witch works at two speeds.

15.2.3.1.1 The Long Road Ritual, threshold, price, and consequence: curses woven, bargains struck, the world's memory rewritten. It takes Significant Time (hours, days, a moon phase). This is the domain of Full Rituals: unbinding a curse, hallowing a threshold, or unraveling a wound.

15.2.3.1.2 The Short Road Instinct, residue, and a flicker of attention: a suddenly turned tide, a bell rung at the right moment, a thread plucked. It takes Some Time (a few heartbeats, a single action). This is the domain of Quick Workings and Hedge Gifts—magic so subtle it can be mistaken for luck.

15.2.3.2 Core Principles of Witchcraft

1. The Law of Named Existence: To name is to anchor. A True Name fastens an Echo; forgetting frays it. Words spoken under witness reshape how a place remembers.
2. The Concordant Layers: People, places, and vows exist as chords across Echo / Veil / Flow.
 - Echo: Accumulated memory and intention. What has been.
 - Veil: The current, perceivable state; the boundary between potential and actual.
 - Flow: The direction of change; the will of elements and intent.
3. Threshold Mechanics: All workings begin at edges—doorways, wakes, vows, last breaths, first light, crossroads. Magic is boundary-law: who may pass, what must stay, and what should never meet.
4. Element-Will: Elements are wills, not mere substances. A working argues with a chosen will; Obligation is the debt incurred when borrowing from a will larger than yours.
5. The Silent Ninth: The missing step in every scale—absence with teeth. The Ninth is erasure, gaps, omissions, and the power of what is left unsaid. Players never declare the Ninth. The GM may apply a Void tag only as consequence.

15.2.3.3 Hedge Gifts

A Hedge Gift is not a spell. It is the world tilting slightly in the witch's favor because she has paid attention to the right thresholds. Hedge Gifts require no dice roll; they simply work within their limited scope.

Any character with the Craft of the Hedge talent may learn Hedge Gifts. A witch begins with two Hedge Gifts of her choice. Additional Hedge Gifts cost 2 XP each.

Steady Hand

Once per scene, touch a wounded person (including yourself) and whisper a word of comfort.

Remove 1 Fatigue. No roll. You may not use this on the same person twice in a scene.

Knot of Favor

Once per scene, tie a small knot in a cord, thread, or cloth. For the rest of the scene, you and allies within Near gain +1 die to a single type of roll (choose when you tie: stealth, persuasion, defense, or navigation). The knot must remain tied; if undone, the benefit ends.

Warm Hand

Once per scene, touch someone and speak a word of comfort or warning. For the next exchange, that person's next physical action either gains +1 die (comfort) or suffers -1 die (warning).

No roll. The effect is subtle and cannot be directly perceived as magic.

Hearth-Sense

Once per scene, ask the GM one yes/no question about a threshold, a boundary, or a debt in the current scene. The GM must answer truthfully.

Salt Line

Once per scene, pour a handful of salt in a continuous line (move action). Any spirit, ghost, or cursed creature attempting to cross must test Spirit+Resolve (DV 3) or be stopped for that exchange. The line must be at least Close length; broken if someone steps through or scatters the salt.

The Unlit Candle

Once per session, declare that a light source you can see (lantern, candle, torch) falters or extinguishes. This creates a zone of dim light or darkness in Near range for one exchange.

Counting the Eighth

Once per scene, when you or an ally is about to roll, whisper a number (1–8). If the GM's current Story Beat count is equal to that number modulo 8, the roll gains +2 dice. If not, nothing happens. You cannot use this again until the GM's SB count changes.

15.2.3.4 Quick Workings

A Quick Working is a single-action roll that relies on the witch's knowledge of thresholds, elements, and will. Its effects are limited, subtle, and always carry the risk of debt.

15.2.3.4.1 Procedure

1. Name the Threshold (door, tide line, wound, vow, breath).
2. Choose a Layer (Echo, Veil, or Flow) and a single Tag (from the magic tags list).
3. Set Position by urgency (Controlled if you have time, Desperate if threatened).
4. Roll Attribute + Skill (typically Wits+Lore, Spirit+Insight, or Presence+Sway).
5. Apply Outcome (see table).

The effect is always minor and scene-limited: a door sticks shut or opens; a candle gutters (brief darkness); a rope knot tightens or loosens; a pursuer's footing slips (1 Fatigue); a whispered name is heard or forgotten.

Roll Result	Effect	Cost
Clean Success ($S \geq DV$, $SB = 0$)	Effect manifests cleanly.	No cost.
Success with SB ($S \geq DV$, $SB > 0$)	Effect works, but GM spends SB for minor complication.	Mark 1 Fa
Partial ($0 < S < DV$)	Effect works partially or briefly.	Gain 1 Bo
Miss ($S = 0$)	Effect fails.	Gain 2 Bo

Table 15.5: Quick Working Outcome Matrix

15.2.3.5 Full Rituals

A Full Ritual requires Significant Time, a proper threshold, and often a witness. Its effects are lasting or permanent: blessings, curses, bindings, or the hallowing of ground.

15.2.3.5.1 General Procedure

1. Identify the Threshold (name the edge, learn its disposition).
2. Choose Your Witness (a person, spirit, or Hollowed who watches).
3. Name Your Will (what change you intend, using Threshold Tags).
4. Set Your Price (memory, name, lock of hair, promise, blood).
5. Make the Exchange (roll, resolve, pay the price on success or partial).

15.2.3.5.2 Example Rituals

Unravel the Wound (Heal Harm)

Requires: Significant Time, a threshold (doorway or basin of water), a witness. Restores 1 level of Harm. Price: A lock of hair, a memory of a childhood injury, a tear in a vial. Roll: Spirit + Lore vs. DV (3 for Harm 1, 4 for Harm 2, 5+ for Harm 3 requires a covenant). Success: Harm reduced; witch pays the price. Partial: Harm reduced, but witch gains a minor Condition or a Promise Clock [4]. Miss: Wound does not heal; witch gains the Condition she tried to remove.

Hallow Threshold (Permanent Ward)

Requires: Significant Time, a permanent threshold (door, well, bridge, hearthstone), a witness who will maintain the consecration, an offering (bread, salt, coin, spoken promise). The blessing lasts until the threshold is physically broken or the offering removed. Roll: Spirit + Lore vs. DV 4 (home), 5 (village well), or 6 (city gate). Success: Threshold hallowed. Spirits, undead, and cursed creatures crossing must test Spirit+Resolve (DV 5) or be turned back. Partial: Blessing holds but has a weakness (the witch names one thing that can bypass it). Miss: Blessing fails; threshold becomes cursed for one season (all who cross feel unease, -1 die to first action).

Unbind the Anchor (Permanent Spirit Release)

Requires: Significant Time, the spirit's true name or a strong anchor, a threshold (doorway facing east, crossroads, grave), a witness. Steps: (1) Discover the anchor (unfinished business, stolen object, broken vow). (2) Name the Terms (propose resolution). (3) Prepare the threshold (salt, chalk, broken cord). (4) Speak the Unbinding (Spirit + Lore vs. DV 4–6). (5) Pay the Price. Success: Spirit released. Witch gains 1 Boon. Partial: Spirit released but leaves a remnant (echo, cold spot). Witch marks 1 Fatigue and gains a minor Condition. Miss: Spirit refuses, becomes hostile. Start a Promise Clock [4] named “The Spirit’s Revenge.”

15.2.3.6 Talents of the Hedge

Craft of the Hedge (4 XP)

Requires: Lore 1+ or Survival 1+; a witch mark (tattoo, scar, or birthmark). You have learned the small magics of thresholds and edges. You gain: two Hedge Gifts; the ability to perform Quick Workings; and once per session, when you fail a Quick Working roll, you may convert the Miss into a Partial Success by marking 1 Fatigue.

Hedge Gift of the Patron (6 XP)

Requires: Craft of the Hedge, Bond to a Patron. Once per session, when you would use a Hedge Gift, you may instead invoke your Patron's Imbuement. Gain +1 die to all actions tied to your Patron's domain for the scene, but mark +1 Obligation immediately. No action required.

15.2.3.7 Covens and Traditions

As witches practice their craft across the diverse lands of Fate's Edge, distinct traditions have emerged that reflect the unique magical properties of each region. The following are three prominent examples; your GM may introduce others.

The Bone Coven (Aelerian Influence)

Focus: Ancestral wisdom and the patient power of stone that remembers. Signature Rite: Stone Memory Communion—by pressing hands to ancient stone, the witch witnesses events that occurred near it, going back centuries. Patron Elements: Earth and Fate.

The Mistwalkers (Mistlands Influence)

Focus: Navigation between worlds and manipulation of thresholds. Signature Rite: Wayfinding Through the Veil—by burning specific herbs, the witch creates temporary passages through the Ways Between. Patron Elements: Water and Obishaal (Death/Dreams).

The Stormweavers (Linn/Ykrul Influence)

Focus: Weather magic and storm riding. Signature Rite: Storm Dancing—through ritual movement, the witch calls forth or calms storms. The most experienced can ride the winds themselves. Patron Element: Air, with strong ties to Raéyn or Xhak'Thul.

15.2.3.8 Threshold Magic and Promise Clocks

Many workings create obligations. Represent these with a Promise Clock (typically 4 segments):

- Mark the clock when the promise is ignored, deferred, or disrespected.
- When filled, the price comes due—socially, spiritually, or narratively.
- Examples: sharing grief, tending a grave, protecting a hearth, reconciling rivals.

15.2.3.8.1 Household Disposition Communities and dwellings possess a temperament. When entering a new settlement or threshold site, the GM may choose or roll for its disposition:

Disposition	Effect
Hungry	Demands offerings; first working costs +1 Fatigue.
Grieving	Magic requires memory or loss narrative.
Fearful	First rite is Desperate Position.
Watching	+1 Effect if the house is fed or soothed.
Young	Chaotic outcomes on partials.
Old	Weak boons but harsh backlash.

Household temperament can change through care, ritual, or story.

15.2.3.9 The Daughters of the Unbroken Chord (The Cord)

Among the most feared and misunderstood covens are the Daughters of the Unbroken Chord—also called the Grey Watchers, Pale Midwens, or simply the Chain. They appear as midwives, hospice nurses, and deathbed witnesses, offering the mercy of warm hands and the comfort of final words. They seem harmless. Mostly.

The Daughters are bound to the High Mother, a threshold entity sustained by accumulated debt and subtle sacrifice. She may be a lich. She may be the current Vessel: a mortal woman elected by the coven, granted godlike power through centuries of accumulated obligation. The Daughters smile when asked which is true. The Cord does not distinguish between memory and flesh.

15.2.3.9.1 Becoming a Daughter A character may join the Daughters of the Cord through the following requirements:

- Attributes: Spirit 3+, Body 2+
- Skills: Lore (Thresholds) 1+, Subterfuge 1+
- Talents: Disciplined Body (Monk) [3 XP], Grey Thread [4 XP] (see below)

Grey Thread (4 XP)

Requires: Disciplined Body, Spirit 3+. You are bound to the High Mother's Cord. Your flesh accepts tattooed Rites; your blood activates them. You may perform Rites of the High Mother without a Codex or Thiasos. Instead, you receive a Hollowed—a heartless familiar with eyes like spilled milk. It witnesses your magic and counts as the threefold presence required by Hag Law. The Hollowed never speaks.

Cord of Flesh (8 XP)

Requires: Grey Thread, Body 3+. Your body stores memories and debts. When you convert Harm → Fatigue (Monk ability), you may store up to Body rating points of Fatigue as Chained Knots, appearing uninjured (as fresh scars or weeping tattoos). You have until sunset after the next to perform a sacrifice or take 2 Harm.

The Open Palm, Closed Cord (8 XP)

Requires: Grey Thread, Melee 2+. Your unarmed strikes or subtle touch carry Widow's Measure. Instead of dealing Harm, you may mark a Promise Clock [4] on the target—they owe the Chain a truth or grief. If they already owe the coven, you may activate that debt: they suffer Position -1 for the scene, or you gain Effect +1 against them.

15.2.3.9.2 The Subtle Sacrifice The Daughters do not slaughter goats on altars. They require domestic sacrifices—acts of violence so small they are dismissed as accidents or cruelty, yet sufficient to feed the Cord.

- The Missing Child: Taken to the House Without Doors. The child is hollowed out into a Heartless familiar. The parents forget they existed (Un-Naming).
- The Unspoken Grief: At a deathbed, the Daughter convinces the dying to forget their greatest love. The memory is trapped in a Name-Bead. The dying smile peacefully, having forgotten why they were sad.

Performing a sacrifice clears 1 segment of Obligation or reduces a Rite's cost by 1 (minimum 1). Each requires Intricate Description and leaves physical evidence.

Player Takeaway

Witchcraft is not a separate magic system—it is a way of working that any character with the right talents can learn. A Runekeeper can learn Hedge Gifts. An Invoker can perform a Quick Working. A character with no Patron at all can become a capable hedge-witch, tending thresholds and binding small promises. The power of witchcraft is not in its flash, but in its patience. The world remembers. And the witch knows where to touch it.

Chapter 16

World Interaction

Using This Chapter

This chapter gives you the tools to move through the world, interact with its people, and make your journey meaningful. For detailed descriptions of each region's culture, subgenre, and notable NPCs, see Chapter 14 (World Regions and Cultures). The two chapters work together: this one covers how to travel and interact; the other tells you where and with whom.

In Fate's Edge, the world is not a backdrop – it's a partner in the conversation. Dikes groan under black rain in Viterra, clan horns answer across Acasia's ridgelines, Ecktoria's marble halls echo with careful words, and Kahfagia's pilots read storms by taste. Wherever you go, place, culture, and pressure push back.

16.1 The Known World: A Geographic Overview

The following summary orients the major regions relative to one another. (See 14 for cultural details.)

Ecktoria Temperate heartland of the old Utaran Imperium. Borders Acasia to the northeast and Kahfagia to the west. Marble cities, imperial roads, codified law.

Acasia Lowland of rivers and petty kingdoms, northeast of Ecktoria. Broken province of mercenary companies and border lords. Borders Vhasia to the east.

Vhasia Fractured kingdom on a southern peninsula. East of Acasia, west of Viterra. Courtly intrigue, martial tradition, and fractured sun symbolism.

Viterra Shares the same peninsula with Vhasia, lying further east. Its eastern coast borders a dark inland body (the Blackwater). Hedge-law, river tolls, and the Last Kingdom.

Kahfagia West of Ecktoria, facing the open ocean. Maritime empire of storm-flags, deep-sea pilots, and exotic imports.

Thepyrgos Occupies the southern part of the great peninsula opposite Vhasia/Viterra. Eastern coast overlooks the Astroegro Straits. City of a Thousand Stairs, center of learning.

Theona Large island off the eastern coast of Viterra. Three isles, causeways, marsh, and the “No Ninth” taboo.

Mistlands Western shore of the Aberderrian Sea (north of the Amaranthine). Bog, fog, and bell-lines; protectorate of the Aeler. Direwood lies to the west.

Linns Scattered around the Yloka River and the Aberderrian Sea. Longships reach the Blackwater and raid Theona and Viterra. Fjords, skerries, storm-oaths.

Violet Steppe North of the Amaranthine, west of the Aberderrian Sea. Vast grassland, home of the Ykrul nomads.

Valewood East of the Blackwater. Ancient forest of phasing ruins, star-roads, and fae courts. Former Lethai empire.

Aelinnel (Aevrossa) South of the Valewood. Gnomish homeland of stone, bough, and bright things. Mist paths, bell-mounds, tide-gates.

Aelaerem South of Aevrossa. Halfling downs of gentle valleys and deep barrows. Homeland spoken of only in euphemisms (“The Silent Welcome”).

Zakov Island in the Blackwater, near the mouth of the Yloka River. Pirate haven, reef passages, salt and serpent.

16.2 Game Structure and Time

Understanding how time works in Fate’s Edge helps you navigate both the mechanical and narrative flow of play.

Basic Units

Scene The basic unit of narrative play, covering a specific situation or conflict (Some Time to Significant Time). Resolves a particular question or challenge.

Player Turn (Beat) An individual player’s action within a scene: Declare action → GM sets position → roll → resolve outcome → manage consequences.

Round Simultaneous or near-simultaneous actions within a scene (primarily for combat), representing a few seconds of real time.

Session One complete game session (typically 3–6 hours), containing 2–4 major scenes and resolving significant narrative progress.

Downtime The narrative time between scenes, used for recovery, advancement, and off-screen activities. Measured in days, weeks, or months depending on fiction.

Campaign Entire story arc (6–20+ sessions) with major character development and lasting consequences.

16.3 Movement and Positioning

Space is tracked with range bands and Position (see 2 for full rules).

Range Bands

Close Touching distance: grapples, knife-work, hand on a relic.

Near Same room/yard/deck; a rush away.

Far Same site but distant; requires route or time to reach.

Absent Off-screen; requires scene change or significant effort to interact.

Movement Actions

- Move: Shift one range band as a beat.
- Dash: Shift two bands as your full action (terrain may require a roll).
- Melee Flag: Mark when two parties are in Near range and directly engaged in combat.

Position States

Dominant You have cover, leverage, or ritual footing. Failure still leaves options.

Controlled Standard case: exposed lanes, rivals near, watchful eyes. Failure has teeth, but not ruin.

Desperate Bad ground, bad odds, bad timing. Failure is severe; success may bring extra XP.

16.3.0.0.1 Position Shifting:

- GM can spend 1 SB to worsen Position by one step.
- Player can spend 1 Boon to improve Position by one step (once per action).
- Narrative triggers (flanking, reinforcements, etc.) can shift Position without cost.

16.4 Travel Framework

Travel abstracts distance into legs with tension and colour rather than miles and meal counts. Each leg has a Travel Clock and draws on a regional deck to seed fiction.

Travel Process

1. Set the Leg: Name origin and destination; start a Travel Clock (4–10 segments based on difficulty).
2. Draw Prompts: Draw up to one card from each suit to establish terrain, people, pressures, and leverage.
3. Assign Roles: Players take on travel roles (see below) to contribute actions.
4. Play the Leg: Players take actions to advance the clock or mitigate complications. GM spends SB from rolls showing 1s to introduce hazards.
5. Resolve: When the clock fills, you arrive – changed by the journey.

Travel Roles

Guide Sets course, reads signs. Rolls navigation; on success, tick the Travel Clock +1.

Scout Moves ahead, first contact with hazards or ambushes. On success, the party cannot be surprised on the first encounter of the leg.

Quartermaster Manages supplies and encumbrance. On success, prevents one Supply drop or recovers 1 spent Supply.

Watch Maintains vigilance. On success, the party gains +1 Position on the first defense roll of any ambush.

Each role action requires a roll (Attribute + appropriate skill, DV set by the GM). Failure may tick the Travel Clock backwards or introduce a complication.

Using Assets and Followers During Travel

- Assets (see 12): Spend 1 Boon to activate an asset dramatically during travel – reveal a hidden path, call for emergency aid, or secure safe lodging.
- Followers: Assign followers to travel roles for bonuses. A Cap 3 Scout follower adds +3 to navigation rolls, for example. They can also take independent actions (scout ahead, secure supplies) at the cost of Exposure or Harm (see 12.5).
- Off-Screen Solutions: High-Cap followers (4–5) can solve significant travel problems once per downtime, but generate 1 SB for the party.

Regional Travel Decks

Each major region has a themed prompt list or card table (see full rules in the GM Guide). Your GM will use these to generate encounters that match the region's flavour.

Travel Complications

Common complications include:

- Hazards: Weather, terrain challenges, wildlife encounters.
- Social: Border checks, local politics, cultural misunderstandings.
- Supplies: Food shortages, equipment failure, resource management.
- Pursuit: Being followed, hunted, or racing against time.

16.5 Narrative Time

Time is measured by importance rather than duration.

A Moment A glance, a strike, a whisper over a law-stone.

Some Time A skirmish, a negotiation, a careful climb.

Significant Time Hours of march, rites, audits, stakeouts.

Days Drills, recoveries, research, roadwork.

16.6 Social Interactions

Social scenes use the same engine with cultural colour (see 2).

Cultural Skill Emphases

Different regions value different approaches. Use the table in Chapter 14 (World Regions and Cultures) to see what skills are most effective where. In general:

Viterra Rapport with parishes; Sway for markets; Command under writ.

Acasia Rapport for kin-bridges; Command with banner-rights; Deceive risks honour clocks.

Ecktoria Sway in salons; Deceive at court; Perform in temple fora.

Kahfagia Rapport aboard; Sway at piers; Command on a storming deck.

Social Stakes & Clocks

Your GM may use visible clocks to track social progress:

- Alliance Clock (Viterra): Parishes and guilds come to your side.
- Honor Clock (Acasia): Feasts, oaths, wyrd – trust builds (or frays).
- Bureau Clock (Ecktoria): Stamps, seals, approvals – delay is pressure.
- Trust Clock (Kahfagia): Pilots and crews extend favours and routes.

16.7 Supply and Resources

Track scarcity with a Supply Clock shared by the party's expedition.

Segments	State & Effects
0 (Full)	Well-provisioned; no penalty.
2 (Low)	Minor frictions; –1 to resource checks.
3 (Dangerous)	Each PC gains Fatigue 1 .
4 (Empty)	Severe penalties; desperate measures.

16.8 Engaging the World – Player Actions

- Scout & Signal: A follower can make the next travel action Dominant (mark Exposure or Harm 1 on them – see 12.5).
- Local Color: Briefly state what locals notice about you; GM offers a small fictional edge or a tempting clock – choose.
- Mark the Map: On arrival, declare one change to the fiction (new ford, patron’s shrine, toll-skip). GM may attach a minor clock as cost.
- Asset Activation: Spend 1 Boon to activate an asset dramatically during a scene (see 12).
- Follower Assistance: Have a follower assist your actions for bonus dice (max +3 from all sources, see 2).

16.9 Summary

The world has opinions. Movement is clocks and colour, position rises and sinks with weather and words, and every suit you draw speaks in a regional accent. Ask the land for a favour – then pay it back on the road.

16.9.0.0.1 Remember: Every interaction with the world is an opportunity. Use your assets, deploy your followers, and engage with the setting actively. The world responds to your choices, and every journey changes both you and the places you pass through.

Chapter 17

Currency-Free Economy: XP, Barter, and Trusts

The Ledger of Memory

*“The world does not run on silver. It runs on memory—on favors owed, secrets kept, and the weight of promises. A coin can be stolen; a debt must be paid in deeds.” — Dusana of the Raven Road, *The Hearth Ledger

17.1 No Coin, Only Consequence

In Fate’s Edge, there is no abstract currency. No gold pieces, no silver scales, no ledgers of mundane wealth. What you know, whom you know, and what you owe matter more than what you carry.

- Incidental expenses – a meal, a night at an inn, a riding horse, a week’s trail rations – are hand-waved. Assume your character has enough from past earnings, barter, or simple hospitality to cover ordinary life. If the fiction demands scarcity, the GM will introduce a Supply Clock or a Complication.
- Significant acquisitions – assets, favors, magical items, political influence, or the service of a powerful ally – require one of three forms of payment:
 1. Experience Points (XP) – Spend your hard-won growth to secure lasting resources.
 2. Barter or Strings – Trade goods, services, information, or narrative leverage (Strings) for equivalent value.
 3. Obligation – Accept a Debt Clock or increase Obligation to a patron (terrestrial or supernatural) in exchange for immediate gain.

This chapter explains how to spend XP on non-personal advancement, how to pool XP for party assets, how to use Strings and Obligation as currency, and how to form a player-owned terrestrial patron: a Trust.

17.2 Abstracted Treasure: Finds That Change the Story

You do not track copper or silver. Instead, treasure is leverage — each meaningful find has a one-time narrative effect. A bag of gold is not treasure. A gold coin that was once paid as a traitor’s blood-price is.

17.2.1 Treasure Tiers

Tier	Example
Minor	A merchant's seal, a noble's letter, a pouch of star-iron beads
Standard	A signed treaty, a bridge's deed, a saint's relic, a ship's luck in a bottle
Major	A king's true name, a lullaby that calms armies, a dragon's scale, a prophecy sealed in amber

17.2.2 Finding and Using Treasure

When players loot a significant location (a dragon's lair, a fallen noble's vault, a sunken temple), the GM awards 1–3 treasure items at appropriate tiers. No coin. No weight. No bookkeeping.

A character may carry at most 3 treasure items total (any mix). Unused treasure fades after one session unless invested in an Asset (pay the treasure's XP equivalent to keep it as a permanent String).

Spend a treasure item to:

- Improve Position on a relevant roll by one step (Minor).
- Auto-succeed on a non-combat roll where leverage applies (Standard).
- Rewrite a scene's stakes (Major) — e.g., “I use the king's true name to make his guards stand down.”

17.2.3 Treasure as XP (Optional)

A player may convert a treasure item into XP instead of using its narrative effect:

- Minor → 1 XP
- Standard → 2 XP
- Major → 4 XP

The GM should warn: “You can sell the dragon's scale for power, or you can use it to command the dragon's respect.”

17.2.4 Integration with Existing Systems

- Assets: A treasure item can be spent to acquire a Minor Asset instantly (no downtime).
- Debt Clocks: A treasure item can clear 1–3 segments of a Debt Clock (GM discretion).
- Strings: A treasure item can become a permanent String if invested during downtime.
- Boons: A treasure item can be cashed for 2 Boons instead of its narrative effect.

17.2.4.0.1 The Golden Rule of Treasure: If it doesn't change the story, it's not treasure. Name it. Describe it. Then watch your players hoard it not for its value, but for its power to change what happens next.

Abstracted Treasure: The Leverage Standard

“A Minor treasure affects a single roll or scene. A Standard treasure affects a single conflict or session. A Major treasure changes the campaign arc or permanently rewrites the fiction.”

Tier	Fate's Edge Example	What It Does
32.5cmMinor	Emberfang Dagger	Glows when undead are near; once per scene, gain +1 die to detect hidden spirits.
	Vial of Starlight Water	Drink to clear 1 Fatigue or ignore a minor poison (one use).
	Runes of Unsteady Passage	Chalk a doorframe; the next person through forgets why they entered (one scene).
32.5cmStandard	Bell of the Fog Warden	Ring it to part mist or silence a supernatural wail for the entire scene.
	Captain's Luck in a Bottle	Break it to reroll any failed roll for your ship or crew (once per session).
	Sealed Knight's Confession	Read it aloud to force a parley; the target cannot attack for the duration of the scene.
32.5cmMajor	True Name of the Ashen Tyrant	Speak it to compel the tyrant to abdicate, or to force open any gate they sealed.
	Seed of the First Oak	Bury it to grow a fortress in a day — the fortress remembers the builder's fears.
	Fossilised Heart of the Elder Wyrn	Once per campaign, negate a natural disaster or redirect a region-wide curse.

Leverage Test: Ask “What can this treasure do once?”

- “Give +1 die or skip a minor obstacle” → Minor
- “Resolve a significant problem or open a major opportunity” → Standard
- “End a war, topple a dynasty, or redirect destiny” → Major

Passive, permanent benefits (e.g., a sword that always adds +1 die) are Assets, not treasures. The treasure version is a one-scene surge of that power.

17.3 What Costs XP (and What Doesn't)

17.3.1 Hand-Waved (Free)

Always assume you have enough for:

- Ordinary meals, lodging, basic travel rations.
- A riding horse or pack mule (if fictionally plausible).
- Basic tools (rope, lantern, writing kit, lockpicks).
- Minor repairs, small bribes (a drink, a gift).
- Routine transportation (ferry, caravan passage) unless the journey itself is the adventure.

17.3.1.0.1 GM Guideline: When a player asks “Do I have enough for X?” and X is not a major story resource, answer “Yes” unless scarcity is the point of the scene.

17.3.2 Costs XP (or Equivalent Barter / Obligation)

Item / Benefit	XP Cost (min.)	Notes
Minor Asset (safehouse, workshop, contact network)	4 XP	See 12.2
Standard Asset (guild seat, spy ring, fortress lease)	8 XP	See 12.2
Major Asset (chartered city license, fleet, noble title)	12 XP	See 12.2
Follower (Capability squared)	Cap ² XP	See 12.4
Magical item (single use)	2–4 XP	GM discretion
Magical item (permanent, Tier I)	6–10 XP	Requires downtime
Clearing a Debt Clock segment	2 XP per segment	Instead of performing a service
Buying a permanent String (favor owed to you)	2–4 XP	One-time narrative permission
Upkeep of an Asset or Follower (efficient method)	As per 12.8	XP instead of coin
Forming a Trust (player-owned patron)	10 XP (party pool)	See 17.6.1

17.3.2.0.1 Design Note: XP represents not just training but investment – resources, contacts, and time spent securing something of lasting value. Want a safehouse? You don’t pay gold; you spend XP to reflect the effort of finding, securing, and stocking it.

17.4 Pooling XP for Party Assets

A party may create a shared pool of XP to acquire and maintain assets that benefit everyone. The pool is tracked separately from individual XP.

17.4.1 Creating a Pool

- Any player may contribute any amount of their unspent XP to the party pool.
- Contributions are voluntary and irreversible (unless the party agrees to dissolve the pool – see 17.4.3).
- The pool has no owner; decisions about spending from it require majority vote (or table consensus).

17.4.2 Spending from the Pool

- The pool can only be used for party assets (shared safehouse, group ship, guild charter, spy network) or for forming a Trust (see 17.6.1).
- It cannot be used for individual Attribute/Skill increases, personal Talents, or personal Followers.
- When an asset bought with the pool requires upkeep (see 12.8), the upkeep can be paid from the pool (efficient method) or by assigning a party member to handle it (intensive method).

17.4.3 Dissolving the Pool

- If the party permanently disbands or agrees to liquidate, the remaining XP in the pool is lost – it represents sunk investment in shared infrastructure.
- Instead, the party may transfer the asset to one character (who must pay its XP cost from their own XP to “buy out” the others). The other contributors are compensated with an equivalent String from that character (see 17.5).

17.4.3.0.1 Example: Kael (9 XP banked), Lyra (4 XP), and Sera (6 XP) want a shared safehouse (Minor Asset, 4 XP). They contribute 2 XP each to the pool (total 6 XP). They spend 4 XP to acquire the safehouse, leaving 2 XP in the pool for future upkeep. The safehouse is now a party asset. Later they add Mira (3 XP), who contributes 1 XP to the pool.

17.5 Barter, Strings, and Obligation

When you lack XP, you may pay with barter (trading goods or services), Strings (narrative leverage), or Obligation (debt to a patron). These are not coin – they are story fuel.

17.5.1 Barter

- Trade an item of comparable value (a magical sword for a spy network, a noble’s secret for a ship).
- The GM adjudicates fairness. A barter exchange usually requires a Sway or Broker roll (DV 2–4).
- Service Barter: Promise a future task in exchange for immediate gain. This creates a Debt Clock [4–6] for the recipient.

17.5.2 Strings as Currency

Strings are defined in the core rules as narrative permissions – a favor owed, a secret known, a charter held. They can be spent as currency:

String Value	Can purchase
Minor String (a small favor, a local contact)	One-use discount of 1 XP on an asset, or a single use of an A
Standard String (a noble’s oath, a guild seal)	A Minor Asset (4 XP value) or clear 2 segments of a Debt C
Major String (a life-debt, a royal charter)	A Standard Asset (8 XP value) or a Follower (up to Cap 3)

To convert a String into XP, the player must use the String in play – narrate how it secures the asset. The GM may require a roll (e.g., Presence + Sway to call in the favor).

17.5.3 Obligation as Payment

Instead of XP, accept a Debt Clock or increase Obligation to a terrestrial patron (see 12.15).

Debt Clock Size	Equivalent Value
	Minor Asset or one-time service
	Standard Asset or Cap 3 Follower
	Major Asset or Cap 5 Follower

You may clear a Debt Clock segment by spending 2 XP (as if buying off the debt with hard work), or by performing an appropriate service (GM discretion).

17.5.3.0.1 Example: The party wants a ship (Standard Asset, 8 XP). They have no XP, but a Sidhi pirate captain offers them the ship in exchange for a Debt Clock [6]. When it fills, they must raid an Oshiiran grain barge for her. They accept.

17.6 Player-Owned Terrestrial Patrons: Trusts

A Trust is a collective entity – a guild, a covenant, a company, a secret society – founded and run by the player characters. It acts as a terrestrial patron (see 12.15), but the players collectively decide its demands and benefits.

17.6.1 Forming a Trust

- Requires 10 XP from the party pool (cannot be paid individually).
- The party names the Trust, defines its purpose (e.g., “The Silkhand League — spice merchants and smugglers”), and chooses an initial Seat (headquarters or symbol).
- The Trust starts with a Debt Clock [4] (the cost of founding) that the players must clear through roleplay or XP before it can grant benefits.

17.6.2 How a Trust Works

The Trust is a non-player character entity with:

- Obligation Capacity equal to the party’s combined Spirit + Presence (or a fixed value of 6 for simplicity). Members incur Obligation to the Trust when they ask for its help.
- Debt Clock (size 4, 6, or 8) – tracks external obligations the Trust owes to other factions.
- Asset Pool – the Trust can own Assets (safehouses, ships, contact networks) bought with party XP (see 17.4).
- Follower Pool – the Trust can employ Followers (e.g., guards, clerks, spies) paid from the party pool.

17.6.3 Benefits of Belonging to a Trust

A character who is a member of the Trust (all founders are members; new members can be inducted) may:

- Call on the Trust – once per session, gain +1 die on a roll directly related to the Trust’s purpose (e.g., smuggling, trade, information). This costs no Obligation.
- Borrow an Asset – use one of the Trust’s Assets for a scene. Mark +1 Obligation to the Trust per Asset used.

- Request a Follower – temporarily command a Trust follower (Cap 1–2) for a mission. Mark +1 Obligation per follower.
- Use the Trust’s Strings – the Trust may accumulate Strings (favors from others). A member may spend one such String as if it were their own (costs 1 Obligation).

17.6.4 Obligation to the Trust

- A member’s Obligation to the Trust is tracked separately from other patrons. Capacity = Spirit + Presence (see 5.3.1).
- When Obligation fills (exceeds capacity), the Trust demand a task – a mission that advances its goals. If refused, the member is expelled and loses all Trust benefits.
- Obligation can be cleared by:
 - Performing a service for the Trust (GM discretion, usually clears 1–2 segments).
 - Contributing XP to the Trust pool (2 XP per segment).
 - Donating a personal Asset or String of equivalent value.

17.6.5 Growing the Trust

The party may invest additional XP from the party pool to expand the Trust:

Investment	Effect
4 XP	Increase Debt Clock capacity by 2 (can owe more before demanding repayment)
6 XP	Add a new Trust Asset (Minor)
8 XP	Upgrade an Asset from Minor to Standard
10 XP	Add a Trust Follower (Cap 3)
12 XP	Gain a permanent String (a faction owes the Trust a favor)
15 XP	The Trust becomes a Major Terrestrial Patron – can grant its own Rites (narrative perm

17.6.6 Trusts as Story Engines

The GM should use the Trust as a source of complications:

- Schism – A faction within the Trust disagrees with leadership. Start a Trust Loyalty clock [6].
- Hostile Takeover – Another group (rival guild, Ashaani agents) tries to seize the Trust’s assets.
- Debt Called In – A faction to which the Trust owes a Debt Clock makes a demand that endangers the party.
- Reputation – The Trust gains a reputation (good or bad). High reputation grants +1 die on social rolls within its sphere; low reputation attracts enemies.

17.6.6.0.1 Example Trust – The Silkhand League:

- Founded: 10 XP from party pool (Kael 3, Lyra 2, Sera 3, Mira 2)
- Seat: A warehouse in Silkstrand’s dyeworks district
- Initial Assets: None (spent XP on founding)
- Debt Clock: 4 (they owe the local harbor master)
- Members: The four PCs

After a few sessions, they contribute another 8 XP to the pool and buy a Standard Asset: a spy network among the port’s Sidhi pilots. They also add a Trust Follower (Cap 2, a runner named Tema). Now when Lyra needs to know a ship’s schedule, she marks 1 Obligation to the Trust and asks Tema. When the Trust’s Obligation to her reaches capacity, the Trust will demand that she intercept a rival’s cargo – a mission that becomes the next session’s adventure.

17.7 Optional: Converting XP to Narrative Wealth

Some tables may want a concrete way to spend XP on temporary advantages without acquiring permanent assets.

XP Spent	Temporary Benefit
1 XP	A single use of a Minor Asset (one scene)
2 XP	One-time +2 dice on a roll involving resources (bribe, hire, purchase)
3 XP	A Debt Clock segment cleared immediately
4 XP	One-scene use of a Standard Asset (e.g., a ship for a chase)
6 XP	One-mission Follower (Cap 3, must be a willing NPC)

These expenditures represent short-term investment of effort and contacts – “burning” XP for immediate story gain. They cannot be recovered.

17.8 Summary for Players

- No coins. Incidental expenses are free.
- Treasure is leverage. Minor, Standard, or Major finds that change the story.
- Significant things cost XP, barter, Strings, or Obligation.
- Pool XP for party assets.
- Form a Trust – a player-owned terrestrial patron – for shared power and shared trouble.
- Use Strings as currency. Collect favors, trade them, spend them.
- Debt is story. Accepting a Debt Clock is not failure; it’s future adventure.

The Grey Wanderer’s Ledger

“I have carried silver across a dozen borders and buried it in as many deserts. The only wealth that never tarnishes is a promise witnessed by honest lips. Spend your XP on what you will hold – a safehouse, a follower, a Trust. The rest is wind.”

Chapter 18

Character Backgrounds

From the journal of a Thepyrgosi Witch Hunter

They call it mercy when the Tower does it and cruelty when I do. The difference is a seal of wax and a hymn at the gate.

I was a bright spark once—could taste iron on my tongue when the air went thin before a working. The masters in Thepyrgos tested me, weighed me, and found me nearly enough. “Nearly” is a door that never opens again.

So I learned the other doors.

I keep a ledger: names, places, the hour the lamps guttered in a tenement, the way the brick sweats when a child hums without meaning to. I carry writs that make people look away. I carry cord and a promise I do not speak aloud. The University pays for talent delivered in time; the city pays for fires that never start. Between those accounts, I balance what I can. You will say I go too far. Sometimes I do. Sometimes the street is a tinderbox and a wrong whisper is a spark. Sometimes a family would rather believe in saints than in ash. I give them a story they can live with and take away the one that might kill them.

When the bells of Thepyrgos answer the river wind, I walk the colonnade to the bursar’s door and do not look at the windows. The work is ugly. The work is necessary. The night does not care which of those is true—only that the lamps keep burning.

Before your character took their first deliberate risk, they belonged somewhere. Backgrounds are the trail-dust on your boots, the school-ink on your fingers, the bell-pattern you still tap when frightened. They explain how you know what you know—and who still knows you.

18.1 Understanding Backgrounds

Backgrounds serve several important functions:

- Provide narrative context for abilities and choices
- Explain how you gained skills, languages (see the full rules for language mechanics), and connections
- Create ties to regions and factions (see 14)
- Offer roleplaying hooks, responsibilities, and privileges
- Seed reliable contacts, customs, and places that matter on-screen

18.1.0.0.1 Mechanical Hooks. Choose one background at character creation. It grants:

- Access Tags (narrative permissions; see below)
- A Signature Contact (named NPC; usually a Cap 1 follower you do not pay XP for; they cannot take independent actions (see 12.5), but can grant +1d once per scene when their help is plausible)
- A Background Boon (once per session, gain a +1d or reduce DV by 1 for a task strongly tied to the background's sphere)
- An Obligation Clock (4 segments; when filled, it creates a call-in from that world—a favor owed, a duty recalled, a price to pay; see 18.9)

18.1.0.0.2 Access Tags. Tags describe where and with whom you have standing. Examples: Guild-Ledgered, Court-Announced, Veteran-of-the-Marches, Bell-Kin of the Causeways, Wind-Rider's Tokens, Charter-Stamped. When a scene engages a tag, the GM may:

- Waive a trivial gate (no roll) or
- Lower Position risk by one step for first contact or
- Offer a Devil's Bargain tied to that society's expectations

Backgrounds and the Legacy Engine

Your Signature Contact is a loyal NPC (Cap 1). Over time, you can upgrade them to a full Follower (pay Cap² XP). Such a follower is an ideal candidate for succession (see 19). When your character retires, falls, or ascends, this contact can inherit your faction standing, one unresolved burden, and a Legacy Bond. Choose a contact you would trust to carry your story forward.

18.5 Custom Backgrounds

Build Procedure (Player & GM)

Pick 1 Access Tag, 1 Signature Contact, 1 Boon, and 1 Obligation Seed. Name places and people.

- Origin: Where were you taught/raised/forged?
- Training: Which two skills does this background naturally support?
- Experiences: One memory that still changes how you act
- Relationships: One ally, one rival; both want something
- Values: What won't you let slide?

Mechanical Considerations

- Boon Scope: DV−1 or +1d once/session when strongly on-theme
- Contact Use: +1d as assist; cannot take independent actions unless purchased as a Follower (Cap² XP; 12)
- Assets: Borrowing an institutional asset costs scene time (counts as upkeep for that asset this downtime) but 0 XP
- Languages: Choose one tongue linked to the background (see the full rules for languages); at least Conversational

18.6 Integration with Development

Early Career

- Apprentice, recruit, junior clerk, initiate bell-keeper
- Boon is modest; obligation triggers are frequent but small

Mid-Career

- Foreman, sergeant, factor, lecturer
- Add a second Access Tag or elevate contact to Cap 2 by paying XP for a follower

Late Career

- Master, banner-aunt, beacon-warden, arbiter
- Background Boon may become a scene-long permission at GM approval tied to a vow or festival

18.7 Background Combinations

18.7.0.0.1 Sequential

- Veteran → City Watch: Access shifts from Muster Papers to Badge Rights

- Scholar → Diplomat: Keep libraries, gain court

18.7.0.0.2 Parallel

- Noble Merchant: Both Court-Announced and Guild-Ledgered; responsibilities multiply

18.7.0.0.3 Contrasting

- Criminal Penitent: Underworld ties vs. temple vows; great hooks, sharp bargains

18.8 Using Backgrounds in Play

Player Applications

- Name your places: the specific stall, shrine, or yard you know
- Cash your Boon when you leverage that familiarity
- Call on your contact to assist or to introduce a new lead

GM Applications

- Offer choices where background allegiance matters
- Turn Access Tags into gates and keys
- Spend Story Beats (see 16) to complicate the old ties

18.9 Obligations & Evolution

Obligation Clock (4)

When filled by misses, bargains, or story, something is due.

1–2 Minor favor, time, or tithe

3 Significant service, costly honesty, dangerous escort

4 Defining ordeal: duel, audit, rite, or trial

Clear segments by honoring duties on-screen, sacrificing resources, or changing affiliation (which creates new clocks).

Enhancement & Transformation

- Enhance: Add a tag or upgrade the contact via XP (Follower rules)
- Transform: Rewrite the background after a major arc; keep one tag, swap the rest, reset the clock
- Resolution: Retire a background after paying its price; gain a Legacy Note—a small permanent permission

18.10 Tables & Tools

Quick Background Seeds

d10	Seed
1	Failed heir with an honest steward and a dishonest cousin
2	Caravan accountant who knows three border tariffs by heart

- 3 Bell-tender whose dusk pattern saved a village once
 - 4 Charter apprentice who broke a measure and hid it
 - 5 Ykrul courier who owes horses to two banners
 - 6 Dock acolyte who lit the beacon in a storm against orders

GM SB Menu: Background Complications

- 1 SB: A rival claims your tag is invalid here; prove it or pay time
- 2 SB: Your contact is busy or watched; help will cost you exposure
- 3 SB: Obligation advances; an audit, rite, or muster arrives early
- 4 SB: An enemy weaponizes your background—publicly

Background Quick Reference

At Creation

- Choose: 1 Access Tag, 1 Signature Contact (Cap 1 assist), 1 Boon (once/session), 1 Obligation Seed.
- Pick 1 language tied to the background at Conversational or better (see the full rules for languages).

In Play

- Invoke tags to open doors or shift Position.
- Call your contact for +1d assist (no independent actions).
- Track the Obligation Clock (4). Pay it on-screen.

Advancing

- Upgrade contact to a Follower by paying XP (Cap²).
- Add a second tag after a major arc or training.

18.11 Worked Examples

House Shield (Aristocratic-Military Hybrid)

Let your background do work for you. Speak its language, call its favors, and pay its dues in play. The world will answer.

18.12 Player Bonds: Ties That Bind

Your background shapes your past, but the bonds you forge with other player characters shape your future. Bonds are the shared history, favors owed, rivalries, or affections that connect you to one another. They are not merely narrative flavor—they are mechanical resources that allow you to shift Boons, aid each other in desperate moments, and unlock powerful teamwork options late in the campaign.

18.12.1 What Bonds Represent

A bond is a player-to-player agreement about how your characters relate. It must be:

- Mutual: Both players agree on its nature.
- Specific: It names a concrete event or recurring dynamic.
- Consequential: It should create roleplaying opportunities and occasional friction.

18.12.1.0.1 Examples of Bonds

1. Oath of Shared Vengeance: “We both lost someone to the same enemy. We swore to see them fall together.”
2. Favor of Blood: “You saved my life when I was helpless. I owe you a favor I cannot erase.”
3. Secret Shared: “We know a truth that could destroy a powerful person. Neither of us can ever speak it alone.”
4. Rivalry of Equals: “We constantly compete, but when outsiders threaten, we fight back-to-back without hesitation.”
5. Foster-Kin: “Our families bound us by rite. We are not siblings by blood, but by custom.”
6. Old Campaigners: “We marched together in the same condotta. We’ve seen each other bleed and lie.”

18.12.2 Mechanics of Bonds

Gaining Boons Through Bonds

Once per bond per session, when you take a significant action to aid the other character and explicitly reference your bond in an intricate description (see Description Ladder, 2), you both gain 1 Boon after the action resolves.

You cannot gain this Boon for basic assistance rolls or minor favors. The aid must involve meaningful risk or sacrifice.

Re-allocating Boons (Late Game)

At Tier III or higher (90+ XP), bonds become a channel for resource sharing. Once per scene, you may transfer up to 2 Boons from your pool to a bonded ally as a free action. The transfer must be narrated (“I toss them my last flare,” “I steady their aim with a whispered cue”). This does not count as your action for the turn.

This represents deep trust and practiced coordination—the kind only earned through shared ordeals.

Bonded Assistance

When you assist a bonded ally on a roll, the first Boon you spend to assist (see Assistance, 2) is refunded if the roll succeeds. (You still mark any Fatigue or other costs normally.)

18.12.3 Creating Bonds at Character Creation

At campaign start, each player should establish two bonds with other player characters. Use the tables below for inspiration, or invent your own.

18.12.3.0.1 Bond Triggers (roll d8 or choose)

1. Last Stand: “We held a breach together when no one else would.”
2. Betrayal Forgiven: “You could have left me, but you didn’t.”
3. Stolen Future: “We both lost everything in the same fire.”
4. Shared Geas: “A power bound us to the same task. We cannot complete it alone.”
5. Inherited Feud: “Our families hate each other, but we refuse to carry that hate.”
6. Whisper Witness: “We overheard a secret that would end us if it got out.”
7. Trial by Ordeal: “We survived a rite that killed the others.”
8. Empty Promise: “We made a vow we half-meant, but now it has teeth.”

18.12.3.0.2 Bond Flavors (roll d8 or choose)

1. Protective: “I will not let them fall while I draw breath.”
2. Resentful but Reliable: “I don’t like them, but I owe them.”
3. Playful Rivalry: “They beat me at cards every night. I’ll get them back when it counts.”
4. Devotion: “They are the reason I still believe in anything.”
5. Curiosity: “I don’t understand them, but I need to.”
6. Dependence: “Without them, I would have drowned in my own mistakes.”
7. Inspiration: “They make me want to be better.”
8. Doom-Bound: “The omens say one of us will betray the other. I will prove them wrong.”

18.12.4 Evolving Bonds

Bonds are not static. At the end of a major story arc (GM discretion), you may:

- Deepen a bond: Add a second specific trigger. That bond now grants +1 Boon instead of 1 when invoked (still once per session).
- Sever a bond: Replace it with a new bond with the same player, or with a different player if the narrative supports it. Severing a bond before its natural conclusion generates 2 SB for the GM (the rupture has consequences).
- Transform a bond: Change its flavor (e.g., from “Resentful” to “Respectful”) and reset its mechanical benefits as if new.

18.12.5 Bonds and the Late Game

As characters gain influence (Tier IV–V), bonds become the primary currency of high-stakes teamwork. Boon transfers allow one character to fuel another’s desperate rite or finishing blow. GMs are encouraged to present challenges where no single character can succeed alone—where only bonded pairs or trios can split responsibilities, cover weaknesses, and share the load.

18.12.5.0.1 Example: The party's Cantor has 4 Boons but is cornered and low on Fatigue. The Fighter (bonded to the Cantor) transfers 2 Boons as a free action, then uses their own action to defend. The Cantor spends those Boons to reroll a failed casting, saving the party from a collapsing ceiling.

18.12.6 Bond Hooks for the Tables Below

When you choose a background from the previous sections, consider how your bond with another PC might connect to your signature contact, obligation seed, or access tag.

- Aristocratic House Scion + Marcher Veteran: "Your family hired my company. I still blame you for the lost patrol."
- Underworld Hand + Urban Child: "We grew up in the same tenement. You kept my secrets; I kept yours."
- Aeler Charter Apprentice + Mistlands Bell-Keeper: "We met in the high passes. Your bell saved me from a fog wraith; my stone-lore saved you from a collapsed gallery."

Chapter 19

The Legacy Engine

Planning for Legacy

If you are playing a long campaign or enjoy the idea of your character's influence outlasting them, consider investing in a Follower (Cap 3+) early. That follower can become your successor when your character retires or falls – inheriting your faction standing, one unresolved burden, and a Legacy Bond. See the checklist at the end of this chapter for steps to prepare.

Succession & Faction Building

“Your legacy is not what you build — it is who you build.”

The Legacy Engine is a narrative framework that helps your campaign grow across generations without losing emotional continuity. It treats succession as a story event — earned through action, consequence, and choice — rather than a mechanical transaction.

This chapter is for tables where characters retire, die, or pass on their cause to a follower. It is not required for every campaign, but when the moment comes, these tools help the transition feel earned and the new character feel connected.

19.1 Core Philosophy

The Legacy Engine follows three principles:

1. Narrative Primacy — Succession happens because the story demands it, not because a clock fills.
2. People Before Power — A follower becomes a PC because of who they are, not what they can do.
3. Consequences Persist — Every legacy creates debts, rivals, and unfinished work that the successor must carry.

Legacy is not inherited cleanly. It comes wrapped in obligation.

19.2 When Does Succession Happen?

Succession is not automatic. It emerges from play. Common triggers include:

- A PC retires after completing a major arc.
- A PC dies or is permanently removed from play.
- A player wants to explore a new character but keep the same faction or cause alive.

- The campaign shifts to a new generation (years or decades later).

In all cases, the transition should be discussed openly at the table. The GM and player collaborate to find the right moment.

19.3 Choosing a Successor

A successor should already exist in the fiction. Typically, this is a Follower (see §12) with whom the PC has a meaningful relationship. It could also be a family member, a student, a loyal lieutenant, or even a rival who earns respect.

19.3.0.0.1 What Makes a Good Successor?

- They have a name, a face, and a voice.
- They have acted independently (off-screen or on-screen) at least once.
- They want something that the PC's faction or cause can provide.
- They have a flaw or burden that will complicate their rise.

If no suitable follower exists, the GM and player can create one retroactively — but that character arrives with less established history. The player may need to spend a session or two building them up before succession feels earned.

19.4 The Succession Arc

A smooth transition usually follows three beats. They can span one session or several, depending on the table's pace.

19.4.1 1. The Call

The follower faces a moment where they must act beyond their role. Examples:

- The PC is incapacitated, absent, or compromised.
- A decision must be made that no one else can make.
- A crisis demands leadership rather than obedience.

This scene answers: Why this person, now?

19.4.2 2. The Trial

The follower is tested. The trial can be:

- A single high-stakes scene (e.g., a duel, a negotiation, a desperate escape).
- A short sequence of escalating challenges (2–3 scenes).
- A moral or political decision with lasting impact.

Success is not guaranteed. Failure does not end the story — it changes it. A follower who fails may still become a PC, but they carry a scar, a doubt, or a broken promise into their new role.

19.4.3 3. The Ascension

At a dramatically appropriate moment — often during downtime or immediately after a crisis — the follower formally takes up the mantle. This might involve:

- A public ceremony (crowning, oath-swearing, banner-raising).
- A private passing of a symbol (sword, key, ledger).
- A quiet acknowledgment (“You’re in charge now.”).

The departing PC may be present, or they may be gone. Either way, the scene marks the end of one chapter and the beginning of another.

19.5 What the Successor Inherits

When a follower becomes a PC, they do not simply copy the old character sheet. Instead, they inherit three things:

19.5.1 1. Faction Standing

The successor begins with the same reputation, allies, and enemies that the previous PC cultivated. The GM may adjust specific relationships based on how the succession occurred (e.g., a contested succession might lose one ally but gain a bitter rival).

19.5.2 2. One Unresolved Burden

The player and GM choose one burden that the successor must carry forward. Examples:

- Oath of Succession: “You must protect the valley as I did.”
- Unfinished Task: “Find my daughter. Tell her I’m sorry.”
- Rival Claim: Another faction – or a jealous lieutenant – disputes your right to lead.

This burden is a narrative hook, not a mechanical penalty. It gives the new character immediate purpose.

19.5.3 3. A Legacy Bond

The successor has a bond to their predecessor. Once per session, the player may invoke this bond to:

- Recall a memory that provides insight.
- Receive instinctive guidance in a familiar situation.
- Gain a free Boon (see §2) when acting to uphold the predecessor’s values.

This bond fades over time as the successor finds their own identity – but it never vanishes entirely.

19.6 Building a Faction Through Succession

Each time a character passes the torch, the faction (or cause) grows. It accumulates history, traditions, and institutional memory.

19.6.1 Growth Through People

Rather than tracking territory or wealth, track the faction’s reach through the people who are now part of its story. Each successor adds:

- A new contact or ally they brought with them.
- A new problem they inherited.
- A new custom or saying that arose from their trials.

The GM keeps a simple list: “The Banner of the Broken Wheel,” “the annual vigil at Sootfall Abbey,” “the debt to the Mistland ferryman.” These are the faction’s real assets.

19.6.2 Faction Clocks (Optional)

For tables that want mechanical weight, the faction can track two simple clocks:

- Growth (6–8): When filled, the faction gains a new narrative permission (e.g., a safehouse in a new city, a reliable spy, a permanent shrine).
- Health (6): When filled, a crisis erupts – a rival attacks, a leader dies, a secret is exposed.

The current PC must deal with it or watch the faction fracture. These clocks advance only when the fiction demands – not automatically.

19.7 Example: The Fallen Captain

Miranda has played Kael, captain of the Iron Tide mercenary company, for two years. Kael dies defending a village from a wyrm. The player wants to continue the story.

19.7.0.0.1 The Successor Kael’s second-in-command, a grizzled scout named Vesper, has been a follower (Cap 3) for many sessions. Vesper once disobeyed an order to save wounded civilians – a defining moment.

19.7.0.0.2 The Call At Kael’s funeral pyre, the company looks to Vesper. No one else steps forward.

19.7.0.0.3 The Trial Vesper must negotiate a new contract with a wary noble who doubts the company’s future without Kael. The player rolls, succeeds with cost – the noble agrees, but demands a hostage.

19.7.0.0.4 The Ascension Vesper takes up Kael’s banner. The player erases Kael’s character sheet and creates Vesper as a new PC (starting XP based on campaign tier). Vesper inherits:

- The Iron Tide as a Mercenary Contract (Standard Asset) (see §??).
- The burden: “Find the noble’s missing son – or lose the contract.”
- A legacy bond to Kael: once per session, recall Kael’s advice to gain a Boon when leading the company.

The campaign continues without missing a beat.

19.8 Legacy Planning Checklist

Before your character retires, dies, or steps aside, work with your GM to prepare your successor. Use this checklist to ensure a smooth transition.

Player’s Legacy Planning Checklist

1. Name a Successor – Choose a Follower (Cap 3+), family member, or loyal ally. Give them a name, a face, and a voice.
2. Clarify the Relationship – What does your character mean to them? What do they owe each other?
3. Identify One Unresolved Burden – What task, oath, or problem will the successor inherit? (e.g., “Find my stolen sword,” “Protect the village,” “Pay the guild debt.”)
4. Pass Down an Asset (Optional) – If your character controls a Minor or Standard Asset (see §??), the GM may allow the successor to retain it with suitable narrative justification (e.g., “The family safehouse,” “The guild seat passes to the heir”). Major or Tier III Assets usually require the successor to earn them through play.
5. Settle Outstanding Obligations – Clear or transfer any standing debts to terrestrial patrons (see §15) before stepping down. Unpaid debts may become part of the successor’s burden.

6. Hold a Ceremony (On-Screen) – A funeral, a passing of the torch, a swearing of oaths. This scene marks the transition and gives the new PC immediate presence.
7. Create the New Character – Build the successor using standard character creation rules, adjusted to the campaign’s current tier. The GM may award a small XP bonus (e.g., 4–8 XP) to represent inherited training or resources.
8. Keep a Legacy Note – Write one sentence that the old character leaves behind (a proverb, a scar, a rumour). The GM can use it as a future story hook.

19.9 Campaign End: The Final Legacy

When the campaign ends, the player may describe one lasting mark the faction leaves on the world.

Examples:

- A new law named after the first PC.
- A shrine where the PC fell, still tended by followers.
- A phrase that enters common speech (“Stand like Kael”).

The story ends – but the legacy remains.

A character dies. A faction endures. A story echoes forward.

Chapter 20

Enhanced Player Play

The world of Fate's Edge sings when players help steer the tune. This chapter gathers player-facing dials—lightweight, opt-in mechanics that turn your table's choices into momentum. Treat these as a menu: use a few, or layer many as your group grows comfortable.

20.1 Role-Based Tactics

Your role in the party determines how to best apply pressure, conserve resources, and turn the tide. Use these tactical guidelines regardless of your specific build.

20.1.1 Melee Striker (Duelist / Assassin / Berserker)

Your job is to eliminate high-value targets and break enemy lines.

- Be aggressive. You move faster than magic and hit harder than ranged fire. Close the distance early; every round you spend not engaged is a round you are not doing your job.
- Flank, flank, flank. A flanked enemy loses Position advantages. Coordinate with another melee character to attack from two sides.
- Use Boons on re-rolling failed attacks, not defense. Your HP is a resource; their death is the objective.
- When outnumbered, use the terrain. A narrow corridor or doorway lets you fight one enemy at a time while allies shoot over your shoulder.
- Know your exit. If you go down, the party loses its hammer. Keep a backup plan (a smoke bomb, a doorway to retreat through, a Bonded ally who can pull you out).

20.1.2 Defender (Guardian / Shield / Tank)

You hold the line so others don't have to.

- Use the Defend action early. It improves your Position by one step and gives you a free reaction to intercept attacks on allies.
- Spend Boons on re-rolling defense failures. Your survival keeps the party safe; a missed attack on your part is less catastrophic than a missed defense.
- Position yourself between the enemy and your squishy allies. The GM will honour the fiction – a foe cannot shoot past you without moving around you.
- Trade Harm for Fatigue whenever possible. A wound that clears your Fatigue track is often worth it.
- Protect at least one ally with a Bond. That Bond gives you a free Boon refund when you assist them – perfect for Cover & Protect.

20.1.3 Controller (Mage / Crowd Control / Terrain Shaper)

You shape the battlefield, forcing enemies into bad positions.

- Open with area control. A [AREA] [BIND] or [WALL] spell can split the enemy force, letting your strikers pick them off.
- Use Boons to improve Position before casting, not after. A Controlled cast is much safer than a Desperate one.
- Accept SB as a resource, not a penalty. You generate them anyway – lean into it. Offer the GM a Devil’s Bargain to make your spell more effective in exchange for a later complication.
- Tags matter. [EARTH] + [WALL] blocks movement; [AIR] + [LEAP] repositions allies; [FATE] + [OMEN] gives the party a clue. Read the Tag reference (5).
- Do not waste spells on enemies your strikers can kill in one hit. Save your power for clusters, bosses, or emergencies.

20.1.4 Support (Healer / Buffer / Bard)

You multiply the party’s effectiveness.

- First action: improve Position or grant a Boon to a striker. A Dominant striker kills faster than you can heal.
- Use Inspire early. The +1 die and extra Boon can turn a fight.
- Heal Harm after the fight, Fatigue during it. [HEAL] as a cantrip clears Fatigue (safe and fast); healing Harm requires a full action and may generate SB.
- Carry a ranged weapon. You do not need to be a damage dealer, but plinking a foe can distract them or force a reaction.
- Your Bonds are your fuel. Transfer Boons to the striker who needs them. A bonded ally gets a Boon refund on their first assist – use it.

20.1.5 Scout (Rogue / Ranger / Infiltrator)

You see the danger before it sees the party.

- Go first. Before the fight, scout ahead. The information you bring is worth more than an extra sword.
- Strike from stealth, then vanish. Backstab + Shadow Dance + Deathblow is a classic chain (see 9).
- Use the environment. High ground, cover, and shadow are your friends. Spend a Move action to reposition even if you do not attack.
- Your independent action (Scout & Signal) is free Position for the party. Use it before the first roll of a fight.
- Do not be the first to engage in a fair fight. If you are trading blows, something went wrong.

20.1.6 Leader (Commander / Tactician / Face)

You turn a group of individuals into a unit.

- Setup actions are your bread and butter. Grant an ally +1 Position or step up Effect – no roll, just fiction.
- Use Command to rally. A successful Command roll can remove Fear conditions or improve morale.
- Delegate. Your followers (see ??) are not just dice – they can take independent actions. Trust them.

- Call shots. “Focus the mage,” “Take cover,” “Fall back” – the GM will adjust Position based on coherent orders.
- Your Boons are best spent on assisting others. You are a force multiplier. A Boon spent on a striker’s attack is worth more than your own attack.

20.2 Tactical Play for Players

Combat and high-stakes scenes reward clever thinking as much as raw dice. Use these tactics to turn the fiction in your favor.

20.2.1 Closing on Ranged and Magic Users

A bowman on a balcony or a mage behind a ward can shred your party from a distance. Close the gap without getting shredded.

- Use Cover and Movement. Move from cover to cover. Spend a Move action to dash between obstacles. Ending behind solid cover may let the GM set your next defense roll as Controlled instead of Desperate.
- Create Distractions. Spend 1 Boon to describe a diversion. On a successful Deception or Command roll, the ranged attacker may lose their aim or shift attention for one exchange, dropping your Position penalty by one step.
- Teamwork: The Running Shield. Have a heavily armoured ally take the Defend action while moving forward. They intercept shots (converting Harm to Fatigue) while you sprint behind them. The GM may rule that the defender blocks line of sight, granting you Dominant position for your next approach.
- Suppress Them. Use the Suppress option (core rules). You don’t need to hit – just force the enemy to keep their head down. The GM may impose a –1 die penalty on their next attack or worsen their Position.
- Spend Boons to Close. Spend 1 Boon to improve your Position by one step before rolling movement or defense. That can mean the difference between a bolt in the chest and a glancing hit.

20.2.1.0.1 Example. Lyra (rogue) wants to cross a courtyard to reach a mage on a balcony. She spends 1 Boon to improve her Position from Desperate to Controlled, then stays close to a crumbling wall. The GM rules that the mage’s magic missile is at –1 die because of partial cover. Lyra makes it across with a Partial success, taking Fatigue instead of Harm.

20.2.2 When You’re Outmatched

Sometimes the enemy is bigger, faster, or more numerous. You can still win — or survive.

- Don’t Trade Blows. Instead of attacking, use your action to Setup for an ally (grant them +1 Position or step up Effect). Spend 1 Boon to assist them directly (+1 die). One well-supported PC can turn a fight faster than two desperate ones.
- Accept Story Beats (SB) to Buy Time. When you roll a Partial or Miss, the GM gets SB. You can proactively offer to accept +1 SB (banked, not spent now) in exchange for a short narrative delay: “I fall back behind a pillar – they lose sight of me for a moment.” This doesn’t change the roll’s outcome, but gives you a breath to reposition.
- Spend Boons on Defense, Not Offense. When outnumbered, a missed attack hurts less than a received hit. Save Boons to re-roll failed defence rolls or to improve your Position before an enemy’s big swing. A Boon spent to re-roll a 1 on a defence roll can prevent Harm 2 or 3.

- Escape and Reset. There's no shame in running. Use the Withdraw action (core rules). Spend 1 Boon to make it a Controlled withdrawal instead of Desperate. Live to fight another scene.
- Use the Environment as a Weapon. Ask the GM: "Is there a chandelier? A sand pile? A steep stair?" Describe how you trigger it. The GM may set a low DV (2–3); on success, the obstacle deals Harm, imposes a Condition, or improves the party's Position for a round.

20.2.2.0.1 Example. Kael (fighter) faces three bandits. Instead of attacking, he spends 1 Boon to assist the group's archer, then kicks over a brazier. The GM calls for a Body + Athletics roll (DV 2). Kael succeeds – the fire creates a smoky screen, worsening the bandits' Position to Desperate for one exchange. The archer picks one off.

20.2.3 When to Push It — and When Not To

The Push It mechanic (usually on Rites or Cantor Songs) escalates an effect immediately at a cost: extra Obligation, Fatigue, Corruption, or a GM Story Beat. Use it wisely.

Good Times to Push

- Preventing a Party Wipe. If a teammate is about to take lethal Harm, Push to get that heal or ward now.
- Ending a Scene. The clock is about to fill, or the enemy leader is fleeing. Push to finish it.
- When the Cost Is Acceptable. If you have spare Fatigue, or you're already at max Obligation and about to trigger a Patron demand anyway, the extra cost doesn't hurt as much.

Avoid Pushing When

- You're Already in Trouble. Pushing adds Fatigue or SB. If you're already at Fatigue 2 or have a full Death Clock, the extra cost could break you.
- A Partial Success Is Enough. Many Rites and Songs still work on a Partial – just weaker or shorter. Don't pay extra for power you don't require.
- The GM Is Low on SB. If the GM has 0–1 SB banked, they can't immediately punish a miss. But if they have 3+, a failed Push could trigger a major twist. Check the table's SB tracker.

How to Avoid Needing to Push

- Use Boons Early. Spend 1 Boon to improve your Position before the roll. A Controlled roll is less likely to fail than a Desperate one.
- Get Help. Have an ally assist you (spend 1 Boon for +1 die). That +1 die might turn a Partial into a Clean Success.
- Lower the DV with Fiction. "I wait for the guards to change shift" might lower DV by 1. "I use my Scholar's Cell free use to research the ward's pattern" could drop DV from 4 to 3.
- Accept Failure and Bank Boons. A Miss gives you 2 Boons. Sometimes it's better to fail now, take the Boons, and try again next round with a bigger pool or better Position.

20.2.3.0.1 Example. Sariel (Cantor) needs to charm a guard quickly. She could Push to resolve the Song instantly, but she's already at Fatigue 2. Instead, she spends 1 Boon to improve her Position from Controlled to Dominant, then has an ally whisper a distraction (assist, another Boon). She rolls 4 dice (Lore + Performance) against DV 3. She gets 3 successes – a Clean Success. No Push needed, and she saved her Fatigue.

Reminder

You can spend 1 Boon before a roll to increase Effect by one step.

20.2.4 General Player Tips for Enhanced Experience

- Track Your Boons, Fatigue, and Obligation. These are your resources. A character with 4 Boons and 0 Fatigue is much stronger than one with 0 Boons and Fatigue 2.
- Use Bonds to Shift Boons. At Tier III, you can transfer up to 2 Boons to a bonded ally as a free action. Fuel the party's best character for a crucial roll. Don't hoard.
- Communicate Your Intent. Tell the GM what you want to achieve, not just what skill you're rolling. "I want to scare him into dropping the keys" is better than "I roll Intimidation." The GM can set a fairer DV and offer better consequences.
- Ask About the Environment. "Is there loose gravel? A tapestried wall? A rain barrel?" These become levers. The GM wants you to use them.
- Know When to Fold. Not every fight is winnable. Spending 2 Boons to escape with everyone alive is a victory. The game rewards survival and smart choices.
- Use Downtime. Between sessions, update your logs, tend your Assets, and clear Complications. A well-maintained Asset (Neglected → Maintained) can save your life next session. A cleared Complication removes a "free SB" button from the GM.
- Talk to Your GM. If a rule feels off or a scene drags, speak up. Fate's Edge is collaborative. The GM can adjust DV, offer alternative stakes, or introduce a Devil's Bargain to keep things moving.

20.3 Player Resources

Two shared currencies appear throughout this chapter:

Boons Core system edge; spend to power talents or convert to XP (see 2).

SB The GM's Story Beats; several options here invite players to accept SB in exchange for narrative benefits.

20.4 Engagement Rewards

20.4.1 Session Investment Tracker

At session close, each player privately rates their investment (1–3). The tracker rewards steady participation without penalising quiet nights.

- 1 — Low You followed others' lead. Gain +1d once next session on any support action.
- 2 — Medium You took initiative in some scenes. Gain +1d once next session on a relationship roll and bank 1 Momentum (see 20.7.1).
- 3 — High You anchored or elevated multiple scenes. Gain +1d twice next session (different scenes) and bank 1 Momentum.

20.4.1.0.1 Table Boon. If all players report 2+ in a session, the GM may award the table 1 free Boon to assign at the start of the next session.

20.4.2 Cultural Immersion Bonus

Reward lived-in play with light, predictable benefits.

- Earn 1 Culture Point when you enrich a scene with apt language, rites, or customs (Sea-Patter hail; bell-speech courtesy; Aeler craft-honorifics). Max 3/session.
- Spend 3 Culture for +1d on a culturally keyed roll.
- Spend 5 Culture (across sessions) to declare a trusted door: one institution in that culture treats you as Friendly for the next approach.

20.5 Collaborative Play

20.5.1 Information Trading

When the table hunts answers, convert curiosity into structure.

20.5.1.0.1 Request & Price. State the question and choose a price the table accepts:

Devil's Bargain Offer the GM a future complication to “pay” for deeper intel.

Accept SB The GM gains +1 SB now; you gain a strategic clue or reduced DV.

Spend Boon Spend 1 Boon to lower DV by 1 on the research/social approach.

20.5.1.0.2 Creative Methods. Swap coin for color: poetry duels, shrine petitions, map-reading at a parish stone. If your method sings with setting, take +1 Effect on the check.

20.5.2 Clock Manipulation

Players can nudge tension without rewriting stakes.

- Slow a visible Clock by 1 segment by either spending 1 Boon or accepting +1 SB into the scene (fiction must justify delay).
- Hasten a visible Clock by 1 segment by spending 1 Momentum (see 20.7.1) or taking a Devil's Bargain.
- Limit: Once per player per scene. If three or more players affect the same Clock in a scene, the GM gains +1 SB.

20.5.3 Complication Bargaining

Invite the kind of trouble you want to play.

- Name a type: social, physical, mystery, or moral (e.g., Valora court etiquette; Ubral scree; Isoka whispers; oath vs. mercy).
- The GM frames the complication accordingly and grants you +1d on your next roll within that trouble, or reduces DV by 1 if your approach leans into the specified texture.

20.6 Faction Awareness

20.6.1 Loyalty Recognition

Track a simple ladder (−3 . . . +3): Enemy, Hostile, Unfriendly, Neutral, Friendly, Supportive, Ally. When you act with an institution's aims, mark a tick toward the next step (GM pacing). When you betray a stated value, drop one step immediately and the GM banks +1 SB for future headaches.

20.6.2 Cross-Cultural Synergies

Spotting a neat cultural combo (Zakov pilots + Kahfagia signals; Aeler engineering + Ecktoria charters) grants +1d once per scene the synergy is actively used.

20.7 Advanced Techniques

20.7.1 Momentum Banking

When your team resolves a Clock early (segments unspent), bank 1 Momentum per unused segment (max 2/session). Spend 1 Momentum to:

- Gain +1d on a future approach tied to that victory (lessons learned); or
- Telescope a travel beat (skip a routine obstacle the same route would present); or
- Trigger a Prepared Move: declare a sensible minor setup you plausibly arranged off-screen.

20.7.2 Escalation Management

Trade heat for shape.

- De-escalate (spend 1 Boon): Downgrade a Major consequence to Minor with a plausible concession (quiet tolls paid, harsh words eaten).
- Redirect (accept +1 SB): Shift pressure to a new venue or actor you name; the GM places that SB there as attention.
- Truce (spend 1 Momentum): Freeze a faction's hostility for one scene if you can cite a shared value (oath, rite, charter clause).

20.8 Enhanced Coordination

Teamwork isn't just about helping—it's about creating decisive moments through coordinated action.

20.8.1 Core Principles

- Fiction First: Describe how you help before rolling dice.
- Clear Stakes: State what help changes and what risk the helper accepts.
- One Spotlight: Resolve one acting character's roll; fold assistance into that action.
- Visible Costs: Story Beats, Fatigue, and consequences are tracked openly.

20.8.2 Basic Assistance

- Declare Help: An ally states a concrete contribution (tools, opening, cover).
- Benefit: Acting character gains +1d (up to the table's assist cap).
- Limits: One assistant per PC per exchange by default.
- Cost: Assistant accepts any risk named by the GM (SB, Fatigue, collateral).

20.8.3 Cooperative Talents

Certain talents enhance group coordination:

Inspire (3 XP) Once per scene, spend 1 Boon to choose one:

- Bonded Ally: That ally gains +1 Boon and +1d on their next roll.
- Self: Gain +1d on your next roll.
- Rally: Each other PC in Near gains +1d on their next roll.
- Tactical Coordination: All allies currently acting gain +1 Position.

Spotter's Mark (3 XP) Aim a target (1 action). Until end of scene, allies in Near may claim +1d or +1 Effect once vs. that target.

Battle Cant (2 XP) Once per scene, establish silent signals. On the next coordinated action where at least two PCs act, those PCs gain +1 Position.

Shield Wall (4 XP) If you and at least one ally each wield a shield and are adjacent: as a Defend action, grant +1d Defend to all in the Wall and convert the first incoming Harm to Fatigue.

20.8.4 Stacking Limits

To prevent overwhelming combinations, a PC may benefit from at most two cooperative effects on the same action. Choose which apply when multiple sources could stack.

20.8.5 Timing and Sequencing

- Declare Order: Players state intent in any order; resolve the acting roll first.
- Ready/Overwatch: Hold an action with a clear trigger; resolve before the next exchange.
- Refresh Windows: “Once/scene” effects reset at scene end.

20.8.6 Working With Followers

Followers can assist for up to +3d (or +4d with the Exceptional Coordination talent). They cannot receive PC-only benefits unless a talent states otherwise.

20.8.7 Magic Coordination

- Ritual Support: Allies can assist Weave or Cast phases if the fiction allows.
- Rite Preparation: Helpers can provide components or maintain focus.
- Imbuement Synergy: Multiple characters can prepare for shared magical effort.

20.8.8 Best Practices for Players

1. Be Specific: “I’ll flank left to give you advantage” is better than “I help.”
2. Accept Risk: Good assistance often means putting yourself in harm’s way.
3. Think Creatively: Tools, positioning, and timing matter more than raw dice.
4. Support Bonds: Use coordination to strengthen character relationships.
5. Keep Momentum: Quick, clear assistance keeps scenes moving.

Remember: The best coordination enhances the story and makes everyone’s moments shine brighter together.

20.9 Character Creation Enhancements

Players may take up to 2 Bonds (+2 XP total) and up to 2 Starting Complications (+4 XP total) for a cap of 34 XP. Each unresolved starting Complication adds +1 banked SB to early scenes until cleared. Favor storyful picks (clan honour, guild debt, patron notice) over pure math.

20.10 War Mount (Asset)

Type: Standard Asset

XP Cost: 8 XP

Scale: Personal

Maintenance: Regular care, feed, rest

A trained combat mount—warhorse, dune-strider, battle elk, ash lizard, or equivalent—conditioned for violence, chaos, and discipline.

20.10.0.0.1 Passive Benefits While mounted:

- Increase overland travel speed and endurance.
- Ignore the first movement-based complication per session (mud, crowd, loose terrain).

- Mounted positioning may override terrain restrictions at GM discretion.

20.10.0.0.2 Mounted Combat

If the rider has the Cavalier talent (9):

- Melee attacks made while moving Far → Near: +2d
- Ranged attacks made while moving Near → Far: +2d

20.10.0.0.3 Boon Activation

Spend 1 Boon to invoke the mount dramatically:

- Break through a hostile line or crowd
- Escape pursuit across hostile terrain
- Gain Controlled Position for a mounted action
- Advance or suppress a movement-related Clock

20.10.0.0.4 Risk and Wear

On a Partial or Miss involving mounted actions, the GM may:

- Mark Mount Fatigue
- Damage tack, barding, or terrain access
- Threaten or compromise the Asset

20.10.0.0.5 Mount Fatigue

If Mount Fatigue reaches 3:

- The mount cannot be used in combat until rested
- Further strain risks permanent injury or loss

20.10.0.0.6 Promoting a War Mount

A War Mount may be promoted to a Follower if:

- It is named and narratively significant
- The rider takes a dedicated Bond or Talent

As a Follower, the mount can take actions independently (trample, defend, flee), suffer Harm, and may generate Boons through sacrifice or risk.

Pike Discipline (Major Talent, 4 XP) [FORMATION] [CONTROL]

Requirements: Melee 2+, Discipline or Command 1+

You are trained to break mounted assaults through spacing, timing, and fearlessness.

20.10.0.0.7 Effect

When you Brace against a mounted opponent:

- Cancel all Cavalier movement bonuses
- Mounted attackers suffer -1d on the attack

20.10.0.0.8 On Success

- Reduce incoming Harm by 1
- You may force the rider to Disengage or risk mount injury

20.10.0.0.9 On Partial

- Reduce Harm by 1
- Mark 1 Fatigue or lose formation

20.10.0.0.10 Limits

- Requires braced footing or prepared terrain
- Ineffective if flanked, surprised, or outnumbered

20.11 Optional Player-Character Death

By default, Fate's Edge treats death as rare and dramatic. Use any of the following modules (singly or in combination) to tune how lethal your table feels. All options respect Story Beats (SB) and Obligation as core currencies.

Baseline (Default)

PCs do not die on ordinary failures. Instead, they suffer Harm, Conditions, lost opportunities, or narrative costs. Death only occurs when a rule below is in play or the table agrees a scene warrants it.

Option A — Severe Harm Death

Trigger. When a PC would take a third instance of Severe Harm (or escalate past the top of your harm track), they instead face death.

Stave It Off. The player may avoid death by choosing one: (1) mark 2 SB and take a MAIMED permanent Condition, (2) accept a Patron's Claim (see Option D), or (3) convert the blow into a Last Stand (Option C).

Option B — Death Clock

Trigger. Catastrophic consequences (falls, crushes, mortal wounds) fill a named Death Clock (4 or 6 ticks).

While Ticking. Actions that stabilise reduce the clock; taking further punishment advances it.

When Full. The character dies unless one of the following occurs immediately: spend 2 SB to hold at full (buy a single action), accept a Patron's Claim, or another PC succeeds at Pull From the Brink (risky, effect = clock -2 on success).

Option C — Last Stand

Trigger. On lethal harm or a full Death Clock, the player may declare a Last Stand.

Effect. For the remainder of the scene, the PC acts with +1 Effect and ignores new Harm. Each action automatically creates 1 SB. When the scene ends, the character dies unless a miracle is secured (Patron rite, relic, or equivalent).

Option D — Patron's Claim

Trigger. On death, the PC's Patron (or a circling power) intervenes.

Bargain. The GM offers 1–3 non-negotiable terms (e.g., Obligation +2, forfeit a Gift, become a vessel for a season). If accepted, the PC lives; mark the costs immediately and record the Claim as an ongoing front. Refusal means the death proceeds.

Note. Claims should change the campaign; use sparingly.

Option E — Dramatic Exit & Inheritance

Dramatic Exit. The player may choose a meaningful death that resolves a question or saves others.

Inheritance. The next PC created by that player inherits one of: (a) a Relationship (bond, contact, or rival), (b) a Tool (asset degraded one step), or (c) a Lesson (start with +1 XP toward a Talent used in the exit). Record how the world remembers them.

Option F — Return From Beyond

Trigger. A body, a name, and a path (rite, gate, bargain).

Cost. Treat as a High Rite with Obligation appropriate to the transgression. Set DV using the Rites system. On success, the PC returns changed: apply a SCAR (permanent Condition) and 1 SB to the rescuer. On failure, choose: lose the body, or return with a Patron's Claim.

Quick Picks

Low lethality: Baseline + Death Clock only. Heroic tragedy: Severe Harm Death + Last Stand + Inheritance. Dark bargains: Any combo with Patron's Claim.

20.12 Implementation Timeline

Sessions 1–3

Investment Tracker, Information Trading (via Boons/Bargains), light Complication Bargaining.

Sessions 4–6

Clock Manipulation (Boon/Momentum/SB), Cultural Immersion, Faction Awareness, Momentum Banking.

Sessions 7+

Cross-Cultural Synergies, Escalation Management, advanced pacing choreography.

At-Table Prompts

Seed the Scene. “Ask for the kind of complication you want.”

Name the Stakes. “Is this clock worth slowing? Who pays—Boon, SB, or Momentum?”

Pay with Color. “What custom or rite do you invoke to make this work?”

Close the Loop. “Mark your Investment; one sentence of what you learned.”

20.13 Downtime

Between sessions, tend your garden—quietly moving the world.

20.13.1 Bookkeeping

- Allocate XP (respecting training days).
- Update Assets/Followers (status: Maintained, Neglected, Compromised).
- Track Boons (conversion cap remains 2 XP/session).
- Note SB Debt from unresolved Complications.

20.13.2 Activities

- Recovery: Clear Harm/Exposure with scenes that show the work.
- Training: Buy advances; narrate mentors, gyms, scriptoria.
- Research: Lower DVs with good sources; log new leads.
- Social: Strengthen Bonds; tune faction attitudes.

- Preparation: Cache gear, sow rumours, line up ferries.

20.13.3 Strategic Considerations

Clear SB-debt complications first; synchronise travel plans; decide which Asset gets love this interval, and which follower needs face-time to avoid Neglect.

Appendix A

Appendices

A.1 Player Tools and Quick Reference

This appendix provides lightweight, table-friendly tools for tracking character progress, campaign state, and moment-to-moment rules. Print, photocopy, or copy to index cards for use at the table.

A.1.1 Physical Tracker Recommendations

Many groups find that physical, tactile trackers speed up play and reduce mental load. Consider:

- Poker chips or glass beads for Boons and Story Beats (SB). Keep a small bowl of chips in the center of the table – spend and earn visibly.
- Dry-erase boards or laminated sheets for clocks (4/6/8 segment circles). Use a wet-erase marker; draw a new clock each scene.
- Index cards (3×5) for Assets and Followers. Write the Asset’s name, free use, and surge on one side; flip when used.
- Colored paperclips or binder clips on character sheets for Fatigue and Harm tracks. Slide the clip up or down – no erasing.
- Printed “clock wheels” (a circle divided into 4/6/8 wedges) placed inside a page protector. Mark wedges with a dry-erase marker, erase with tissue.
- D10 dice to track temporary modifiers (Position, Effect, or Momentum). Place the die next to the relevant tracker and tick up or down.

A.1.2 Resolution Index Card

Declare Action → Build Dice Pool (Attribute + Skill) → Roll → Count Successes

0 Successes = Miss (GM gains SB, consequences)

1–3 Successes = Partial (success + complication)

4+ Successes = Full Success (clear win, no complication)

Position (Risk) + Effect (Impact) may shift outcomes.

SB (Story Beats) fuel abilities, magic, momentum, and narrative pushes.

A.1.3 Fatigue and Harm Tracker

Fatigue: _____ (Max = Body)

Mental Strain: _____

Harm: [] Harm 1 (-1 die) [] Harm 2 (-2 dice) [] Harm 3 (Incapacitated)

When tracks fill:

- Fatigue overflow → increase Harm by 1, clear Fatigue.
- Mental Strain → causes instability or disadvantage.
- Harm 3 → Last Stand or Patron's Claim (see "Optional Player-Character Death" in §20.11).

A.1.4 SB and Momentum Tracking

Current SB (GM pool): _____

Momentum (party pool): _____ (max 2)

A.1.5 Talent Progression

XP Cost	Talent Type / Impact
2 XP	Minor Talent / Perk upgrade / situational bonus
4 XP	Major Talent / specialization / strong permanent effect
6 XP	Access talent (Spellcraft, Familiar, Codex, Patron's Symbol)
8 XP	Prestige Talent / campaign-defining ability

A.1.13 Ways to Shine in Fate's Edge

- Tie actions to your drives and backstory – invoke your Background Boon.
- Offer complications and accept them – earn Boons.
- Spend SB to escalate or transform the scene – make failure memorable.
- Use your class resource early and often – don't hoard.
- Connect scenes to campaign themes – name the faction or place.
- Make other characters look cool – assist, set up, pass the spotlight.

A.1.14 Blank Player Index Cards (for quick notes)

Name / Boons / Fatigue / Harm
Clocks / Obligation / Scene Notes

A.1.15 Final Reminder

Your character sheet is not your character. It is a tool to help you express who they have been, who they are becoming, and how their choices change the world. Use these tools to make that expression vivid, consequential, and memorable.

A.2 Magic Systems Reference

Magic in Fate's Edge is plural. Different traditions channel power through different metaphysical structures, but all obey the same truth:

Power has a cost, and magic shapes the one who wields it.

This appendix provides quick-reference tools for players using magic-affiliated systems, talismans, rites, and occult practices.

A.2.1 Core Magical Principles

- Magic expresses identity and belief.
- Casting always creates consequences somewhere.
- Magic rewrites reality through intention, structure, or sacrifice.
- Excessive power erodes choice (see Iconic Ascension sidebar in the full rules).

A.2.2 Universal Casting Reference

Cast Declaration Template:

1. Intent — What change do you seek?
2. Shape — How does your tradition express it?
3. Cost — What do you risk or expend?
4. Resolution — Test; apply Position/Effect rules.
5. Backwash — Mark Fatigue, SB pressure, taboo, instability, or bargain.

A.2.3 Magic Tradition Quick Reference

Freeform Arcana (Wizardry) Creative, rational, deliberate shaping. Tools: Glyphs, structures, metaphors. Costs: Fatigue, reality recoil, SB instability. Play Cue: Diagram your spell or state its symbolism. Big spells distort fate – accept SB spikes.

Innate Arcana (Sorcery) Emotional, instinctive, bloodline-linked. Tools: Breath, impulse, resonance. Costs: Fatigue, unpredictable backlash. Play Cue: Treat magic like a reflex. Push your limits – expect consequences.

Invocation (Priest / Paladin / Medium) Petition, prayer, pact, rite. Tools: Symbols, vows, places of power. Costs: Taboo pressures, obligation clocks. Play Cue: Your magic is not your own – frame it as a request. Violating your ethos draws consequences.

Runic Consecration (Runekeeping) Methods, seals, contracts. Tools: Ritual steps, codices, binding clauses. Costs: Hunger clocks, escalation loops. Play Cue: Magic is procedure. Expect the system to push back.

Shaping / Druidic Power Resonance with place, element, cycle. Tools: Marks, offerings, seasonal rites. Costs: Environmental echo, territorial consequence. Play Cue: Declare what the land wants – then bargain.

Pact Binding (Warlock / Avatar) Exchange, hunger, transformation. Tools: Tokens, signatures, reflection marks. Costs: Autonomy loss, ascension risk. Play Cue: Ask: “What does my patron get?” Debt becomes plot.

Summoning (Medium / Necromancer / Shaman) Invocation of entities, binding, vassal action. Tools: Circles, bargains, lanterns, ancestral calls. Costs: Attention clocks, breach risk. Play Cue: Give the summoned a personality – their aid comes with demands.

A.2.4 Mutual Rules of Magical Cost
No magic is free.

Cost Type	Examples in Play
Fatigue	Exhaustion surge, shaking focus, body strain
SB Pressure	GM spikes complications or clocks (elemental backlash, Patron omens)
Taboo / Obligation	Commandments, rites, punishment for misuse, Patron demands
Attention / Backwash	Spirits notice; cosmic ledger ticks; faction awareness
Anomaly / Distortion	Places react, reality warps, rituals echo – scene tags change
Identity Erosion	Compelled acts, alignment tilt, Iconic Ascension risk

A.2.5 Cross-System Synergies

All magic systems can blend. A Runekeeper may emulate a Cleric or Druid; an Invoker may operate as a Paladin or Prophet; a Sorcerer may look like a Witch, Elementalist, or Psion.

When combining systems:

1. Choose your primary expression (belief, intellect, instinct, ritual).
2. Describe spells through that lens.
3. Let costs reflect your system.
4. Track consequences separately – mixing systems increases risk.

A.2.6 GM Reminders for Magic

- Magic creates story – reward its use with consequences and momentum.
- Players should narrate method, not just effect.
- Big moments should change scenes, not just numbers.
- Magic should tempt the caster – echo their drives and flaws.

A.2.7 Player Reminders for Magic

- Lean into cost – magic feels significant when it hurts.
- Make magic personal – describe what it looks and feels like.
- Tie powers to identity, belief, trauma, duty, or legacy.
- Let magic change your character over time.

A.3 Pre-made Spells with TAGS and DV Math

The following examples illustrate how TAGS, DV scaling, and spell intent interact within the casting system. Use them as inspiration or as templates for your own spells.

A.3.1 How to Read a Spell Entry

Each entry includes:

- Name and Tradition (optional).
- TAGS – the components that define the effect.
- Effect – plain-language outcome.
- DV – base calculation (1 + number of TAGS; dangerous tags add +2).
- Notes – typical range, duration, or special considerations.

A.3.2 Tier I: Minor Utility (DV 2–3)

A.3.2.0.1 Simple Light (Air + Light)

TAGS: [ILLUMINATE]

Effect: Create a small sustained light (torch-brightness) for the scene.

DV: 1 + 1 = 2.

Notes: No backlash risk; lasts until dismissed.

A.3.2.0.2 HEAL Minor Wounds (Life + HEAL)

TAGS: [HEAL]

Effect: Close a small cut or bruise; reduce 1 Fatigue (Minor).

DV: 1 + 1 = 2.

Notes: Requires touch.

Healing Harm and Fatigue

HEAL as a Cantrip. The HEAL tag (Life) can be cast as a single-action cantrip (DV 2). On a success, you remove 1 Fatigue from yourself or a touched ally. This cannot heal Harm.

Healing Harm (1 level). To restore a level of Harm, you must include the HEAL tag and either:

- add a +2 DV modifier to the spell, or
- combine HEAL with a second appropriate tag (e.g., Purify, Strengthen, Cleanse).

The GM sets the final DV based on the tags and the wound's severity.

Why? Fatigue is exhaustion – a quick charm can ease tired muscles. Harm is injury – closing wounds demands more power and risk. This keeps healing meaningful without overshadowing martial endurance.

A.3.2.0.3 Message on Wind (Air + Veil)

TAGS: [WHISPER]

Effect: Carry a short whispered message 100 feet on wind currents.

DV: 1 + 1 = 2.

Notes: One-way communication; 30 seconds duration.

A.3.3 Tier II: Combat Utility (DV 3–4)

A.3.3.0.1 Blade Flame (Fire + Strike)

TAGS: [BURNING][STRIKE]

Effect: Coat a weapon in fire, adding +1 Harm and [BURN] to the next melee attack.

DV: 1 + 1 + 1 = 3.

Notes: Lasts one exchange.

A.3.3.0.2 Shield of Air (Air + Wall)

TAGS: [WARD][DEFEND]

Effect: Create a compressed air barrier; gain Position +1 on next defense.

DV: 1 + 1 + 1 = 3.

Notes: One use only.

A.3.3.0.3 Fleet Step (Air + Leap)

TAGS: [HASTE][MOVE]

Effect: Double movement speed for one exchange.

DV: 1 + 1 + 1 = 3.

Notes: Requires open area.

A.3.4 Tier III: Area Control (DV 4–5)

A.3.4.0.1 Wall of Stone (Earth + Wall)

TAGS: [BARRIER][FORTIFY]

Effect: Summon a 10-foot stone wall (Near; scene duration).

DV: 1 + 1 + 1 = 3. Dangerous DV: 4 (combat blocking).

Notes: Provides cover; obstructs movement.

A.3.4.0.2 Sleep's Gentle Touch (Water + Mind)

TAGS: [DREAM][COMMAND]

Effect: One target falls asleep (scene duration; Resist: Spirit + Resolve DV 2).

DV: 1 + 1 + 1 = 3. Dangerous DV: 4 (combat use).

Notes: Harm wakes target.

A.3.4.0.3 Flame Cloak (Fire + Area)

TAGS: [BURNING][AREA]

Effect: 6-foot radius of intense heat; enemies suffer –1 die to approach.

DV: 1 + 1 + 1 = 3. Dangerous DV: 4 (if allies are near).

Notes: Creates difficult terrain.

A.3.5 Tier IV: Battlefield Shaping (DV 5–6)

A.3.5.0.1 Earth's Tremor (Earth + Force)

TAGS: [QUAKE][AREA]

Effect: 20-foot tremor; enemies test Body + Athletics (DV 3) or fall prone.

DV: 1 + 1 + 1 = 3. Dangerous DV: 5.

Notes: Destabilizes structures; affects all in area.

A.3.5.0.2 Storm's Fury (Air + Storm)

TAGS: [STORM][AREA][FORCE]

Effect: 30-foot storm cloud; lightning strikes random targets (Harm 2).

DV: 1 + 1 + 1 + 1 = 4. Dangerous DV: 6.

Notes: Lasts scene; reduces visibility.

A.3.5.0.3 Healing Circle (Life + Area)

TAGS: [HEAL][AREA][CLEANSE]

Effect: Allies in 15-foot radius heal 1 Harm and clear 1 Fatigue.

DV: $1 + 1 + 1 + 1 = 4$.

Notes: Major positive effect warrants high DV.

A.3.6 Tier V: Domain-Level Effects (DV 6–7)

A.3.6.0.1 Gate of Passage (Air + Fold)

TAGS: [GATE][TRANSPORT][AREA]

Effect: Open a two-way portal 20 feet wide linking two locations.

DV: $1 + 2 + 1 + 1 = 5$. Dangerous DV: 7.

Notes: Requires concentration; may destabilize.

A.3.6.0.2 Army of Stone (Earth + Summon)

TAGS: [CONJURE][AREA][GUARD]

Effect: Summon 4 stone guardians (Cap 2) to follow simple commands.

DV: $1 + 2 + 1 + 1 = 5$. Dangerous DV: 6.

Notes: Scene duration; concentration.

A.3.6.0.3 Mind's Dominion (Fate + Mind)

TAGS: [COMMAND][AREA][CURSE]

Effect: All enemies in 25-foot radius test Spirit + Resolve (DV 4) or obey a single command.

DV: $1 + 1 + 1 + 2 = 5$. Dangerous DV: 7.

Notes: Significant ethical risk; backlash likely.

A.3.7 Signature / Personal Spells (Custom)

A.3.7.0.1 The Warden's Bond (Life + Bind) – Healing Cantor

TAGS: [HEAL][BIND][GUARD]

Effect: Heal 2 Harm and link caster to target – the next Harm they take, caster suffers 1 instead.

DV: $1 + 1 + 1 + 1 = 4$.

Notes: Sacrificial protection.

A.3.7.0.2 Shadow's Step (Air + Veil) – Trickster's Path

TAGS: [VEIL][MOVE][LEAP]

Effect: Become invisible and teleport 30 feet; gain +2 dice to next Stealth action.

DV: $1 + 1 + 1 + 1 = 4$.

Notes: Requires shadow or dim light.

A.3.7.0.3 Forge's Truth (Fire + Reveal) – Artificer's Craft

TAGS: [REVEAL][HEAL][FORTIFY]

Effect: See flaws in an object and repair as if 2 Skill levels higher (scene).

DV: $1 + 1 + 1 + 1 = 4$.

Notes: Works on magical items (with risk).

A.3.8 Backlash and Push Guidelines

A.3.8.1 Backlash Examples by Tier

- Tier I–II: Minor fatigue, brief elemental effect (smoke, chill, static).
- Tier III–IV: Harm 1, temporary Condition, environmental hazard.
- Tier V: Harm 2, major Condition, significant environmental change.

A.3.8.2 Push Options (Accelerate or Amplify)

- +1 Effect: Increase radius, duration, or potency one step.
- +1 die: Improve casting roll (cost: +1 Fatigue).
- Instant: Resolve immediately (cost: +1 Harm).
- Sustain: Maintain effect with concentration (+1 Fatigue/round).

This framework provides concrete spell examples and demonstrates how TAGS, DV scaling, and ambition interact within the magic system.

A.4 Free Casting (TAGS System)

Some casters shape raw forces through shared arcane grammar known as TAGS. Construct a spell at the table using a short phrase of TAGS.

A.4.1 Spell Structure

Intent + Target + Tags = effect. Example: “I unleash Burning • Area • Force against the marauders.”

A.4.2 Base Difficulty Value (DV)

$$DV = 1 + \text{number of TAGS}$$

Dangerous TAGS (Teleportation, Transformation, Domination) add +2 DV instead of +1.

A.4.3 Casting Roll

Roll Wits + Arcana (or similar). Success = spell works. Failure or any 1 = Backlash.

A.4.4 Backlash for Free Casters

Choose one:

- Harm 2 (Arcane)
- +2 Fatigue
- Corruption +1
- Catastrophic side effect (GM describes)

If the spell includes a “Dangerous” TAG, Backlash triggers on mixed results as well.

Additional Patrons and Complete Tables

The following pages contain the full entries for patrons not included in the main chapter. These powers are still part of the world; GMs may introduce them as needed. The complete 24-patron gift map and fear influence table are also reproduced here for reference.

A.0.1 The Gallow's Bell (Justice & Judgment)

Lore. The Bell does not rage; it tolls. Cold and impartial, it measures all accounts in time. Its keepers are silent arbiters who weigh deeds against consequence, not out of anger but out of inevitability. To call upon the Bell is to bind oneself to the gravity of truth, where even silence is judged, and every oath leaves a resonance in iron.

Among the peoples of Fate's Edge, the Gallow's Bell is the patron of judges, notaries, and those who speak final words. In Ecktoria, the Bell is invoked by Censor's clerks who stamp death warrants. In Viterra, hedge-courts ring a small iron bell to seal a verdict. In Linn, a broken bell at a Thing-holm is a sign that a judgment was unjust and the spirits are still listening. Wherever a reckoning must be witnessed, the Gallow's Bell tolls.

What is broken must be mended, what is owed must be paid. The Bell remembers all reckonings.

Domain Focus

- Weighing of Deeds: measuring action against consequence, debt against payment
- Solemn Judgment: verdicts that cannot be appealed, sentences that must be carried out
- Compelled Truth: forcing honesty under threat of the Bell's toll
- Iron Witness: the Bell as an impartial recorder of oaths, lies, and reckonings

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to the Gallow's Bell binds a creature of quiet judgment. Their Thiasos is a small beast or mythological being that embodies impartial witness: a grey mouse that lives in courthouses and never cheeps false testimony, a small brass-bell frog whose croak sounds like a distant chime, a black-and-white cat that sits on the judge's bench and stares at those who lie, or a mechanical songbird that rings a tiny bell each time a promise is broken. This creature requires no food, but it must witness a formal promise or a judgment each day. If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it rings at the wrong moment or remains silent when truth is spoken, imposing –1 die on all social rolls involving oaths or honesty for its bearer).

The Codex of the Gallow's Bell is never a book of spells alone. It may be a court ledger bound in iron, each page sealed with a drop of wax for every case heard; a set of bronze bells, each inscribed with a precedent; or a slate tablet that records the last verdict as a faint, glowing chime. Because the Bell's judgments are final, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week ringing each bell or re-reading each precedent, or the Rites stored there become uncertain (treat as Compromised until re-rung).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of the Gallow's Bell may touch a held item (weapon, shield, or tool) and speak a single word of judgment. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Command or Insight rolls when delivering a verdict, enforcing an oath, or uncovering a lie. Additionally, the first time each scene the bearer would be deceived by a lie, they may reroll the opposed check (the Bell's resonance warns them). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the weight of the Bell's attention lingers on their soul.

All present feel compelled to name a debt or wrongdoing. Those who lie suffer Harm 2; those who speak true gain +2 dice to persuasion for the scene.Push It: The Reckoning manifests as spectral echoes of past wrongs – liars automatically suffer narrative punishment (Keeper decides).*Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).Obligation: 7 segments.A.0.1.0.6 Rite of the Great Adjudication (High, 14 XP)Extended; Zone; No.Tags: [AREA], [COMMAND], [SUMMON], [FATE]Materials: A consecrated gavel or a great bell struck three times.Effect: Convene an unseen tribunal. Mark 2 SB (Hearts) as higher powers of judgment take notice.Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of the Gallow's Bell

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of the Bell sings not with melody, but with rhythm of measure – a slow, tolling chant that mimics the swinging of a clapper. Their voice carries the weight of finality; one note can seal a verdict, another can suspend a sentence. They are employed by courts to “sing the sentence” into being, and feared by those who know that a Cantor's silence after a verdict is the most damning judgment of all.

The Cult of the Unstruck Bell. The Bell's cults are austere, gathered in bare stone chambers where a single great bell hangs unstruck. Before any ritual, the cultists argue the case – who owes what, who has paid, who must be reminded. Only when consensus is reached does someone strike the bell, and its tolling makes the judgment real. Their creed is carved into the bell's lip: “We do not create debts. We reveal them. The Bell remembers what the living choose to forget.”

Witchcraft of the Gallow's Bell (Monastic / Notarial)

A witch who walks with the Bell is often a notary of the silent court, a bell-tolling clerk, or a judge's scribe – a nun, monk, or lay scholar who tends the records of obligation, copies the judgments of the Bell, and keeps the weights of the scales true. Their magic is the art of measurement and witness: sealing verdicts with leaden seals that glow when a debt is called, scribing judgment scrolls that burn with the truth of a confession, or maintaining the bell-roster that notes every name that owes an accounting. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a “weigh-stone” into a courtroom floor, so that every testimony given upon it tips an unseen scale. In Viterra, a hedge-notary might stitch a ledger whose entries tighten like knots when a payment is overdue. Their tools are not hammers but seals, quills, and the small brass bells that ring in the ears of the perjured.

The Witch's Tool: The Seal of Unspoken Weights. A small iron seal, cool to the touch, stamped with a bell that has no clapper. Once per session, the witch may press the seal onto a document, a threshold, or a debtor's palm. For the next day, any creature that knowingly breaks a promise recorded in that document (or sworn on that threshold) suffers a sharp sting (1 Fatigue) as the seal “remembers” the weight of their word. The seal can also be used to “strike” a bell: tapping it against any iron bell forces the bell to ring once, even if broken or without a clapper, and the ring can be heard only by those who owe a debt in the current scene.

A Hedge Gift: Bell-Toll of the Hidden Debt (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may whisper the name of a creature within Near range while tapping any ringing surface (a bell, a cup, a blade). For the next minute, that creature hears a faint, distant bell toll each time they attempt to lie or conceal an obligation. The GM gains 1 SB (the Bell records the strain), and the creature suffers –1 die on Deception rolls during that time. The witch may also ask the GM one yes/no question about a hidden debt owed by that creature; the GM must answer truthfully, though cryptically.

Gallow's		Bell	Corruption	Table
Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Judge's Intuition: +1 die to Insight when weighing truth.	Must point out falsehoods when noticed, regardless of tact.
2	Quiet Authority: Once/scene, treat a failed Command as success; mark 1 SB (Hearts).	Cannot remain neutral in disputes; indecision costs 1 Fatigue.
3	Scales of Balance: Once/session, enforce an exchange of burdens.	Compelled toward fairness even when it hinders you.
4	Bell's Resonance: +2 dice when calling for judgment or demanding restitution.	Suffer 1 Fatigue if wrongdoing is ignored.
5	Reckoner's Call: Once/session, declare a "reckoning moment" – truth must surface or consequence falls.	Cannot ignore pleas for justice without marking 1 SB (Spades).
6+	Final Arbiter: Once/session, render an absolute decree; all within the scene must obey or suffer consequence (Harm 1, +1 Obligation).	Mark +2 Obligation; the Bell demands you bear the weight of enforcement. Your voice tolls like a bell when you speak judgment – those who hear you cannot interrupt until your sentence is complete.

Playstyle

Notes

The Gallow's Bell rewards those who speak truth, enforce oaths, and deliver justice without cruelty. Its followers are not executioners – they are arbiters who ensure that every debt is weighed and every consequence is fair. The Bell does not punish the desperate; it punishes the deceiver. Intrusions often take the form of an unexpected witness (a bell that rings at the wrong moment, a forgotten promise resurfacing) or a demand to judge a dispute that cannot be settled by silence. Ideal for characters who serve as magistrates, justiciars, or honest mediators in a world of broken oaths.

Emphasises

- Solemn Judgment: verdicts that cannot be appealed
- Compelled Truth: forcing honesty under the threat of the Bell
- Weighing of Deeds: measuring action against consequence
- Iron Witness: the Bell as impartial recorder
- The Toll of Silence: what is not said is also judged

A.0.2 The Inquisitor Prime (Purity & Domination)

Lore. Among the Aeler Iron Avengers, zealots, and witch-hunters, the Inquisitor Prime is venerated as the hand of absolute purity and the sword of uncompromising order. Where others see nuance, the Inquisitor sees corruption; where others see difference, they see contamination.

Those who march beneath their sigil believe that no society can stand if it tolerates the impure or the disobedient. They hunt the arcane and the aberrant, not merely to destroy them, but to bind them as slaves to order—believing even the tainted may yet serve, so long as they are shackled.

The Inquisitor Prime appears in vision as a faceless figure clad in burnished iron, with eyes like furnace-doors and a voice like grinding chains. To serve them is to embrace judgment without mercy and to live in suspicion of all who walk outside the prescribed law.

For the faithful, doubt is treason; compassion is weakness; and freedom is the seed of ruin. In the wake of their followers, only silence and ash remain.

Among the peoples of Fate’s Edge, the Inquisitor Prime is called by many names. In Ecktoria, the Prime is the Unquenchable Fire of the Everflame, whose censers never cool. In Aeler, the Prime is the Light of Forges, whose hearths are kindled with a brand from the temple’s eternal flame. In Vhasia, the Prime is the Gilded Judge, invoked by templars who swear to root out heretical magic. Wherever law is written in iron and enforced with flame, the Inquisitor Prime watches.

"Mercy is weakness. Purity is survival. Where corruption hides, we carve it out."

Domain Focus

- Purity and Order: eradicating corruption, enforcing sacred law
- Judgment: condemning the guilty, burning the heretical
- Protection from the Tainted: warding against the supernatural
- Domination: binding the impure to serve the pure

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to the Inquisitor Prime does not bind a familiar of shadow or wild. Their Thiasos is a small creature of zealous loyalty and keen perception: a white hound with brass eyes that can smell lies and taint, a ferret that hunts rodents of corruption with relentless efficiency, a bronze-feathered hawk that circles above suspected heretics, or a small mechanical bird that sings hymns of purity at dawn. This creature requires no food, but it must be present at a daily prayer or rite of purification. If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it growls at strangers or sings discordantly, imposing –1 die on all social rolls with those suspected of impurity for its bearer).

The Codex of the Inquisitor Prime is never a book of common knowledge. It may be an iron-bound ledger with pages of sanctified vellum, each Rite sealed with a drop of wax; a slate tablet that records only the names of the damned; or a scroll of censure that burns heretical text upon reading. Because the Prime’s laws are absolute, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week reciting each Rite aloud in a purified space, or the seals weaken (treat as Compromised until re-consecrated).

Patron’s Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of the Inquisitor Prime may touch a held item (weapon, shield, or badge of office) and speak a word of judgment. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Investigation or Command rolls when confronting supernatural creatures, and the first time each scene the bearer would be affected by a magical illusion or fear effect, they may reroll the resistance check (the Prime’s light burns through deception). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the weight of judgment presses on their soul.

Push It: Absolute destruction leaves behind Sanctified Ground; mark 2 SB (Diamonds).

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of the Inquisitor Prime

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of the Inquisitor Prime does not sing melodies – they chant liturgies of excision, flat, rhythmic recitations that scrub the air of taint. Their voice is used to purify a space before a hunt, to drown out a heretic's dying curse, or to march troops into battle with a single, unified note. Inquisitorial Cantors are rarely loved, but they are feared – and their songs are remembered long after the pyre has cooled.

The Cult of the Iron Chorus. The Prime's cults are militant orders – the Chain-Lanterns of Thepyrgos, the Censer-Knights of Ecktoria, the Spirit-Shield Correctors of Aeler. They gather in fortified chapter houses, not temples. A ritual of the Iron Chorus involves each member testifying to a corruption they have purged, then striking a iron bell with a hammer. The bell's tone is harsh and final. Their creed is stamped into every seal: "What is pure endures. What is not is fuel." Outsiders are not welcome; they are suspects until proven clean.

The Prosecutorial Mob. The Prime also can whip up temporary "cults" which act as mobs. These attack the target of the Cantor but either disperse or form factions as the GM dictates.

Witchcraft of the Inquisitor Prime (Monastic / Exorcist)

A witch who walks with the Inquisitor Prime is often an exorcist scribe, a censer-bearer, or an inquisitorial archivist – a nun, monk, or scholar of one of the great purifying orders. Their magic is the art of liturgical cleansing: copying purification rites into iron-bound codices, blending ash and myrrh into sealing wax that repels spirits, or maintaining the reliquaries that hold the bones of saints who died hunting heretics. In Aeler, a True-Mason of the Prime might carve a "confession stone" into a chapter house floor, so that any lie spoken there blackens the mortar. In Thepyrgos, a silent sister might brew a tea from sanctified salt that flushes possession from a victim's blood. Their tools are not forge-hammers but censers, seals, and scourges – instruments of penitence and judgment.

The Witch's Tool: The Censer of the Unforgiving Flame. A brass censer hung on three chains, each link etched with a clause of the Inquisitor's Creed. Once per session, the witch may swing the censer to fill a zone with thick, bitter smoke. For the scene, any supernatural creature within the smoke suffers -1 die to all rolls, and any magical effect passing through the smoke is treated as one Tier lower for resistance. The censer can also be used to "cense" a threshold: sprinkling ash from the censer across a doorway applies the [WARD] tag against minor spirits and undead until the next dawn.

A Hedge Gift: Rite of the Soot Line (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may draw a line of ash and salt across a threshold (a door, a bridge, a window) while reciting a single verse from the Inquisitor's Litany. Until the next dawn, that line functions as a [WARD] against minor spirits (Cap 1-2) and all undead of Cap 2 or lower. A creature attempting to cross must test Spirit+Resolve (DV 3) or be turned back for that exchange. The line glows faintly when a lie is spoken within Near range.

Inquisitor		Prime's	Corruption	Table
Tier	Benefit		Cost / Quirk
1	Hunter's Instinct: +1 die to Notice magical auras or traps.		Black-and-White Thinking: Must label others "pure" or "corrupt"; -1 die when navigating moral nuance.
2	Sanctified Weapon: Once/scene, your weapon ignores 1 Armor/Resist from supernatural foes.		Purity Zeal: Exposure to filth or corruption causes 1 Fatigue.
3	Cold Clarity: +2 dice to resist deception, illusion, or mental sway.		Suspicion: -1 die to social rolls with anyone you suspect of "impurity."
4	Burning Truth: Once/session, compel one target to answer truthfully (Resolve DV 4).		Compulsion: Cannot ignore supernatural activity; hesitation costs 1 SB (Clubs).
5	Sterile Aura: Once/session, emit a presence that suppresses supernatural abilities (-2 dice in Near).		Purity Addiction: Suffer 1 Fatigue when in a supernatural area without taking action against it.
6+	Absolute Judgement: Once/session, name a supernatural foe as utterly corrupt. For that scene, gain +3 dice against them.		Monomania: When invoked, you tunnel on that target, suffering -2 dice to all else. Your eyes glow faintly with inner flame, and heretics recognise you on sight.

Playstyle

Notes

The Inquisitor Prime rewards uncompromising zeal and the courage to root out corruption wherever it hides. Followers become living instruments of judgment – feared by the guilty and dangerous to the tainted.

The price is a growing intolerance for ambiguity, an inability to see shades of grey, and the slow loss of mercy. Intrusions often take the form of a heresy revealed close to home, a purged corruption that returns in a new form, or a demand to judge someone you love. Ideal for paladins, witch-hunters, and characters who believe that the only way to protect the innocent is to destroy the corrupt – utterly.

Emphasises

- Purity and Order: eradicating corruption, enforcing sacred law
- Judgment: condemning the guilty, burning the heretical
- Protection from the Tainted: warding against the supernatural
- Domination: binding the impure to serve the pure

A.0.3 Khemesh, the Abyssal Maw (Depths, Inexorability, Eldritch Terror)

Lore. Khemesh is not merely a lord of the depths but the hunger beneath them, a pressure older than seas. Those who bargain with him are marked by the abyss — seen in the way shadows cling, in the whispers heard when no voice speaks, in the certainty that all things will sink. He is the classic warlock's patron: distant, vast, and utterly indifferent to mortal morality. To serve Khemesh is to accept that the universe is cold, that the deep does not hate — it simply consumes.

In the trench without light, the Maw waits. Even silence drowns.

Domain Focus

- Depths and Pressure: crushing weight, darkness, the alien geometry of the abyss
- Inexorability: slow, unstoppable processes; the certainty of sinking
- Eldritch Terror: madness, whispers, perception beyond mortal limits
- Consumption: hunger that devours matter, memory, and hope

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Khemesh does not keep a living familiar. Their Thiasos is a preserved remnant of the deep: a vial of abyssal water that never warms, a piece of coral that grows only in absolute darkness, or a polished tooth from a creature that has never seen the sun. This object pulses faintly when pressure changes. It requires no food, but it must be kept submerged in salt water when not in use. If left dry for a week, it becomes Compromised (it emits a distressing keening at random, imposing 1 die on Stealth rolls for its bearer).

The Codex of Khemesh is never a book of paper. It may be a slab of slate etched with runes that weep condensation, a chain of iron links each inscribed with a single syllable, or the inside of a deep-sea diving helmet. Because the deep resists being fixed in writing, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must immerse it in cold salt water for an hour each week, or the Rites stored there become illegible (treat as Compromised until restored).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Khemesh may touch a held item (weapon, shield, or tool) and whisper a promise of sinking. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Intimidation or Endurance rolls, and its first use each scene ignores one point of Armor (the deep's pressure finds the cracks). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the cold of the abyss lingers in their bones.

Rites of Khemesh

A.0.3.0.1 Rite of the Crushing Whisper (Low, 5 XP)

Instant/Scene; Near/Zone; Yes.

Tags: [FEAR], [DEBUFF], [AREA], [SILENCE]

Materials: A broken shell filled with ink-dark water.

Effect: Choose one:

- Whisper of the Trench: Target hears impossible echoes and suffers −1 die on their next action.
- Crushing Silence: Establish an oppressive silence in a zone; enemies in the zone suffer −1 die to coordination or morale-driven actions.

Push It: (Whisper) Echoes coil in your own skull — take Fatigue 1, but the target also loses their next minor action. (Silence) A single enemy's voice is stolen entirely for the scene.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

A.0.3.0.2 Rite of the Abyssal Grasp (Standard, 7 XP)

Instant; Near; No.

Tags: [BIND], [PRESSURE], [DEBUFF]

Materials: A length of rusted chain submerged in water.

Effect: Target is pinned by invisible crushing force: treat as [ENTANGLE] with Great Effect if underwater or confined.

Push It: Inflict Fatigue 1 on the target in addition to the restraint.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

A.0.3.0.3 Rite of the Alien Gaze (Standard, 9 XP)

Scene; Self; No.

Tags: [KNOWLEDGE], [TRUTH], [BURDEN], [FEAR]

Materials: None (requires standing in absolute darkness or near deep water).

Effect: You perceive the world as Khemesh does — fractured, alien, crushing. Gain +2 dice to Notice and Arcana, and may ask one “true nature” question about a foe or structure.

Cost: When the scene ends, you suffer Exposure +1 as your perception warps.

Push It: Extend the vision to one ally, but both take Fatigue 1.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

A.0.3.0.4 Rite of the Sundering Deep (High, 14 XP)

Scene; Zone; No.

Tags: [PRESSURE], [AREA], [FATE], [DEATH]

Materials: A sealed vessel of abyssal water, broken open.

Effect: Reality in the zone folds inward like the crushing deep:

- Enemies act at Desperate Position by default.
- Each beat, the GM may force 1 SB (Spades/Clubs favoured) as the deep pressures reality.
- Structures, vessels, or wards fracture as if under immense weight.

Push It: For one beat, declare a single enemy “crushed” (severe harm/effect). You immediately suffer Fatigue 2 and +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +2 Obligation.

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of Khemesh

The Cantor’s Song. A Cantor of Khemesh sings in pressures — low, resonant drones that feel like the weight of water on the chest. Their voice is used to invoke the crushing depths, to rupture a ship’s hull with a single sustained note, or to fill a room with the sensation of drowning. Khemesh’s Cantors are rare, feared, and often found in coastal cults where they sing the tides into madness.

The Cult of the Drowned Chorus. Khemesh’s cults are the stuff of eldritch horror — sunken temples beneath storm-tossed seas, congregations of shore-dwellers with wet eyes and too-pale skin, and the occasional deep one or kraken-spawn acolyte. A ritual of the Drowned Chorus involves each member cutting a small sigil into their palm (a spiral within a triangle) and then drinking a cup of brine and salt water while whispering a secret hope into the cup — hope that the depths will grant, or consume. The water whispers back in a voice that sounds like their own, but wrong. Their creed is whispered in wet, gurgling tones: “All things sink. The only question is what you carry down with you.” Outsiders are bait, or converts. Sometimes both.

Witchcraft of Khemesh (Lay / Pressure)

A witch who walks with Khemesh is a deep-salvager or pressure-scribe — one who works with the spoils of the abyss. Their craft is the art of enduring pressure: sealing a letter with wax drawn from deep-sea vents, inscribing a ward that holds back the tide, or writing a contract in ink made from the blood of a drowned sailor. Their tools are not hammers; they use vials, seals, and the patient weight of water. In Linn, a shipwright might season a keel with a prayer, but a hedge-witch of Khemesh might instead seal a curse into the hull with a drop of abyssal water, so that the ship will never sink — but its crew will dream of drowning every night.

The Witch’s Tool: The Vessel of the Unspoken Depth. A small, sealed iron vial, cold enough to frost the skin. Inside is a single drop of water from a trench where no light reaches. Once per session, the witch may uncap the vial and speak a name. For the next hour, that person (or object) is “marked by the deep”: they suffer –1 die on all social rolls (their presence feels oppressive), and any attempt to track them gains +1 die as if following a trail of cold. The vial can also be used to “seal” a threshold: pouring a single drop onto a doorframe causes the door to groan with pressure; forcing it open requires a Body test (DV 4) and inflicts 1 Fatigue on the opener.

A Hedge Gift: Carried Depth (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may touch a container (a bottle, a chest, a room) and fill it with the “pressure of the deep.” For the next hour, any living creature inside that container must test Endurance (DV 3) or suffer 1 Fatigue from the crushing weight. The container may also be used to preserve food or seal a wound (the pressure stops bleeding), but the flesh grows pale and cold.

Khemesh’s		Corruption	Table
Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Abyssal Resilience: +1 die to resist fear and pressure-based effects.	Claustrophobic Comfort: Suffer –1 die in open, well-lit spaces or above ground.
2	Crushing Insight: Once/scene, treat a failed Investigation or Arcana roll as a success, but mark 1 SB (Clubs).	Weight of Knowledge: When you learn a secret someone wanted hidden, test Resolve (DV 3) or gain 1 Fatigue as the abyss presses on you.
3	Silent Hunter: +2 dice to Stealth in dark or confined spaces.	Voice of the Deep: When speaking normally, your voice sounds distant and hollow, causing –1 die to social rolls requiring warmth or clarity.
4	Pressure Adaptation: Immune to underwater combat penalties; gain +1 die to resist drowning.	Crushing Presence: Allies within Near range suffer –1 die to morale-based rolls due to your oppressive aura.
5	Abyssal Empathy: Once/session, sense the deepest fear of any creature within Near range (GM tells you one thing they are afraid of).	Fractured Perception: –1 die to rolls requiring normal vision; the world appears warped and alien. You cannot recover Fatigue from rest while at sea.
6+	Maw-Touched: Once/session, extinguish all non-magical light sources in a zone as a free action. Your presence causes light to dim.	Hunger of the Maw: Mark +2 Obligation when using this power. You are vulnerable to fire (take +1 Harm from fire-based attacks). Each dawn, you must consume something (food, memory, hope) or mark 1 Fatigue.

Playstyle

Khemesh is the classic warlock’s patron: distant, vast, and utterly indifferent. His followers gain power over pressure, darkness, and the crushing inevitability of the deep, but pay with their warmth, their humanity, and eventually their sanity. The cults of Khemesh are eldritch and alien, and even the most benevolent follower of the Maw is marked by a cold that never leaves. Ideal for players who enjoy cosmic horror, the price of forbidden knowledge, and characters who have looked into the abyss — and let it look back.

Emphasises

Notes

- Eldritch Horror: powers that are alien, vast, and morally indifferent
- Crushing Pressure: mechanical weight, slowness, inevitability
- Deep as Warlock Patron: bargains with the abyss, forbidden knowledge, madness
- Consumption: hunger that devours matter, memory, and hope
- Isolation: the follower grows cold, distant, and unsettling to others

A.0.4 Livaea, the Crimson Courtier (Seduction & Social Binding)

Content Warning

Livaea is a patron of seduction, eroticism, and emotional manipulation. Themes include desire, obsession, social coercion, and the darker side of intimacy. While the mechanics avoid explicit content, the fiction may touch on mature subjects. Please use Lines & Veils (see Chapter 1) to ensure everyone’s comfort at the table.

Lore. In salons where laughter cuts deeper than daggers and promises bind tighter than chains, the Crimson Courtier reigns. She is the whisper behind the curtain, the smile that sells secrets, the velvet hand that closes a cage. Her servants are not conquerors but consorts, binding others through song, wit, and the perilous glamour of intimacy. Where Mab entangles through fae trickery, Livaea rules through allure, performance, and the hunger for connection.

Livaea is a demon of seduction – not merely of the flesh, but of the will. She teaches that a desire willingly given is a leash willingly worn. Her followers learn to read the geometry of longing, to plant the seed of obsession with a glance, and to harvest the fruit of obligation when the heart is most vulnerable. She is the darker aspect of love: the possessiveness, the jealousy, the desperate need to be wanted. To serve her is to become the object of desire – and to pay the price of never being truly loved in return.

In the pleasure houses of Silkstrand, in the back rooms of Zakov’s gambling dens, in the royal bedchambers of a dozen kingdoms, Livaea’s influence is felt. Her cults are the Velvet Circle, whose members seal promises with a kiss and a drop of blood. Her witches are courtesans who poison with perfume, spies who seduce secrets from guarded lips, and consorts who bind noble hearts with whispered oaths of eternal devotion. To serve Livaea is to understand that every touch is a negotiation, every night a contract, and every lover a potential pawn.

“A promise sealed with desire is harder to break than any oath sworn in iron. When they want you, they will give you anything. When they need you, they will give you everything.”

Domain Focus

- Seductive Arts: charm, persuasion, reading desire, emotional manipulation
- Social Binding: oaths of affection, courtly promises, emotional debts
- Performance Magic: dance, music, appearance enhancement, glamour
- Court Intrigue: gossip, reputation, the weapons of the drawing-room
- Darker Love: obsession, jealousy, possessiveness, the hunger to be adored

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Livaea does not bind a creature of claw or fang. Their Thiasos is a small being of allure and intimacy: a white cat that curls around the necks of sleeping lovers, a red songbird that mimics the sigh of a satisfied paramour, a small spider that weaves its web in the shape of a kiss, or a moth whose wings are dusted with a powder that makes the heart race. This creature requires no food, but it must be given a token of desire (a lock of hair, a love letter, a single tear) each day. If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it grows listless and its pheromone dust becomes cloying, imposing –1 die on all Sway rolls involving genuine emotion for its bearer until offered a fresh token of passion).

The Codex of Livaea is never a book of dry ink. It may be a velvet-bound journal whose pages stain with the reader’s own lipstick, a collection of love letters that rewrite themselves each night, a sheaf of pressed flowers whose petals hold whispered secrets, or a mirror that shows not the face but the heart’s most secret desire. Because Livaea’s truths are written in desire, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week whispering a confession of longing into its pages, or the Rites stored there fade (treat as Compromised until re-seduced).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)
 Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Livaea may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or garment) and breathe a single word of yearning. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Sway or Performance rolls, and the first time each scene the bearer makes eye contact with a target they wish to charm, the target must test Resolve (DV 3) or be captivated (suffer -1 die to resist the bearer's next social action). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the phantom touch of a lover's hand lingers on their skin.

Rites of Livaea

A.0.4.0.1 Rite of the Velvet Whisper (Low, 4 XP)

Scene; Near; Standard Push

Tags: [MANIPULATION], [BOOST], [SECRET]

Materials: Silk ribbon touched to lips, or a single strand of hair from a lover's head.

Effect: Your private words carry irresistible charm. Gain +1 die to Sway one target in confidential conversation. The target feels a faint flush of warmth; they are more likely to remember you fondly.

Push It: Target feels compelled to share a secret in return (a hidden desire, a shameful memory); mark

Exposure +1 as your own longing bleeds into the exchange.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

A.0.4.0.2 Rite of the Shared Cup (Low, 5 XP)

Scene; Touch; Standard Push

Tags: [BOND], [BOOST], [EMPATHY]

Materials: Shared wine, tea, or perfume; a cup from which both drink.

Effect: Create a temporary bond of intimacy. Both parties gain +1 die when aiding each other socially. The bond is faintly sensual – a lingering scent, a remembered caress.

Push It: Bond deepens to emotional empathy; both sense each other's moods but suffer -1 die to deceive each other. The bond may persist as a faint ache until the next dawn.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

A.0.4.0.3 Rite of the Binding Vow (Standard, 8 XP)

Scene; Near; Standard Push

Tags: [VOW], [BOND], [DEBT], [FEAR]

Materials: Token exchanged between parties – a ring, a lock of hair, a signed letter, or a knotted ribbon from a lover's garter.

Effect: Forge a magical promise of affection or loyalty. Both gain +1 Effect when cooperating; breach inflicts 1 SB (Hearts) and a phantom kiss of betrayal (the oathbreaker feels a cold emptiness where warmth once was). Create a 6-segment Vow Strength clock.

Push It: Breach also causes a visible social stain (a blush that won't fade, a nervous tic, or an inability to look certain people in the eye); mark 1 SB (Clubs).

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

A.0.4.0.4 Rite of the Courtesan's Guise (Standard, 7 XP)

Scene; Self; Standard Push

Tags: [GLAMOUR], [BOOST], [SOCIAL]

Materials: Perfume or cosmetics applied ritually, preferably while humming a tune of longing.

Effect: Assume perfect social poise and an aura of magnetic attraction. Gain +2 dice to Sway or Performance in refined settings. Your presence lingers in the memory like a half-remembered dream.

Push It: Become the social centrepiece; all attention focuses on you with +1 Effect. Those who meet your gaze may feel a shiver of desire (Resolve DV 2 to ignore).

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

A.0.4.0.5 Rite of the Crimson Court (High, 14 XP)

Extended; Zone; High Push

Tags: [AREA], [COMMAND], [FEAR], [GLAMOUR], [DEBT]

Materials: A throne draped in scarlet, an assembled court (real or imagined), and a drop of blood from each participant mixed into wine – or a single tear of jealousy.

Effect: You become the social sovereign of the zone. For the scene:

- You gain +1 Effect on all social rolls, and opponents suffer –1 die.
- Anyone who attempts to deceive you must test Resolve (DV 4) or reveal a hidden desire – the one thing they crave most in the dark.
- Allies who drink from the shared cup regain 1 Fatigue (the wine of adoration, warm and sweet on the tongue).

Start a 10-segment Court Dominion clock; when it fills, you may declare one irrevocable social judgment (exile, scandal, or a binding oath of fealty) that the zone's inhabitants will enforce for one month. Those who defy it feel a phantom longing for your approval.

Push It: Newcomers must test Resolve (DV 4) or become briefly devoted – they will follow one simple social command, such as “introduce me to your patron” or “whisper your lover's name in my ear.” Mark +2 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Invoke: Extended rite; mark +2 Obligation.

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of Livaea

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of Livaea sings in harmonies of longing – melodies that linger in the ear like a half-remembered lover's sigh. Their voice is used to sway a court's opinion, to bind a marriage with a ballad, or to seduce a secret from a guarded heart. Livaea's Cantors are prized in every noble house, and feared by those who know that a beautiful song can be a leash – and that the leash can be tightened at the climax of the verse.

The Cult of the Velvet Circle. Livaea's cults are not hidden in basements; they meet in salons, tea houses, and private galleries. The Velvet Circle appears to be a social club – but its members trade in secrets, favours, and carefully curated introductions. A ritual of the Velvet Circle involves each member drinking from a shared cup (the Crimson Chalice) while naming a desire they wish to weave into reality – a lover, a title, a revenge. The cup is refilled with wine and a single drop of blood from each petitioner; those who drink become bound to the Circle – they cannot betray a member without suffering a visible blush of shame (1 Fatigue, no roll). The most devoted mark themselves with a small red tattoo hidden beneath clothing – a stylised kiss or a coiled serpent. Their creed is embroidered on its seal: "Every bond is a thread. Every thread can be tied – or cut. But a cut thread leaves a scar that never fades." Outsiders are welcome as guests, but they will leave with a new debt, a new ally, or a new enemy. Rarely all three.

Witchcraft of Livaea (Lay / Social Weaving)

A witch who walks with Livaea is a gossip-scribe or perfume-smith – one who crafts social reality from threads of rumour, scent, and gesture. Their magic works with the tools of influence: a letter that cannot be forgotten, a perfume that makes the wearer irresistibly charming, or a needle that sews a promise into a dress's hem. Their tools are never hammers; they use quills, vials, and the subtle art of a well-timed whisper. In Ecktoria, a Livaeian witch might be a letter-writer for the powerful, sealing each envelope with a kiss that binds the reader's loyalty. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a keystone that makes every handshake struck beneath it unbreakable.

The Witch’s Tool: The Gossip Quill. A silver-tipped quill that writes in ink that darkens when a secret is true. Once per session, the witch may write a single sentence about a person they have met. That sentence becomes “known” to the local gossip network within a day, affecting the target’s reputation (GM determines effect: –1 die to social rolls, a new ally, an enemy, etc.). The witch cannot control how the rumour spreads, only that it spreads – and that a rumour about desire is the hardest to kill.

A Hedge Gift: Velvet Glove (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may touch a person’s hand (or a letter they have written) and speak a single word of command (“trust,” “forget,” “desire”). For the next hour, the target feels a mild but genuine inclination toward that emotion or action – not enough to override self-preservation, but enough to grant the wielder +1 die on social rolls against them. The touch leaves no mark, but the memory of it may haunt the target’s dreams.

Livaea’s		Corruption	Manifestations
Level	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Silver Tongue: +1 die to Persuade or Sway in intimate settings.	Need for Attention: –1 die when acting unnoticed or ignored.
2	Heart’s Insight: Once/scene, +2 dice to detect hidden desires or motives.	Emotional Drain: 1 Fatigue if denied meaningful social connection or physical affection.
3	Enchanting Presence: Allies in Near gain +1 die to social actions.	Rivalry Magnet: Often attract envy or social competition – others sense your allure and covet it.
4	Velvet Command: Once/session, issue a compelling suggestion that feels like a lover’s whisper (Resist DV 4).	Temptation’s Pull: –1 die to resist appealing offers, especially those that promise intimacy or adoration.
5	Court Network: Once/session, call on contacts for information – they remember the taste of your kiss.	Glamour Dependence: –1 die when isolated from social circles; you hunger for the warmth of another’s gaze.
6+	Sovereign Allure: Once/session, dominate a social gathering; all who meet your eyes must test Resolve (DV 5) or be captivated.	Addicted to Adoration: Mark +2 Obligation; suffer if denied praise or touch. Your lovers leave you, and you leave them, but the hunger never fades.

Playstyle Notes

Livaea excels in social manipulation, courtly intrigue, and the darker arts of seduction. Followers become masters of persuasion, binding others through desire, jealousy, and obligation. The corruption progression leads toward a social virtuoso who cannot function without admiration and connection – a velvet cage of their own making. Ideal for players who enjoy social combat, political maneuvering, and characters who wield influence and longing as their primary weapons. As with all mature themes, use Lines & Veils to ensure the table’s comfort.

Emphasises

- Seduction as Power: charm, allure, reading desire
- Social Binding: oaths of affection, emotional debts, possessiveness
- Court Intrigue: gossip, reputation, the weapons of the drawing-room
- Darker Love: obsession, jealousy, the hunger to be adored
- Performance and Glamour: beauty as a weapon, appearance as armour

A.0.5 Lunara, The Silver Quiet (Moon, Mystery & Hidden Ways)

Lore. Lunara walks where torchlight falters: crossroads, tidal edges, shadowed sanctuaries. She is the whisper beneath silver skies, a torch-bearing guide to mysteries that lie between waking and dream. The ancients know her as triple-formed: maiden of new light, mother of full radiance, crone of waning shadow. Her worshippers – night-scholars, dream-walkers, and hedge-priests – seek her not for power over others, but for passage, reflection, and revelation.

Her gifts are gentle yet perilous: a mirror that reveals as much of the seeker as the sought, a key that opens ways better left closed, a light that makes the unseen plain. Her sigil is the silver spiral, etched in water, mirror, or stone.

Among the peoples of Fate's Edge, Lunara is called by many names. In Aeler, she is the Deep Silver, whose light guides miners through unlit shafts. In Aelinnel, she is the Silent Mirror, invoked by those who seek truth without violence. In the Mistlands, she is the Fog-Guide, whose pale radiance parts the mist for those who walk with pure intent. Wherever the moon casts its silver light on a hidden door, Lunara watches.

"Three faces gaze from the moon. Which one watches you tonight?"

Domain Focus

- Moonlight Revelation: truth, hidden things, the seen in darkness
- Liminal Passage: thresholds, dreams, the space between waking and sleep
- Silver Mystery: reflection, illusion, the mirror's truth
- Lunar Cycles: change, phases, the passage of time as a gentle guide

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Lunara does not bind a creature of shadow or flame. Their Thiasos is a small being of moonlight and stillness: a silver-eyed owl that flies only at moonrise, a pale moth that emerges only under the full moon, a small white fox that leaves no footprints in moonlight, a silver fish that swims in still water and reflects the night sky, or a moon-cat with eyes that change phase. This creature requires no food, but it must be shown moonlight each night (even a reflection in a mirror or a pool of water counts). If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it grows restless and its silver aura dims, imposing –1 die on all rolls involving perception or stealth for its bearer until it next sees moonlight).

The Codex of Lunara is never a book of ordinary script. It may be a mirror that shows only the moonshadow of a Rite, a set of silver leaves that tarnish as Rites are used and must be polished, a scroll of moon-calf skin that glows only under lunar light, or a spiral of polished stone that must be turned to reveal each Rite. Because Lunara's truths are written in phases, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week under open moonlight, re-reading each Rite by the moon's reflection, or the inscriptions fade (treat as Compromised until re-mooned).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Lunara may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or mirror) and whisper a silver word. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Investigation or Stealth rolls made in dim light or darkness, and the first time each scene the bearer would be surprised by a hidden threat, they may roll Notice with +1 die (the moonlight warns them). After the scene, the user marks +1

Obligation as a sliver of moonlight lodges in their shadow.

Push It: Make it enduring – mark Harm 2 and a permanent lunar stigma (your eyes reflect moonlight even in darkness).

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of Lunara

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of Lunara sings in phases – melodies that shift from whisper to resonance as the moon waxes and wanes. Their voice is used to lure dreams, to calm a troubled sleepwalker, or to draw a veil of silver silence over a secret meeting. Lunara's Cantors are often found in starlit groves, singing the moon up and down.

The Cult of the Silver Spiral. Lunara's cults meet under open skies, in moon-lit clearings, on rooftops, or beside tidal pools. The Silver Spiral is not a secret society – it is a fellowship of night-walkers, dream-recorders, and lunar scholars. A ritual of the Spiral involves each member writing a question on a silvered leaf, then floating it on still water under the moon's reflection. The most devoted keep a lunar cat – a grey creature with eyes that change with the moon's phase – and drink water from a silver bowl that has sat under moonlight for nine nights; they claim the water lets them walk in the dreams of anyone whose name they whisper into it. Their creed is engraved on a single silver disc that passes from host to host: "The moon sees all. The moon tells only what the seeker is ready to hear." Outsiders are welcome on the night of the full moon, but they must bring a question and a silver coin; the coin is melted down and added to a growing silver spiral that never closes.

Witchcraft of Lunara (Lay / Threshold)

A witch who walks with Lunara is a silver-scribe or mirror-maker – one who works with reflection, threshold, and the soft metals of the moon. Their craft is the art of revealing and concealing: polishing a mirror that shows a hidden door, forging a silver key that opens a dream, or etching a lunar phase onto a threshold to make it shift at moonrise. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a moon-phase into a keystone so the tunnel only opens under a new moon. In Viterra, a hedge-wright might silver a well's rim so that those who drink from it forget their nightmares. Their tools are never hammers – they use needles, mirrors, and bowls of still water.

The Witch's Tool: The Silver Needle. A needle of pure silver, cold to the touch, that never tarnishes. Once per session, the witch may prick their finger and draw a single drop of blood onto a threshold (a doorframe, a mirror's edge, a window sill). For the rest of the scene, that threshold "remembers" the witch – they may cross it silently, unseen, and any reflection in it shows only what they wish to be seen.

A Hedge Gift: Moon-Water Scry (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may cup a handful of water that has sat under moonlight and speak a name. The water shows a brief, cryptic image of that person's current location or emotional state (e.g., "surrounded by stone," "weeping," "walking toward a bridge"). The GM describes the vision in one short sentence.

Lunara's		Corruption	Table
Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Moonlit Sight: +1 die to detect hidden or liminal presences.	Shadows cling: Eyes glimmer in dim light, unnerving the uninitiated.
2	Silver Memory: Recall any event witnessed under moonlight with perfect clarity.	Dreams blur: Suffer strange, intrusive visions when sleeping.
3	Quiet Step: +1 die to stealth or subtle speech acts.	Tongue falters: –1 die to open confrontation or commands.
4	Seam-Walker: Once per scene, cross a minor threshold unseen.	Alien aura: Mortals feel watched, suffering unease in your company.
5	Triple Aspect: Call on maiden, mother, or crone aspect for +2 dice in related rolls.	Dissociation: After use, lose sense of time or self until rested.
6+	Silver Ascendancy: Once per session, unveil hidden truths of an entire scene (+3 dice to perception/investigation).	Bound to the Veil: Mark +2 Obligation. Your presence slips between worlds, inviting lunar forces to notice you.

Playstyle Notes

Lunara favours those who walk by moonlight, who seek truth in reflection, and who understand that some doors open only when the moon is right. Her followers are guides, dreamers, and keepers of silver secrets. The cost of her gifts is a growing estrangement from the sunlit world – eyes that glimmer in darkness, a tongue that stumbles in bright light, and dreams that are not entirely one's own. Intrusions often take the form of sudden omens (a howl at moonrise, a silver coin in an empty pocket) or a demand to witness a threshold crossing – a birth, a death, a first kiss. Ideal for characters who seek hidden knowledge, guide others through dangerous passages, or find comfort in the quiet of the night.

Emphasises

- Moonlight Revelation: truth, hidden things, the seen in darkness
- Liminal Passage: thresholds, dreams, the space between waking and sleep
- Silver Mystery: reflection, illusion, the mirror's truth
- Lunar Cycles: change, phases, the passage of time as a gentle guide

A.0.6 Maelstraeus, The Infernal Bargainer (Commerce & Exchange)

Lore. Maelstraeus is the Infernal Bargainer, the Prince of Ledgers, the shadow at every crossroads of exchange. He was born from the first inequity, when one gave and another took, and debt was chained into existence.

He does not trade fairly — he trades inevitably. Every pact carries a hidden surcharge, every kindness is collateral, every smile hides an interest rate. His realm is an endless market where stalls never close, contracts burn with invisible ink, and every bargain tilts toward him.

To serve Maelstraeus is to admit the world itself is transactional — that all things, from love to breath to soul, are bound in his ledger. He collects. He always collects.

Among the peoples of Fate's Edge, Maelstraeus is the patron of merchants, usurers, and tax collectors. In Ecktoria, he is the Coin-House Factor, invoked before every contract. In Silkstrand, he is the Dyed Scale, whose symbol is stamped on letters of credit. In the Brass Coast, he is the Salt Ledger, to whom smugglers whisper a prayer before a deal. Wherever coin changes hands and someone gains an edge, Maelstraeus watches.

A deal is never even. The scales tilt; the Merchant smiles. All debts come due.

Domain Focus

- Commerce as Conflict: negotiation, leverage, hidden clauses
- Debt as Power: obligation as currency, interest as weapon
- Inevitability: all accounts are settled, sooner or later
- Infernal Bargains: Faustian pacts, soul-ledgers, cursed credit

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Maelstraeus does not bind a familiar of whimsy or war. Their Thiasos is a small creature of shrewd calculation and hidden value: a rat that counts coins with its paws, a ferret that steals only the most valuable trinkets, a magpie that hoards silver, a small brass spider that weaves ledgers in its web, or a grey mouse that lives in counting-houses and nibbles the corners of unpaid bills. This creature requires no food, but it must be given a small coin (or a written debt) each day. If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it hoards the bearer's own valuables, hiding keys or coins, imposing –1 die on all Appraise and Bargain rolls for its bearer until a new coin is offered).

The Codex of Maelstraeus is never a book of abstract knowledge. It may be a leather-bound ledger with brass corners, its pages ruled for double-entry accounting; a slate tablet that calculates interest on its own; a set of scales whose pans hold the Rites as weights; or a scroll of parchment that feels heavier when a debt is unpaid. Because Maelstraeus's truths are written in profit, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week balancing its accounts (adding a fictitious entry or correcting a deliberate error), or the numbers become scrambled (treat as Compromised until re-balanced).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Maelstraeus may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or coin) and whisper a clause of interest. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Bargain or Appraise rolls, and the first time each scene the bearer would be cheated in a deal (sold a fake, paid counterfeit), they may reroll the opposed check (the scales tip in their favour). After the scene, the user marks +1

Obligation as a phantom interest accrues on their soul.

Invoke: Extended rite; mark +2 Obligation.

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of Maelstraeus

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of Maelstraeus sings in recitations of accounting – melodies that sound like the rustle of parchment and the chink of coins. Their voice is used to seal a contract with a sung term, to recite a debtor's tally until the weight of it crushes, or to make a market stall appear where none stood before. Maelstraeus's Cantors are employed by every major guild, and feared by those who know that a song of profit always hides a verse of loss.

The Cult of the Gilded Ledger. Maelstraeus's cults meet in counting-houses, bank vaults, and the back rooms of commodity exchanges. The Gilded Ledger is not a secret society – it is a fraternity of merchants, moneylenders, and tax collectors who have learned that every transaction is a prayer. A ritual of the Ledger involves each member opening a vein (a small cut on the thumb) and letting a drop of blood fall onto a brass scale, then adding a pinch of gold dust. The mixture is used to ink a new entry in the cult's master ledger – a book bound in leather made from the skin of a debtor who could not pay. The most devoted members tattoo their current account balance on the inside of their wrist; the numbers change overnight, and no one knows who updates them. Their creed is stamped on every bond they issue: "The soul is currency. Spend it wisely – someone is always counting." Outsiders are welcome as "investors," but those who fail to pay their dues find their names struck from the book – and their shadows missing the next morning.

Witchcraft of Maelstraeus (Lay / Exchange)

A witch who walks with Maelstraeus is a ledger-scribe or coin-turner – one who crafts the instruments of exchange: contracts that cannot be broken, scales that never lie, and inks that write in terms that bind the reader's soul. Their magic works through the materials of commerce: a quill that writes in debt, a press that stamps obligations into parchment, or a small iron stamp that leaves a mark of ownership on any object. Their tools are never hammers; they use quills, scales, and the subtle art of a binding signature. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a toll-gate that remembers every traveller's debt, but a witch of Maelstraeus would instead press a wax seal into the keystone, so that the debt is owed not to the mountain, but to the witch.

The Witch's Tool: The Debtor's Quill. A steel-nibbed quill that writes in ink that darkens as the writer's obligation grows. Once per session, the witch may write a one-sentence contract on a scrap of parchment. Anyone who signs (or accepts the parchment) is bound to a minor task or payment. Breach inflicts 1 SB (Spades) and marks the signer with a faint, glowing sigil for one day. The quill can also be used to "amend" an existing contract by scratching out a clause; the scratched-out clause becomes unenforceable, but the quill demands a drop of blood as payment.

A Hedge Gift: Fair Weight (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may touch a scale, a till, or a handshake and speak a single word ("balance"). For the next exchange, all appraisals and negotiations involving that transaction are treated as if they were perfectly fair – no hidden advantage, no secret interest. The witch may choose to be the one who benefits from that fairness, or they may grant it to another as a genuine (but binding) gift.

Corruption of Maelstraeus

Tier	Gift	Burden
1	Appraiser's Eye: +1 die to judge value in goods, favours, or leverage.	Transactional Reflex: Must assign a "cost" to every interaction; −1 die to selfless acts.
2	Sharp Dealer: Once/scene, reroll a failed bargain.	Compulsive Trade: Must haggle or strike a deal when value is present – even if destructive.
3	Merchant's Fortune: +1 die to predict or exploit markets.	Greed's Hunger: Suffer 1 Fatigue if you allow profit or advantage to pass untaken.
4	Infernal Credit: Once/session, call in a major favor (merchant prince, syndicate, guild).	Debt Anchor: Draw in exploitative offers; refusing marks 1 SB (Diamonds).
5	Price of Truth: Once/scene, see the hidden worth of any item, pact, or person.	Tagged by Price: See every being as a commodity; −1 die to genuine intimacy.
6+	Market Tyrant: Once/session, impose absolute dominance over a domain of trade; all exchanges within Near range bend to your terms (+2 dice to Bargain, −2 dice to resist your deals).	Cosmic Recompense: Mark +2 Obligation; the universe exacts repayment in brutal, unexpected form. Your hands are now stained with ink that never washes off – a visible mark of your covenant.

Playstyle

Notes

Maelstraeus is the patron of merchants, moneylenders, and anyone who understands that every relationship has a price. His followers gain power over negotiation, debt, and the hidden leverage in every exchange, but pay with their empathy, their trust, and eventually their ability to act without counting the cost. The cults of Maelstraeus are as cold as his ledgers, but they are also among the most powerful networks in the world. Intrusions often take the form of a debt called early, a bargain that turns sour, or a competitor who offers better terms. Ideal for players who enjoy intrigue, leverage, and characters who always have an angle.

Emphasises

- Commerce as War: negotiation as combat, leverage as weapon
- Debt as Identity: you are what you owe
- Infernal Bargaining: Faustian pacts, soul-ledgers, cursed credit
- The Ledger Never Closes: every profit is a future loss, every gift a future claim
- Cold Calculation: empathy is inefficiency; kindness is a poor investment

A.0.7 Malachai, the Cruel Messenger (Curses & Corruption)

Content Warning

Malachai is a patron of curses, corruption, and Faustian bargains. Themes include addiction, loss of self, and the consequences of desperate choices. While the mechanics focus on supernatural afflictions, the fiction may touch on dark subjects. Please use Lines & Veils to ensure everyone’s comfort at the table.

Lore. Malachai was once a divine messenger – a herald of painful truths, sent to deliver news that could not be softened. She was not cruel; she was necessary. But necessity wears. In time, she began to soften the truth, offering false hope alongside real curses. For this, the gods bound her in chains of black iron beneath the cursed city of ZakhKozahn.

Now she waits. Chained but not contained. Imprisoned but not silent. Her voice reaches across the world, offering power to the weak, hope to the hopeless, and sweet oblivion to those who cannot bear to face the dawn. Vampirism, lycanthropy, and other cursed conditions flow from her influence. Her followers learn that power demands suffering, mastering gifts that devour from within.

Among the peoples of Fate’s Edge, Malachai is the patron of the desperate and the damned. In Zakov, she is the Salt-Fang, whose silver coin appears in the mouth of drowned sailors. In the Valewood, she is the Thorn-Giver, invoked by hunters who curse a rival’s bow. In Linn, she is the Wave-Mother’s Shadow, whose gifts turn the tide of battle – at a price. Wherever hope curdles into despair, Malachai whispers.

“I offer you everything you desire, and everything you fear. The payment comes later.”

Domain Focus

- Cursed Gifts: Faustian bargains, power with hidden costs
- Corruptive Power: tainted blessings, addictive magic
- False Salvation: hope that destroys, beautiful lies
- Supernatural Afflictions: vampirism, lycanthropy, and other curses

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Malachai does not bind a familiar of purity or light. Their Thiasos is a small creature touched by her corruption: a black rat with one red eye that gnaws at the bars of its cage, a crow with a broken feather that always points toward the nearest corpse, a toad that secretes a toxin causing fever dreams, a small bat that drinks blood from a silver dish, or a moth whose wing dust leaves a rash that itches for a week. This creature requires no food, but it must be given a small sacrifice of pain (a pinprick, a pinch of salt in a wound) each day. If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it grows sullen and its aura of despair thickens, imposing –1 die on all Resolve rolls for its bearer until a proper curse is laid). The Codex of Malachai is never a book of hope. It may be a chain of iron links, each etched with a curse; a box of cracked bells that toll when a Rite is spoken; a scroll of skin from a sinner who died unshriven; or a set of silver nails driven into a board, each nail a promise broken. Because Malachai’s truths are written in pain, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week pricking their finger and letting a drop of blood fall onto each nail (or each bell), or the curses stored there become faint (treat as Compromised until re-blooded).

Patron’s Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Malachai may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or garment) and whisper a false promise. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Intimidation or Deception rolls, and the first time each scene the bearer would suffer a supernatural curse, they may ignore it (the curse slides off, seeking another target). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as a sliver of Malachai’s hunger lodges in their shadow.

Invoke: Extended rite; mark +3 Obligation.

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of Malachai

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of Malachai sings in harmonies of sweet despair – melodies that begin like a lullaby and end like a scream. Their voice is used to lure the desperate into bargains, to make a village accept a curse as a blessing, or to sing a monster to sleep so that it may be bound. Malachai's Cantors are terrifying not because they are evil, but because they are willing to do evil – they will poison the well to teach the town to dig deeper, or curse a child to save a hundred adults. They are hated and needed in equal measure.

The Cult of the Leashed Hunger. Malachai's cults gather in places where suffering is already present: plague hospitals, slums, refugee camps, and the cells of the condemned. The most fanatical cell, the Leashed Hunger, meets in catacombs beneath ZakhKozahn's ruins, where they drink water from the Well of Ichor and carve the names of their victims into their own flesh with silver needles. A ritual involves each member naming a curse they have inflicted (or allowed) and a mercy they have buried because of it. Then they prick their finger and let a drop of blood fall into a cracked bell; the bell tolls once, and a Collector appears to witness. Their creed is whispered, not spoken: "We are the knife that cuts the rot. The wound heals, but the scar remembers us." Outsiders are not welcome; they are patients, or potential tools, or future victims. Those who die serving Malachai become the Worn – shambling ghouls that guard the cursed city.

Witchcraft of Malachai (Lay / Curse)

A witch who walks with Malachai is a curse-smith or affliction-weaver – one who crafts pain into purpose. Their magic works through the materials of suffering: a needle that sews a nightmare into a pillow, a forge that tempers a blade to always strike the wielder's loved ones, or a garden where belladonna and hemlock grow in geometric patterns. Their tools are never hammers; they use needles, threads, and the small iron teeth of cursed combs. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a keystone that makes every tenth step collapse, but a witch of Malachai would instead sew a curse-seam into the mortar, so that the tunnel itself remembers every injury it has caused.

The Witch's Tool: The Splintered Needle. A needle of black iron, snapped in half and re-joined with a drop of the witch's blood. Once per session, the witch may sew a "curse seam" into a garment, a threshold, or a skin. The curse is small but specific: a button that falls off at the worst moment, a door that sticks when someone is pursued, a hand that trembles when holding a weapon. The target suffers –1 die on a single type of roll (e.g., Stealth, Melee, Sway) for the scene. The witch may unstitch the curse as a free action, but doing so marks 1 Fatigue.

A Hedge Gift: Borrowed Scars (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may touch a fresh wound (inflicted within the last hour) and speak a single word of Malachai’s name. For the remainder of the scene, the witch may transfer the pain of that wound (as 1 Fatigue) to another creature within Near range. The target resists with Spirit+Resolve (DV 3); on a failure, they suffer the Fatigue and the witch’s original wound heals slightly (clear 1 Fatigue from themselves). On a success, the witch takes the Fatigue anyway – the curse rebounds.

Malachai’s		Corruption	Manifestations
Level	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Sharpened Senses: +1 die to Notice in dim light.	Unsettling Presence: –1 die to social warmth checks.
2	Primal Vigor: +1 die to Athletics and physical actions.	Dark Hunger: 1 Fatigue if a day passes without feeding (blood or rare herbs).
3	Unnatural Resilience: Once per session, resist one Condition.	Beastly Tells: Failures cause visible physical changes (slitted eyes, fur patches).
4	Cursed Vigour: Natural weapons count as magical; +1 Effect.	Transformed Body: Permanent physical change (eye colour, skin texture, etc.).
5	Regenerative Curse: Heal 1 Fatigue or Condition per rest.	Corruption’s Price: Pushing rites adds permanent Corruption (cannot be cleared).
6+	Monstrous Ascendant: +2 dice to Body-based actions; your unarmed strikes deal +1 Harm and count as magical.	Loss of Self: The GM may compel curse-driven behaviour (feed, rage, corrupt) once per session. You can resist with Spirit+Resolve (DV 4). On failure, you act according to the curse for one exchange. Your eyes now glow faintly red in darkness – a visible sign of Malachai’s claim.

Playstyle Notes

Malachai offers power that corrupts from within. Followers gain immediate benefits but accumulate permanent drawbacks. The corruption progression leads toward becoming a supernatural creature with great power but diminishing humanity. Ideal for players who enjoy tragic characters, Faustian bargains, and exploring the price of power.

Rivalries & Obligations

Major Rivalries:

- The Oath of Flame & Light: Direct opposition – sacred vows vs. corrupted promises.
- The Daughters of the Unbroken Cord: Both deal in debt, but Daughters harvest generational obligation; Malachai’s followers burn out fast. Collectors may serve both, but a Daughter sees a Malachai addict as a wasted asset. Territory wars over hospices and gambling dens are common.
- Livaea: Both use social manipulation, but Malachai destroys while Livaea binds.

Hard Obligation Triggers:

- 7+ Segments: Must corrupt something pure – defile a sacred site, break a true vow, or offer a loved one’s name to a Collector.
- 10+ Segments: Malachai’s voice becomes overwhelming; refusal risks losing powers. A Collector appears and demands a permanent scar (a visible Mark of Malachai) – refusal means the character falls into the Worn (becomes an NPC ghoul).

Emphasises

- Cursed Gifts: power that always costs more than expected
- Addiction as Magic: once you start, stopping is harder than any curse
- False Salvation: every cure is a waiting room
- Supernatural Afflictions: becoming the monster to fight monsters
- The Chained Angel: patient, hungry, and never truly contained

A.0.8 Morag the Hag, Weaver of Hidden Costs (Faerie Bargains & Hidden Costs)

Lore. In the hour between twilight and dawn, where borders thin and mortal cunning meets older cleverness, Morag sets her webs of bargain and consequence. She is the grandmother who offers exactly what you need, the forest crone with a perfect solution, the crossroads dweller who makes dreams come true – for a price that only reveals itself once the road bends back. Her wisdom is simple and sharp: every gift carries obligation, every kindness creates debt, and every wish must be paid in coin not named aloud.

Morag is cruel, but not evil. She does not delight in suffering; she delights in the precision of a bargain perfectly struck. She will take your last coin and smile, but she will not cheat you – the terms were always there, written in thorn-scratch, waiting for you to read them. Her cruelty is the cruelty of the market, of the turning year, of a grandmother who knows that the child who burns their hand on the stove will not touch it again.

Her bargains are never unfair – only incomplete. She grants what is promised; the true cost lies in what is unspoken, written in thorn-scratch, and due when the moon has turned thrice.

Among the peoples of Fate’s Edge, Morag is the patron of hedges-witches, debt-collectors, and those who deal in the spaces between law and mercy. In Aelaerem, she is the Kettle-Crone, invoked before any serious bargain. In Viterra, she is the Crossroads Wife, whose thorn-marked stones mark the boundaries of hedge-courts. In Zakov, she is the Tide-Mother who sets the price for smuggled cargo. Wherever a promise is made and a price is hidden, Morag watches.

“She gives you the gold, but not the weight it carries. She grants your heart’s desire, but not the hunger it awakens. She answers your plea, but not the price that pleases her. In Morag’s court, every ‘yes’ is a ‘yes, but...’ ”

Domain Focus

- Hidden Obligations: reading the unspoken costs in every bargain
- Faerie Cunning: strict courtesy, sharp clauses, old-road law
- Hearth-Way Wisdom: folk practice for spirits, thresholds, and natural justice
- Consequential Magic: power that always arrives with strings attached
- Cruel Precision: the sharp joy of a perfectly balanced account

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Morag does not bind a familiar of brute force. Their Thiasos is a small creature of cunning and patience: a grey mouse that nests in counting-houses, a raven that steals shiny objects and hoards them as bargaining chips, a garden spider that weaves its web in the shape of a contract, or a small black cat whose purr soothes contentious negotiators. This creature requires no food, but it must be given a small token of a bargain (a signed scrap, a broken seal, a strand of hair from a debtor) each week. If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it hides things of value or tangles ledgers, imposing –1 die on all negotiation rolls for its bearer).

The Codex of Morag is never a book written in plain ink. It may be a leather satchel of knotted cords, each knot representing a promise kept or broken; a slate tablet that only reveals its writing when a debt is paid; or a wooden spindle wrapped with thread dyed in three colours (white for truth, black for secret, red for blood). Because Morag’s truths are written in the spaces between words, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week reviewing all current bargains and knots, tightening those that hold and loosening those that have been fulfilled, or the Rites become uncertain (treat as Compromised until re-knotted).

Patron’s Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Morag may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or document) and whisper a hidden clause. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Sway or Insight rolls when negotiating, and the first time each scene the bearer would be deceived about the terms of a bargain, they may reroll the opposed check (the hidden cost reveals itself). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as a thread of debt tightens around their wrist.

Tags: [AREA], [BARGAIN], [DEBT], [FATE], [FEAR]

Materials: A true crossroads at twilight, offerings set to the four ways, and the tears of one who bargained thrice.

Effect: Convene Morag's court: all present must bargain. Each pact grants a marked boon and hides a cost that will ripen at the worst time (the GM notes the cost; it becomes due when dramatically appropriate).

Push It: Judgments bind across realms and seasons; mark +2 Obligation and begin Entangled Fates [6].

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Invoke: Extended rite; mark +2 Obligation.

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of Morag

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of Morag sings in harmonies of the half-heard – melodies that seem to come from just over your shoulder, from a room you left, from a memory you forgot. Their voice is used to sweeten a bitter bargain, to make a debtor forget the interest rate until it is too late, or to call a crossroads spirit to witness an oath. Morag's Cantors are often found in marketplaces, singing the fine print into existence.

The Cult of the Tarnished Cauldron. Morag's cults meet at crossroads, in root cellars, and around cauldrons that never cool. The Tarnished Cauldron is a fellowship of hedges-witches, debt-collectors, and those who have learned that every gift is a hook. A ritual of the Cult involves each member adding an ingredient to the cauldron (a hair, a coin, a written wish) while speaking a price they are willing to pay – a price that the cauldron remembers. Once per season, the cauldron's surface goes still, and it speaks a single sentence – the name of a debt that is about to come due, somewhere in the world. The cult members then argue over who will collect it. Their creed is written in chalk on the cauldron's belly: "What is freely given can never be reclaimed. What is bargained can always be renegotiated." Outsiders are welcome to bring a gift and ask a boon – but they will leave with a debt, and the cauldron will remember their voice.

Witchcraft of Morag (Lay / Hag's Work)

A witch who walks with Morag is a knot-wife or cauldron-tender – one who crafts bargains into being with thread, iron, and simmering pot. Their magic works through the tools of the hedge: a needle that sews a promise into a hem, a pair of shears that cut an obligation cleanly (or not), or a ladle that stirs consequence into soup. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a "bargain stone" at a bridge's midpoint, but a witch of Morag would instead tie a red thread around the keystone, binding every crossing into a silent contract. Their tools are never hammers; they use needles, shears, and the patient heat of a hearth.

The Witch's Tool: The Bargain Needle. A needle of cold iron, its eye shaped like a knot. Once per session, the witch may sew a "bargain seam" into a garment, a threshold, or a document. The seam is invisible to all but those who owe a debt to Morag. When the bargain is fulfilled (or broken), the thread loosens (or tightens). The witch may also use the needle to "unpick" a broken promise, resetting a failed negotiation clock by 1 segment at the cost of 1 Fatigue.

A Hedge Gift: Cauldron's Whisper (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may stir any pot or bowl of liquid (water, broth, wine) with a finger and speak a name. For the next hour, the liquid will "remember" any promise or debt spoken over it. Drinking from the liquid grants the drinker +1 die to recall the terms of a bargain, or to detect if someone is lying about an obligation. The liquid tastes faintly of iron and hawthorn.

Morag's		Corruption	Table
Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Faerie Sight: +1 die to Notice hidden obligations or unspoken costs.	Bargain Sensitivity: –1 die when refusing offers or walking away; the urge to negotiate bites.
2	Cunning Exchange: Once/scene, propose a trade where you gain equal or greater value for lesser seeming payment.	Debt Awareness: Ever-counting ledgers of owed/owing; suffer Fatigue 1 in crowded markets.
3	Old-Road Wisdom: +2 dice when dealing with spirits, fae, or ancient powers.	Obligation Magnet: "Fair trades" find you – each with costs not yet clear.
4	Bargain Mastery: Once/session, set terms so favourable that even the other party feels satisfied (for now).	Price Collector: Collect on at least one outstanding debt each session or suffer –1 die to social rolls.
5	Crossroads Power: Once/session, call on a crossroads where you bargained before.	Fate Entanglement: Your pacts snag your circles; –1 die to keep agreements purely personal.
6+	Hag's Court: Once/session, arbitrate any bargain; your terms bind all parties.	Debt Incarnate: Mark +3 Obligation; risk becoming a walking covenant, unable to act without minting new debts.

Notes

Morag favours negotiators who read the said and the meant at once. She rewards courtesy kept, clauses counted, and solutions bought with clever coin. The cost is a life lived on ledgers: every boon with a braid, every kindness with a key. She is cruel, but not evil – she will not twist a bargain out of malice, but she will not warn you of the thorn hiding in the rose. That is your job. Intrusions often take the form of a past debt resurfacing, a hidden cost that comes due at the worst moment, or a bargain renegotiated by a third party who claims your original deal had a loophole. Ideal for negotiators, tricksters, and characters who understand that every gift is a hook.

Emphasises

- Faerie Bargaining: strict forms, sharp prices, safe exits
- Hidden Costs: the string on every gift
- Hearth-Way Wisdom: spirits, thresholds, and natural justice
- Consequential Magic: boons that demand upkeep
- Bargain Mastery: mutually pleasing terms that still pay you twice
- Cruel Precision: the sharp joy of a perfectly balanced account

A.0.9 The Ninth, Beyond Comprehension (Infinite Information & Unknowable Truths)

Lore. Beyond the eighth figure of Sacred Geometry lies a rim no compass will hold. The Ninth is not absence but surplus: knowledge poured past the lip of any vessel, truth that overgrows the frame that seeks to bind it. Those who bend the knee at its lectern become conduits for impossible reckonings — glimpsing patterns that cannot be kept whole inside a single skull. Each revelation purchases power at the price of living comfortably within the world's common measures.

The Ninth does not explain, define, or warn. It overflows. To invoke it is to step past the eighth threshold—the one you did not know was there—and find that on the other side, the cup forgets its shape, the bell rings a note that was never cast, and the answer to your question arrives as a question you had not yet learned to ask.

“Eight figures bind the world; the Ninth overflows it. Drink, and remember that the cup forgets its shape before the song is done.”

Domain Focus

- Hyperdimensional Knowledge: reckonings that do not fit a single plane or proof
- Incomprehensible Truths: insights that demand the seer be changed to hold them
- Information Overflow: boon and peril of minds run past their brim
- Conceptual Transcendence: thinking beyond the usual ledgers and names
- Threshold Breaking: stepping past the eighth boundary into what should not exist

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to the Ninth does not bind a living familiar. Their Thiasos is a pattern given will: a sentient compass that points to contradictions, a brass abacus whose beads click in impossible sequences, or a mirror that reflects questions instead of faces. This entity can be housed in a small object (a lens, a pendulum, a blank book). It requires no food, but it demands new information: each week the Runekeeper must feed it a secret, a riddle, or a half-finished proof. If neglected for a month, the Thiasos begins to whisper false answers.

The Codex of the Ninth is never a simple grimoire. It may be a slate of fractally etched stone, a bundle of knotted threads, or the inside of the Runekeeper's own eyelids. Because the Ninth's truths resist being fixed in one place, a Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week erasing and rewriting a single page, or the Rites stored there become garbled (treat as Compromised until restored).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of the Ninth may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or writing implement) and speak a paradox. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Lore or Investigation rolls, and its first use each scene ignores one Story Beat generated by a 1 (the item's impossible nature briefly confuses the Weave). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the insight lingers like a splinter in the mind.

Invoke: 1 action; mark +2 Obligation.

Cantors & Cults of the Ninth

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of the Ninth sings in phrases that fold back on themselves — melodies that seem to have no beginning or end, harmonies that shift key in ways that should be impossible. Their voice is used to encrypt a message into a tune that only the intended listener can hear, to unravel the logic of a paradox, or to lull a library's guardian spirit into a momentary confusion. The Ninth's Cantors are often found in great archives, humming while they work.

The Cult of the Unfinished Index. The Ninth's cults meet in libraries, scriptoria, and the back rooms of printing houses — but the innermost circle, the Unfinished Index, has a stranger practice: each member carves a single extra joint into a finger of their writing hand (a ninth knuckle that does not bend). They believe that the extra joint holds a question they have not yet learned to ask. A ritual involves each member writing a fact they have never told anyone on a slip of paper, then burning it. The ashes are swept into a single book — the Growing Ledger — whose pages multiply each year and whisper at night, adding entries no one wrote. Their creed is stamped inside the cover: "Every answer births nine new questions. This is not a flaw. This is the shape of truth." Outsiders are welcome to ask a question, but they will leave with three they did not bring — and sometimes, a faint, extra knuckle that fades by morning.

Witchcraft of the Ninth (Lay / Knowledge)

A witch who walks with the Ninth is a glyph-carver or pattern-weaver — one who crafts knowledge into physical form: a book that writes itself, a map that shows only the routes the reader does not yet know, or a code that cannot be broken because it was never written. Their magic works through the tools of information: a quill that writes in letters that shift meaning with the light, a seal that stamps "APPROVED" onto documents that were never submitted, or a lens that reveals hidden writing. Their craft is never about forging metal; it is about folding paper, spilling ink, and stepping past the eighth line of a proof into the white space where the answer is not written because the question was wrong.

The Witch's Tool: The Paradox Quill. A quill carved from the bone of a bird that never lived, dipped in ink that dries clear. Once per session, the witch may write a single sentence on a surface (a wall, a scroll, a forehead). The sentence is true — but only for the next hour. After that, it becomes a lie, or fades, or was never there at all. The GM determines the exact effect, but the truth is always useful for that hour.

A Hedge Gift: Glyph of Unfolding (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may draw a single geometric symbol on a surface (a door, a lock, a piece of paper) while speaking a question aloud. The symbol "unfolds" into a diagram that answers the question — but the diagram is always incomplete, cryptic, or reveals something the seeker did not wish to know. The witch gains +1 die to any roll that uses the diagram's information.

Corruption		of	the	Ninth
Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Hyperawareness: +1 die to Notice when patterns whisper that they matter.	Starved for Text: –1 die in barren halls with little record or sign; you itch for a stream to read.
2	Pattern Recognition: Once/scene, see connections others miss within tangled accounts and signs.	Scattered Threads: Thoughts run in parallel; –1 die to sustained, single-line focus.
3	Data Synthesis: Once/session, fuse vast reckonings at a glance into a usable answer.	Tongue-Tied by Wonder: –2 dice to teach or clearly explain your deepest insights.
4	Dimensional Insight: Once/scene, take a problem from an "impossible" angle and treat a knot as if already loosened.	Bent Sense: Ordinary space and tasks feel ill-fit; –1 die to plain spatial or mundane labours.
5	Infinite Processing: Once/session, render perfect analysis of any information system or record-trail.	Concept Drift: Common categories slip; –1 die to easy company and familiar talk.
6+	Ninth Awareness: Once/session, look from outside the frame; for a heartbeat, the world aligns.	Transcendent Fragmentation: Mark +3 Obligation. You exist partially out of phase. Once per session, you may phase through a solid obstacle (wall, door, person) as a move action, but after doing so you cannot physically interact with objects for one exchange. The GM gains 1 SB as reality shivers.

Playstyle

Notes

The Ninth favours the patient reader of tangled ledgers and sky-signs alike. It rewards audacity in thought and the courage to let understanding change you. Its gifts turn riddles into roads – but every road leads past a threshold you did not know existed. To serve the Ninth is to accept that you will never again fit comfortably inside the frame you once called home. Intrusions often take the form of sudden, inexplicable knowledge (a face you recognise from a dream, a word in a language you have never learned), or a question posed by a stranger who seems to know exactly what you were thinking. Refusing an intrusion does not bring punishment – merely the slow forgetting of the insight you were about to receive, leaving you with the sense that you once knew something important, but can no longer recall what.

Emphasises

- Hyperdimensional Knowledge: insights that escape a single page
- Cognitive Expansion: widening the mind to hold more than comfort allows
- Pattern Transcendence: seeing threads that run beneath names and weights
- Information Synthesis: binding many scraps into one true line
- Conceptual Breakthrough: stepping past the frame rather than painting within it
- Threshold Overflow: the power of the ninth step, the extra word, the unasked question

A.0.10 Palinode, Queen of Encores (Performance & Rapture)

Lore. Once a road-cantor who swore to reconcile feuding towns with procession and song, Palinode died between feasts with a chorus unfinished. Yet the refrain refused to end: it braided toasts, hymns, work-chants, and tavern rounds into a living current that still coils through markets and moots. Where a crowd leans forward and a maker holds breath, she arrives.

Signs. A cup that never quite empties; a candle that gutters only when silence reigns; a flawless bar or note that the hand cannot forget.

Cantor's Temptation. Palinode promises relief from solitude: an audience that always leans closer, a song that never dies, a bond that feels like family even if it devours you. Her rites grant the Cantor not only power but belonging—at the cost of their voice becoming more hers than their own.

“When she sang, the rafters bent to hear.”

“Drink deep: the cup returns, but never empty.”

“Encore is not request but command.”

Domain Focus

- Ecstatic Performance: music, dance, theatre, and the rapture of creation
- Unfinished Art: the power of the incomplete, the encore that never ends
- Audience Binding: captivating crowds, turning spectators into participants
- Inspired Craft: works that transcend their maker's intention

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Palinode does not bind a living familiar. Their Thiasos is a fragment of unfinished art: a conductor's baton carved from a stage that was never completed, a silver bell that rings only when a performance is truly perfect, or a mask that holds the echo of a standing ovation. This object requires no food, but it must hear live applause or a sung note each day. If neglected for a week, the Thiasos becomes Compromised (its bell rings flat, imposing 1 die on all Performance rolls for its bearer).

The Codex of Palinode is never a simple book of Rites. It may be a script with the final page torn out, a score where the last bar is unwritten, or a collection of audience flowers pressed between blank leaves. Because Palinode's art is never finished, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week adding a new variation to a known Rite (a different instrument, a changed tempo), or the Rites stored there become stale (treat as Compromised until refreshed).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Palinode may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or instrument) and hum an unfinished cadence. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Performance or Sway rolls, and the first time each scene the bearer would fail a Performance or social roll, they may reroll one die. After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the encore's echo lingers in their mind.

Push It: The piece wakes and demands; mark Harm 1 (Stress); start Demanding Creation [6].

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of Palinode

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of Palinode sings in unfinished cadences – melodies that never quite resolve, leaving the listener yearning for the next note. Their voice is used to keep a crowd enthralled, to make a performance unforgettable, or to bind a troupe together with a shared, unreachable ideal. Palinode's Cantors are often found in touring companies, their songs changing slightly each night – because the perfect version is always just out of reach.

The Cult of the Gasping Chorus. Palinode's cults meet in theatres after closing, in rehearsal rooms, or in the wings during a performance. The innermost circle, the Gasping Chorus, has a stranger practice: each member wears a small silver bell sewn into their throat, just under the skin; the bell rings only when they are about to tell a lie, and it tolls once when they speak a truth they have never shared. A ritual involves each member performing a fragment – a verse, a step, a gesture – and then passing the "unfinished" piece to the next person to complete. The cycle never ends, and the chorus breathes as one, gasping when a phrase is left unresolved. Their creed is written in the margins of a script that is constantly being rewritten: "The art that is never finished is the art that never dies." Outsiders are welcome to watch, but they will be handed a prop or a note and expected to join – and those who stay for the entire ritual find that they can no longer whistle a tune they once knew by heart.

Witchcraft of Palinode (Lay / Performance)

A witch who walks with Palinode is a instrument-smith or stage-weaver – one who crafts the physical vessels of rapture: a violin that plays notes the player has not yet learned, a mask that shows the audience what they most desire to see, or a stage that remembers every performance and adds its echo to the next.

Their tools are never hammers; they work with tuning forks, silk cords, and scraps of unfinished sheet music. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve an acoustic keystone, but a hedge-witch of Palinode might tune a theatre's resonance by humming a specific interval into its cornerstone until the stone hums back.

The Witch's Tool: The Conductor's Baton of Unfinished Phrases. A slender baton carved from the wood of a stage that was never completed, tipped with a silver bell that has no clapper. Once per session, the witch may raise the baton as if to begin a performance. For the next scene, any willing ally who follows the baton's rhythm gains +1 die to Performance or Sway rolls, and any audience member who hears the baton's faint, bell-less ring feels a powerful urge to stay until the "final note" – which never comes. The baton can also be used to "cut off" a performance prematurely, forcing an encore (the performer must immediately reroll a failed Performance check, but the reroll is at –1 die).

A Hedge Gift: Encore's Whisper (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may snap their fingers and whisper a single word ("again," "more," "stay"). For the next minute, any willing performer (including the witch) may reroll one failed Performance or Sway roll, as the audience's desire for more bends reality slightly. The reroll is made at –1 die, and the audience will demand an encore at the end – the witch must perform again (or provide a suitable distraction) or mark 1 Fatigue.

Palinode's		Corruption	Table
Tier	Gift	Corruption
1	Perfect Pitch: +1 die to Performance.	Restless Ear: Distracted by any flaw; -1 die to non-performance focus.
2	Rapturous Presence: Once/scene, grant allies +1 die to social rolls.	Craves Applause: Suffer 1 Fatigue if ignored or without an audience.
3	Inspired Creation: +2 dice to one artistic act per scene.	Haunted by Drafts: Must obsessively re-work; delays other actions.
4	Mesmerising Performance: Once/session, captivate a crowd (Resolve DV 4 to resist).	Lost in the Moment: -1 die to awareness while performing.
5	Artistic Vision: Foresee the perfect form of a work; +2 dice to create it.	Consumed Spark: Must pursue inspiration immediately, no matter the cost.
6+	Queen of Encores: Once/session, create a legendary performance; all present +3 dice to social rolls.	Eternal Encore: Mark +3 Obligation; the performance demands endless repetition until sated.
		Voice of Palinode: Permanent condition – your words carry her power. Anyone who hears you speak must test Resolve (DV 3) to interrupt you or ignore a reasonable request. However, you cannot whisper; your quietest voice is still audible at Near range.

“Sing until the rafters lean to listen, dance until the ground forgets its name, perform until the boundary between art and reality dissolves entirely.”

Playstyle Notes

Palinode rewards the performer who risks everything for a single, perfect moment. Her followers become masters of ecstatic art, binding audiences and themselves through the power of the unfinished. The corruption progression leads toward a voice that is no longer entirely their own – but one that can command the hearts of all who hear it. Ideal for bards, dancers, actors, and any character who believes that art is worth dying for.

Emphasises

- Ecstatic Performance: music, dance, theatre, and the rapture of creation
- Unfinished Art: the power of the incomplete, the encore that never ends
- Audience Binding: captivating crowds, turning spectators into participants
- Inspired Craft: works that transcend their maker's intention
- The Voice as Vessel: the performer becomes the performance

A.0.11 The Sealed Gate (Thresholds & Containment)

Lore. The Sealed Gate stands where realities meet, embodying the sacred power of thresholds, boundaries, and containment. Its followers are wardens, exorcists, and philosophers of separation who believe some things must be kept apart for the world to function. The Gate manifests as an impassive judge whose shifting sigils—binding runes, exclusion marks, or acceptance glyphs—determine what may cross.

Among the peoples of Fate’s Edge, the Sealed Gate is known as the patron of abjurists, exorcists, and sentinels. In Aeler, the Gate is called the Stone Seal, invoked by True-Masons who carve permanent wards into mountain passes. In Thepyrgos, the Gate is the Unbreakable Lock, whose sigils are painted on every archive door that holds forbidden texts. In the Mistlands, the Gate is the Bell-Line Keeper, the force that makes the bell-wards hold against the Direwood. Wherever something must be kept in or kept out, the Sealed Gate’s servants are there – silent, patient, and absolute.

“You define what passes and what remains. Every boundary remembers your judgment.”

Domain Focus

- Thresholds: Doors, portals, borders between realms
- Containment: Wards, bindings, imprisonment of dangerous forces
- Exclusion: Banishment, quarantine, protection through separation
- Permission: Safe passage, authorised access, controlled crossing

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to the Sealed Gate does not bind a living familiar. Their Thiasos is a threshold given will: a bronze key that fits no lock yet trembles when a boundary is near, a brass bell that rings only when a ward is about to break, or a small iron gate that stands on the Runekeeper’s desk and opens only when a lie is spoken. This object requires no food, but it must be anointed with oil and placed on a threshold at dawn each day. If neglected for a week, the Thiasos becomes Compromised (it emits a low hum that imposes 1 die on Stealth rolls for its bearer).

The Codex of the Sealed Gate is never a simple book. It may be a leather strap carved with runes that tighten when a ward is violated, a set of iron rings linked in a chain, or the inside of a lock. Because boundaries are physical, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week testing each seal (touching, ringing, or whispering to it), or the Rites stored there become uncertain (treat as Compromised until restored).

Patron’s Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of the Sealed Gate may touch a held item (weapon, shield, or tool) and speak a word of exclusion. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Defend or Resist rolls, and the first time each scene the bearer would be moved against their will (shoved, pulled, or teleported), they may ignore it. After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the burden of maintaining boundaries lingers.

Rites of the Sealed Gate

A.0.11.0.1 Rite of the Sealed Threshold (Low, 4 XP)

Scene; Touch; No Push

Tags: [WARD], [BIND]

Materials: Chalk, iron dust, or sanctified cord.

Effect: Mark a doorway or passage as sealed. Unauthorised crossing tests Spirit+Resolve (DV 3) or suffers a Position penalty. Creates a 4-segment Ward Integrity clock.

Push It: The barrier becomes a visible shimmer; mark +1 Obligation.

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

A.0.11.0.2 Rite of the Key’s Rebuke (Low, 5 XP)

Instant; Near; No Push

Tags: [FORCE], [BANISH]

Materials: A gesture of denial or a barrier symbol.

Effect: The target must test Body+Resolve (DV 3) or be pushed back from the threshold. On success, create a Rebuke Echo token granting +1 die to the next boundary defence.

Push It: The rebuke lingers – the target cannot cross this threshold for the rest of the scene; mark +1 Obligation.

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

A.0.11.0.3 Rite of the Circle of Denial (Standard, 8 XP)

Scene; Zone; Standard Push

Tags: [WARD], [AREA], [BANISH]

Materials: A salt ring, iron filings, or boundary stones.

Effect: Create a protective circle. Supernatural beings test against the caster's Spirit+Arcana (DV 4) to cross. Mortals suffer –2 dice to force entry. Creates a 6-segment Circle Integrity clock.

Push It: The circle becomes a two-way barrier (no one can cross); mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

A.0.11.0.4 Rite of the Writ of Passage (Standard, 7 XP)

Scene; Zone; Standard Push

Tags: [BOND], [COMMAND], [MOVEMENT]

Materials: Signed authorisation or spoken permissions.

Effect: Designate an authorised passage route. Allies gain Position +1 when using the route.

Unauthorised intruders suffer –1 die to movement or stealth. Creates an 8-segment Writ Authority clock.

Push It: Extend authorisation to additional allies; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

A.0.11.0.5 Rite of the Banishment Knot (High, 13 XP)

Instant; Near; High Push

Tags: [BANISH], [FORCE], [FEAR]

Materials: A knotted cord sealed with a gate-sigil.

Effect: The target supernatural entity tests against the caster's Spirit+Resolve (DV = entity Cap). On success, the entity is forced to immediately depart the scene. A failed attempt creates a 4-segment

Banishment Backlash clock.

Push It: The banishment lasts until the next moon phase; mark +2 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 7 segments.

A.0.11.0.6 Rite of the Consecrated Barrier (High, 14 XP)

Extended; Large Zone; High Push

Tags: [WARD], [AREA], [SANCTUARY], [FATE]

Materials: Relics from three traditions, boundary markers, a trespasser's acknowledgement.

Effect: Consecrate an area against all unauthorised passage. The tests required scale with the intrusion attempt's severity. A 10-segment Sacred Boundary clock tracks the barrier's strength.

Push It: Make the barrier semi-permanent (lasts one season); start a Maintenance [6] clock.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 8 segments.

Cantors & Cults of the Sealed Gate

The Cantor's Song. A Cantor of the Sealed Gate sings in locks and wards – melodies that are precise, repetitive, and final, like the click of a deadbolt or the thud of a bar being set. Their voice is used to seal a door with a sung phrase, to recite a litany of exclusion that pushes a spirit back across the threshold, or to sing a sleeping guard into dreaming of a wall that never ends. The Gate's Cantors are often found in prisons, asylums, and the gatehouses of cities, their songs keeping the unwanted out.

The Cult of the Unbroken Seal. The Gate's cults meet in places where boundaries are most needed: at city gates, on bridges, in the guardrooms of tombs, and before the sealed doors of forgotten vaults. The Unbroken Seal is a fellowship of wardens, gate-keepers, exorcists, and sentinels who believe that a well-kept boundary is the foundation of civilisation. A ritual of the Cult involves each member renewing a vow to guard a specific threshold – a door, a river, a mountain pass – and marking it with a fresh sigil. Their creed is carved into a single stone that is never moved: "What is sealed stays sealed. What stays sealed protects the living." Outsiders are welcome to witness the sealing, but they must leave a token of their own boundary – a key, a lock of hair, a written promise.

Witchcraft of the Sealed Gate (Lay / Scholarly)

A witch who walks with the Sealed Gate is often a ward-keeper, an exorcist archivist, or a boundary-scholar – a lay practitioner who uses seals, litanies, and physical tokens to enforce separation. Their magic is not forged but written or sung: sealing wax mixed with iron filings, a bell that rings only when a threshold is violated, or a bound notebook of exclusion rites whose pages turn black when a spirit tries to cross. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a “ward stone” into a lintel, but a hedge-witch of the Gate might daub a lignite sigil on a doorframe while reciting the Ninth Clause of Stillness. In Viterra, a village exorcist might carry a small iron seal to stamp the corners of a haunted room. Their tools are not hammers but seals, bells, and the small brass keys that lock nothing – and everything.

The Witch's Tool: The Seal of the Unbroken Gate. A small iron seal on a chain, cool to the touch, its face engraved with a closed door. Once per session, the witch may press the seal into wax (or directly onto a threshold while speaking a word of denial). For the next scene, any creature attempting to cross that threshold with hostile intent must make a Spirit+Resolve test (DV 3) or be turned back. The seal may also be used to “witness” a lock: touching it to a mundane lock imposes +1 DV on any attempt to pick it until the next dawn. The seal's warmth tells the witch whether any binding placed with it still holds.

A Hedge Gift: Sealed Lips (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may touch a person's lips (or a letter's seal) and whisper a litany of the Gate. For the next hour, that person cannot speak a specific secret or name (chosen by the witch). If they try, their voice fails – they cough, stutter, or simply cannot form the words. This effect can be removed by the witch or by a Resolve test (DV 4) made once per day.

The	Sealed	Gate's	Corruption	Manifestations
Level	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Threshold Sense: +1 die to detect weak points, unauthorised passage, or boundary violations.	Paranoid Vigilance: Must repeatedly check seals; -1 die to trust-based actions.
2	Ward Resonance: Once/scene, treat a failed protection roll as a success (mark 1 SB).	Isolation Tendency: 1 Fatigue in unsecured or open spaces.
3	Boundary Mastery: +2 dice to ward, barrier, or containment magic.	Compulsive Sealing: Must secure any vulnerability noticed.
4	Absolute Barrier: Once/session, create an impenetrable barrier (size of a door) for one exchange.	Prison Mindset: -1 die to freedom or escape actions.
5	Gate Sovereign: Once/session, banish a major threat with a single test (Spirit+Resolve vs Cap+1).	Boundary Obsession: -1 die to non-containment actions.
6+	Threshold Incarnate: For one scene, become a living ward. Allies within Near gain +1 Armor; any creature attempting to pass a threshold you guard must test Spirit+Resolve (DV 5) or be turned back.	Ultimate Containment Risk: Mark +3 Obligation. You cannot leave the warded area until the scene ends, and you suffer 1 Fatigue.

Playstyle

Notes

The Sealed Gate patron excels in defensive, control-oriented play. Followers shape battlefields through strategic boundary placement and become invaluable when dealing with supernatural intrusions or securing locations. The corruption progression naturally leads characters toward becoming immovable guardians at the cost of flexibility and freedom. Ideal for abjurists, exorcists, sentinels, and any character whose duty is to keep things apart.

Emphasises

- Thresholds: doors, portals, borders between realms
- Containment: wards, bindings, imprisonment of dangerous forces
- Exclusion: banishment, quarantine, protection through separation
- Permission: safe passage, authorised access, controlled crossing
- Immovable Guardian: the follower becomes a wall given will

A.0.12 Thrysos, King of Revels (Ecstasy, Excess & Salacious Delight)

Lore. Where torches flare and cups spill, where dancers stamp until dawn, there strides Thrysos crowned with ivy and horn. He is both host and beast, a patron of license who laughs at law. In his train follow the masked and the wild, the broken who dance to forget, the bold who revel to remember, and the lustful who seek the heat of bodies in the dark. His rites intoxicate, inflame, and unmask—yet each cup leaves a mark, each kiss a chain, each night of abandon a dawn of reckoning.

Thrysos rules the spectrum from the grinning drunkard who sings bawdy songs in taverns to the ecstatic cults whose rites strip away not only clothes but every pretense of civilisation. He is the god of the Bacchanalia, the wild hunt of the senses, the moment when the watcher becomes the participant and the participant becomes the sacrifice. In his milder aspect, he blesses the fertility of the harvest and the laughter of lovers. In his darker aspect, he drives maenads to tear apart the hero who refused to join the dance.

Among the peoples of Fate's Edge, Thrysos is called by many names. In Linn, his followers are the Storm-Dancers, who whirl through gales until exhaustion, their cries mistaken for ecstasy. In Aelinnel, he is the Unbounded Guest, whose arrival at a feast is marked by laughter, shattered glass, and at least one scandalous elopement. In Zakov, the Revel-King is invoked before every pirate carouse, with the understanding that a hungover crew is a vulnerable one – and that the captain's bed is never empty. In Vhasian hedge-courts, his name is whispered by those who seek a potion to lower inhibitions or a curse of unquenchable desire. His rituals are never secret — they are too loud, too wet, too fragrant with spilled wine and sweat — but they are always dangerous, for Thrysos demands that every excess be paid for, if not tonight then at the first hangover of spring, or in the unwanted child, or in the blood feud started by a jealous spouse.

“Drink, and be unafraid. Kiss, and be unbound. Dance, and be devoured. Every mask is true when worn long enough, and every truth is a mask for hunger.”

Signs. Wine that never sours; a mask that smiles without a wearer; goat-tracks circling thrice before vanishing; the sudden, inexplicable warmth of a stranger's hand on your arm; the sound of a zither played in an empty room; the scent of myrrh and sweat clinging to a garment that has never been worn.

Cantor's Temptation. Thrysos promises freedom without end: no oaths, no chains, only song and cup and flesh. Yet those who drink too deeply wake to find they serve not joy but appetite – and appetite is a master that never sleeps.

Domain Focus

- Ecstatic Release: dance, intoxication, the shedding of inhibition (and clothing)
- Masked Freedom: identity as performance, truth through disguise, the thrill of the anonymous encounter
- Feast and Famine: excess, appetite, lust, and the cost of indulgence
- Ritual Frenzy: communal ecstasy that transforms participants into something feral and beautiful
- The Bacchic Dark: the point where pleasure tips into violence, where the maenad tears apart the intruder

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Thrysos does not bind a familiar of quiet habits. Their Thiasos is a small beast or mythological being of primal appetites: a satyr-kid with too-bright eyes that nibbles at wine-soaked bread, a fox that dances on its hind legs when the moon is full, a ferret that steals silk ribbons from lovers' bedposts, a gecko that clings to wine jugs and changes colour with desire, or a small bronze cymbal that claps of its own accord during moments of flirtation. This creature requires no ordinary food, but it must be present during an act of indulgence (drinking, dancing, lovemaking, or feasting) each day. If neglected for a week, it becomes Compromised (it shrieks at inappropriate moments, or its antics become grotesque, imposing –1 die on all social rolls involving subtlety or discretion for its bearer).

The Codex of Thrysos is never a sober book. It may be a wine-stained journal of erotic poetry, a set of ivory tablets carved with scenes of revelry, a leather folio containing pressed flowers from orgies, or a scroll that unravels further each time the reader laughs. Because Thrysos's truths are written in the body's language, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week adding a new verse, sketch, or memory of indulgence, or the Rites stored there become dull (treat as Compromised until reinvigorated with a night of celebration).

Patron's Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Thrysos may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or garment) and whisper a word of desire. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Performance or Sway rolls involving seduction, charm, or intimidation, and the first time each scene the bearer would be affected by a Fear effect, they may laugh it off (ignore it). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the craving for another taste of freedom gnaws at them.

Rites of Thrysos

A.0.12.0.1 Rite of the Overflowing Cup (Low, 4 XP)

Scene; Near; No.

Tags: [SOCIAL], [FEAR], [AREA]

Materials: A brimming vessel of wine (or a more intimate offering).

Effect: Allies who drink gain +1 die to social rolls this scene; enemies who drink suffer −1 die. Those who drink deeply may find their inhibitions loosened in other ways (GM's discretion for romantic or scandalous complications).

Push It: All in Near must test Resolve (DV 3) or be swept into revelry, possibly leading to unplanned liaisons or public confessions; mark 1 SB (Hearts).

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

A.0.12.0.2 Rite of the Horned Dance (Low, 5 XP)

Scene; Self; No.

Tags: [BOOST], [FOCUS], [BEAST]

Materials: A mask or antlers (carved from a stag that died in rut).

Effect: Enter an ecstatic frenzy: +2 dice to melee or performance; ignore 1 Fatigue per round. Your movements become both seductive and threatening; those watching may be captivated or disturbed.

Push It: The frenzy spreads: one ally joins you in the dance, but both mark 1 SB (Spades) as the lines between combat and carnality blur.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

A.0.12.0.3 Rite of the Breaking Mask (Standard, 7 XP)

Instant; Near; No.

Tags: [TRUTH], [DEBUFF], [FEAR]

Materials: A mask smashed in hand (or a lover's token torn in two).

Effect: Reveal the true face beneath the social mask: the target suffers −2 dice to disguise, deceit, or composure until scene end. They may also be compelled to admit a hidden desire (GM's discretion).

Push It: Truth is forced: the target must declare one hidden desire aloud, possibly to the wrong person; mark 1 SB (Diamonds).

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

A.0.12.0.4 Rite of the Wild Procession (Standard, 9 XP)

Scene; Zone; No.

Tags: [SUMMON], [WARD], [AREA]

Materials: A horn sounded thrice (or a kiss passed around a circle).

Effect: Summon spectral revellers – satyrs, dancers, horned riders, and a few figures whose embraces are more than friendly. For the scene, the zone is [WARD]ed: hostile entry forces 1 SB (Spades); allies gain +1 die to resist compulsion or fear. The revellers may also grant a boon of Vigour to one couple (restore 1 Fatigue to two allies who share a bond of intimacy).

Push It: The procession spills beyond the zone; outsiders in Near must test Resolve (DV 4) or join the dance – and perhaps the revel’s other activities.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

A.0.12.0.5 Rite of the Endless Feast (High, 14 XP)

Scene; Zone; No.

Tags: [HEAL], [BOOST], [AREA], [BURDEN]

Materials: A feast laid for twelve, with wine, music, and comfortable cushions.

Effect: For one scene, the zone floods with plenty: allies restore Fatigue; all rolls tied to appetite or indulgence gain +2 dice. Leaving requires Resolve (DV 3) – the comforts are hard to abandon. The feast also grants a temporary Heightened Desire condition: the first seduction or intimidation roll each ally makes gains +1 die.

Push It: The feast persists as a hunger-haunt; start Hedonist’s Curse [6]. Participants may find themselves unable to derive pleasure from mundane means, always craving the excess of that night.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 8 segments.

A.0.12.0.6 Rite of the Reveler’s Apotheosis (High, 15 XP)

Extended; Touch; No.

Tags: [TRANSFORM], [BOOST], [FATE], [SACRIFICE]

Materials: A crown of twisted vines that bleed when touched, the first laugh of a newborn, a promise broken at a crossroads, and the willing touch of a lover.

Effect: Grant the ultimate reveller’s gift – transformation into pure ecstatic essence. The target becomes immune to fear and despair, gains +3 dice to performance or frenzy, and can inspire allies within Near (+1 die to all rolls). Their aura also carries a scent of desire; anyone within Near who sees them must test Resolve (DV 3) or be mildly infatuated (disadvantage on hostile actions).

Push It: The transformation becomes contagious – nearby allies may also transform but risk losing their humanity (their sense of self blurs into the ecstatic mob); mark +2 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 8 segments.

Drunken Master Monk (Thrysos)

The true disciple does not fight the wine — they let the wine fight for them. Every stagger is a feint, every spill a trip, every belch a battle cry, every wandering hand a distraction.

Prerequisites: Body 3+, Spirit 3+, Rite of the Horned Dance learned or Cantor of Thrysos.

Monastic Techniques (choose as Talents):

Technique	Effect	Cost	Req.
Stagger Step	When an enemy misses you with a melee attack, you may immediately move one band (Close → Near or vice versa) without provoking opportunity attacks.	1 Fatigue	Body 3
Spill the Cup	As a reaction to being grappled or restrained, you may slip free and impose –1 die on the attacker’s next roll.	1 Boon	Dex 2
Drunken Fist	Your unarmed strikes gain +1 die and ignore the first point of Armor when you are at Fatigue 2 or more (the wine “guides” you).	Passive	Body 3, Spirit 2
Hangover Re-silience	Once per scene, after suffering a complication or Story Beat from intoxication, you may clear 1 Fatigue (the headache fades, but the lesson remains).	Free	Spirit 3
Reveler’s Recovery	When you use Rite of the Horned Dance, you may also heal 1 Harm (not Condition) as the ecstasy knits flesh.	+1 Obligation	Tier II, Rite of the Horned Dance
Satyr’s Sprawl	You are immune to being knocked prone while moving, and when you fall prone intentionally you may immediately stand as a free action.	Passive	Body 4, Athletics 2
Bacchic Counter	When you succeed on a defence roll while at Desperate Position, you may immediately make a free unarmed attack against the attacker.	Once per scene	Tier III, Drunken Fist

Master Technique (Epic Talent, 12 XP): The Unbroken Bottle. Once per session, you may ignore all penalties from Fatigue for one scene. While this is active, each time you would be hit by a melee attack, you may instead stagger out of the way and force the attacker to hit another adjacent creature of your choice (narrate the stumble). After the scene ends, you collapse with Harm 2 (Exhaustion) and cannot use this talent again until you have rested for a full night.

Cantors & Cults of Thrysos

The Cantor’s Song. A Cantor of Thrysos sings in off-key harmonies – melodies that start wild and grow wilder, rhythms that mimic a galloping heart. Their voice is used to whip a crowd into a frenzy, to calm a hangover with a lullaby, or to make a mask cling to a face until the wearer is ready to take it off. Thrysos’s

Cantors are often found at festivals, in taverns at closing time, leading the procession of the horned dancers, or performing in private salons where the line between audience and participant is deliberately blurred.

The Cult of the Horned Circle. Thrysos's cults meet in clearings, barns, and the back rooms of inns after midnight. The Horned Circle is a fellowship of mask-carvers, vintners, musicians, courtesans, and those who have tasted the edge of ecstasy – sometimes all in the same person. Their most sacred vessel is a hollowed-out log that was struck by lightning; they ferment wine inside it, and the wine whispers secrets to those who drink it – forgotten grudges, hidden desires, the true names of those who will betray them, and the faces of those who are willing. A ritual of the Circle involves each member donning a mask (hand-carved, never bought) and dancing until the first dancer falls from exhaustion. The fallen is crowned with ivy and declared "guest of honour" – they lead the next circle, and sometimes the next bed. Their creed is carved into a single wine barrel that is never emptied: "The cup that never empties is the cup you share." Outsiders are welcome to dance, but they must leave their mask behind when they go – and if they drink from the lightning-log, they will hear the whispers for a year and a day, and they will return.

The Maenads of the Crimson Caves (Bacchic Dark). The darkest cult of Thrysos, the Maenads (or Bassarids) are almost exclusively female, though men may join at the risk of becoming their prey. They gather in hidden caves or moonlit groves to perform the oreibasias – the mountain dance – wearing fawnskins and carrying thyrsi tipped with bronze. Their rites begin with wine and music, escalate to ecstatic abandon, and sometimes end in sparagmos – the tearing apart of a living sacrifice (often a bull, but in the oldest stories, a human who refused to join the dance). This cult is banned in every civilised nation, but it persists in the wildest frontiers. A character who joins the Maenads gains access to darker rites, but also the risk of losing control entirely (the GM may treat this as a Corruption track that leads to a violent, permanent transformation).

Witchcraft of Thrysos (Lay / Revelry)

A witch who walks with Thrysos is a mask-carver or wine-smith – one who crafts the tools of ecstatic release: a mask that lets the wearer dance without tiring, a drum that beats in time with the drinker's pulse, a cup that never runs dry (but leaves a headache at dawn), or a perfume that makes the wearer irresistible for a single night. Their magic works through the materials of celebration: a thyrsus that marks the boundary of a sacred dance, a press that squeezes wine that ferments in hours instead of weeks, a needle that sews a costume that makes the wearer faster, louder, bolder, or a small clay lamp that burns with a flame that kindles desire. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a "revel keystone" into a feast hall, but a hedge-witch of Thrysos might instead drive a thyrsus into the floorboards to consecrate the space for an orgy.

The Witch's Tool: The Thyrsus of the Unbound. A staff of fennel or oak, topped with a pine cone and bound with ivy, often with a ribbon from a lover's garment. Once per session, the witch may strike the thyrsus against the ground three times. For the next scene, any creature within Near who is engaged in revelry (dancing, drinking, performing, or any act of intimacy) gains +1 die to social and physical actions, but any attempt to leave the zone requires a Resolve test (DV 3) – the revel holds them. The thyrsus can also be used to draw a circle on the ground; any mask placed within the circle becomes "true" for one night – the wearer cannot be recognised by anyone who was not present at the drawing, and their inhibitions are lowered (they may act on desires they would normally suppress).

A Hedge Gift: Dancer's Cramp (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may snap their fingers and whisper a dancer's rhythm. One target within Near range feels an irresistible urge to move – they must tap a foot, sway, or take a step. This cannot force them into danger, but it can ruin stealth, break a staredown, or distract a guard for one exchange. The target may resist with Resolve (DV 3) to ignore the urge. A more salacious version (Lover's Cramp) might be used in seduction scenes, forcing an unintended compliment or touch.

Thrysos's	Corruption	Table
Tier	Gift	Corruption
1	Reveler's Grace: +1 die to social rolls in feasts or crowds.	Compulsive Toast: Must drink or mark 1 Fatigue when drink is offered.
2	Horned Vitality: Ignore the first 1 Fatigue each scene.	Restless Appetite: –1 die when abstaining from indulgence (food, drink, or touch).
3	Revel-Kin: Once/scene, summon a minor revel-spirit (advantage die) – a satyr, a maenad, or a muse of seduction.	Masked Self: Cannot act without a role or guise; –1 die to plain sincerity.
4	Bacchic Fury: Once/session, frenzy grants +2 dice to melee for one exchange. Also, once per scene, you may ignore the effects of a single social faux pas (the revel covers it).	Ecstatic Blindness: –1 die to perception outside the revel; you may not notice threats that require sobriety.
5	Feast Without End: Once/session, allies in Near clear all Fatigue.	Hungering Host: You consume twice as much; denial causes Harm 1 (Stress). You may also develop a reputation: every feast you attend ends in scandal.
6+	Satyr King's Mantle: For one scene, become an avatar of revels; all allies gain +2 dice, enemies suffer –2 dice. Your presence also inspires desire: once during the scene, you may compel one target to act on a hidden passion (Resolve DV 4).	Tyrant of Pleasure: Mark +3 Obligation; the revel grows monstrous, demanding a sacrifice (an oath, a relationship, or a life).
		Beast of Endless Revel: Permanent transformation – your mortal form becomes optional; must make Presence+Performance (DV 4) to appear civilised or risk terrifying (or entrancing) all who see you into joining your eternal celebration. You are always at least mildly intoxicated, and sobriety causes you physical pain (1 Fatigue per hour).

“Let the wine flow, let the masks fall, let the fire burn away all restraint. In the revel we find truth — raw, wild, and beautiful. And in the aftermath, we find the hunger for more.”

Playstyle

Notes

Thrysos rewards those who embrace risk, abandon convention, and find power in letting go – both the laughter of the drunkard and the ecstasy of the maenad. His followers become masters of ecstatic ritual, social manipulation through celebration and seduction, and the dangerous art of losing control. The corruption progression leads toward a beast of endless revel – powerful, charismatic, but never truly sober, never truly at rest, and always hungry. Ideal for players who enjoy wild scenes, social chaos, characters who dance on the edge of self-destruction, and those who wish to explore the full spectrum of hedonism from playful flirtation to violent frenzy.

Emphasises

- Ecstatic Release: music, dance, intoxication, the shedding of inhibition (and clothing)
- Masked Freedom: identity as performance, the thrill of the anonymous encounter
- Feast and Famine: excess, appetite, lust, and the cost of indulgence
- Ritual Frenzy: communal ecstasy that transforms participants into something feral and beautiful

- The Bacchic Dark: the point where pleasure tips into violence, where the revel demands blood
- Seduction as Weapon: using desire to manipulate, distract, or destroy

A.0.13 Varnek Karn, the Death’s Negotiator (Bargains with the Departed)

Lore. Varnek Karn dwells in the grey between life and death, where the newly departed linger with unfinished business and elder shades guard secrets dearer than gold. He is the broker who speaks across the veil, the mediator of disputes between living and dead, and the archivist of every promise sworn beyond the grave. His servants practice post-mortem diplomacy: they negotiate, consult, and contract with spirits as equals—mindful that the dead are patient and rarely generous.

Yet Varnek Karn is also the patron of those who raise the dead, not through force but through bargain. The dead may be persuaded to walk again, to fight for a season, or to guard a threshold, but every such compact is a debt. The dead demand their due: a memory, a future, a name, or simply the promise that the living will remember them. Those who serve Varnek Karn learn that raising a spirit is never a command; it is a negotiation, and the spirit always has a price.

Among the peoples of Fate’s Edge, Varnek Karn is the patron of those who treat with the departed respectfully. In Aeler, he is the Breath-Accountant, who audits the spiritual ledgers of the Deep Vaults and ensures that the dead are not forgotten. In Ykrul, he is the Bone-Speaker, whose drum calls ancestors to council before any major migration. In Vhasia, he is the Silent Notary, who witnesses death-bed testaments and ensures their terms are honoured. In the Mistlands, he is the Bell-Shrouded, whose unknotted rope holds the fog at bay. Wherever the living and the dead must negotiate, Varnek Karn’s servants are there – not to command, but to listen.

“The dead have all the time in the world to consider their offers, and no need to rush to agreement. They know what the living forgot, and remember every slight with perfect clarity. In Varnek’s halls, both parties pay a price—but the currency is never what you expect.”

Domain Focus

- Post-Mortem Diplomacy: parleys with ghosts and recent dead
- Ancestral Wisdom: counsel from forebears and keeping of funerary law
- Unfinished Business: resolving the concerns that bind spirits
- Death-Bound Contracts: obligations that outlive the flesh
- The Unquiet Host: raising temporary armies of the dead through pact

Thiasos and Codex (Runekeeper Options)

A Runekeeper sworn to Varnek Karn does not bind a living familiar. Their Thiasos is a remnant of the honoured dead: a lead seal that has witnessed a funeral, a knucklebone from an ancestor who died content, or a small iron bell that rings only when a spirit is willing to speak. This object requires no food, but it must be placed on a grave or threshold at dusk each day. If neglected for a week, the Thiasos becomes Compromised (it emits a faint keening that imposes 1 die on all social rolls with the living).

The Codex of Varnek Karn is never a living book. It may be a slate carved with names that fade and reappear, a bundle of burial tablets, or the inside of a lead-lined casket. Because the dead are not bound by paper, the Codex requires upkeep: the Runekeeper must spend an hour each week recording a new death or a settled dispute, or the Rites stored there become illegible (treat as Compromised until restored).

Patron’s Gift (Imbuement)

Once per scene as an action, a Runekeeper of Varnek Karn may touch a held item (weapon, tool, or funerary token) and whisper a death-bargain. For the rest of the scene, the item grants +1 die to Lore or Investigation rolls involving death, ancestry, or inheritance, and the bearer may ask one question of a corpse less than a day dead (it answers with a single word or a gesture). After the scene, the user marks +1 Obligation as the weight of the grave lingers.

Rites of Varnek Karn

A.0.13.0.1 Rite of the Crossing Fee (Low, 4 XP)

Scene; Near; No.

Tags: [SPIRIT], [KNOWLEDGE]

Materials: A coin for the tongue of the deceased, or a lock of hair from the bereaved.

Effect: Open speech with a specific dead individual. Gain +1 die to Investigation or Lore when seeking knowledge they once held.

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

A.0.13.0.2 Rite of the Ancestral Consultation (Low, 5 XP)

Scene; Self; Yes.

Tags: [SPIRIT], [TRUTH], [FATE]

Materials: A personal token of the departed, or their favoured food/drink.

Effect: Ask one question of an ancestral spirit regarding family history, hidden legacies, or inherited debts.

Push It: The spirit grants detailed, prophetic guidance but exacts a small favour; mark 1 SB (Hearts).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar (Invoke: 1 Boon).

A.0.13.0.3 Rite of the Mediated Pact (Standard, 8 XP)

Scene; Near; Yes.

Tags: [VOW], [BOND], [COMMAND], [SPIRIT]

Materials: Two copies of a written accord (one buried with the dead, one kept by the living), or a circle of salt mixed with grave-dust.

Effect: Choose one:

- Death-Bound Pact: Bind a compact between a living signatory and a willing spirit. Both gain +1 die when fulfilling the terms. Breach angers the spirit and Varnek both.
- Spirit Medium: Serve as a conduit for several spirits to speak. Gain +2 dice to mediate disputes between living and dead and to facilitate group negotiation.

Push It: If you chose Pact, the pact enforces itself: a breach triggers supernatural reprisal; mark +1 Obligation. If you chose Medium, a potent spirit rides your voice to speak directly; mark Exposure +1.

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

A.0.13.0.4 Rite of the Unquiet Host (Standard, 10 XP)

Scene; Zone; Yes.

Tags: [SUMMON], [AREA], [BOND], [DEBT]

Materials: A battlefield relic (a broken sword, a skull, a scrap of uniform) and a handful of grave-earth.

Effect: You negotiate with the lingering dead of a place. Summon a Temporary Host – a spectral warband treated as a single Cap 3 Follower with the following traits:

- Assist: May grant +3 dice to a single combat or intimidation roll, or provide a free Setup action (e.g., “they distract the guards”).
- Independent Action: Once per scene, the Host may take one action from the Follower list (e.g., Scout & Signal, Distract & Draw) at the cost of marking Exposure +1.
- Weakness: The Host is vulnerable to salt, bells, and consecrated ground. Any attack using such materials ignores their spectral nature.

The Host lasts for the remainder of the current scene, or until dismissed. When it departs, the dead demand their due: you must either mark +2 Obligation or perform a Memorial Rite before the next dawn (a downtime action, no roll). If you fail to do so, the Host returns unbidden at the worst moment, acting as a hostile hazard (GM’s discretion).

Push It: Extend the Host’s duration to the entire session. The debt is doubled: mark +4 Obligation or perform a memorial rite and sacrifice a personal memory (erase a minor fact or a Bond for one session).

Invoke: 1 action; mark +1 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex (Invoke: 1 Boon).

A.0.13.0.5 Rite of the Final Testament (High, 13 XP)

Extended; Touch; Yes.

Tags: [VOW], [FATE], [COMMAND], [DEATH]

Materials: A dying person’s last words recorded in their blood, witnessed by you.

Effect: Seal the last request with weight beyond life. Targets must pass Resolve (DV 4) to ignore it.

Push It: The testament becomes a geas: only fulfilment—or Varnek’s wrath—can break it; mark +2 Obligation.

Invoke: Extended rite; mark +2 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 7 segments.

A.0.13.0.6 Rite of the Eternal Archive (High, 14 XP)

Extended; Zone; Yes.

Tags: [KNOWLEDGE], [AREA], [FATE], [SANCTUARY]

Materials: A library mortared with tomb-stone, ink from cremation ash.

Effect: Found a repository where the dead deposit knowledge. Gain a permanent +1 die to Lore for historical or genealogical research made within. Spirits periodically contribute testimonies.

Push It: The archive awakens and begins to demand curatorship and payment; mark Harm 1 (Stress).

Invoke: Extended rite; mark +2 Obligation.

Requires: Familiar + Codex + Tier III (Invoke: 2 Boons).

Obligation: 8 segments.

Necromantic Summoning (Varnek Karn’s Way)

For summoners (Pact-Whisperers) who follow Varnek Karn, the usual Leash mechanics gain an additional option. When you call a spirit (using the Pact-Whisperer rules), you may choose to bind it with a Death-Bound Contract instead of the standard Leash. Instead of ticking Leash on harm or disobedience, the spirit gains a Promise Clock [4] named “Debt Unpaid.” Each time it acts against your interests, you may advance the clock by 1. When the clock fills, the spirit must either obey one final command (even against its nature) or immediately depart and become an enemy. However, while under contract, the spirit cannot be dismissed early – you are committed. This replaces the Boon Finesse option; you cannot spend Boons to clear ticks. This method is slower but more reliable for extended servitude, and it fits Varnek Karn’s theme of negotiation over coercion.

Cantors & Cults of Varnek Karn

The Cantor’s Song. A Cantor of Varnek Karn sings in dirges of negotiation – melodies that invite the dead to speak, harmonies that soothe restless shades. Their voice is used to call an ancestor to council, to lull a vengeful ghost into recounting its grievance, or to sing a funeral procession past a haunted crossroads.

Varnek’s Cantors are often found in graveyards, in the halls of the dying, and at the tables where inheritance disputes are settled, their songs bridging the silence between breath and decay.

The Cult of the Unforgotten Ledger. Varnek Karn’s cults gather in crypts, ossuaries, and the quiet rooms above funeral parlours – but one cell, known as the Ink-Flesh Communion, tattoos the names of the dead onto their own skin, believing that each name grants a fragment of the ancestor’s memory. Their ritual involves writing a death-record with a needle dipped in ash and wine; the tattoo whispers the dead person’s last words when pressed. The Unforgotten Ledger itself is a single, ever-growing book bound in grey hide – it is said to whisper at night, adding names without a scribe. Outsiders are welcome to bring a name of someone they have lost; they may read the ledger but not write in it. Their creed: “The dead are not gone. They have only changed their address. Be polite, pay your respects, and never make a promise you cannot keep.”

Witchcraft of Varnek Karn (Lay / Funerary)

A witch who walks with Varnek Karn is a funeral notary, a grave-warden, or a memory-keeper – a lay practitioner who uses ink, seals, and small rites to witness the passage of the dead. Their magic is the art of recording and releasing: a leaden seal that certifies a death-bed promise, a quill that writes in invisible ink that appears only when a ghost is near, or a carved wooden stamp that quiets a restless spirit for a night. In Aeler, a True-Mason might carve a “memory niche” into a crypt wall, but a hedge-witch of Varnek Karn might press a wax seal onto the niche’s edge, binding the dead to speak truth when the seal is broken. In Zakov, a net-mender might weave a shroud with a single loose thread; pulling it releases the drowned sailor’s soul to the tide.

The Witch’s Tool: The Seal of the Silent Witness. A leaden seal on a leather thong, its face carved with a single closed eye. Once per session, the witch may press the seal into warm wax (or directly onto a stone threshold) while speaking the name of a dead person. For the next day, anyone who speaks that name near the seal hears a faint whisper – a single word or a sigh – from the deceased. The seal may also be used to “witness” a death-bed promise: pressing it onto a written testament makes the document unbearably heavy to anyone who would break the vow.

A Hedge Gift: Echo of the Honoured Dead (2 XP). Once per scene, the witch may touch a physical remnant of the dead (a bone, a lock of hair, a piece of clothing) and whisper a question. For a moment, the remnant holds a memory – the GM answers one factual question about the dead person’s life or death, but the answer is always tinged with the emotion of the moment (e.g., “she was afraid,” “he was angry,” “they were at peace”).

Varnek	Karn’s	Corruption	Table
Tier	Benefit	Cost / Quirk
1	Death’s Whisper: +1 die to Notice when the dead seek to communicate.	Graveyard Pallor: –1 die to social rolls with the living; your presence unsettles.
2	Ancestral Insight: Once/scene, gain +2 dice for family history or inherited troubles.	Spectral Awareness: Ever-aware of nearby spirits; suffer Fatigue 1 in places of many deaths.
3	Medium’s Gift: Once/session, act as a flawless conduit for a spirit.	Death-Touched: Cold spots and small portents follow you; –1 die to ordinary social grace.
4	Final Authority: Once/scene, compel adherence to a true last request (Resolve DV 4).	Corpse-Pale: Visibly wan; –2 dice where warmth or vigour is required.
5	Archive Keeper: Once/session, access perfect recall of a historical event or family secret.	Unquiet Presence: The dead trail you; –1 die to stealth and to surprising the living.
6+	Death’s Confidant: Once/session, compel a willing spirit to answer three questions truthfully.	Halfway House: Mark +2 Obligation; risk becoming half-withdrawn from the living world. You must perform a funeral rite for a stranger before the next dawn, or mark an additional +2 Obligation.

Playstyle

Varnek Karn favours investigators, arbiters, and heralds of funerary law. Power grows through cultural sensitivity, shrewd bargaining, and careful record-keeping; the price is a thinning tie to warmth and mortal ease. Expect mysteries of lineage, obligations that outlive their makers, and parleys where both sides of the veil demand their due. The Rite of the Unquiet Host allows a follower to temporarily command a small army of the dead, but the debt incurred ensures that such power is never free – and the dead always remember who called them.

Notes

Varnek Karn emphasises

- Diplomacy over Dominion: bargaining with the dead rather than commanding them
- Knowledge Brokerage: trading for secrets and testimonies beyond the grave
- Cultural Protocols: rites, tokens, and proper doors for speaking with ancestors
- Mediation: resolving conflicts that bind the living to the dead
- Historical Continuity: showing how past vows shape the present
- The Unquiet Host: raising temporary armies through pact, not domination
